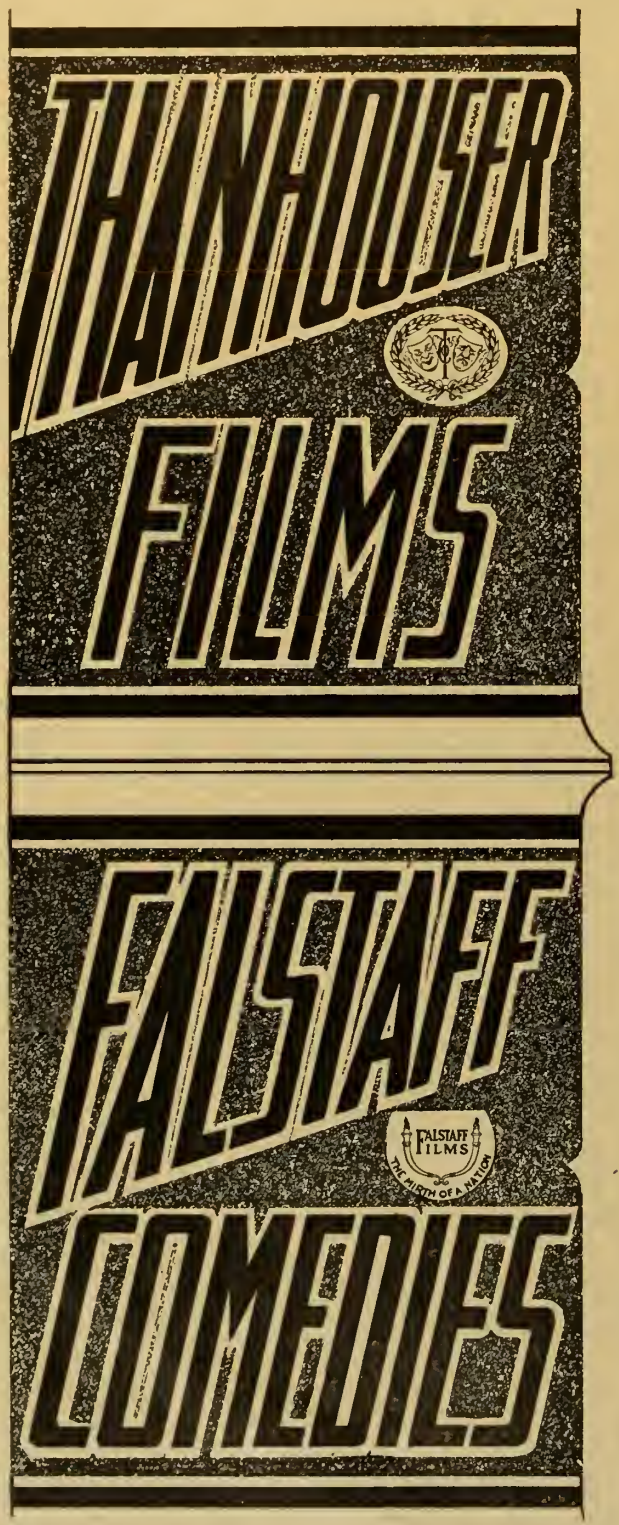
EDWIN THANHOUSER

Presents



His Vocation

A drama of quick situations. The cast includes Grace De Carlton, Bert Delaney and Helen Badgley.

Two Reels. Tuesday, December 7th

Her Confession

Here's another one of those real short length features. Look at this cast: Florence La Badie, Thomas A. Curran, Ernest Warde, Kathryn Adams and Carey Hastings. You can play this in feature style.

One Reel. Sunday, December 12th.

MINNIE, the MEAN MANICURIST

One Reel.

Monday, December 6th.

A timely comedy with new wrinkles and sure fire fun. Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham as comedy barbers—Frances Keyes and Louise Emerald Bates as tricky suffragettes.

CLARENCE CHEATS at CROQUET

One Reel.

Thursday, December 9th.

Here's Riley Chamberlin as the wicked wicket wonder, and Barbara Gilroy and Charlie Emerson fan the fun flame.

THE LITTLE GIRL IN THE BIG MOON

She sat all alone in the big moon and she was very, very lonely.
Her mother had forbidden her to see the only playmate she had.
She looked at the blinking lights of the far away city where her mother promised her some day she would find wealth and position.
But her heart was sad, for it was cold in the moon and she longed for the warmth of love.
Then the rich man her mother was seeking asked her to come and play.
She didn't know he wouldn't play fair, but her playmate did. He was watching and when the rich man hurt her so that she cried out with pain, he came and drove him away.
Then he whispered:
"I love you."
And she was very happy at last.
This beautiful story of a girl's love, so nearly wrecked by a vampire of society, is found in Essanay's five act photoplay —

ACHIEVEMENT

IN all the history of Moving Pictures there is no production which can compare with "THE NATURE MAN." The time, the energy, the patience of its producers as evidenced by the rare pictures shown, are nothing short of marvelous.

You see a man enter the primeval wilds of the California mountains, unarmed, without tools or provisions of any kind, and in a succession of the most intensely interesting scenes, you see how he conquers the forces of nature; how he clothes and feeds himself; makes a fire; and emerges conqueror of brute force by the supreme intelligence of a human being.

THE pictures themselves are the fullest proof of the genuineness of the scenes, and every man, woman and child, regardless of their moving picture likes and dislikes will be held in thrilling fascination while the "Nature Man"

Builds a fire by friction
Makes a comfortable shelter
Makes a rope of bark
Weaves a fish net from bark fibre
Fashions a fish spear and spears fish
Builds a birch canoe
Makes pets of bear cubs
Snares rabbits for food
Captures and kills a fierce mountain lion without weapons
Snares wild elk and other animals
Shoots the rapids of a mountain stream on a log raft.

And there's more and more. Every reel is full of breath-taking scenes—all actual happenings. Fights between wild animals, a wrestling match with a bear—punches galore. It provides new brand of thrills THAT THE WISE EXHIBITOR CAN CASH IN ON FOR REAL PROFITS. If a feature house had this they would make it a "special" feature and you couldn't touch it with a ten-foot pole. Released on the Universal Program, it offers you a rare opportunity to book a wonderful picture at a REASONABLE rental and a chance for a genuine cleanup. Write or wire your Exchange now for release date and booking. Prepare to do special advertising and get the crowds.

OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS AUTHORS

Behind the UNIVERSAL'S Greatest Series-Serial

"GRAFT"

16 Weeks: 32 Reels

Of all the great triumphant and successful Universal serials, none have had greater punch, wider advertising and publicity possibilities, more popular stars, or a more intricate or interesting plot.

▪ ▪ ▪ ▪ ▪

Added to this is the supreme and heretofore unequaled drawing quality—the EIGHTEEN AUTHOR POWER of this superb series-serial. Each episode of this thrilling modern picture is a complete story in itself, so that your patrons may start with any episode and enjoy the remaining installments without loss of interest.

▪ ▪ ▪ ▪ ▪

Never in your life have you seen on the screen such scenes, settings or situations as are revealed in the succeeding episodes of "GRAFT." Never have the inside workings of modern politics in American cities, towns, villages and hamlets been disclosed in moving pictures as they are shown in all the hideousness of corruption in this wonderful collaboration of EIGHTEEN of America's best-known, best-read and most popular authors.

▪ ▪ ▪ ▪ ▪

Take advantage of the prestige and popularity of these famous writers, and BOOK "GRAFT." Book it for the coin and the crowds. Book it for the 16 weeks of capacity business that is sure to follow. This picture is a sure fire hit and will do more to popularize your house than any series-serial you ever played. Write, or better still, WIRE your nearest Universal Exchange today. Tomorrow may be too late. You can't afford to let your competitor grab "GRAFT" ahead of you. Book now.

One Hundred Dollars Quick For a Name

THE UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY desires to secure immediately, the very best name for a new brand of feature film plays, these plays to be the very finest of their kind ever filmed, and to the person who sends in the most appropriate name on or before MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th, the UNIVERSAL will PAY ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($100) IN SPOT CASH. The UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY will release this new brand of features under the brand name that is chosen from the names sent in.

In sending in your name suggestion for this new brand, bear in mind these several important points: first: this new brand will be of a class and character which will be adequately described as distinctive moving picture achievements. The name MUST BE SHORT and names composed of a single syllable will be given preference over names containing more than the one syllable. The name must lend itself to several things, i. e., the adaptability in trade mark designing—to psychological advertising possibilities and most of all, IT MUST BE SIMPLE AND EASILY PRONOUNCED so as to be EASILY REMEMBERED.

The name must carry a certain punch to it—must personify CLASS AND QUALITY in its very highest form and must have something about it that will clearly distinguish this new brand from the ordinary brand names. The title, after it has been chosen by the officials of the UNIVERSAL, will be announced in all the leading moving picture trade-papers, together with the name of the person who suggested it. You may send in one name or a hundred names. The number of names you suggest makes no difference—but, KEEP IN MIND, WHAT IS WANTED, from the above description. Your suggestions for brand names MUST REACH THIS OFFICE NO LATER THAN MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th.

Gentlemen:

Having the largest seating capacity of any Theatre in Cleveland, it has been a difficult matter to determine definitely what policy would produce the largest net income, and as an experiment we have tried Vaudeville, Feature pictures, regular programs and after experimenting for several months, sparing no expense, we have now found the regular Universal Program and Broadway Features produce a greater net profit than any other policy we have tried - and net profit is one of the important items in connection with a Theatre.

Yours very truly,

BIG BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION

Read What the Daily Papers of the Country Say:

PITTSBURGH, The Sun. "An Alien" is an intensely appealing play with humor, pathos and real thrills following so closely that there is not a dull moment in the entire production.

MILWAUKEE, Free-Press. "An Alien" is what might be called a "superfeature" in that it is in eight reels and has an exceptionally good story, is splendidly acted, and produced by Thomas H. Ince with more than usual care to details.

CHICAGO, The Tribune. Alfred Hamberger seems to have hit upon another winner in the production of "An Alien," which is destined for a long time engagement.

TOLEDO, The News. "An Alien" is one of the greatest productions that has been filmed. The picture ran for weeks at the Astor Theatre in New York, and was secured by the Alhambra here at considerable expense.

CINCINNATI, Times-Star. "An Alien" with the celebrated Italian actor, George Beban, in the leading role, has scored a hit throughout the East.

SAN FRANCISCO, The Bulletin. "An Alien" is at the Tivoli where hundreds of theatre goers are being turned away this week. Many requests have been made for a second week of Beban in his massive film production.

CHICAGO, The Examiner. Together Beban and Ince have given the motion picture world in "An Alien" a production of human interest, filled with absorbing situations, gripping and eloquently told, which establishes a high standard in motion picture art.

MILWAUKEE, Sentinel. No photo drama ever offered has proven its worth as a promoter of sobbing, tears and smiles, as does "An Alien" in which George Beban is starred.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, Vindicator. Owing to the tremendous success of "An Alien," the picture was booked for the entire week at the Park Theatre, as it was considered that the customary three days would be too short to accommodate the crowds wishing to witness this powerful and appealing story of human emotions. Wherever "An Alien" has been shown it has broken all attendance records.

Gentlemen:

We desire to state that we had the pleasure of running your feature "My Madonna" and the writer, who by the way, has been eleven years in the picture show business, considers this feature next to "Destiny", as the greatest picture he has ever had the pleasure of running. The nice part about using Metro service is the fact that an exhibitor can always have positive assurance that on Metro days he is going to more than please his patrons and that, you know, means a whole lot to a manager. The terrific explosion of the ocean liner in "Sins of Society" is but a sample of the element of suspense and punch and action now being put in each World feature in addition to its natural appeal in strength of story and star.

For instance in "The Gray Mask" an auto leaps from a ferry boat carrying its passengers into the swirling waters.

There's a punch in every reel of "The Siren's Song." At the start a maddened mob destroys a bank. In the second, after a never equaled fight a man is thrown off a steamer in midocean while the climax is reached in the meeting of the two men in bedroom at midnight.

As for "Camille," it is sufficient to say that it is Clara Kimball Young's best.

They all come in December. Did you ever see such a lineup? Have you secured your contract?

"The Hand of the Law"

This feature is not one of those that have a thrill spot about which yards and yards of film are strung, with lots of waiting for the one interesting spot. It is humanly real and convincing and—best of all—it contains a genuine mystery,—the real kind of suspense, as to who actually did the crime. Skilfully scenarioized. Tinctured with bright moments, rippled with smiles. A good attraction, with such favorites, in every sense of the word. Direction, E. C. Taylor. Friday, December 17th. 3000 feet.

Something different in Christmas stories—a delightful comedy-drama, with Christmas fun and cheer in it, "Santa Claus versus Cupid." Featuring Ray McKee and Grace Morrisey. Saturday, December 18th. Direction, Will Louis.

One of Raoul Barre's absurdly funny cartoons, "The Animated Grouch Chaser" series, on the same reel with the educational, "The History of the Big Tree." Wednesday, December 15th. 1000 feet in all.

A BUSHRANGER AT BAY

Fifth Episode in the "STINGAREE" Series from the Novel by

E. W. Hornung

Author of "Raffles"

"Stingaree," the gentleman-outlaw, is the most original character now being shown on the screen. Daring—but human—he is a type that wins admiration. Though each episode tells a complete story in itself you can count on "Stingaree" to bring your patrons back again. In "A Bushranger at Bay," the latest episode of the series, "Stingaree" is put on his sternest mettle to avoid capture.

"Stingaree" is backed by the widest publicity ever given a regular release—1200 newspapers are publishing the stories daily. Let us show you how easily you may add your local newspaper to this list and get one of the biggest money-makers of the year—at no extra cost, in your regular service.

Released Wednesday, December 22nd. Extraordinary 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color lithographs.

THE ORIENTAL'S PLOT

An Episode of the "Ventures of Marguerite"

Marguerite's adventurous spirit again brings her into peril. She falls into the power of a Hindu mystic who is finally foiled in a climax that abounds in thrills. Marguerite is again seen in those stunning Russek creations that women fans are raving about.

Released Friday, December 24th. Eye-catching 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color lithographs.

A BOY AT THE THROTTLE

An Episode of the "Hazards of Helen"

It doesn't seem possible that Helen can perform any more daring feats than in the past, but wait till you see her drop from the top girder of a bridge to a runaway train. Easily one of the best railroad pictures Kalem, the originator, has ever issued.

Released Saturday, Dec. 25th. These striking Scenes on the 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color lithographs.

THE BANDITS OF MACARONI MOUNTAINS

Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare in a Burlesque Comedy.

Bud is a full-fledged member of the Bandits' Union, and Ethel, the fair confederate who lures his victims to their destruction. Doughbags, a hen-pecked millionaire, falls into their trap, but he won't pay ransom because he is too glad to be away from his termagant wife. Then the fun begins. With this start can you wonder that the resulting mix-ups make a sure-fire comedy hit fully up to the standard of these popular subjects?

Released Tuesday, December 21st. The laughs begin with the posters. Special 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

Facts and Comments

THERE is a movement on foot to abolish the word "censorship" when used in describing the activities of the National Board. The National Board does not want to part with the obnoxious work—not just yet. The Board says some pertinent things on the subject. We quote this sentence: "The National Board exerts an immense influence throughout the country because, in the minds of many influential individuals and social groups in every locality, censorship of motion pictures is distinctly necessary at the present stage of their development and they will understand no other term as they insist on censorship and censorship alone." No one appreciates more than we do the splendid and really unselfish work of the Board, but their logic in this case is far from impressive. The word censorship is as hateful and as undemocratic as the thing it expresses. If we want to do away with the thing itself why not begin with the name of the thing. The dictionary abounds with good substitutes. If the Board would throw away the word it could never again be accused of competing with any censors anywhere. Censorship is much sicker today than it was two or three years ago.

FIVE or even three and two years ago such a thing as a moving picture section in a daily paper was not even known. Today the moving picture sections are comparatively common and there's the point—they growing every day. A few days ago the writer was shown a list of dailies and weeklies now printing a moving picture section and he was surprised at the number. Even the smallest country weekly often boasts a motion picture department. The tone of all these sections is friendly throughout which primarily benefits the local exhibitor.

BUT very few motion picture theaters of any size are now without their regular daily programs which are distributed among the patrons. Within the past few weeks the writer has seen a great variety of programs most of which were well edited and typographically attractive. One man believes in featuring the star and another man thinks he ought to feature the story, while a third man hopes to impress his patrons with the name of a company. The experiences of these men would no doubt make very interesting reading. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be glad to relate the experience of its readers and hopes to hear something on this vital subject from many of them.

"NEVER had a paper like THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD," said an exhibitor the other day in his theater in a suburb on the Jersey side. "We knew it when we used to use a bedspring for a rheostat; it was fine then and it's finer than ever now. All the managers and operators know that." Whereupon the man renewed his subscription. The writer heard this quite by accident and wants to let the maker of the compliment know that we appreciate what he said.

WE are in receipt of a letter from a valued friend and correspondent in a Western state. He has had a very painful experience with the vagaries of the Special War Tax and its strange interpretation by the Internal Revenue Office. He bought a small theater on which the special war tax had been paid up to June of this year. "Late in October," he states, "the government official came around to collect the $25 license and $12.50 penalty for non-payment. * * * This theater had something like five different owners the first half of this year. Though all of them lost money on it they will now have to pay the license for the remainder of the first half of the year with the 50 per cent. penalty, aggregating about $130 on a $25 house; all on account of the license not being transferable." All fairness and equity would seem to demand a tax upon the place of business rather than upon the temporary owner of the theater. The licensing policy of all the states and municipalities is based upon that principle and there seems no reason for Uncle Sam to deviate from this time-honored practice.

Acting That Is Not*

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"THE art of the Theater," says Gordon Craig, "is neither acting nor the play, it is not scene nor dance, but it consists of all the elements of which these things are composed." This sums up an entire book he has written on the subject, but, like many another talented writer, he appears to avoid saying definitely what acting is and what it should be. So far as the screen is concerned, the entire subject is a rich field lying fallow. Even the keenest critics avoid scratching it.

Grant in advance that the absence of uttered speech severely conditions expression of thought and feeling in the photo-play, it would seem from the finest examples of work done by silent performers that there is being unconsciously shaped a definite art of ministering to the minds and hearts of an audience through silent portrayal of character, even in its psychological depths; of motive, even in its hiding places; of recreated human experience, even in its most intense moments, and of great moral passions, even those which occasionally convulse the whole world.

Now comes a young lady with eyes, nose and chin worth several thousand a week. "She has such pretty hair," observes the contented fat lady who remarked that there was a pretty baby in the last play. The hair is really beautiful. It must have cost an expert infinite pains to brush and curl it. The arrangement is as obviously artificial as it is costly, but the young actress is impersonating a ragged and half-starved waif of the slums. The director told her to make up for the part, and she possibly understood him to mean that she should "make up" in hair for what she lacked beneath it.

The author may have had an artistic creation in mind, such a brilliant insistence of the central figure as occasionally causes the story to stand forth as a noteworthy achievement. Why should the high-priced star care? She is chiefly concerned with making an impression of her personality, as conveyed by careful manicuring and hairdressing, rather than that of the play. Even when we all love a star—sometimes it is only the director—we feel that she should deserve a fine part by making the best of it. We best enjoy her participation in the story as one of its natural and consistent factors, and our interest in her begins to wane when her appeal is a smirk that speaks louder than words, "Don't you think I am well worth all the time and money spent on ME?"

It is not just to the audience when a really fine stage performer slights the screen representation, depending wholly upon past reputation to carry over a mediocre effort, particularly when the silent picturing of thought and emotion calls for all the intelligent application of her art that an accomplished actress can give. Great stars are known to accept the money for good service and give it so grudgingly, even disdainfully, that their movements and gestures become as automatic as they might be in eating soup while reading the paper.

Many patrons who would go regularly to the picture shows, just as regularly as they read their daily papers, are drifting away to other forms of entertainment during intervals, though they return again, ever hopeful, always serene in the faith that the best is yet to come, and unfavorable comments made are nearly all of the same kind. Such and such an artist merely walked through her part and spoiled the story.

Let us illustrate what an actor may do and may not do in a little imaginative illusion of our own. The play opens with a severe and orderly room, a well arranged library, in which books and writing materials indicate that the owner is a man of high standing and a student of law. In the foreground at one side, that it may be prominent without intruding on the action, is a figure of Justice. Presently Judge R. enters and hands his things to a servant who follows. Servant gives Judge an important-looking envelope and retires. Judge R. is not in a state of fatigue, but he exhibits relief on sitting down. He is a fine type, thoughtful, impartial, high-minded.

He turns calmly to the envelope, glances at the superscription, and opens it with calm deliberation. Its contents prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that he has been guilty of a decision which wronged another man and wrecked the unfortunate victim's life. An exhibit of the document reveals to the spectator that a faulty decision has involved the happiness of the victim's family. What does the Judge do?

What WOULD such a Judge do? Would not such a revelation come to one of his usually accurate judgment in the nature of a shock? His whole theory of himself is upset. He who has spent his best years in righting wrongs has committed a grievous one. It is scarcely to be credited! A second examination of the document brings out with terrible force that it is a pure expression of the truth. He falls into a reverie, during which the existing scene dissolves to that of the wrong and back again. Now his eyes open wide with horror in the first torment of conscience.

A period of time can be covered with a glimpse of other action, a line leading up to the main one, and return is made to the Judge. It is thus shown that he is a man to think long and hard on a subject. He has a habit of mentally reviewing all the testimony before reaching a mature decision. He first exhibits emotion, then his mind begins to reach out for a solution of his difficulties. He is not a man TO JUMP AT CONCLUSIONS. We feel that something larger is coming than a plan merely conceived on the impulse of a moment. Higher suspense is aroused by thus forecasting events of large importance.

Is not this adequate interpretation of character, at once a revelation and a prophecy, a finer quality of acting than the more or less automatic movements and gestures ordinarily employed? The Judge develops a plan of clandestine relief for his victim's family, and this is gradually unfolded in what he does. What he does is of interest, but it does not afford the relief expected. He cannot shake off the phantom of wrong, because he is persisting in his methods towards others

He must be made to FEEL deeply, and the mental process by which he reaches a complete conversion of character cannot be consistently hidden. How does he bring about a reconciliation of his daily acts and the new ideals which are preying on his mind? Why secrete the forces now at work making a complete change in the man and their effects upon him. Quite as well as studied facial expression, gesture and movement, we enjoy the unconscious revelation of soul which comes to us of itself when the performer lives the role he is enacting. Is not fine acting on stage or screen largely a question of psychology?

The Result of a Test

By W. Stephen Bush.

EXHIBITORS who have the courage and the initiative to make an original test usually discover something to their advantage. A most interesting letter describing such a test reached the office of The Moving Picture World recently. The subject is bound to be of vital importance to seven exhibitors out of ten and for this reason I feel justified in going somewhat into the details of the situation.

Says our correspondent: "I have been of the opinion for a long time that the public did not care so much for the usual five and six reel features but that it was the extra advertising that such pictures receive that get the business and in order to satisfy myself I decided to make a test."

There is no doubt that the same idea had entered the minds of other exhibitors and I have little doubt that other exhibitors have made a similar test but they have never published it for the benefit of all their colleagues.

Here are the details of the test which had best be described in the language of our valued correspondent:

"My method"—I am quoting him again—"was as follows: First, I booked a recognized feature program, these features to be shown on the same days each week, then I reasoned that if I gave these features exactly the same amount of publicity as I did my regular———program and showed them at the same price my patronage on feature days would soon show whether the public really liked these features so much better. I have just finished a three months' trial as outlined above, and the best that I can say for the features is that they have nearly held their own. Last night my regular ——— program, made up of a three reel ———, a ——— comedy and a serial story did thirty per cent. more business for me than a good ——— feature did the night before with local conditions, weather, opposition, etc., the same both nights and the prices of admission exactly the same. It is my candid opinion that the small town exhibitor can make a lasting success of features only if he uses the very best at advanced prices and those only as local conditions warrant. Conditions may be different elsewhere, but I think I can see the handwriting on the wall."

Of course conditions do vary all the time. There may and there probably are localities where the same test would result in just the opposite results. Each man must be the best judge of conditions in his locality.

One thing, however, is absolutely sure and it applies everywhere and under all circumstances. THE PADDED FEATURE must go, whether it be released by a feature company or whether it comes as part of a regular program. I am speaking with deep conviction and much earnestness because I know at first hand. A hundred exhibitors have voiced this complaint to me, but I have better evidence than hearsay. I have within the last four weeks spent a good deal of my nights in motion picture theaters. I have sat in small neighborhood theaters and in big houses in the center of the city and I have watched as many varieties of audiences as one can imagine. They all rebel against padding. It's horribly tiresome and in a place of entertainment anything that is tiresome is fatal and intolerable. Even the audience in a remote burg in the wilds of Jersey is "wise" when the padded feature comes on. They will sooner put up with anthropoid vaudeville, and that's saying a good deal. The present revival of the old single reel as evidenced by the remarkable success of the Biograph reissues is largely due to the disgust and resentment aroused by the padded feature.

Box Office Boomerangs.

By W. Stephen Bush.

SOMEBODY recently remarked that the criterion of success in films and features was their money making power.

Not long ago an exhibitor in an eastern city imported a film from Paris. Of this film no description can be given in these columns other than to say that it was a mass of mingled filth and suggestiveness. The film was exhibited in a public theater after the regular performance. The theater was sold out at an average of two dollars a seat. The standees, glad to pay the same price, brought the receipts of the performance up to an amount that broke all records.

After the exhibition the license of the theater was revoked and the ministers in the city started a bitter campaign against all motion picture theaters. For a time all the motion picture theaters suffered. The police officials who had tolerated the indecent exhibition were punished for neglect of duty. The matter has since become an issue in politics and the film men of the whole city are in great anxiety over the final outcome. There is no doubt, however, that the offensive film was the greatest box office attraction in the history of motion pictures.

Any exhibitor with a business experience of a year or more knows that not every film which insures a crowded house for a night or two is necessarily a good film for him to book. On the leading thoroughfare of a large town in this state were two houses of about equal seating capacity and with about the same advantages in the matter of location. When the "white slave" films had a brief and sensational vogue Exhibitor A was approached by the booking agent of one of the worst of these productions.

"Sooner than show this sort of stuff to my people I would burn down this house," was his reply.

Exhibitor B booked the objectionable film in a hurry. He advertised it heavily. As a result he did an enormous business. Expectant crowds packed the sidewalk in front of his theater. He probably did three times the business of his competitor. Then followed a violent ministerial crusade against motion pictures. In this case the crusade against the offending theater was supported by public sentiment. In three nights the exhibitor had destroyed the reputation of his theater, which has twice since changed management.

No exhibitor can stay in business permanently if he tries to make money regardless of the decent sentiment of his community. It is one of the duties of The Moving Picture World, the true journalistic representative of the industry, to warn its readers against such films. We have done so in the past and will do so in the future. We will also continue to refuse the advertising offered by the promoters of offensive films.

NOT PRIMARILY FOR CHILDREN.

ONE thing has gradually been recognized by even the most strenuous advocates of censorship: The motion picture is not intended primarily or even largely for the amusement of minor children. Only those censors whose daily bread and butter depends upon their continuance in office pretend to believe otherwise. There are exhibitors who believe that a strict enforcement of the law against the admission of unaccompanied minor children is a hardship. If they will think the matter over they will be able to see that there are two sides to this question.

Hearst With Vitagraph

Weekly Photo-News Reel Formerly Made in Conjunction With Selig, Will Be Issued by Arrangement with Vitagraph.

WHEN it was announced in a recent issue of the Moving Picture World that the Selig Polyscope Company had made an alliance with the Chicago Tribune for the purpose of issuing a weekly news reel beginning January 1, comment was occasioned as to what had happened to Hearst, who had, for the past year collaborated with Selig on the Hearst-Selig Weekly. The answer is now at hand in the form of a four page announcement elsewhere in this issue of the World.

Hearst has formed an alliance with the Vitagraph Company and promises a photo-news weekly reel, more comprehensive than ever.

The plans upon which the new news reel is to be made are novel and far reaching. It contemplates the division of the country into zones and the selection of a certain part of the incidents depicted in each reel that will pertain to the zone in which it is published. In other words, the service will be, in a certain degree, local as well as general. As now planned there are to be three of these zones.

Another feature of the service is that it will be independent of all other distributing agencies. It will not be associated with any other program or service. This feature is said to have its advantages.

Each zone will have its headquarters and its own news gathering staff and will supply all local event pictures to exhibitors in its territory along with the state and national events.

A still further innovation is a plan by which an exhibitor may name his own price for the service he gets. The details of this plan are not at hand, but can be obtained by communicating with the Hearst-Vitagraph Company.

There will also be "special service" in the way of photographs of unusual importance and a system of lobby announcements and posters.

Much might be said here about the success of Mr. Hearst in his ventures into the field of motion pictures and of the great facilities of the Vitagraph Company to carry out its end of the new project, but these subjects are too well known to motion picture exhibitors to require rehearsal at this time. The alliance is an interesting one and its progress will be watched with no little concern by the trade.

Vitagraph Plans

Albert E. Smith Announces Some Innovations—Will Show Pictures in Advance and Offer a Personally Picked Program.

ALBERT E. SMITH, treasurer of the Vitagraph Company, makes an interesting announcement in behalf of that company that will be of moment to motion picture exhibitors generally. In the first place, he declares:

"Today the wise exhibitor buys in the open market. He picks his program according to merit only—he gives his patrons what they want. In the past you have accepted what the exchanges offered, simply because you did not have the opportunity to choose your subjects. But the Vitagraph has established a precedent. After great forethought, after analyzing conditions, after considering the wants of the exhibitor, we have decided to let the exhibitor see every picture that he books. We do not ask exhibitors to buy our product in the dark."

This is a startling departure from the old order of things and should be welcomed by exhibitors.

Vitagraph is now releasing a single-reel comedy every Monday, a Sidney Drew comedy every Friday and a Broadway Star feature of three reels every Saturday.

"Probably the greatest change in our releasing system," said Mr. Smith, "is our personally picked program—a program composed of a four-reel dramatic subject and a single-reel comedy. This personally picked program is produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Blackton and myself. This innovation will give the exhibitor a well balanced evening's entertainment complete in all detail.

"The features are especially selected and are strong in heart interest, while the comedies are the variety of comedy that can be shown in high class theatres; that contain comic situations without vulgarity. We know this personally picked program will make money for exhibitors. Our knowledge of the industry leads us to believe that the public wants this kind of entertainment; it is a complete show and will satisfy the most critical audiences. Heretofore you have had to take other productions in conjunction with Vitagraph releases. Heretofore it has been necessary to accept other makes of film in order to get Vitagraph subjects. Heretofore you had no opportunity of picking the subjects you desired.

"Now you can give the public what it demands. You can give them all Vitagraph if it suits your purpose. You can combine and lay out your program so that it will be well balanced, and you can also give a complete evening's entertainment, with the knowledge that you are using the best that the land affords by using the Vitagraph personally picked program."

Virginia Pearson Plans Poe Monument

EDGAR ALLAN POE, the great writer, is to have a fitting memorial erected to his memory in New York City if the plans of Virginia Pearson, who recently deserted the stage to star in photoplays, do not go amiss. For years an ardent admirer of Poe and his works, Miss Pearson has long harbored the idea of assisting in a movement to give this noted author a suitable monument, and when it was suggested by several prominent men that she herself inaugurate a fund to this end the star immediately designated her willingness by depositing her check for $250 in the Commercial Trust Company in New York City to the credit of the Edgar Allen Poe Memorial Fund. In addition, Miss Pearson has written to the editors of the foremost publications of the country inviting them to serve on a committee for the collection of the fund and subsequent erection of the monument. Many have already accepted, and so ready has been the response from well-known men and women offering their support that it is believed that the $50,000 which it is planned to secure for the monument will be available in a very short time.

Virginia Pearson.

Mayor Preston of Baltimore, in which city the remains of Poe are buried, recently wrote to Miss Pearson an encouraging communication in which he suggested that the monument be erected in Baltimore. After investigation, Miss Pearson decided New York to be the logical city for its erection and took up the matter with Cabot Ward, Commissioner of Parks of New York City, who promised his assistance in securing a fitting site for the statue.

NOILA THROUGH ASSOCIATED.

Capt. William J. Hannon, president of the Noila Film Company, of New Orleans, was in town last week and arranged to release his five-reel features through the Associated, offering one feature every four weeks. The releases will start in December.

The Noila is not a new company, having been organized for some time, but the brand has not been made known until now. They have a glass and electric studio on the Bayou St. John, the studio grounds covering about 18,000 square feet, with laboratory, offices and full equipment, and they have now on hand a stock of negative that will ensure regularity of release.

Capt. Hannon's son, William Morgan Hannon, author of "The Photodrama" and other essays, is the company's editor and will also have full supervision of the sub-titling of films, ensuring a freedom from the annoying errors in grammar and spelling that mark so many feature releases. His standing in the literary world of New Orleans is also assurance that the stories will possess literary as well as pictorial merit.

Coming Triangle Attractions

Billie Burke, Marie Doro and the Talmadge Sisters Featured in Three Strong Productions.

MISS BILLIE BURKE'S recent flying visit to the Ince studios in southern California indicates to theatrical sharps that she contemplates becoming a regular Ince star. This will surprise a good many persons who thought that the picture play "Peggy" was to be her first and only film play. A recent letter from the coast said: "You cannot exploit 'Peggy' too strongly. It is really one of the most attractive film comedies ever made, and Miss Burke has proven herself a perfect screen subject."

Billie Burke is said to be the most expensive stage star ever engaged for the pictures, not excepting Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree who passed through New York last week on his way to the Griffith studio. Her probable future re-employment at Inceville means that Triangle directors realize she is able to "deliver the goods" in proportion to her enormous salary. "Peggy" is a story of the eternal conflict between the old and the new, the spirit of conservatism in the Scottish Highland community and the social and moral revolution affected by the entrance of the New York girl, Peggy Cameron, on the scene. It will be released to exhibitors generally in January.

Out among the redwoods of California, the land of vast dimensions and vast silences, Nature often takes captive a lonely heart that with little or no human companionship rests content in the abode of beauty. Such a character, living over again the Grecian mythology of gods and goddesses, Pam, Satyrs and wood nymphs, Granville Warwick created in the new Triangle-Fine Arts play, "The Wood Nymph," which will shortly have its first public view at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York. It was fortunate that Miss Marie Doro's engagement under the Triangle happened to be so timed that she could essay the stellar role of Daphne, the Californian wood nymph, in this story. D. W. Griffith who supervised the production has been careful to surround Miss Doro with an able cast. Among them are the handsome Charles West, as the star's leading man; Frank Campeau, the wonderful ex-bandit of "Jordan is a Hard Road;" Wilfred Lucas, the clever heavy of "The Lily and the Rose," together with Cora Drew, Fred Graham and Pearl Ellsmore. "The Wood Nymph," with Miss Doro, will be one of the early showings at the Knickerbocker theater, with a general Triangle release soon after the first of the year.

The advent of the Talmadge sisters, Norma and Constance, to the Griffith studio, is one of the recent pleasant incidents of Triangle activities, and their first new play under this sign, "The Missing Links," is scheduled for early presentation at the Knickerbocker theater. Miss Norma Talmadge is one of the youngest stars at Griffithville. Her entire experience has been in the films. In her first effort for the Triangle she is co-star with Robert Harron, and the quality of the cast is indicated by the fact that Thomas Jefferson, Elmer Clifton, Hal Wilson and Constance Talmadge are in it. "The Missing Links" takes its queer title from the circumstance that a missing cuff link figures as a clew to the discovery of a murderer. The play is an absorbing tale of loves and hates and financial tangles in a small country town.

JOHNNY POWERS-EDNA PENDLETON.

Johnny Powers, the popular assistant director to Stuart Paton of the Imp-Universal studio, and who accompanied the company on the Nassau trip last summer, was introduced to Miss Edna Pendleton, a member of the company, by Jack Cohn, and it resulted in a case of love at first sight, culminating in a little trip to the Church Around the Corner. It's about three weeks now since Johnny and Miss Pendleton, starting out looking for locations for Director Paton, quietly got the location they wanted at the parson's and were there joined in the holy bands of wedlock. After keeping the news a secret for a couple of weeks it was whispered around the studio that the little flirtation led to a more serious courtship with the results above mentioned. Now the happy couple is being showered with congratulations by the employees of the Imp studio.

NEW EXPORT REGULATIONS.

The announcement that new United States regulations relative to export procedure will become effective January 1, 1916, has created such intense interest among manufacturers and shippers that the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, Washington, has found it necessary to reprint the new order with explanatory text. That pamphlet is just off the press and is being supplied free of charge to those interested, upon application to the above mentioned office. All shipments for export to foreign countries or to Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico will be affected by the new regulations.

Triangle Protests

Avers That Its Transfer of the Studebaker Theater to Jones, Linick & Shaefer Does Not Mean the Failure of Its "Two Dollar" Policy.

IN last week's issue of the Moving Picture World our Chicago correspondent communicated the information to the trade that the Triangle Film Corporation had turned the Studebaker theater in that city over to the firm of Jones, Linick & Shaefer, which would in future operate it, showing Triangle pictures at 25-cent and 50-cent admission prices, drawing the conclusion that such action pronounced the failure of the Triangle's plan for two-dollar pictures in Chicago.

Decided exceptions are taken to this conclusion by the Triangle Corporation in a letter to the Moving Picture World signed by Campbell MacCulloch, manager of publicity and promotion for that corporation, who cites the following message, which is a copy of one sent to the daily press of Chicago and is said to contain the true reasons for the change of management:

COPY OF TELEGRAM.

New York, Nov. 13, 1915.—Beginning Monday, November 29th, the Studebaker Theater will pass back into the hands of Jones, Linick & Schaefer interests, who will continue therein to exhibit the Triangle plays which have achieved so favorable an impression in Chicago, exactly as they have been shown during the management by the Triangle Film Corporation.

Motion picture exhibitors and theater managers in Chicago have brought no little pressure to bear upon the Triangle Film Corporation to have this theater released to some of their number on the ground that it is commercially unethical for a distributing corporation to engage in competition with its customers.

This theater was inaugurated as a high class playhouse, devoted to Triangle Film plays to demonstrate the practicability of the plan, and it has now served that purpose.

As the Triangle Film Corporation is engaged in producing film plays by Griffith, Ince and Sennett, and renting these plays to its customers, the motion picture exhibitors and theater managers throughout the country, Chicago interests have felt that it was more proper that such exhibition should be handled by one of their number.

Arrangements have been made with Jones, Linick & Schaefer, therefore, whereby, on the payment of a substantial bonus, the Triangle control of the Studebaker Theater will revert to these interests, beginning Monday, November 29th. No change will be made in the conduct of the theater. The plays will continue to be shown in the house as in the past, but the management will be the local Jones, Linick & Schaefer management, and not the Triangle Film Corporation.

A similar arrangement has been made with regard to the Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia, which, on Monday, November 22d, will revert also to its former management, the B. F. Keith interests. Precisely similar conditions will prevail there, so far as to the management is concerned. Triangle plays will still be seen, as they have been, the single change being that of management.

In each case it has been interesting to note that the pressure for reversion did not come until after last Monday, November 7th, when the general release date for the first showing of Triangle Plays throughout the country proved the enormous drawing power of these productions. Immediately it was demonstrated that the Triangle service was without question an assured success, at that moment efforts to reclaim the theaters in Chicago and Philadelphia were made, and while tentative proposals had been in process before the Triangle success produced offers of heavy bonuses.

THE TRIANGLE CORPORATION.

Granting that all Manager MacCulloch says in his letter (which we do not publish) and the telegram to the Chicago papers is true in as far as it affects the acts and purposes of the Triangle Film Corporation, the fact still remains that Jones, Linick & Schaefer, who now control the house, have placed the admission prices at 25 cents and 50 cents, which must be accepted as their verdict as to the tariff for which the patrons of motion pictures in Chicago will stand. The matter would seem to resolve itself into a question of judgment between Jones, Linick & Schaefer and the Triangle Film Company, and that the correspondent of the Moving Picture World had merely recorded an inference, expressed or implied, by the local managers.

JOSEPH FREDERICK WITH PREMIER.

Joseph Frederick has been added to the staff of the Premier Program for scenario work. Joseph Frederick is best known as the author of dramatic productions. His three-act comedy, entitled "Worried Partners," having attained much success. Mr. Frederick has just completed an original libretto, based on "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the music of which has been written by Arthur Pryor, and which will be produced in the near future. Those who know Joseph Fredericks personally know him as Frederick Joseph Chipman, but in literary, dramatic and motion picture circles the name of Joseph Frederick is far more familiar.

"TWILIGHT SLEEP" BANKRUPT.

The Motherhood Educational Society, Incorporated, which has been producing a motion picture film known as "Twilight Sleep," filed in the Federal District Court Tuesday, November 23, a voluntary bankruptcy petition. It estimated its liabilities at $14,238, and said that its assets, which included the "Twilight Sleep" films and $504 in cash, were problematical in value.

Kalem Announces Plans

Will Adhere to Its Well Known Policy of Short Subjects With Strong Appeal.

THAT the interests of the Kalem Company would be centered on the production of one and two-reel films and that no attempt would be made to meet a rigidly binding schedule for the production of multiple reel offerings was the gist of an official announcement from that company early this week. The statement contained the first outline of Kalem's plans under the recently inaugurated General Film Company policy. It was also hinted that Kalem expects to be ready within a few weeks to make an announcement of unusual importance concerning the details of forthcoming productions.

"We are in negotiation with some of the most prominent authors in the country," explained an official of the company, when interviewed by a World representative, "and naturally as we expect to give exhibitors the work of these big writers in short films we feel that the news will be somewhat of a surprise. We have never swerved from the policy of putting our very best into even the one and two-reel films, and the wonderful success of 'Stingaree' which is being released in two reel episodes though written by so well known an author as E. W. Hornung, is sufficient incentive for us to make even more elaborate efforts in the future.

"I believe we may be pardoned for a slight feeling of pride in having seen the handwriting on the wall regarding the short film," he continued. "While it would seem that many manufacturers have allowed their short films to deteriorate in order to chase the feature will-o-the-wisp, trade paper readers will probably remember that Kalem has always been a champion of the short film. We have given our best directors and our best players to them. Take the case of Robert Ellis, whom I consider one of our most promising directors, and who has been responsible for some of our most successful multiple reelers. Just recently he has been placed in charge of the "Ventures of Marguerite" company because we want to give that single reel series the best we have.

"The statement that we will center our interest on the short films does not mean that we will withdraw from the production of multiple reelers. It means that we shall make no attempt to meet the rigidly binding rules of releasing a feature production on schedule week in and week out. When we secure subjects that we believe warrant treatment in four and five reels, and if the completed production comes up to the standard set, then we shall release multiple reelers. 'The Black Crook' is one of the big things that we will have ready to offer in a very short time. When we get subjects as strong and with as much novelty and drawing power for the exhibitor we shall produce other features.

"But just now we have three series that have proven winners and the well known 'Ham and Bud' comedies. The latter subject, with the 'Ventures of Marguerite,' 'Stingaree' and the 'Hazards of Helen' are in the sure-fire class, and it is up to us to devote practically all our energy to keep them so. That's quite a strong quartette of cards to pin your faith to, isn't it?"

KLEINE MAKES "THE SCARLET PATH."

"The Scarlet Path" is the title of a new Kleine feature under way. It is a story of New York's great white way and will be told by a star cast with Guy Coombs in the lead. He will be supported by Anna Q. Nilsson, Della Connor and others of like caliber.

"The Scarlet Path" contains a cabaret scene which for size and magnificence is probably unequalled. The entire floor of the big Bronx studio was given over to the staging of this scene. Several hundred people were engaged, and a balcony, mezzanine floor and grand staircase constructed. The entire production is characterized by a lavishness and wealth of detail commensurate with the splendid story it tells.

LONG DIED A MILLIONAIRE.

Litigation over the fees demanded by an attorney in the matter of the estate of Samuel Long, deceased, one of the owners of the Kalem Company, brought to light the fact that from an investment of $1,000 made in 1907 was amassed an estate now valued at a figure closely approaching $2,000,000.

It appears that Mr. Long made a will disposing of his holdings, but it was found to be illegal when offered for probate, and letters of administration have been issued to the decedent's widow, Alice M. Long. Long owned 40 per cent of the stock of the Kalem Company.

Arrow Film Reorganized

Owners Form a $350,000 Corporation—New Officers Elected —Shallenberger Remains President.

IN ORDER to have the proper facilities for its increased output under contracts recently entered into with Pathe, the Arrow Film Corporation, of 71 West Twenty-third street, has been reorganized and enlarged. The new contracts call for the production of not less than ten five-reel Gold Rooster features a year, and the production of the new "Who's Guilty?" series and other Pathe pictures.

The Arrow Film Corporation originally was a New York corporation, with a capitalization of $30,000. It now has been reincorporated under the laws of Virginia, and its capital stock increased to $350,000. Practically all of this stock was subscribed for and is held by the investors in the original Arrow Company.

The first meeting of the new company was held last week and the following officers were elected: President, W. E. Shallenberger; vice-president, Gaston Van Werveke; treasurer, Norman Conniers; assistant treasurer, Frank W. Lynch; secretary, Albert S. LeVino. These officers also are directors, and Howell Hansel and J. F. Shallenberger constitute the remaining members of the board. The executive committee consists of Messrs. Shallenberger, Hansel and LeVino.

W. E. Shallenberger is a heavy investor and an active participant in all the collateral branches of the film industry. He has large holdings in the Thanhouser, Mutual, American, Reliance, Majestic, Randolph and other motion picture organizations. He has owned several theatres in the central West, has operated his own exchanges, and is thoroughly familiar with the distributing and producing ends of the business.

Mr. Van Werveke formerly was secretary to Louis J. Gasnier, general manager of Pathe. Mr. Conniers is a man of broad sympathies and high artistic attainments, added to which he is an executive of high order. Mr. Lynch was auditor of the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation and is rated highly expert in matters of finance and motion picture accounting.

In order to start work immediately on its Gold Rooster releases and at the same time resume work on the new scenarios of the "Who's Guilty?" series, the directors instructed the executive committee to relieve Mr. Hansel of all details of actual production at the present time and make him the director-general of Arrow productions.

The executive committee will co-operate with Mr. Hansel toward the selection of additional players, directors, assistant directors, cameramen, etc., who are to engage in the manufacture of the Arrow's Gold Rooster features and other products. Over all these artists Mr. Hansel will exercise a supervision similar to that of D. W. Griffith, and on his own account, will direct only the largest of Arrow productions.

The present quarters of the Arrow Company in Yonkers are not believed large enough for the increased output and Mr. Hansel now is on a search for new studios. It is possible that "Who's Guilty?" will be produced in the present plant and the Gold Rooster features in another studio. But it is hoped to acquire a building sufficiently large to accommodate at least four producing companies simultaneously.

The rights to a number of book and play successes have been acquired by Mr. Shallenberger for the Arrow Company. In every case they are literary products that give considerably more than their title or their author's names toward adaptation for screen purposes. In addition to these, the Arrow Company is in the market for original five-reel scenarios written by photoplay authors of established reputation. Mr. LeVino will have charge of this department in co-operation with Mr. Hansel.

LESSER SELLS METRO FRANCHISE.

Through a deal closed November 18 between Harry J. Cohen, representing the Metro Pictures Corporation, and Sol L. Lesser of San Francisco, the California franchise passes into the control of the Metro.

The arrangement carries with it the selling of sixty copies of features, the entire stock of advertising, lithographs and accessories of the Metro program. New offices for the Metro will be opened.

Lesser will continue his All Star Features Distributors, Inc., and the buying of such high grade productions as the open market affords.

Sol Lesser is one of the original organizers of the Metro, holding one-fifteenth of the capital stock of the Metro. The stock was also transferred to the new owners of the California exchange.

Another Studio for Equitable

Big Horsley Plant, in Bayonne, N. J., Taken Over by Triumph.

ANOTHER big studio has been found necessary to keep up with the stage room demanded by the Equitable, and to meet the increasing requirements, arrangements have been completed by which the big structure erected by Horsley in Bayonne, N. J., has been taken over by the Triumph Company, the Equitable's producing ally. Edmond Lawrence, the director of "The Warning," has taken a company down to the big plant where, with Julia Dean as the star, he has started work on a big five part production to be called "The Ransom."

The building is almost entirely of glass, resting on a twenty-foot high foundation of brick, with a spacious cellar, in which the laboratories are located. It is completely equipped with everything for producing photoplays of the most artistic type.

That the Equitable's forces have been compelled to reach out for addition to their studio room is an illustration of the energy which is behind the movement to make the Equitable one of the foremost companies in its field, and is an added assurance that everything human foresight and the developments of science can bring to bear will be used to make the company's productions stand out as a class distinctive in itself.

Julius D. Cowles

JULIUS DEEMING COWLES, first cousin of Rear Admiral William Sheffield Cowles, who married ex-President Roosevelt's sister, was recently forcibly thrown out of a restaurant in Yonkers, where he had been a liberal patron for more than a year. Cowles, who has been appearing in Metro feature productions, took the matter with good grace and humor. He said he appreciated that appearance was against him, as he had a four weeks' growth of shaggly beard on his face, and five of his front teeth were missing. This desreputable appearance Cowles affected in the name of art. But it proved almost total social ostracism for him.

Julius D. Cowles.

Cowles had the role of a half-witted young man in "A Yellow Streak," the big Metro feature produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, for release on the Metro program. He had recently lost three teeth in previous "rough parts" in Metro features, and postponed going to his dentist until he finished work in "A Yellow Streak." Lionel Barrymore, who is starred in the production, used a spunky little burro in a mining camp scene, and Cowles was directed to care for the animal. The burro took a dislike for Cowles immediately, and no sooner had they been left alone than he kicked the actor in the face. Cowles lost two more teeth.

During the time the picture was being made in the mountains around Tuxedo Park, N. Y., Director William Nigh refused to allow Cowles to shave. With his hair and whiskers almost hiding his face and head, and his teeth out in front, Cowles was a sight to behold. Cowles is a graduate of Yale, and has had a successful career on the stage, including five years with Augustin Daly.

BUSHMAN AT PHILADELPHIA BALL.

Francis X. Bushman, the famous star of the Metro Pictures Corporation, will lead the grand march at the fourth annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, at Philadelphia, on Wednesday night, December 8th. Pauline Frederick will be his partner on this occasion, and the "Who's Who" of the motion picture world in the East will attend the ball, which is a big event for picture people.

General Film Policy

Officially Announced to Exhibitors by President Berst—Hopes to Do Away with the "Unsatisfied Customer."

IN line with the statements previously published in the Moving Picture World regarding the change of policy in the management of the General Film Company coming with the accession of the new officers, recently elected, President J. A. Berst has issued the following circular on the subject to the exhibitors of the United States. It will be perused with interest:

General Film Company (Incorporated)
Fifth Avenue Building, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York.
27th November, 1915.

Dear Mr. Exhibitor:

This Company has elected new officers, and has adopted a new policy. This new policy is to a very large extent based upon co-operation with our customers, with the motion picture manufacturers and with our employees.

By co-operation with the Exhibitor we intend to study more carefully what are his requirements, and provide for the same at a fair compensation. Co-operation with the motion picture manufacturers will enable us to discard the poorer films very rapidly, and use extensively and exclusively only the best productions. Co-operation amongst our employees all over the country will tend to stimulate their efforts, and do away entirely with drastic methods.

It has been proven that in the past the motion picture manufacturers releasing through this Company have released too many films every week, and it has been recognized that with a smaller number of releases this Company could give a better service, and still give satisfaction to practically all of its customers.

It is to your interest, Mr. Exhibitor, that the motion picture manufacturer invests as much money as he can in every picture. In order that he do so his receipts must be sufficient to cover the cost of manufacture, plus a legitimate profit. It is obvious that if too many pictures are placed on the market the manufacturer will sell an insufficient number of prints of each picture, and therefore will not spend the necessary amount to make costly negatives. On the contrary, if he makes few pictures the requirements for prints of each one will be greater and his profits will be greater also. He will therefore be disposed to invest more money in the quality of his pictures. This he will do by acquiring good plays and employing well-known actors and better directors.

In our organization many of our Branches in different parts of the country are supplying their customers on "Open Booking," while in other parts customers are supplied on "Schedule Booking." Our records have shown us that wherever we have used the system of "Open Booking" the customer was enabled to make more money, due to the privilege of selecting the films best adapted to his trade. This system has practically done away with the dissatisfied customer, and for these reasons we would like to see it gradually take the place of the "Schedule System," which may be termed the old method, and which, for reasons too lengthy to explain here, has been detrimental to many, and especially unfair to the manufacturer making the best films.

It is our intention to market in the very near future two different programmes: one termed a "Regular Programme," and one termed a "Unit Programme." The "Regular Programme" will be composed of one, two and three reel subjects, and will total 42 reels per week. The "Unit Programme" will be composed of one, two, three and four reel subjects, and the length of such "Unit Programmes" will be either five or six reels. We will offer you in the very near future two "Unit Programmes" per week, one composed of five or six reels of Lubin and one composed of five or six reels of Vitagraph. Therefore, with the "Regular Programme" and the "Unit Programme" we will release a minimum of 52 reels per week.

Our two biggest competitors place at the disposal of their patrons respectively every week only 28 reels and 29 reels, therefore our customers will still have a greater advantage over their competitors dealing with other Film Exchanges.

Some of our competitors, who see their business getting away from them every day, have recently been using treacherous methods to injure our business by spreading false rumors to the effect that the General Film Company was either to be dissolved or was to be absorbed by other companies, or that some of the motion picture manufacturers releasing through this Company were going to cease releasing through us. We wish to emphatically denounce these unfair means, and assure you that there is no truth in any of these rumors. All of our manufacturers are entirely friendly to us, and besides the General Film Company is doing business in an absolutely legal manner, and neither we nor our patrons have anything to fear, as any decision which may be rendered in the Government suit now pending will not alter the relations between our patrons, our manufacturers and ourselves.

It is quite contrary to our policy to pay attention to or deny false rumors, but we have been strongly urged by several of our faithful customers to do so, and we feel that in justice to our customers and ourselves this statement is warranted.

We beg to assure you that this Company, through its officers and employees, will endeavor to please you. Believe us,

Very Truly yours,
GENERAL FILM COMPANY (INC.),
J. A. BERST,
President.

THANHOUSER COMPANY ENTERTAINS.

Director Eugene Moore of the Thanhouser Company planned to take a spectacular fire scene at Portchester, N. Y., on Saturday, in which the volunteer fire department and a fair share of the townspeople were to be included, but rain forced a postponement. The sightseeing party arranged by Leon J. Rubinstein, advertising and publicity manager for Thanhouser, visited the New Rochelle studio instead, and watched the making of several interesting scenes directed by Mr. Moore and George Foster Platt. Mr. Rubinstein entertained at a luncheon in Germania Hall, where the guests included Mr. Platt, Arthur Cunningham, Harris Gordon and Mrs. Gordon, formerly Louise Bates.

Harry Carey

ANYONE who thinks that the life of a photoplayer is one sweet dream or that the roses are more predominant than the thorns should spend a day with Harry Carey in his work in the title role of "A Knight of the Range,"—the first of what is to become a series of five-reel western features. And at the end of that day spent in riding, roping, falling, climbing mountains and coming down again, fighting with men who are accustomed to fights of the sort staged along the western border, it is more than likely that friend layman would feel that he has been laboring under a misapprehension of some sort.

Harry Carey.

Every member of the company, from Mr. Carey himself down to the least known extra player, is an expert at what is known as "topping a broncho." They can all ride and rope and they are all actors. Playing opposite Mr. Carey is Olive Fuller Golden, whose work with the Universal for the past two years precludes any necessity of an introduction at this time. Taken all in all, the company is one which promises great things in the line of western drama. It has been a hard bunch to get together, for range workers and actors are seldom done up in the same bundle. Jacques Jaccard, director of the company, however, has managed to get just such a crowd together, and the results he has obtained in the production of his first picture more than justify his choice.

KLEINE TO MAKE MORE COMEDIES.

Another comedy company has been added to the six companies now working at the Kleine studios. This will be headed by George Bickel, of Bickel and Watson, and will produce a series of laugh-makers especially written for him. In certain character roles, such as that of the musician which he handled so successfully in the Ziegfeld "Follies" shows, Bickel has no equal. Characters of a shabby-genteel, old-gentleman type will, in general, constitute his line of work.

Supporting Bickel are Millicent Evans, Eddie Boulden and Susan Westford. Millicent Evans is remembered as Douglas Fairbanks' leading woman in "Officer 666," as the dainty leading woman of "The Blue Mouse" and many other successes under the Klaw & Erlanger management. Her film experience has also been extensive. Miss Evans has been starred in Universal and Biograph productions.

Eddie Boulden, familiar to picture patrons through his several years' experience in Edison stock, needs no introduction. Susan Westford, who is the sister of Lillian Russell, is another well-known photoplayer who will appear in support of George Bickel.

PICTURE SITUATION IN COSTA RICA.

French and Italian films are almost universally in use at the motion picture theaters of Port Limon and district, according to C. Donaldson, consul at that place. However, it is patent to any observer that when, at rare intervals, an American film is exhibited the general public prefers it to those of European productions; yet the latter have the "right of way," and either on account of cheapness or because of prejudice are about the only films seen. As a result of this disregard of public opinion, the motion picture business is falling off, and now an exhibition only once or twice a week fails to attract an audience, and the theaters are almost empty.

The custom in this country has been for one firm to import all the films, which afterwards are shown in turn in the different theaters in Costa Rica.

John D. Tippett Talks

Managing Director of Transatlantic Film Company, Limited, Visiting New York and Universal City.

BACK in New York for the first time in two and a half years, John D. Tippett, managing director of the Transatlantic Film Company, Limited, talked to a World man of his work in Universal House, 37-39 Oxford street, London. Mr. Tippett had arrived in New York the day before, Monday, November 22, after an exceedingly rough trip of ten days. He was seen in the office of Robert H. Cochrane at the Universal headquarters, 1600 Broadway. He said the film situation in England was holding up well, and that Universal films, the distribution of which throughout Great Britain and Europe was his whole concern, were doing a big business.

John D. Tippett.

When Mr. Tippett went to England in June, 1913, the various brands of pictures comprising the Universal programs were being distributed by four or five separate concerns. The Transatlantic Film Company was organized, with Mr. Tippett as managing director, to take over the agencies of all of them. Universal House, a six-story building, was fitted up. Offices were opened all over Europe. Prior to the beginning of the war there were fifteen of these. At present the Transatlantic is represented in Paris, Rome, Barcelona, Milan, Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Christiania, Petrograd and Moscow. In these offices Universal film is handled exclusively. "These cities have done good business right from the start," said Mr. Tippett, "and the Universal is as well known in all of them as it is in the United States. Especially is this true in Russia.

"Quality of films counts in England," went on Mr. Tippett. "Good pictures sell themselves. Salesmanship as a factor in putting over films has minimum value. If a man presumes to suggest to a professional viewer that a certain subject is a good one very likely he will be met with a remark such as: 'Please bear in mind the fact that I see upward of 40,000 feet of film a day—yes, from 200,000 to 240,000 feet a week. I know what is being made throughout the world. Who is going to tell me when a picture is good or when it is not?'

"There's the situation. They do know, too—both viewers and dealers. They are business men. Films are sold on merit. And the Universal is doing one-third of the business in the open market in England. In spite of the fact that there are only 4,000 picture theaters in Great Britain they assimilate everything that is made in the world and they are doing a good business. Of course, many men have been taken out of the country. Exhibitors are playing features strongly. Programs, which consist of six or seven reels, are changed twice weekly. For wonderful projection, splendid music and general tone there is nothing in the world like the English theaters. The price of admission ranges all the way from 5 cents to $2. The most scrupulous care is taken with the program.

"We have been successful with our serials. With 'The Black Box' we sold forty copies, and there is every reason to believe we will dispose of fifty of 'The Broken Coin.' How did Nat Goodwin's 'Business Is Business' go? Now you are talking of a picture that I thought a lot of. When I showed that subject of Otis Turner's in France I was told the atmosphere was ideal, that it could not have been made there to greater advantage."

Mr. Tippett was asked about the Bernhardt subject. "Jeanne Dore," and especially as to the authenticity of the guillotine scene. "That was the real thing," said the Transatlantic director. The guillotine was built by the concern that makes these instruments for the French government, and by the way, is the only one that ever was made for any purpose other than straight business. Ours was set up on the outskirts of Paris against a great stone building near the fortifications. The scene of the execution was a duplicate of what happens on those grim occasions when the mandate of the law is being carried out."

Mr. Tippett said the execution scene as it will be shown in England and in this country is somewhat different from the view the Russians will get. In the land of the Czar picture patrons demand extreme realism, and with this in view the drop of the knife was made to simulate the real thing as far as that could be accomplished with a dummy. While this scene was being taken a German Taube flew over the heads of the actors. The anti-aircraft guns popped on all sides and, as Mr. Tippett put it, "Mr. Taube very suddenly changed his mind and started for home in a hurry."

There are about 600 picture theaters in France and in Europe in normal times about 5,500, Mr. Tippett estimated. The number of those in the latter now in operation can only be guessed. It may be interesting to note that this makes the total of picture theaters in operation in Great Britain and Europe in peace times approximately 10,000.

The Transatlantic has had two companies making pictures for the past eight months. The laboratory work on the films of these as well as on all the positives for distribution through foreign Universal agencies is done at a big factory in Epping Forest, one of the suburbs of London, about thirty-five minutes ride from Universal House.

When asked if the new impost on films would be appreciably felt by the Transatlantic Company, Mr. Tippett replied: "It will. I estimate it will cost us $6,000 to $7,000 a week and may run as high as $400,000 annually. The matter has been taken by all branches of the film industry in England, with the result that arrangements will be made so that the burden will be distributed equitably among all. There is no disposition anywhere to avoid meeting a due share of the enormous expenses of the war."

Mr. Tippett left on Friday for a flying trip to Universal City as the guest of President Laemmle. He will, according to present plans, return to England on December 15.

Mae Murray in Lasky Productions

FAMOUS at one time as the "most beautiful show girl in the world," Miss Mae Murray until several weeks ago one of the important principals in Ziegfeld's "Follies of 1915," has left the musical comedy stage for an indefinite period to appear exclusively in photoplay productions of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company on the Paramount Program.

Mae Murray.

Miss Murray left for the Lasky studios at Hollywood, Calif., last Monday. She will begin her work immediately under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille.

However famous Miss Murray became by reason of her wide reputation as a "show girl," she won added popularity for herself during the past two years by reason of her remarkable dancing. Probably no woman besides Mrs. Vernon Castle enjoyed so great a vogue as a dancer than Miss Murray since the modern dancing "craze" swept the country. She toured across the country in vaudeville and on her return to New York last spring she was established as an institution of New York's gay life atop the Forty-fourth street theatre at Mae Murray's Danse Marigny.

Miss Murray brings an unusual experience to her new screen work. She never posed before the motion picture camera until last spring when the new "Follies" was being rehearsed. One of the features of that performance is a burlesque on motion pictures which shows players on the screen receiving orders from the director who stands in the aisle among the spectators of the audience. Miss Murray is the heroine of the burlesque.

Miss Murray is twenty-two years old. She is a blonde type, with wavy hair, big eyes and clear features. Her motion picture plans for the future are said to contain some very interesting things for her.

Helen's Anniversary Thrill

Fourteen-Foot Drop from Top Girder of Bridge to Train in "A Boy at the Throttle."

THAT December would be "anniversary month" for the "Hazards of Helen" series was announced in last week's Moving Picture World. In "A Boy at the Throttle," released by Kalem on December 25, Helen presents her "anniversary thrill." The players of the company at the California studio originally planned to hold an elaborate celebration on the day that the series was a year old, but Helen Gibson, who is playing the lead in the "Hazards," declared that the perilous situation of the picture then in making should be staged on the birthday before the feasting began.

Scene from "A Boy at the Throttle" (Kalem).

It took considerable ingenuity to devise a peril more extraordinary than Helen has encountered in the past, but that the task was accomplished may be guessed from the photograph shown on this page. The top girder of the Melius drawbridge, near the studio, is fourteen feet above the top of trains passing below and it was decided that a drop from there would give all the thrill necessary to bring any photoplay patron to the edge of his seat. So Helen prepared a rope with sling knots, the train was started on its race across the bridge, and at the right moment Helen slid down the rope to within six feet of the train and dropped. A second's miscalculation would have caused her to slip between the cars, and, as it was, the landing on the train caused sufficient shock to come near to marring the celebration planned for later in the day.

The story of "A Boy at the Throttle" concerns Bobbie, the son of a station engineer, who climbs into the cab of an engine while the engineer is busy elsewhere and pulls the throttle open. The alarm goes out, and Helen, the operator at Lone Point, is ordered to derail the runaway and thus prevent it from running head-on into an approaching passenger train. Fearing for his son's life, Bobbie's father phones Helen and implores her not to send the engine into the ditch. Outside the station a small truck suggests a way out of her dilemma. Putting the car on the track, Helen speeds down the grade and flags the passenger train, switching it to a siding. Helen then races to the switch, which she reaches before the runaway train and then boards as shown in the photograph.

DE WITT C. WHEELER DEAD.

DeWitt C. Wheeler, best known throughout the United States as the greatest manufacturer of illustrated song slides when that industry was at its height, died very suddenly while visiting friends in New York on Sunday, November 21. Up to within a very few years Mr. Wheeler conducted a prosperous business in song slides, but the failing popularity of that form of entertainment led to the failure of his company, after which he turned to motion pictures, for which his long photographic experience especially fitted him.

For a time Mr. Wheeler manufactured pictures on his own account, but inability to find a suitable market led to failure in this venture, and of late he had been working as a camera man.

The deceased was about fifty-three years at the time of his death.

Cyril Scott

CYRIL SCOTT in 1884 a thin, skinny, though handsome young lad, had inclinations to get into the show business. At that time Miss Minnie Maddern was engaged by Charles Frohman to become leading lady and co-star with Henry Miller in "Caprice," which opened November 8 of that year at Indianapolis. He was chosen for a minor part in the play and received the sum of fifteen dollars a week. His role was that of a young athlete in the prime of life, full of health and vigor, trained to the inch, and being nothing but muscle and bone. He made the most of this slender opportunity and is today one of the leading stars of Broadway.

Cyril Scott.

When the Universal Film Manufacturing Company decided to film Meredith Nicholson's famous story, "Lords of High Decision," they wanted a prominent and well qualified Broadway actor to take the leading part, and, strangely enough, Cyril Scott, who played the role of an athlete in his first appearance on the speaking stage, was chosen for a similar part in his first appearance on the screen with Universal.

The Universal spent several weeks in Pittsburgh to film the story, where they used the mines of a large concern for many of the scenes and in order to get realistic effects not obtainable in any other way engaged the entire mining force to take part in the picture which gives it the actual mining atmosphere and scenery required for the proper portrayal of the story. The actors went several miles into the mines, and it took them several days before they became sufficiently accustomed to the change of air to act their roles in the bowels of the earth.

TOM MOORE WITH LUBIN.

Announcement is made by the Lubin Manufacturing Company that a contract has been entered into between that company and Tom Moore, one of the most popular men of photoplays, whereby that idol of the fans begins work with Lubin in the coming feature production, "Dollars and Cents," in which he will play opposite Ethel Clayton, the Lubin star.

Tom Moore needs no introduction to followers of motion pictures. Mr. Moore with Alice Joyce were one time favorites with the Kalem Company, and quite recently his retirement came from that company; since which time he has resisted many flattering offers from this or that concern, until Messrs. Singhi and Lowry for the Lubin Company made overtures which he confesses he could no longer resist.

In casting Mr. Moore for the leading male role in "Dollars and Cents" Director Joseph Kaufman, under whose supervision the production is to be made, has made a selection which not only assures an enhancement in the value of the production itself, but one which will afford to Tom an opportunity to display the remarkable screen playing ability which earned for him the reputation he enjoys.

"Dollars and Cents" is the story written by the eminent American writer, Albert Payson Terhune, which appeared both in serial and book form and which has been one of the best sellers of the age.

WILL EXPLOIT FEATURES.

The Public Service Film Company will fill a long felt want in the exhibiting end of the industry. Headed by Joseph Leblang, the noted organizer, it is the intention of the company to accept and exploit important features for owners who are not familiar with the game. The success achieved by the Public Service in their exploitation of the Chicago Tribune's German War Pictures bespeaks for the patrons of this company efficient and able representation.

Mutual Opens Publicity Campaign

President Freuler Announces the Expenditure of $300,000 for Newspaper and Billboard Advertising.

THE Mutual Film Corporation, in execution of President Freuler's policy of "service beyond the films," has launched a $300,000 advertising campaign to help the exhibitors. The media of this campaign are the trade papers of the industry, the newspapers and the billboards. This step is a part of the new Mutual policy. The story of the program has been told to the exhibitor. Now an effort is being made to tell it to the whole public.

Back of this program of advertising is President Freuler's basic idea of "service" to the exhibitors, a "service beyond the films," as he has styled it. It means the establishment of a certain merchandising idea, and it offers a particular opportunity to the exhibitor.

"The product has been made worth telling the people about," said President Freuler. "The Mutual Film Corporation has set out to tell them. But the people must see the pictures in the exhibitor's theatre.

"It remains for the exhibitor to tie up his house with this great campaign by his own individual advertising, letting the people know that his house has Mutual pictures and that they may be seen there regularily.

"The whole advertising policy has been shaped about the big words 'Mutual Program.' Those words catch the eye across the top of every poster, every announcement, every ad, every scrap or bit of Mutual publicity. The Mutual poster department has had a rebirth, with vast improvements in the quality and power of the paper, from one sheet to twenty-four—all to hammer in that sense of quality conveyed by the words 'Mutual Program.'"

Edith Luckett

EDITH LUCKETT has been engaged by the Raver Film Corporation to interpret the role of Estelle, the mysterious girl in the story of "The Other Girl," by Augustus Thomas. This comely young lady is the latest star to twinkle in the Raver firmament and completes the cast. Here is a girl with a most enviable dramatic reputation. She also possesses a face that is singularly adaptable to the motion picture camera. New York applauded the clever work of this star when she played the leading female role in support of George M. Cohan in his 1912 vehicle, "Broadway Jones." Again she essayed the leading character in support of Chauncey Olcott two successive seasons, first when he presented "Mother Machree," and second "The Heart of Paddy Whack." Another Broadway production in which she achieved recognition from all critics was the Porter Emerson Browne production of "Wild Oats." For two seasons Edith Luckett fulfilled engagements as leading lady for the Majestic Theater Stock Company, at Pittsfield, Mass., where her work has won her a standard reputation throughout all of New England, which territory attempts to lay as much claim to her as Washington, itself, where she was born.

Edith Luckett.

Edith Luckett has been theatrically bent from youth. In the Capital when but five years old she frequented the Columbia theater, near which her family resided, until she became personally acquainted with every member of the house staff. One week, during the course of a benefit performance, she implored the opportunity of doing one of the simple dances her mother had taught her. The request was granted with the result that the youthful terpsichorean received special attention from the local press. Thereafter she became a fixture at all benefit performances in that community and gradually advanced to the footlights proper.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"The Prince and the Pauper" at the Strand.

MARGUERITE CLARK is appearing at the Strand theater in a picturization of Mark Twain's famous story, "The Prince and the Pauper," the first work of America's greatest humorist to be presented to the motion picture public. Every man, woman and child is familiar with the great American humorist's inimitable story of the ambitious little beggar and the adventurous little prince, each of whom craved the life of freedom of the other. It is a rare combination of quaint humor, rich with the sparkling satire that has made the name of Mark Twain revered and loved the world over. And there is now and then a real thrill that shows the master touch of the gifted author. Of particular interest is the fact that the motion picture version of the play has afforded a remarkable opportunity for unusual double exposure work of a most exacting nature. When the play was produced on the stage it was always necessary to so arrange the scenes that the person who played the dual role of the prince and the pauper never appeared upon the stage at the same time. The marvels of photography, however, have rendered this inartistic performance wholly unnecessary and has made possible strict adherence to all the details of the original story.

In the double role of the lowly pauper and the high-spirited but democratic little prince, Marguerite Clark's delineation of two diametrically opposed characters is remarkable for its clarity and its consistency. Never does the clever actress forget her identity, giving to the beggar in purple and fine linen the uncouth air of the boy of the streets, and never failing to invest the little prince, even in his most dire distress, with the most delicate hauteur of the royal child. In support of Miss Clark are William Sorelle, Robert Broderick, and William Frederick.

Other film attractions on the program are the Strand Topical Review, beautiful and interesting travel and educational pictures, and a new comedy.

The Triangle Program at the Knickerbocker.

Helen Ware made her debut as a Triangle star this week at the Knickerbocker theater in "Cross Currents," a Griffith-supervised play of tense dramatic power and unusual scenic beauty. William S. Hart, previously seen in "The Disciple," returned in another Ince-directed feature, "Between Men;" and Fred Mace, the popular Keystone funmaker, has a typical Sennett comedy of the new order, "Crooked to the End." This combination marks the beginning of the third month of the Griffith-Ince-Sennett plays at the Knickerbocker.

Miss Ware's vehicle gives her ample opportunity for the display of her well known emotional abilities. The destruction of a yacht furnishes a genuine thrill and scenes on an uninhabited island exhibit much superb photography. Courtenay Foote, Teddy Samson and Sam De Grasse have important roles.

In "Between Men," William S. Hart is shown in the character which he loves and does best, that of a strong son of the West. House Peters, Enid Markey, J. Barney Sherry and Robert McKim round out a well balanced cast. Unusual effects are obtained by bringing the play to an end while the prinicipal characters are riding on a fast limited train.

"Crooked to the End" is a railroad comedy, and Fred Mace and his principal supporting funmakers, Charles Arling and Hugh Fay, have many thrilling but laughable escapes from death.

"The Gentleman from Indiana," at the Broadway.

At the Broadway theater Dustin Farnum, whose fine manliness in his stage successes has won him a large following from coast to coast, is presenting a picturization of "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington, released on the Paramount program. Mr. Farnum is seen in a charming love story of the Ohio River Valley.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" continues its run at the Vitagraph theater. "The Birth of a Nation" will remain indefinitely at the Liberty.

GOLDFISH NOW A GOLFER.

Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky Feature Play Company, has returned to his desk after a ten days' vacation in French Lick Springs, Ind. Mr. Goldfish learned to play golf while he was away, but he says he is a better judge of photoplays than mashie shots.

Fairbanks in the Ring

Star of Triangle Picture Wins Championship Bout at Sharkey A. C. While His Friends Shout Their Approval.

THE Sharkey Athletic Club of New York, the venerable haunt of pugilists who have taken the count and grown portly, the present home of aspiring muscular youth, was dedicated to a new art last week in the name of the Triangle. It is the art of obliterating the dividing line between fact and fiction.

Thousands of people are going to see a Triangle production called "His Picture in the Papers," in which Douglas Fairbanks wins a championship belt. Perhaps, just perhaps, one in a thousand will be able to tell when the men in the ring were fighting and when they were acting. Photography will have libelled nature if the scenes do not appear real, if the screen does not reflect bona fide bouts in a famous boxing club, crowded with enthusiastic fight fans.

Why employ supers? Why, indeed when one has a host of intelligent friends who are entertained the most when they assist in the entertainment. Director John Emerson couldn't have corralled at five dollars a head, a company such as that gathered about the ringside in response to judiciously circulated invitations. Lambs, Friars, members of the Screen Club were sprinkled through the crowd and they obeyed orders like the supers of a director's dream.

Speaking persuasively through a megaphone, Mr. Emerson almost succeeded in making it appear like a polite instrument for the communication of one's confidential thoughts. His instructions, always couched in the gentlest terms, explained the quality of emotion desirable at a given moment. There were times when he wanted enthusiasm, others when he wanted great enthusiasm and others when he looked for expressions of contempt. The crowd never once mistook the cue.

Joe Humphries, whose stentorian voice for long years has been music to the ear of the fight fan, was introduced as master of ceremonies and Terry McGovern stepped into the ring as referee. Terry was given an ovation that must have recalled the ghost of a former self, younger and slim. Terry is far from slim today.

Battling Burke held the championship at the beginning of the evening and the crowd watched and applauded as he disposed of the Harlem Kid and Knockout Smith. Between these bouts, both a part of the picture, there was another four-round affair staged exclusively for the edification of Mr. Emerson's volunteer supers. Someone shouted that it looked like a "still," thereby scoring the comedy line of the night.

Knockout Smith put up a good fight and took a lot of punishment before he fell. Terry counted him out and while the crowd cheered, Announcer Humphries appeared with an impressive belt in his hands. He inquired loudly if anyone else cared to dispute its ownership with Battling Burke, whereupon Douglas Fairbanks, in the get-up of a youth from the country, pushed his way to the ring and faced the champion.

According to instructions, the crowd registered ridicule, for no one had ever heard of this presumptuous boy from up-state, but Fairbanks responded only with his most ingratiating smile. Then he scampered off to the dressing-room and returned ready for battle. The crowd looked at his muscular shoulders and tapering waist and approved. He appeared every inch a snappy fighter, whose speed might overcome the greater weight of Battling Burke.

Nobody would have believed that the fight was framed had not Director Emerson foretold just what was going to happen. Fairbanks was the first to fall, but by the time Terry had counted seven he was on his feet again and pounding away at the husky champion. His pluck had won the sympathy of the fans and they were shouting "Go get him! Go get him!" when a blow on the jaw sent Burke sprawling across the ring. He took the count and amidst a wild demonstration the belt was handed to Fairbanks, who had shown himself to be almost as good a fighter as he is an actor, which is saying quite a bit.

ACTORS' FUND BENEFIT AT STRAND.

The annual benefit for the Actors' Fund, which will be given some time during the month of January next, will be held at the Strand theater. The Mark Strand Theater Company has given the house and its entire working staff, as well as the large concert orchestra for the occasion. Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund of America, has accepted the offer. Elaborate preparations for the benefit already are in progress.

Sessue Hayakawa

SESSUE HAYAKAWA, the celebrated Japanese actor, now a member of the Jesse L. Lasky all-star stock company, was born in Tokio, Japan, nearly twenty-seven years ago. His family planned that he should be educated for a high position in the Japanese navy, and with this in mind sent him to the Japanese naval school. Hayakawa's uncle was a celebrated Japanese actor, Otto Kawakimi, and as the young man was fascinated by the stage, he entered his uncle's company, in which the great celebrated Japanese actress, Madame Yacco, was appearing. Hayakawa appeared in the support of this distinguished artiste in the Shintomi Za and the Teikoku Za, two leading theaters in Japan.

Sessue Hayakawa.

When Madam Yacco and her company started on their international tour, young Hayakawa accompanied them to this country. He realized that he would have to have a greater education, as he planned to introduce the American drama in Japan. With this in mind he studied English drama and literature at the University of Chicago for one year and translated a number of the English classics into Japanese.

Returning to Japan he appeared in the Japanese version of the Ibsen dramas and Shakespeare, making a great success as "Othello." He returned again to this country and studied and played all along the Pacific Coast at the head of the Japanese organization.

He was selected by a distinguished motion picture director to play the stellar role in "The Typhoon" and "The Wrath of the Gods," and made a phenomenal success.

In Madam Yacco's company at the time he first joined it was a little eight-year-old actress, Tsuree Aaki, who was eventually to become the wife of Hayakawa.

His first engagement with the Lasky Company was in the support of Edward Abeles in "After Five." He then appeared in support of Blanche Sweet in both "The Clue" and "The Secret Sin." He is soon to be seen playing opposite Fannie Ward in the thrilling drama, "The Cheat."

Hayakawa has discovered that in speaking Japanese he cannot get the proper facial expression, so even in his Japanese company he speaks broken English in dramatic scenes. Hayakawa is now at the head of a large Japanese theater company in Los Angeles and is having a beautiful theater built for his organization by the wealthy Japanese merchants of that city. It is rumored he is soon to be starred by the Lasky Company in a big feature production, the scenes of which are laid in Japan.

Hayakawa has a prominent role in the Lasky production entitled "The Cheat," in which Fannie Ward is the star and which will be released on the Paramount program December 13.

R. B. ROBERTS MARRIED.

R. B. Roberts, president of the K. & R. Film Company, put one over on his partner and friends last Saturday. He slipped over to Washington, D. C., on the midnight train and on Sunday morning was married to Frankie Aldrich, a national capital society girl, and was back at his desk in the Leavitt Building at nine o'clock Monday morning. It was Tuesday before the office staff got on from a clipping sent from a Washington paper.

Pierce Kingsley, Mr. Roberts' partner, is at a loss to know who did the advance work in Washington, as publicity for the firm usually goes through his hands.

The couple are now flat-hunting. Roberts says he likes Riverside Drive and Kingsley told him that it did look good up that way but suggested that he select Barren Island, that the aroma was not so bad over there.

Equitable Directors Busy

Big Scenes Being Filmed—Mexico and the Southland in New Plays.

THE Equitable's Fifty-second street studio put over two big scenes last week. One of them was in "The Dragon," where Margarita Fischer, the star, was supposed to make her first acquaintance with the way things are done in the salon of a fashionable Modiste, and the other called for the use of Murray's Forty-second street dining place, as headquarters for a select cafe party. For the first the Maison Maurice was drawn upon for a display of the very latest and most costly gowns, and there was a valuation of more than $3,000 placed on the articles of feminine adornment which were displayed by the mannequins who paraded through the beautiful hall. The set occupied the whole floor of the big studio, and was a revelation of what can be done when the resources of a well equipped establishment are called on.

For one of the last scenes of "Idols," which Webster Cullison is directing, with Katherine Kaelred as the star, Murray's was filled with guests in full dress and evening costumes, and seldom, if ever, has the well known resort presented a more brilliant appearance. To George Sheer, of the Fifty-second street studio management, is given the credit of making the arrangements for securing the use of the place, handling the lights, the crowd, and the other accessories, and the whole thing was over before the regular diners made their appearance for their noonday repast.

Up in the Bronx Marie Empress and her prize winning Manchester black and tan "Baby," are busy with the first scenes of "Behind Closed Doors," under the direction of Joseph A. Golden, of Triumph, the Equitable's producing ally. The actress, of course, is the star of the play, but the dog, which is regarded as the most valuable 30 ounces of canine flesh in New York, will have an appearance, if not a speaking part, in the new production.

Over in Flushing S. E. V. Taylor is busy with "Nan Perrine," the title part of which is being taken by Molly McIntyre, and in which some heavy scenes are scheduled, and John Ince is preparing to start Frank Sheridan off in the filming of "The Man Higher Up."

Director Hopper, having finished "The Labyrinth," is expected to start for Mexico within a few days to pick out locations for his next big feature which has for its basis a story of Mexican intrigue, love, and psychology which will prove of absorbing interest. It is an original story from the pen of H. R. Durant, and will be called "Her God."

Charles M. Seay, who since the finish of "A Daughter of the Sea" has been making arrangements for filming his new script "Babette of the Ballyhoo," in which Muriel Ostriche will take the part of circus girl, is ready to take his principals into the southland, where they will join a road show and get "atmosphere." Mr. Seay will be on familiar ground, as his experience in making circus story pictures has gone far beyond the confines of the "Big top," and has taken in everything down to the cook tent.

ESSANAY TO MAKE "THE MISLEADING LADY."

Essanay is making extensive preparations for the taking of its coming five-act feature, "The Misleading Lady," adapted from the stage success written by Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey.

In order to make the play as realistic as possible, A. Berthelet, the director, accompanied by Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo and other leading characters, will make a trip to the Adirondacks to take several scenes.

The scene in which the heroine is kidnapped by the soldier-of-fortune and taken to his mountain lodge takes place in the Adirondacks and will be staged there in the exact setting as in the play.

The homes of several of Chicago's wealthiest citizens will be employed in taking the house party scenes, and other scenes which take place in the homes and on the estates of the rich.

The play has a stirring theme, with a cave man in evening clothes, a woman, primitive as the first mother, and the crashing, merciless battle of the sexes in the wooing of the pair.

LEHRMANN RETURNS TO COAST.

Henry "Pathe" Lehrmann, head producing managing director and president of the L-KO Motion Picture Company, of Hollywood, California, who has been in New York arranging details in his contract with the Universal Film Mfg. Company, left here Thursday, November 25, on the Twentieth Century Limited for a flying trip back to the studios.

Getting to See Edna Mayo

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

"O-OO!" replied a small but musical voice from the dressing room region of a Fifth avenue photograph studio to the attendant in the outer gallery. "Have you got a little, wee brush?"

"No, but we have an eyebrow pencil if that will do," replied the attendant.

"No, no, I've got too much on now, and I want to get some of it off. Haven't you got a little brush? No?"

The small voice rose to the last interrogation in diatonic ascendency, which signified the question left unspoken. "If you haven't, why haven't you?"

Perched on a window seat opposite where the voice came from, all I could see of its owner was a pert little chin and mouth that was rudely amputated from the saucy nose, perfectly innocent blue eyes and blonde curls that belonged on the upper register, by a bronze lamp with a very officious rose gold shade that stood on a cumbersome table whose weight of rare old timber was not sufficient reason for its being very much in the way just at that moment.

Edna Mayo.

I might add by way of explanation that this was the first appearance of Miss Edna Mayo, Essanay film star, on the scene of my waiting, and that the next appearance of this capricious little body was some time considerably later.

Miss Mayo came to town from far Chicago on Saturday, the 20th day of November, with only Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and part of Wednesday to do a lot of necessary and wonderful things, among which was the selection of ever so many dollars' worth of gowns, I wouldn't even whisper how many, ravishing creations designed by Lady Duff Gordon, to decorate the little lady socially and picturewise. She left New York again for the West on Wednesday by the 2.45 train, or at least such is my understanding.

A picture story is never a success unless you have plenty of suspense in it, so they say, and when I tell you that it took me almost twenty-six hours to catch up with Edna Mayo in her whirlwind chase around New York City you will realize that some suspense attends the story of my trying to get even with the little star, which started at shortly past eight one chilly morning.

When we did get even she told me with breathless haste during the process of re-attiring herself for the street that when she is at work at the Essanay studios in Chicago she rises at seven every morning, goes to work between eight and nine o'clock, works until five in the afternoon, and retires at nine.

The first picture production she will work in after reaching Chicago will be "The Misleading Lady." She says she does not like herself in every picture she appears in, but is rather partial to "The Little Deceiver," "The Little Straw Wife," and one or two others I've forgotten the names of. She tells you with questionable titter that she was born in Philadelphia, and declares that she has to come all the way back from Chicago to dear old New York to get just the kind of clothes she wants to wear, meaning, of course, no reflection on our Western rival.

I'm glad I met Miss Mayo, and sorry that I have nothing more of real solid fact to tell you. But after all what more could one gather on a "quick change."

THOMAS BEDDING RESIGNS FROM WORLD FILM.

Thomas Bedding, who for some time has been connected with the publicity department of the World Film Corporation, has resigned. Mr. Bedding, who has had a wide experience in the film industry, has announced no plans for the future.

Richard Stanton Working on "Graft"

Producer Has Selected Strong Cast for the New Universal Serial—First Episode Quickly Made.

THE first episode of "Graft," the new serial of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has been completed by Director Richard Stanton of the Pacific Coast studios of the Big U organization.

"Make it a stem winder," said Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Company in a dispatch to Director General Henry McRea about the serial, adding: "I want it to be the best serial we or any other film company had ever put out. Don't spare the expense—give us the best serial results possible."

Richard Stanton.

Director Stanton and the officers of the studio plunged into the matter with a vim and soon had planned a campaign for the forthcoming serial. A few days later Director Stanton selected his cast, the leading roles being placed in the hands of Hobart Henley and Jane Novak. Henley's excellent work in "The Man in the Chair," "A Little Brother of the Rich," "The Tenor," and other recent photoplays, will be recalled by the followers of the screen as will also the splendid portrayals of Miss Novak in "The Scarlet Sin," and "A Little Brother of the Rich." Another of the principal roles was given to Glen White, a Universal favorite, who came to the coast especially to take part in this serial.

In exactly six days from the start upon the serial Director Stanton had finished the first episode, and when the two reels were given their initial showing in the projection theatre at Universal City a critical audience unanimously decided that they depicted an unusually interesting story which was splendidly acted by the leads and the entire company.

Dark Cloud

HERE is Dark Cloud, an Indian actor who made his debut this week in the first class New York picture program at the Knickerbocker theatre, appearing as the Indian Chief in the Triangle-Fine Arts play of "The Penitentes." His debut in the $2 pictures is rather late in life, for Dark Cloud is 76 years old. But he is as strong and sturdy as a boy of twenty, stands 6 ft. high, weighs 180 lbs. and is a man of wealth in the bargain, his bank account, it is said, totaling $100,000. He rides like the wind and in the battle and master scenes has the fury of the Sioux. Really he is a Penobscot Maine Indian, almost the last pure blood of his race, and has been in theatrical work of various kinds for the last 20 or 30 years. Dark Cloud is a considerable philosopher. He attributes the decay and coming extinction of the American Indian to interbreeding with the whites. He says: "My people understood nature and lived close to her throbbing heart. Your people do not know the shelter of the trees and the whispered secrets of the forest. They wear themselves out upon unspeakable realities, and they are never renewed. Modern science has come to realize that America is the oldest land in the world and that the Indian was the first man, Adam."

Dark Cloud.

Ellis Directs "Ventures"

Producer of Many Kalem Features to Stage "Ventures of Marguerite."

ROBERT ELLIS, well known as a player in Kalem productions for years, and who recently showed his worth as a producer of Kalem three and four reel features, has been given the reins for the "Ventures of Marguerite" company, and will produce the future episodes in the Kalem series featuring the dainty Marguerite Courtot. Ellis is considered by Kalem one of the most valued members of the directing staff, and his transference to the single reel stories is in line with that organization's announced policy of putting its best resources in the short productions.

Screen fans will not miss Robert Ellis as an actor, however, for it is probable that he will play the "heavy" roles in the forthcoming "Ventures." "The Ventures of Marguerite" have proven fully up to the standard of popularity of past Kalem series, and it is expected that with this change they will become even stronger. Miss Courtot will continue to wear Russek creations throughout the series as the fashion element has had no small part in the success of the series.

William Conklin

EVERY inch an actor is William Conklin, who has made his reappearance on the screen via the Balboa studios in "Neal of the Navy," the patriotic serial photoplay which was made with the approval of the United States Government. More than six feet tall, Mr. Conklin has an impressive physique and a clean-cut face that is good to look upon.

William Conklin.

He began young manhood as the junior member of the well-known drygoods firm of John M. Conklin & Son, in Brooklyn, one of the largest mercantile establishments of the East. During the troublous times of a score or more years ago, the concern closed its doors and William Conklin had to find something else to do.

The stage had always interested him. Through his club affiliations, he was acquainted with many of the leading managers and producers. One of them enabled him to begin at the bottom. But a man of Conklin's calibre climbs fast, once he starts. He has filled many notable engagements in the realm of the legitimate. All of last year, he was the leading juvenile man in one of Broadway's biggest hits.

Some years before, Mr. Conklin had been a member of a prominent stock company owned by H. M. Horkheimer, now the head of the Balboa studio. With a renewal of acquaintance between the two, it was natural that the actor should go to Long Beach. He had had a previous picture engagement with the All Star Feature Company, under the direction of Augustus Thomas.

Mr. Conklin has all the equipment necessary to make a successful actor, both on the stage and screen. When he finishes his present picture, he is to be featured in some notable Balboa releases that will enable him to appear to the best possible advantage.

BOWMAN DIRECTED "PENNINGTON'S CHOICE."

In a recent review of "Pennington's Choice," released by the Metro Pictures Corporation, O. A. C. Lund was named as the director. The Moving Picture World has been advised that William J. Bowman produced this picture and deserves full credit.

Making Films Steady

The Contribution to Cinematographic Art That Is Credited to Nicholas Power.

THOMAS A. EDISON is credited with having said: "Give me a motion picture machine and I'll teach more history in fifteen minutes than instructors and text books can drill into the minds of pupils in a month." But this was not in the early days of motion pictures—for the machines used fifteen years ago, when moving pictures were being introduced, were inspired with the jumps, flickers and dances to a degree that made it an optical hardship to look at a film.

When films were in the experimental stage the picture machine was equally undeveloped. Edison seemed to have other things to think of besides films and picture projection two decades ago. The inventive mind of the "wizard" had not then taken up the subject of pictures to any great extent, and it was many years after the picture business grew out of its swaddling clothes before anybody gave much study to the important detail of projection.

Finally one inventive genius—Nicholas Power by name—noted the defects in the early film displays, and traced the troubles to their source—the projection machine. Power was the first man to seriously apply himself to the perfection of "throwing pictures" upon the screen. He studied out the mechanical intricacies of the subject, and, having first foreseen the future of the film, devoted long hours and many months to experimenting with cranks, cogs, shutters and wheels.

Mr. Power knew that moving pictures would never succeed as an amusement unless they could be thrown clearly and steadily upon the screen: he sensed troubles with the eyes of millions unless the earlier projecting apparatus could be replaced with steady running, even "throwing," and flickerless machines.

Unlike most inventors, he was wise enough to keep the reward of his genius in his own control and instead of selling his patents for trivial sums he proceeded slowly and always within his means. New models were produced every few months, every machine he turned out was an improvement upon its predecessor, and finally he arrived at a point so closely approaching perfection that the Power's projectors are now established as the standard of all "picture throwing" apparatus.

The millions who find entertainment at the picture shows owe more to Nicholas Power than to any other one individual ever associated with the moving picture industry—for it was Mr. Power who devoted years of his life to taking the "flicker" out of the film and conserving the eyesight of his own generation and for generations to come. These are things the film promoters say little about—but the fact remains that there would not be so many admirable pictures and the photoplays would not be so immensely popular if they had not been set right "at the source" by Nicholas Power.

NOLA FILM TO PRODUCE FOR ASSOCIATED PROGRAM.

Capt. W. J. Hannon, president of the Nola Film Co., New Orleans, La., is in town and makes an announcement that he has just closed a contract with the Associated Film Sales Corporation whereby he is to make one five-reel feature every month, to be released exclusively on the Associated Program in addition to their regular service. The Nola Film Co. has a magnificent studio equipped with everything imaginable that would help make good pictures. They have at present three features made, the titles and stars of which will be announced soon.

MME. PETROVA IN NEW METRO PICTURE.

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, who has been on tour in the successful play, "The Revolt," is taking advantage of her New York engagement by beginning work on another big Metro feature picture, "What Will People Say," at the Popular Plays and Players studio, in Fort Lee, N. J. This production will be mounted on an elaborate scale, and Mme. Petrova will be surrounded by an exceptionally strong cast including Fritz de Lint, Fraunie Fraunholz, Jean Thomas, John Dudley, William Morse, Geraldine Piers, Willis Enslee and other stage and screen artists. Miss Thomas is a member of Mme. Petrova's supporting cast in "The Revolt," and Miss Piers has an important role with Ethel Barrymore in the play, "Our Mrs. McChesney," at the Lyceum theater.

Pete Lang

PETE LANG, of the Lubin Company, lays claim justly to coming pretty close to being the Grandpop of Lubinville. As Pete explains it, "I just seem to have stuck along, growing to love and become one of the landmarks of the place, never creating a furore of excitement over my work and yet being more or less in demand every minute of the day—one minute hearing a call that I am cast as the boss of the opposition political party, then a candidate of another party, first a comedian then a tear provoker — sometimes a star and other times just a filler—one day a kid, the next a grandpop—in fact, anything and everything excepting that as yet I have done no female impersonating, chiefly because my chest has slipped down to where my waist line once was." But "Modest and Versatile Pete," as his colleagues of the Lubin studio call him, is loved by all of Lubinville and is praised by every man jack of the directors, and he has grown as an essential about "the yard"—the most used man of the staff. From 7:30 in the morning until the last man had crawled away in his Flivver, you'll find Pete on the job, on the bench by the gate, keeping 'em in the convulsions with a "parlor story" or two and then probably the next minute trotting in to play the part which it is sure-fire betting the critics are going to say "was played by Pete Lang as it should be played, and as only Pete Lang can play it."

Pete Lang.

Harry Vokes

BEFORE Harry Vokes, the comedian who is known to everyone from coast to coast, began his thirty-one years of playing with Ward in the comedy team of Ward and Vokes, which has of late years been disbanded, he was a clown in a circus. That gave him training in slapstick play, and fitted him for comedy work.

Mr. Vokes is at present starring in two Casino Star Comedies at the Gaumont studios for release on the regular Mutual Program. One is "Beauty in Distress," written by Miss Dorothy Rogers, and "The House Party." In the former, Mr. Vokes is supported by Miss Rogers, the writer of the story, and in the latter by Miss Eleanor Fairbanks, who played last season in "A Pair of Sixes."

Mr. Vokes, with his comedy partner, Mr. Ward, began business with a capital of $650. This they put in the equipment for their first comedy sketch. It didn't take long to make that much, after they had once had a try at the stage. After that all they had to do was bank the money.

Harry Vokes.

The comedy team is well remembered all over the country for their appearances in "A Run on the Bank," "The Governors," "The Head Waiters," "The Floor Walkers," "A Pair of Pinks," "The Promoters" and "Trouble Makers."

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

WELL, we have had our Triangle first night and liked it. The big Boston theater was crowded with an unusual sort of audience, including newsboys. Three of the films were excellent, especially "The Lamb" (as New Yorkers know already), and it served to introduce a local favorite, Douglas Fairbanks. David Griffith's master-hand was seen throughout, especially in the battle between the Indians and U. S. cavalry men. There was certainly punch with a capital "P" all through this and the others shown—"The Valet," introducing that clever young actress, Mabel Normand, in swimming stunts, and Raymond Hitchcock. I liked best "The Iron Strain," and the work of Charles K. French as the grandfather, who knew a real man at sight. Dustin Farnum always puts anything over and he is good to look at. As for "A Game Old Knight," it was nothing but horse play beside which "Tillie's Tomato Surprise" sinks in comparison, and that's saying much. It was the one disappointment, as slapstick has no place in a first-class theater, however the mixed audience present howled and applauded.

There seemed no change in the theater interior as announced except in the new screen and in the garb of the ushers, a soft, pretty grey. Miss Katherine Ward, the head usher, to whom I was indebted for admission, was in full evening dress and gracious to all. The stage still has a row of bright-hued flowers in pots and which are inartistic in coloring and needless. The orchestra itself is decorative enough, and this intervening strip jars. It was good policy to retain the Fadettes and the services of Francis Ferguson.

The Hub is "de-lighted" with the work of Mary Pickford as "Mme. Butterfly," but more especially with the work of the director in giving the public such wonderfully realistic scenes. Even to those of us who have visited Japan there seemed no flaw or a thing to criticize. Perhaps the big hit was made by the Japanese baby, who behaved so well and caused many exclamations. It is these details that elevate the films and set a high standard. My companion said, "To think of it, we get this wonderful picture for such a ridiculous sum!" I thought the moonlight scenes most artistic, and the perspectives, especially good showing a U. S. cruiser in the distance. We liked the ending, too, and the well-balanced company. On same bill at the Park was "Dora Thorne," with Lionel Barrymore and William Thomas Jefferson in the cast, sons of Maurice Barrymore and Joe Jefferson, and they certainly made good. Barrymore had a fine make-up as the irascible old father, and showed his art in illustrating the bad effects of ill temper in producing paralysis. The scenes were ornate, especially the interior of the mansion of Lord Earl. We felt, however, that the heroine was too much of the novice type. Isabel Rea was the favorite with the house. She also was most artistic as the young cripple in the Biograph film, "Her Renunciation," seen at the Boston theater Sunday night. A beardless youth just back of me said, "Gee, what a fetching dimple."

Say what you please, the Universals have some stunning leading men like Frank McGuarrie, with his clear-cut features—always the artist. He first attracted attention in "Fifty Years Behind the Times," and once seen is never forgotten. Sunday he showed his versatility in "The Unmasking," a remarkably strong play with its little lesson at the end brought about by that dear child. One of the finest scenes was that of the man, and the woman he wanted to wed, standing at the edge of a miniature pond on an estate, both figures reflected full length in the water. Great credit is due the men who staged that wonderful moonlight scene. Another gem furnished that evening was "The Clue of the Portrait," and again a child was a marked feature.

The Film Club had an interesting meeting Sunday evening last and closed its charter membership. Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and Rose Coghlan were made honorary members. The president, Marion H. Brazier, took the floor and paid high tribute to "The Battle Cry of Peace" and called upon the club secretary, Miss Mabel W. Brewerton, to read from her stenographic notes extracts from Mr. Blackton's address at the opening night at the Majestic theater and which no Boston paper quoted. Another feature of the meeting was a paper by Mrs. Cecilia Mahoney on Universal City and the Mission Film Co. (at Santa Barbara, Cal.), both of which she had visited. It was replete with inside information. This club has been admitted to the City Federation of Women's Clubs of Greater Boston and has for one of three delegates Mr. Samuel Grant, secretary of the Exhibitors' League and chairman for the coming ball, December 1. This federation has frequently criticised the motion pictures, which happily are more and more above criticism. The Film Club hopes to meet any future attempted censorship in that body, with convincing arguments. At Sunday's meeting there were remarks from Mr. Ernest Horstmann, president of the League, and one of the syndicate to purchase "The Battle Cry of Peace," which has made a tremendous hit here and is on for a run. Some local Germans have risen to condemn the film, but we fail to see what their grievance is, for the invading army is not labeled German. It will prove a good advertisement for the picture, anyhow.

Mr. Guston, former manager of the Boston theater, is to have sole charge of the Bijou, Boston's dainty playhouse owned by Keith. He tells me that they are to run Universal films only, and one may be sure of good music accompanying them. This is a fifteen-cent house and very popular. I have already told of the unique staircase leading to it.

Strikes me the Selig Company have put forth a daring film in "Sweet Alyssum," inasmuch as it tells plainly the immorality of the mother, where she has passed her nights, etc., showing the woman to be utterly devoid of soul, and we are glad when she gets out of the picture. Tyrone Powers, as expected, was excellent, and his conduct was entirely excusable in dealing with the guilty pair. Later on the story developed well, but somehow we could not quite get away from that unwholesome mother, and felt that one reel might have been censored.

It seems like "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel" for a mayor of a small town to raise objection to profanity in "The Family Cupboard," which I have not yet seen filmed. As no words are spoken it is an easy matter to eliminate the sub-title. This mayor of a town near the Hub, would no doubt attend a performance of "Grumpy" and smile at the "cuss" words uttered by Cyril Maude every third sentence, and he might hear a few in any Shakespearean production. Why should it make a difference "whose ox is gored?"

We learn with pleasure that Francis Wilson's "Bachelor's Baby" is to be filmed, and it is good news to the Hub, as he could not produce the play here, because of our ridiculous blue law regarding children of the speaking stage. Mr. Wilson refused to play it with a 14-year-old kid, so we lost it, but many saw it in New York during its long run with our own Lillian Lawrence in the cast. Mr. Wilson ought to make a good subject with his mobile face and art.

I went up to the St. James theater to see "Evidence" last week, put on by the World Film, and found Richard Buhler in the cast, though not mentioned in the advance notices read. It was a "howling melodrama," as we used to call such plays, but well staged and consistent throughout, though it did seem like rubbing it in to have the heroine, a continuous victim of circumstantial evidence as Lady Una was. Lillian Tucker did a fine bit of work, and again a child figures delightfully. It was certainly some film, with action to burn.

"Pennington's Choice" made a big hit here, especially with men, owing to fisticuffs, doubtless. Bushman appears to great advantage in his evolution from the idler to the fighter, who then became worthy of his choice. It was good to see Beverly Bayne playing opposite, and she was some sight making her high dive and posing on the rocks semi-nude. It "got by" our City Hall censor much to our relief, for she was most artistic and natural.

I thoroughly enjoyed "The Closing Net," and this voices the sentiments of all about me. Howard Estabrook and Madeleine Travers did great work. It is one of the best of the "Gold Rooster" offerings seen in a long time.

Olga Petrova's name spells quality, and we were prepared to like "My Madonna," a most pretentious film. She was ably seconded by Guy Coombs, the young artist. There are some inconsistencies, but on the whole it was convincing, picturesque and the poses of Petrova at the opening and close of the films were far ahead of anything she has given us.

Executive Board Meeting Called

President Herrington Names Chicago as the Place to Hold It.

Fred J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, submits the following letter to the exhibitors which is self-explanatory:

"To the Exhibitors:—I will call a meeting of the National Executive Board in Chicago some time during the last week in December. At this meeting it will be decided the place where the National convention will be held. At present it looks as though there will be some very hot rivalry between New York, Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

"As Chicago is centrally located I have decided to call a meeting of all the National vice-presidents and state officials to meet in conjunction with the National Executive Board at the Chicago meeting as I feel that it is only in this way that it will be possible to bring about the affiliation of the many state and local organizations into one compact National League.

"Now Mr. Vice-Presidents and State Officials, I appeal to you, through the pages of this paper, as business men, to use every effort to respond to this call when I open the above-mentioned meeting in Chicago, next month. Without your aid and that of every individual exhibitor I can hardly accomplish anything of any material benefit to you, and with your help we can organize or affiliate the State and Local organizations into one compact National League. Once organized into one solid body we can fight any question which might arise that will do harm to the motion picture industry, and we will not only fight them, but we will come near winnig every battle we fight.

"Yours very truly,
"FRED J. HERRINGTON,
"President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America."

NORTHEASTERN OHIO EXHIBITORS MEET.

The first metting of the new Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was held this week in the new headquarters on the fourth floor of the Republic Building. The executive committee of the body is considering a plan to have members book films through the organization. C. A. McGown, proprietor of the Cameraphone theater, originated the suggestion. He announced that he had been informed that a number of exchanges are willing to give the organization a rebate of $5 on all films booked through the organization.

McGown also declared that exhibitors in other sections of the state would be influenced by the judgment of Cleveland exhibitors in booking films that had been shown for their benefit, and that the exchanges would be saved considerable expense.

Members of the organization assert that the rapidly increasing cost of feature films is largely due to the fact that exhibitors outbid each other and do not stand together in combatting increased prices.

OPERATOR LOSES REEL OF FILM.

The Moving Picture World has been asked to aid in the recovery or tracing of a film the loss of which through theft has caused much distress to Edward J. Mace of Buffalo. Mr. Mace, who is the operator at the Jubilee theater, and a member of I. A. T. S. E. Local 29, writes that at the close of the day's work on October 2 he went to a large exchange to return film. A reel of film left on a packing case in the receiving room while Mr. Mace went upstairs was not to be found on his return. The subject was a Keystone Chaplin, "His Favorite Pastime," the property of the Buffalo branch of the Mutual. In the film was the identifying perforation, "No. 41, M. F. Co." Mr. Mace lives at 339 Watson street, Buffalo, and will be grateful for any information that help him to recover the film.

RELEASE DATE OF "CAMILLE."

"Camille," the master work of Albert Capellani, and the greatest role of Clara Kimball Young, is expected to be released on December 20. Extra care and extra time are being devoted to the finishing of the picture in order that the fullest possible justice can be done to all concerned, and that Miss Young can be presented to her legions of admirers with every completeness and adequateness. The cast is the strongest ever seen in a World Film feature. The fact that the part of Armand is in the hands of Paul Capellani lends this feature remarkable interest. The exhibitors throughout the United States have been more interested in this picture than in any other previous World Film release.

James Bradburry With Selig

JAMES BRADBURRY, the famous comedian, who has joined the Selig Polyscope Company, has a stage experience extending over thirty-four years. During his first three years in the spoken drama, he was employed at the Boston Museum in stock and was surrounded by the best players of the time and was given an opportunity to play with such stars as Edwin Booth, Dion Boucicault, William Warren, John Gilbert, Lester Wallack, the elder Salvini, and others. Later, Mr. Bradburry joined Edwin Arden in "The Eagle's Nest," removing to New York City. After several years with Arden, Mr. Bradburry went with Louis Carnot in a repertoire company, playing anything he was cast for and so establishing his line of comedy characters.

James Bradburry.

Following that engagement, Mr. Bradburry appeared with many companies and played many parts. Here is a list of plays in which Mr. Bradburry figured to a great extent: E. E. Rice's productions; with Nellie McHenry in "A Night at the Circus," "Ranch 10," "Gay Coney Island," "The Village Postmaster," "Naughty Anthony," "Captain Barrington," "Hearts Aflame," with Anna Held, "Fifty Miles from Boston," "Aero Club." "Is Matrimony a Failure?" "The Girl at the Helm," "The County Chairman," "After Five," "Along Came Ruth," "Inside the Lines," "Mollie and I" and others.

Mr. Bradburry is known as one of the cleverest character comedians in theatrical history and through his acquisition the Selig Company has engaged an artist with a new style of comedy which is sure to delight the photoplay public. Mr. Bradburry will appear in a number of forthcoming Selig Red Seal plays. He scored a hit as the manager of the Burlesque Co. in "A Black Sheep," which was his first appearance in the pictures.

MACKENZIE MAKING NEW PATHE PICTURE.

Donald Mackenzie, the Pathe producer, will soon start work upon "The Precious Packet," adapted from the novel of the same name by Fred Jackson. Lois Meredith, one of the most beautiful of the younger women upon the stage, and Ralph Kellard, have already been signed for the picture. Mr. Mackenzie will have to take his entire company to a Maine lumber camp to spend several weeks there, since many of the scenes are laid amid such surroundings. In the meantime he is anxiously awaiting from correspondents in Maine reports of heavy snowfalls.

SEVENTY-SEVENTH STREET THEATER SOLVENT.

Judge Charles M. Hough of the United States District Court has dismissed the involuntary petition in bankruptcy filed against the Seventy-seventh Street Theater, a corporation conducting a moving picture show. The petition was filed November 10, but inasmuch as the corporation has paid all its unsecured creditors in full, the court decided the petition should be cast out of court. Archibald Palmer, the receiver, was discharged and ordered to turn over the property to the theater corporation.

VIM PLAYERS HAPPY AT JACKSONVILLE.

Louis Burstein, director-general of the Vim Comedies, paid a business visit to New York last week. He declared that the Vim players are now comfortably situated in Jacksonville and hard at work turning out a comedy a week.

"It is only natural," says Burstein, "that I should be enthusiastic over Vim prospects, but never in my experience in the film business have I come across a more willing or competent aggregation than those composing the Vim players. We have got off to a fine start and I am more than satisfied that we can keep up the pace."

Eastern Pennsylvania Exhibitors.

Meet at Tamaqua, and Organize a League—Another Meeting December 5.

FORTY-NINE moving picture exhibitors, representing a total investment of over $3,000,000, recently met in the clubhouse of the Elks at Tamaqua, Pa., and organized the Exhibitors' League of Eastern Pennsylvania. Matters of vital importance to those interested in the moving picture industry were thoroughly discussed and many valuable suggestions were proffered to those in attendance tending to illustrate the plans of the successful exhibitor. Mart J. Franey of Shenandoah, was chosen to act as temporary president, and O. J. Miller, the well known exhibitor of St. Clair, was elected temporary secretary.

The main object of the organization is to promote a better feeling among the exhibitors and to bring them in constant touch with each other for their mutual betterment. It had long been felt that there was need for such an organization in that section of he State, and many suggestions were offered, but they always lacked initiative and as a consequence, failed to materialize. This time, however, the exhibitors are in earnest and it is their intention to lay the foundation for an association that will continue indefinitely and which will prove of enormous value to exhibitors for many miles around.

A meeting will be held on Monday, December 5, when it is proposed to effect a permanent organization. Agents have been working for some time past endeavoring to interest exhibitors in the project and their reports have been of a most satisfactory nature. According to returns there is every indication that several hundred exhibitors will join the infant organization, embracing practically all of the Eastern section of Pennsylvania, east of Williamsport. May the new league be entirely successful.

NEW HORSLEY DIRECTORS FINISH FIRST WORK.

David Horsley's recent additions to his directorial staff, Ulysses Davis and William J. Bowman, engaged to produce Centaur feature animal pictures in which the Bostock animals appear, have each finished their first Centaur picture.

Mr. Davis' production is entitled "The Arab's Vengeance" and is scheduled for release on the Mutual program December 16. The production is in two reels.

The initial effort of Mr. Bowman for Mr. Horsley is also in two reels and is called "The Terror of the Fold." The story is of the American west.

BRITISH NOTES

FOR three months past or more the representative associations of exhibitors, renters and manufacturers, have been repeatedly endeavoring to bring into being an equitable arrangement for the better control and preservation of open market films. After many amendments a definite plan of action has been formulated in the form of two special and binding agreements, the first between manufacturer and renter, and the second between renter and exhibitor. Although originally intended for Nov. 1 the date of its operation will not be until Nov. 15th. The agreement between manufacturer and renter provides for the sale (or should it be hire?) of practically all open-market pictures at a fixed price per foot, which the renter agrees to rent out in accordance with a fixed table of prices. These begin with the price per thousand feet on release day and for the succeeding twelve weeks and generally show a substantial advance upon charges for similar programs made to-day.

This is partially accounted for by the recent tax which it does seem unfair to be entirely borne by the manufacturer. Another clause limits the life of each film to nine months. Between renter and exhibitor the terms are different. In a manifesto issued to its members the Exhibitors' Association recommends that the new scheme be dropped for three months as a trial. It is only to be expected that the exhibitor will pay a higher price for his open-market program and the cost is calculated upon the manufacturer's price plus a profit of 10 per cent. for the renter. It is argued that this will be an inducement for both manufacturer and renter to maintain the hitherto unprofitable open-market programs. An odd circumstance in this circular is the tone in which the American manufacturer is painted as the menacing monopolist. "With the open market goes the open market renter, the final obstacle in the way of a combination of manufacturers who supply a large percentage of all films shown in this country and who by renting direct would save the middleman's profit and have the exhibitor at his mercy," it says. "What chance will the British manufacturer have under such conditions?" . . . The new arrangement "will improve the quantity and quality of open market subjects and will protect the exhibitor from an American monopoly involving methods which are repugnant to the commercial instincts and genius of our country."

Considering the melting attitude of a large number of members of the Exhibitors' Association towards the policy of the Essanay Co., the above exhortation is apt to lose some of its original flavor. Under the auspices of the Exhibitors' Association exhibitors from Lands End to John o' Groats, have publicly avowed their intention to boycott the firm in question but the number of exhibitors, especially in the provinces, who have gone straight from these meetings and booked the latest "Chaplin" comedy must be disconcerting testimony to the unity of the body as a trade association.

Lewis Waller, the Beau Brummel of the footlights, died from heart failure last week and shortly after the first show of his appearance as Brigadier Gerard in the play of that name, which was filmed during the summer by the Barker Company.

The American produced films, "Three Weeks" and "Five Nights," continue to occupy the attention of the law courts. As previously reported in the World, Mrs. Elinor Glynn, novelist, is seeking to restrain the Weston Feature Film Co. of this country from circulating a burlesque of her famous novel entitled "Pimples Three Weeks," without the option. The defence was that copyright could not prevent the caricature of a serious work and counsel cited "Punch," which caricatured Royal Academy pictures. Judge Younger stated that anyone induced by the title to see the performance of "Pimples Three Weeks" was entitled to get his money back, and in adjourning the hearing remarked: "The burlesque only exists owing to its inane vulgarity. I do not think Mrs. Glynn would admit that any person who read her book would derive pleasure from the burlesque.

In the case of "Five Nights," the National Film Agency of Manchester are, as already recounted in a previous letter, seeking to nullify the censorial powers of the St. Helen's magistrates in banning the local production of the version. This film paid £3,000 for Lancashire, Cheshire and Derbyshire rights of the film, and although it was banned at other places it passed the British Board of Film Censors. Judge Avory in upholding the magistrate's decision pointed out that it was a condition of the licensing of picture theaters in St. Helen's that no film should be exhibited which the magistrates objected to, and that Mr. Redford held no statutory authority in these matters, despite the fact that he said he found nothing of a prohibitive or indecent nature in the film.

A similar application from Liverpool was also disposed of. The latest prohibition by magisterial decree of this film is at Bradford, while Manchester exhibitors (where the film has been extensively shown) have received a broad hint from the authorities that to exhibit the film will be to court trouble.

The first production of the British Actors Film Co., which has adopted the late Sir Hubert von Herkomer's studio and plant in Hertfordshire will be entitled "The Lifeguardsman," after Walter Howard's melodrama. The work of this newly constituted company, although yet only within the realm of conjecture, shows definite promise, thanks to the ingenuity of a skilful promoter who has been successful in enrolling a number of theatrical celebrities as shareholders.

Two official cameramen rated as lieutenants have now left London for the front as nominees of the British Manufacturers' Association in conjunction with the army scheme to obtain authoritative records of the military operations. The films so obtained will be available (after war office censorship) for exhibiton through certain selected agencies.

London Trade Topics.

The announcement has been made by Mr. Scott of the new "Clipper" and "Mustang" brands. The American Company of London, Ltd., will handle these along with the usual issues from Santa Barbara on "open market" lines as heretofore.

Another Pinero play is being preserved for posterity at Walton-on-Thames by the Hepworth Company. The title is "Iris," with Henry Ainley and Alma Taylor in the lead.

The latest available abstract from the Board of Trade shows the following imports of motion picture films from abroad between January 1 and August 31 of the present year: Belgium, £266; British East Africa, £350; British West Indies, £405; Canada, £595; Cape Colony, £40; Denmark, £140; France, £36,167; Holland, £394; India, £7; Italy, £20,568; Japan, £62; Russia, £10; Spain, £32; Switzerland, £917; United States, £784,156; total from all countries, £844,109; total from all countries except the U. S. A., £59,953, showing nearly 95 per cent. of total film imports to Britain are exported from the U. S. A.

What is D. W. G. going to do with Sir H. B. Tree? is a question much in evidence in London today. The famous actor-manager's forthcoming tour to the States is known to be not exclusively for the benefit of the legitimate stage, and there may be more than at first meets the eye in the report that it is an educative preliminary to a film producing venture of his own. In America, however, he is certain to be figured in some of his remarkable impersonations of the characters in Shakespeare, most probably "Henry VIII." The materialization of his visit to the studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and the anticipated collaboration with Griffith will be something worth waiting for.

The Bosworth film, "Hypocrites," which caused quite a flutter in the censorship dovecotes in your country, received the stamp of approval of G. A. Redford, last Monday. International Exclusives, Ltd., have the British rights and they were effectively prevailed upon to clothe the offending figure.

Film critics in London, both in the trade and out, are just now making capital of the ubiquity of the six-shooter in the average imported society or domestic drama from American studios. The accusing finger is in particular pointed at one firm which, singularly enough, does not specialize in Western pictures, but which gives special attention in its last twenty-four consecutive releases to the machinations of its sophisticated gunmen.

When last Saturday's mail arrived with the preceding week's issue of the World, the one topic for rumination in the small but powerful American colony in the precincts of Gerrard and Wardour streets was the final squashing by Judge Dickinson of the Motion Picture Patents Company and associated concerns. The law against trusts in this country is not so definite and with the exception of regulations introduced into certain sections of the brewing industry is almost without precedent. Still the ruling of the District Court of Eastern Pennsylvania does not fail to reflect an effective moral to people much further afield than its own area of jurisdiction.

An unfortunate and obviously unanticipated side issue to the recently levied film tax has come under notice this week. A few producing companies here (Hepworth, Gaumont and others) have been generously sending a weekly program of films for the use of the portable moving picture theaters in the firing line in France for the entertainment of the Allied troops. The Gaumont Company have been officially notified that upon their return there films will be charged the customary import duty.

The visualization of Wallace's opera "Maritana" was unspooled the other day under the auspices of the Kalem Company. Exhibitors who do not attend the trade shows have been found to be prejudiced against booking film of this type, owing to a fallacious conception that these productions demand a special or heavily augmented orchestra, as in the stage version. The Kalem subject under notice is a convincing argument to the contrary.

Paul Kimberley's little experiment to test the pulse of the exhibitor in regard to "open-market" releases has delighted the European manager of Thanhouser interests. Excepting the bigger exclusives and serials it is safe to say the London agency of the New Rochelle house will let the question of renting direct seriously alone for some time to come.

The publicity department of the Hepworth Company is nothing if not original. This week they have mailed out to the newspaper offices a brochure with the title, "Picture Plays, a Manual for Journalists," the fundamental purpose of which is to guide the newest "cub" reporter or his deputy, the office boy, into describing moving picture matters with greater technical accuracy.

In generous concession to the preferment of popular taste Sir A. W. Pinero has altered the last act of his play, "Iris," which has just been done by the Hepworth Company, and the curtain falls in the screen version upon a happy termination. Sir Arthur considers such revisions warrantable in view of the different appeals to the public made by the stage and screen.

Nance O'Neil in Lubin Play

THE management of the Lubin Company announces that the first of the series of photoplays in which the eminent American emotional actress Nance O'Neil is to appear under the Lubin banner will be an original five act photoplay, "Souls in Bondage," which is from the pen of Daniel Carson Goodman, the author of "Hagar Revelly" and other literary masterpieces, and who is now writing exclusively for the Lubin Company.

Nance O'Neil.

"Souls in Bondage" has been written especially for Miss O'Neil by Mr. Goodman and has been pronounced by her after her reading of the synopsis and script as the most tensely dramatic subject she has ever attempted, and one from which she is wildly enthusiastic there shall be made a dramatic version that she may use it for a vehicle on the speaking stage.

Director Edgar Lewis, who has completed the taking of "The Great Divide," will immediately begin the production of "Souls in Bondage" at the Lubin Philadelphia studios. The cast of the production will be announced later.

"Souls in Bondage" will be released during January or February through the V-L-S-E, Inc., offices.

"BROKEN COIN" COMPANY.

The accompanying picture of Francis Ford, Grace Cunard and the other members of the "Broken Coin" serial company was taken two minutes after the completion of the last scene in the production of that forty-four-reel picture.

The Broken Coin Company.

All were happy to know that the serial was at an end after their six months' work.

At present both Ford and Miss Cunard are away from the studio at Universal City, enjoying a much-needed rest after their labors. Ford has returned to his home in Portland, Maine, and Miss Cunard is visiting her mother in Ohio. While she is resting, Miss Cunard will write scenarios for the company to produce upon the resumption of its work at Universal City.

Service Must Precede National Advertising

Not Until Exhibitors Are on Tiptoes to Buy a Certain Brand May a Manufacturer Successfully Advertise Widely, Says Mr. Masters.

By E. L. Masters, Advertising and Publicity Director, V-L-S-E.

THE New York Herald recently gave liberal space to a story founded on the "novel" idea behind the organization of a new motion picture distributing company. This company, according to the Herald story, is approaching the marketing of the silent drama not as a form of entertainment, but as a staple commodity, to which the same laws of merchandising and advertising apply as do to the distribution of shoes, soup or any other commercial product.

A few weeks later one of the advertising journals printed an interview with the representative of another film concern, the interest-creative qualities of which rested upon the fact that the company in question had organized a service department to help the exhibitor resell its film to the public. These and similar articles purporting to reflect recent and advanced development in this fourth largest industry in the country might prove amusing to those of us who are interested in the correct exploration of moving pictures, were it not for the fact that they reflect such a complete lack of knowledge of the efficiency and the scope of the sales promotion methods of the more advanced companies in the trade.

Particularly does this apply to the representative of the advertising agency or advertising medium, who is greatly concerned lest the moving picture industry will fail to take advantage of the power of printer's ink and who regards it as his solemn duty to educate those at the industry's helm along the right advertising and merchandising lines. Now it is unquestionably true that every industry reaches its greatest development through national advertising, and that the sooner a manufacturer starts such advertising the greater returns every dollar invested in printer's ink will bring.

The only trouble with the outside advertising man is that he sometimes doesn't give the motion picture interests credit for appreciating this fact and that he often rushes in without having first properly informed himself of what is being done and what needs to be done to insure the success of a national campaign. Exhibitors, too, sometimes feel that in urging them to advertise locally, the big distributing companies who have not yet launched a campaign themselves are, in the parlance of the day, "passing the buck." Both the advertising man and the exhibitor are running the risk of mistaking preparedness for procrastination.

In one respect, at least, the moving picture business is not any different from any other business. The only assurance of success in launching a motion picture advertising campaign is to have the ground work of the campaign properly laid. Here, as elsewhere, a national advertising effort must be preceded by intelligent preliminary work.

The advertising coast is strewn with wrecks of campaigns, whose captains failed to follow this course, and not the least conspicuous among these wrecks are those of one or two motion picture campaigns, which cost from $100,000 to $200,000, and which fell far short of the mark.

Why were they not a success? Because there was not first erected the solid foundation of service upon which to build the advertising structure.

In short, moving picture advertising must do more than merely popularize the name of the advertiser. It must create a desire to see the pictures advertised. It must direct the public where it can see those pictures. And it must be predicated upon the knowledge of the exhibitor how to market film features to the best advantage. National advertising in the interests of moving pictures has yet to have the four essential factors of success:

A product of high average values.

Permanent customers—partners of the manufacturer, who distribute his goods.

A scientifically trained sales force that knows how to co-operate with those customers and help them capitalize upon the manufacturer's advertising investment.

Continuity—cumulative effect.

We would consider the Ingersoll Watch Company a pretty poor business organization to spend $250,000 a year to create a demand for its wares, and then not be able to tell the public when and where it could get those wares today, tomorrow and every day in the year, or whether the designs and prices would be the same when the public desired to buy as they were when the advertisment was published. And yet that is exactly the situation with all the advertising thus far done by the film companies.

It is the sheer shouting of the name. It does not direct the reader where they can see the products of that name, because the advertiser himself does not know whether John Jones is going to handle that product this week, or Sam Smith—or nobody. All such advertising can do is to urge the public to ask exhibitors to show certain features, and to try to arouse enough interest to induce the readers to hunt out a theater at which those features are shown.

This is the line of the greatest resistance, for motion picture advertising, as well as other advertising, to be effective must make it easy for the reader to do what the advertiser wants him to do. It must do more than this:

It must send the reader back to the same theater, just as other advertising must send him back to a given store.

It must produce repeat business.

It must be backed by a distributive system that will gain it the full value of a satisfied customer's word-to-mouth advertising.

How is this possible when our aforementioned friend John Jones shows one company's films today, another company's the next day and another the following day? For John Jones to get the utmost possible returns from the national advertising of a producer, and for the producer to get the greatest results from John Jones and the public, he must show the same producer's films today, tomorrow and every other day in the year—back up the producer's national advertising with his local advertising—tie up the producer's name, trade mark and prestige, with his name and his prestige.

But, you say, that means the issuance of a regular program on a contract. That would be the easy way of doing it. It need not necessarily be the best. There is such a thing as so winning a man's loyalty through service, that you bind him to you with rivets of such self-interest that you couldn't break them asunder if you would. That's the kind of contract that is more valuable than all the written documents that were ever penned.

When a company has done this—when it no longer has to "sell" the exhibitor, but he is on his tiptoes to "buy"—then, and then only, can a motion picture distributor successfully advertise nationally. When this structural work is finished, then for the first time will a national advertising campaign in the interest of moving pictures prove successful to the degree that the greatest commercial campaigns have been successful. Then will the motion picture industry have been made an advertising industry.

Service first—advertising second—that is the keynote of every successful national institution before the public eye. And it must be the keynote of the pre-eminent success of the motion picture advertiser. That it will be is evidenced by the fact that several of these companies are sacrificing the tremendous profits which would accrue from a flash-in-the-pan advertising campaign for the permanent, staple returns which are bound to result from a properly planned campaign.

E. M. MOUSER LEAVES INDIANAPOLIS.

E. M. Mouser, president of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, tendered his resignation at a meeting of the association, held Thursday, November 11. Mr. Mouser recently sold the Apollo theater, Indianapolis, and will move West. He has been a capable and tireless worker and credit is due him, say local exhibitors who know, for the standing the exhibitors have with the Indianapolis public.

J. M. Rhodes, president of the State league, presented Mr. Mouser a beautiful Masonic charm on behalf of the Indianapolis association. J. Huber, vice-president, will fill out Mr. Mouser's term, which expires January 1. R. R. Dair was elected vice-president to succeed Mr. Huber.

ANNA HELD'S FIRST FILM.

"When they talk about Anna Held getting ready for her screen debut," said Ashley Miller, "they show that they are less than four years old in the film industry. I had the honor a little more than three years ago of directing Miss Held's first motion picture. I had been a member of her supporting company in 'The Parisian Model' at the Broadway theater and so we were well acquainted when I came to initiate her into the mysteries of the silent drama. I am sure she will make a success of the feature film work which she is booked to do, and I envy the director who will have charge of the production, as she is the most considerate of stars and perfectly suited to the screen work."

Statistics and the Motion Picture

An Unusual Interview with Roger Ward Babson Who Has Just Affiliated Himself with the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

By Tarleton Winchester.

ROGER W. BABSON, the noted statistician, has allied himself with the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the capacity of associate editor of the Paramount Newspictures, and his works are now being filmed for presentation at Paramount theaters.

It may seem at first glance that statistics do not provide a very fertile field for the cameraman, but this, it developed in a talk with Mr. Babson, is not the case. "Probably there is nothing so uninteresting to the average man as dry statistics," Mr. Babson said. "He cannot get very excited when he reads on the printed page that five hundred and sixty-six million cans of beans are sold in the United States and Canada, or that in New Jersey there are 50.4 per cent. more mosquitoes to the square mile than in any other state in the Union; but by the free use of illustrations I have been able to circulate my books quite largely, and I am informed by Public Libraries that they are in considerable demand.

"Let us take the European war as an example. There are a few in this country who are not deeply interested in the question and there are a few who, after thinking about the matter, will deny that statistics are absolutely necessary in a study of the conditions which have brought on the conflict. The problem is to present them in a way that will attract and hold the attention and interest of the great public. We think that motion pictures will solve this problem. Let us look at the facts in the case. First we will take the population per square mile of the larger countries at war. We will see that Austria has 196 people for each square mile of its area, more than three times the population of any other country; Germany comes next with 62; the United Kingdom of England with 36; Russia with 19, and France with 17. When it is considered that the United States has 26 people to each square mile of its area, the crowded condition of Austria and Germany will be brought home. By means of a motion picture chart the fact that Austria and Germany must spread out can easily be planted in the minds of the motion picture public.

"This all can be shown by means of animated charts, cartoons and trick photography in a way that the average man will remember. The causes that have brought on the war as well as its progress and its inevitable results can be carried to a larger number of people in a week than would read of them in years in books and magazines.

"For instance, the question is often asked, What should be the attitude of an American? The answer is usually that he should be neutral. Of course, being neutral is a difficult thing, but it is well to remember that personal feelings in international affairs have caused much trouble. Let us see why it is not only theoretically but practically proper for the American to be neutral. Statistics will show this and moving pictures will bring the lesson home very forcefully. An overwhelming victory for either one side or the other might mean that the next war will be between the victor and the United States, whereas a draw will probably mean an international law court which will be so formed that fairness will have to be exercised and justice administered. The latter is what we want.

"The high cost of living is a sore problem. The prices of almost all commodities have, it is true, increased, but statistics will show that some communities are successfully coping with the situation, and the first of my films to be released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation shows this.

"Questions of such a vital interest as those which I have outlined can be asked and answered by means of our animated magazine which embraces other features of interest to the great public.

"I first became deeply interested in the motion picture when on a visit to South America I encountered at several points the cameramen of the Paramount expedition, and it was then that I conceived the idea of adapting statistics to the screen. Investigations proved to me the advisability of allowing Paramount to handle these pictures and when Paramount Newspictures were issued a place was found in them for me.

"To my mind, W. W. Hodkinson's reasoning is so fundamentally sound along all lines that I can see nothing but the greatest success for those who have profited by his experiences and in many instances allied themselves with him."

Roger Ward Babson was born at Gloucester, Massachusetts, July 6, 1875. His father was Nathaniel Babson and his mother Ellen Sterns. He received his A. B. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1898 and on March 29, 1900, he was married to Grace Margaret Knight of St. Paul, Minn. He is president of the Babson Statistical Organization with branch offices in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and London. He is lecturer on statistics at his old college, special writer for the Curtis publications, Saturday Evening Post, New York Times and other periodicals, and is a member of the American Economics Association. Some of his most famous and widely read books are "Business Barometer," "The Future of the Working Classes," "Elements of Successful Investing," "Prosperity, How It Must Come," "The Future of the Railroad" and "The Future of Us Boys."

These titles will suggest of what great interest his writings should be, presented on the motion picture screen.

Mary Maurice

WITH a world-wide reputation as an actress, Mary Birch Maurice, Vitagraph player, and one of the best loved film stars, also enjoys the distinction of being known as "the mother of the movies." She was born on November 15, 1844, in Morristown, Ohio, when that little town was celebrated as a stopping place for the stage-coaches that traveled the National Pike, the highway that made Henry Clay famous. Mrs. Maurice began her education in the public schools of Philadelphia, graduating from the Normal College, and she adopted teaching as the work best suited to her inclination.

Mary Maurice.

Nearly fifty years ago, Mary Maurice joined the Pittsburgh (Penna.) Stock Company and made her first professional appearance in the farce, "My Neighbor's Wife."

During the latter part of the summer of 1910, the Vitagraph Company especially engaged Mrs. Maurice to appear in an important picture production entitled "The Legacy," in which Charles Eldridge was to play opposite. Her varied experience as an actress and her strikingly featural characteristics that reproduced effectively on the film, induced the Vitagraph Company to engage her as a regular stock member. Her second picture was entitled "His Mother," and it was due principally to the lovable character she portrayed and her wonderful interpretation that earned for her the title "the mother of the movies." Since becoming a regular member of the famous Vitagraph Stock Company, Mrs. Maurice has been identified with mother parts almost exclusively and has appeared in a host of picture dramas including "A Modern Prodigal," "The Seventh Son," in which Ralph W. Ince portrayed Abraham Lincoln, "Mother's Roses," "The Portrait," "The Return of Maurice Donnelly," "My Old Dutch," "The Battle Cry of Peace," etc.

LAWRENCE MARSTON JOINS MIRROR.

Lawrence Marston, producer of more than one successful feature picture, the man who staged "Ben Hur," "The Prince of India" and other well-known dramatic spectacles, and one-time director of that sterling screen star, Henry Walthal, has been engaged by the Mirror Films, Inc., to start the production of certain features for that organization the first of the year.

Mr. Marston is one of the best known of the more experienced directors of pictures and has been identified with the making of some of the best things which have been turned out by the Biograph, Selig, Thanhouser and Universal companies. For those companies he has done such well-known favorites as "The Star of Bethlehem," "The Road to Yesterday," "Under the Gaslight," "Dora Thorn," "The Primrose Path," "The Millionaire Baby" and others.

An Eloquent Record

The National Board, Approaching Its Seventh Anniversary, Looks Back Upon a Career of Splendid Service—Constructive and Conservative in Its Policies—The Fallacies of Special Censorship for Children—The Spirit of Devotion in Men Behind the Work.

THE politicians who are eager to prey on the motion picture, and especially those who are now supporting themselves by so-called official censorship, detest the National Board and have ever made it the special target for their bricks. The reason is not far to seek. The activities of the National Board are cutting the ground from under legalized censorship by their splendid appeal to and organization of sound public sentiment. Legalized censorship feeds on ignorance and on greed and on prejudice. Quietly, persistently, fairly and effectively the National Board has fought ignorance and prejudice.

The Board has no court to enforce its decrees except the court of Public Opinion; it can issue no process and no mandate except the demand of crystallized public sentiment.

There is a sincerity about the work and personnel of the Board which is simply compelling. The fogs of fanaticism, the dense black clouds of stupidity, the insidious mists of bigotry vanish before the calm and penetrating light which proceeds from the Board. It is quite impossible to compile a complete record of all its achievements. The workings of strong intellectual and spiritual forces cannot be traced or measured, but the results bear witness.

The Vast Scope of the Work.

The National Board of Censorship has been pursuing its work of presenting its philosophy and point of view to a vast number of organizations of influence for six and one-half years. No part of the country has remained untouched. The part it played in the discussion about a motion picture ordinance for New York was widely discussed and commented upon. It has given advice and assistance to many cities interested in the physical surroundings of the motion picture theater. This has resulted in clean, wholesome and artistic play houses.

In a country of 100,000,000 people, there is necessarily a vast number of organizations interested in some of the multitudinous influences of the motion picture. To most of these have been presented the point of view, personnel, methods of work and results of the National Board. Their leaders have formed definite ideas and have expressed their opinions in sympathetic and effective ways. Among the long list are Chambers of Commerce, local and general federations of women's clubs, civic organizations, city commissions, readers of magazines like the Survey, Harper's Weekly, Review of Reviews, church and technical periodicals, the Y. M. C. A.'s and the Y. W. C. A.'s, the League for Political Education, social workers in neighborhood and settlement organizations, parent teacher associations, libraries, the extension departments of state universities, the Federal Council of Churches, national and local organizations in the various denominations, Federations for Child Study, Drama Leagues and educational groups. These are all composed of intelligent people of influence who effect wide-spread public opinion.

Approaching Its Seventh Anniversary.

While the National Board has continued its work steadily, silently and skillfully, it has gathered to itself remarkable influence because of its efficiency. The very fact that it has gone on its way without proclaiming its achievements from the house-tops has caused it to be recognized as a sane, fair and forceful organization. It feels it is somewhat responsible for the small hold of censorship upon the imaginations of the conservative elements in America. It has been able to accomplish this by gathering to itself many of the leaders of thought in New York. These intelligent people, who are interested primarily in sane solutions of social problems, have steadily given their assistance to the National Board until there are at present 165 members of the committees engaged in the criticism of pictures and 33 members of the governing body, the General Committee.

It is somewhat remarkable that the policy of the National Board in the regulation of pictures has persisted and has developed during the six and one-half years. This speaks well for the conservatism and common-sense as well as the disinterestedness of the organization and for the vision of the manufacturers of motion pictures.

Helping Society and Elevating the Picture.

The organization is unique in American life. It has demonstrated, as no other movement in the history of the country, that the assistance of the public can be given to a great business to the mutual benefit, both of society and of the business. This may be explained in part by the fact that the National Board has never believed in censorship as it is ordinarily recognized. It rather believes in the fullest freedom for the expression of ideas by means of the screen. It represents the public and also the producers as a freindly critic or editor of the ethical ideas and situations appearing in pictures. In a conservative manner, it discovers the point of view of society on fundamental morals and expresses these decisions to the motion picture industry.

The effectiveness of the National Board has been recognized by authorities in many cities. The Board now has some 700 active correspondents and is sending its weekly reports and bulletins to some 400 co-operating groups in different localities. Such cities as Boston, Providence, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Chattanooga, Memphis, Duluth, Spokane, Denver and San Francisco are among those which are satisfied of the completeness of the work performed by this organization. The mayors, commissioners, bureaus, boards of public welfare, etc., have carefully examined into the workings of the National Board and have expressed themselvs officially as satisfied with their findings.

While irritation must inevitably be aroused in some cases, the film companies themselves bear witness to the disinterestedness and skill of the National Board in the criticism of pictures. A part of the influence of this body is due directly to the complete way in which the film manufacturers have accepted the Board's decisions. It has also been furthered by a recognition on the part of the motion picture managers and exhibitors of its skilled and broad-minded decisions.

The most satisfactory phase of the work of the National Board is that of constructive criticism. While it has found it necessary to repress some films, it has constantly referred these to the manufacturers with suggestions of changes which would bring them up to the standard and allow them to be circulated. Behind the individual film, the work has extended to the writer of the scenario, the actors and actresses and the directors of studios. To these important groups, the National Board has addressed itself and has thus been able to check the use of themes contrary to public morals, and, incidentally, to save unnecessary expenditure. In no case does the Board express itself from theory. It satisfies itself of the correctness of its opinions and speaks from sympathy and intimate knowledge.

No Special Censorship for Children Is Feasible.

Most of the discussion about censorship has as an underlying idea the protection of young people. The National Board knows that the audiences generally throughout the United States are composed of not more than fifteen or sixteen per cent. of young people under 16. It, therefore, judges motion pictures very largely from the standpoint of the 85 per cent. It has, however, been conducting a campaign for laying the responsibility for the entertainment of young people more fully upon the shoulders of parents, where it belongs. It is fundamentally absurd to expect that city authorities shall become the nurse-maid and mother of the boys and girls. This idea is coupled with another which is growing rapidly throughout the country, namely, that of furnishing children's film programs and the photoplay houses. The National Board has recognized the possibility of developing this plan and has carried on an active correspondence and propaganda throughout the country. Cities as widely scattered as Providence, Louisville, Minneapolis and St. Louis have adopted it. Witness the 1,200 enthusiastic children in Providence, Rhode Island, and the 1,500 in one theater in Grand Rapids, Michigan. No other organization beside the National Board is able to handle this movement. There is none, moreover, which will break down more rapidly the necessity for censorship than just this simple and practical method of selecting films satisfactory to young people and parents on selected days in the theaters. When once the National Board develops the possibilities of this idea and children are cared for, the argument for censorship will approach the vanishing point.

Not the lease remarkable fact is the economy practiced by the Board. All its work has been done on a mere pittance. Men like the Rev. Mr. Orrin G. Cocks and William D. Maguire are inspired by the knowledge of the good they do, and their compensation is far less than they could get in less interesting, but more remunerative work. The National Board's staff is pitifully small and can do its vast work only by going at top pressure all the time. No single factor has helped the ethical development of the industry half as much as the intelligent and conscientious work of the National Board.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON

TEACHING BY MOVING PICTURES.

A System.

WISCONSIN has long been known as one of the pioneer states in educational moving pictures. This page has from time to time recorded brief descriptions of the efforts put forth and the progress made, and we are now able to present a more thorough report of results achieved and the further plans contemplated, the perusal of which will be most helpful to other states and communities desiring advice and knowledge upon the best means whereby the great advantages of the moving pictures in the schools can be secured.

In the first place the circuits in Wisconsin are owned and operated by the state. They deal exclusively in films and slides of an educational nature and serve an organized chain of public schools, as well as civic and cultural centers. As a result of the state's free service to the schools, the teaching of history, geography, hygiene and other subjects by aid of the motion picture is demonstrating its value so conclusively that the bureau of visual instruction of the Extension Division of the University of Wisconsin, is rapidly becoming a unique educational instrument of the state.

Seventy-eight public schools and other centers throughout the state have moving picture machines of their own, sixty-three of this number having been equipped during the year. In addition to these there are now 285 schools and centers provided with stereopticons provisionally, some twenty-five of these are planning to purchase moving picture machines before the end of the year.

A Growing Demand for Apparatus.

As the cost of each equipment from stereopticon to moving picture machine is from $75 to $350, the investments to be made by the schools, civic associations and other centers in order to avail themselves of the free film and slide service, which is part of the extension plan by which the advantages of the university are taken out into the state at large, is conservatively estimated at $25,000 to $30,000.

At present about 18,000 lantern slides, on nearly 200 subjects, and 130,000 feet of motion picture film on over 100 different subjects, are made available by the University Extension for use on the state circuit.

At the end of the school year, last June, 160 schools and centers were on the Extension circuits, receiving a weekly service of slides and films for thirty-five weeks of the school year. There were four of these organized circuits in operation, while 157 schools and centers used the service occasionally.

Greater Plans for Next Year.

During the coming year the state hopes to make or have some control over the making of such films found to be most needed, and in addition to those which can be acquired in the general market. It has been proved that if the schools had to depend upon the commercial exchanges the present system could not be sustained. On account of the rental rates and the difficulty of a maintained educational supply, schools would suffer even as they do in other states, but, thanks to the plan of the University of Wisconsin and the state authorities, the problem has been so far solved, to the great benefit of their own state, and as a splendid example to every other state in the Union.

An Economical System.

As a financial proposition, the operation of these circuits is an example of a striking economy in the administration of public funds. Had the schools of the state been compelled to secure on a rental basis from other sources the same service which they received from the Extension Division, the cost would have been about $34,000. Had each school on the circuit been compelled to purchase outright the service used during the past year the same would have been at a cost of $4,025, or a total of $644,000, an expense which would have been prohibitive. The actual cost of this service to the schools of the state under the Extension Division plan was only $6,000.

Interesting Lectures.

Many of the slides and films are accompanied by lectures prepared by university faculty members and the field covered is a varied one. Many of the country training schools for teachers and country agricultural schools are using the educational pictures in work among the rural communities, and are still planning a more extensive use for the coming year. Art, history, travel, literature, sociology, agriculture and the varied sciences are represented in the general service to the circuits, while a special series is now in preparation for high school work. The wonderfully systematized visual instruction is organized now to serve every part of the state and it may safely be said that the vexed question of applied kinematography to the standard of its present possibilities has been solved in and by the state of Wisconsin.

THE PICTURE AS A CIVILIZING POWER.

An interesting account comes from the Fiji Islands as to the great benefits upon the islanders wrought by the moving picture. Their appearance is spoken of as being equal "to the dawning of a new day" among the natives.

After their first fears had passed away, an intense interest developed so that it became possible to secure their aid in any way if only they could be rewarded by a view of the pictures which they watched with hungry interest and gave every evidence of profiting from the examples, which they presented.

The people also became industrious if, as a result of their labors, they could receive such pay as would permit them to see more pictures; an English writer predicts that a general result will be a practical reversal of the economic conditions of these and similar people.

A new world is opening before them, in a single glance they see other peoples of the earth, their manners and customs, and while we in civilized lands know of the manners and customs of the uncivilized as a matter of curiosity, they of the uncivilized lands learn from the pictures everything that immediately uplifts them and which will accomplish the work of ages in a comparatively short time. Thus the moving picture is destined to fill another role, i. e., that of the world's greatest civilizer.

USES PICTURES TO ADVERTISE INDUSTRIES.

The Republic of Bolivia, in South America, is the first foreign country to make use of the motion picture in advertising its industries among the business men of the United States. Four reels of films have been prepared, based upon subjects that are intended to give some idea of the wealth, resources and business activities and customs of that nation, and these have already been shown to several organizations of American business men, through the courtesy of the Bolivian minister at Washington.

The Chicago branch office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has had several opportunities to present these views before prominent clubs and associations, and a notable degree of interest was aroused. This is the first time that any considerable number of American business men have been able to observe the actual daily conditions under which the activities of one of the South American nations take place.

The motion picture and the lantern slide are both being used by the Bureau to bring the various sections of this country into touch with the foreign trade work, for the views relating to the work of the bureau itself have been cordially received when exhibited throughout the United States.

DEATH OF MRS. BARRY O'NEIL.

Mrs. Barry O'Neil, wife of the producer, died in New York City on Sunday, November 21. The funeral services were held the following Tuesday at the Church of the Transfiguration, in Twenty-ninth street.

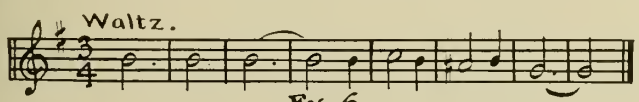
IMPROVISING.
Article II.

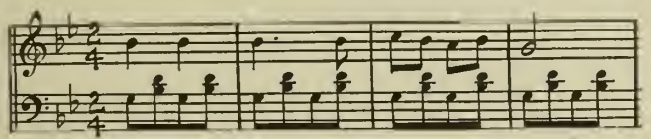
TO CONTINUE with Example 5. Should we play this theme in waltz time we will get another figure and another rhythm without entirely destroying the melodic idea. We can still easily recognize the tune, even though the tempo is changed. See Example 6:



Ex. 6.

This is because the accent is still practically the same in both examples—that is, the same notes fall upon the principal accents of the measure. Play each one and beat the time while playing. You will find the first and third notes falling upon the most strongly accented beats while the 2nd and 4th notes of each are upon the weaker pulsations. And the C and A sharp of the next group are also more strongly accented than are the B and B.

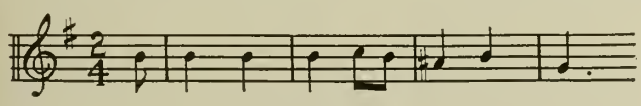
We will modify the same theme (Ex. 5) in another manner; that is, by changing from the major to the minor key. (G major to G minor.)



Ex. 7.

The tempo and form in Ex. 7 are exactly the same as in Ex. 5, but the character is considerably altered by reason of the change to the minor key. However the theme is still recognizable because the principal accents are unchanged and the figure is still the same.

Should we change the figure (pattern) as the figure of Ex. 1 was changed in Exs. 3 and 4, the character of the theme would be so altered as to be almost unrecognizable.



Ex. 8.

In Ex. 8 we have the same tempo as in Ex. 5 (2-4 time) and the sequence of notes is the same in both. But the accent is entirely different. The figure is changed and some of the notes are altered in length. The 2nd and 4th notes now fall upon the principal accents (the beat) of the measure, while the first and third are on the weaker pulsations. Likewise in the next group we find C and A sharp more strongly accented than are B and B. It sounds like another theme. Indeed if we play the 7th note "A natural" instead of "A sharp," the new theme recalls the first measures of another old song from the German called "The Chapel."

Now please don't misunderstand me. Improvisation does not consist in merely twisting a tune out of all resemblance to its original form. These illustrations are merely for the purpose of showing how one theme may sometimes be made to suggest another. We will have many more examples of the same type during the course of these articles, all for the same purpose, viz., to illustrate how one theme may be made to suggest another.

If one is improvising the entire musical accompaniment to a picture, the thematic treatment suggests itself as being the most logical and satisfactory. This consists in choosing some theme or melody for each of the prominent characters (supposed to be appropriate to these characters) and playing one of these themes whenever its particular character dominates the scene, or the situation. If the theme or melody is simple and easily remembered and recognized by your hearers, so much the better. The idea is to "bring out" or intensify by the musical accompaniment those parts of the play which are intensified by the action of the characters. Of course, you always try to do this anyway whether you are improvising or not, but when working upon a theme for each leading character, you try to make that theme express different emotions the same as the one character is expressing different emotions. Sometimes you may alter the theme very slightly, other times you may alter it very much, while at still other times situations arise in which your theme suggests (and leads into) something else very different—but always in such a manner that you can revert quickly to the original should it be required. Quite often it will be the theme of the story which suggests the principal musical theme, that of the actors being secondary. Richard Wagner in his great "Music Dramas" not only gave a theme (a "motif") to characters, but to objects important to the story—the sword motif and the fire motif being two examples.

They who have the ability and ingenuity to study the methods of the great composers and profit thereby can surely find no better models. But we who cannot hope to emulate these distinguished masters must make the best use possible of our humbler gifts and be content with that.

It requires a certain "knack" to improvise, but one that can be in a large measure acquired. Melody makers must follow certain lines and keep within certain boundaries. The more commonplace tunes (dances, ordinary songs and the like), follow a pattern which is as regular and distinct as the pattern in a roll of wall paper. I don't mean that each one is a copy of the other (though that sometimes occurs), but that each one is made up of little themes which are repeated, inverted, reversed and otherwise elaborated, all in perfect order and symmetry—very much like the pattern in the wall paper. Its mechanical parts can be analyzed—taken apart and reduced to the simple elements—so the mechanical part of tune building is not so difficult to learn. Of course the extent of your success will depend upon your inventiveness and ability, but even though you may not be a genius you should, with practice, be able to make a fairly good showing.

I have spoken of "altering" a theme and of "altering" a melody. "Elaborating" would be the better word. We will suppose a "theme" to be a very short subject or figure from which the complete melody is built. Used in this sense, the "theme" is the foundation of your melody. Ex. 5 gives an illustration of this. The "theme" is a short subject of four measures. The song is so well known as to need no reproduction here, but the melody is built up in this way. First, the subject (the "theme") is introduced; four measures. Then this subject is repeated two notes higher. (This is called "repetition.") Three extra notes are then introduced (by reason of there being three more syllables in the second line than in the first), to be followed by the subject again in its original position (plus three extra notes again for the same reason as before). The same subject has now been used three times in different positions, but the words now compel a change in the figure in completing the strain.

This is composition. You can take the same subject—start it on another note if you like—repeat it in different positions from that given in the example, and get another melody. This too would be composition, though as you are building upon another composer's theme, improvisation would more correctly express the process. The melody alluded to was built up principally by repetition. There are many other means of elaboration used in building a complete melody from a short theme, and these are all adaptable when improvising upon another melody. While we expect to devote ourselves to this principally, it may be necessary to explain some of the points of composition for purposeof illustration. In elaborating upon another melody we can use these expedients:

(1) Changing the key. (From major to minor and vice versa.)
(2) Changing the tempo. (From 4-4 to waltz, 3-4 to 2-4, etc.)
(3) Changing the figure.
(4) Playing a theme (or subject) one or more notes higher or lower; called "repetition." See example 5, with comments.
(5) Inverting the figure. (Same shape as to length of notes and "pattern," but opposite in motion.)
(6) Reversing the figure. (Will be illustrated later.)
(7) Extending the intervals. (Increasing the distance between the intervals.)
(8) Contracting the intervals. (Decreasing the distance between them.)
(9) Elaborating by means of grace notes, auxiliary notes, and passing notes.

Miss Retta Hellman, Lyric theater, Covington, Ky., writes:

"I have been a constant reader of your page for several years. The programs and suggestions have helped me very much and I should like to show my appreciation by sending one of mine. This is the manner in which I accompanied

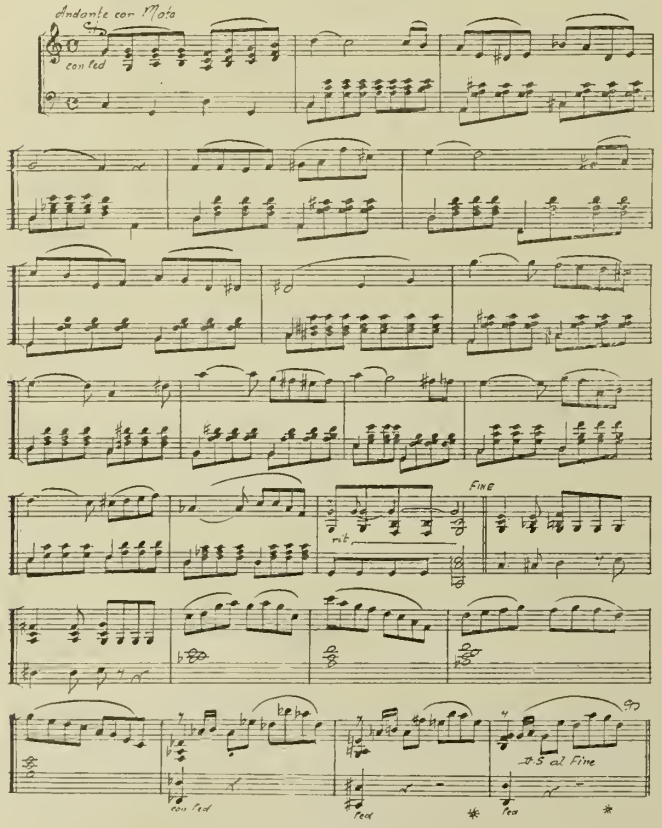
"Berceuse" (Illjinsky) until end.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE PICTURE THEATER.

We have arranged with Mr. W. C. Simon to print a page of original composition in this reduced style at certain intervals. Mr. Simon has composed original sets for a number of the Kalem productions, including their "Midnight at Maxim's" and "The Tragedy of the Desert." This is the first of a series of ten or twelve numbers which will be suitable for certain styles of dramatic subjects under the general classification of society dramas. The complete sets will be available in loose leaf form and will be a welcome addition to the music libraries of orchestra leaders.



Original Composition No. 1.

"THE CAVE MAN."

Released December 6, 1915, by the V-L-S-E, Inc.—Cues Prepared by S. M. Berg.

By Special Arrangement With
G. Schirmer, Inc., Music Publishers, New York.

Synopsis of "The Cave Man": Madeline Mischief, a society leader, realizing the shallowness of society, wagers with her friend that she can pick a man from the submerged tenth and make a social lion of him. Many amusing incidents result in the carrying out of her plain. Ultimately the Cave-Man realizes that he loves Madeline and she gives herself into his keeping.

This picture presents no technical difficulties to the orchestra leader in that the production is a comedy-drama.

Time schedule: Five reels (about 5,000 feet) 75 minutes.

The theme selected is 'Serenade"—Ern.

0 —D—Opening, Vanity Caprice—Jackson (Allegro, ma non troppo).
4¼—T—"What does it all amount to, etc."
5 —T—The sprit moves Madeline, Auf Wiedersehn—Romberg. (Moderato).
5½—T—Haulick Smagg, the modern cave man.
9 —D—Smagg forces his way into the apartment, Serenade—Ern. (Allegretto) (Theme).
13 —T—"Send up two barbers and a quart of toilet water."
14 —T—"In the top of your head, Smagg, I am going to put a spark there." Florindo—Burgmein (Allegretto vivace).
18¾—T—Haulick Smagg, Esq., Rosaura—Burgmein (Andante sostenuto).
22¾—T—"That ends your first lesson."
23½—T—"O! no Smagg, it would not be proper for you to stay here." Columbine—Burgmein (Andante sostenuto e grazioso).
27¾—T—Brewster Bradford, a blueblood.
28¼—T—Madeline, anxious to meet Bradford. Le Seigneur Arlequin—Burgmein (Allegro brillante e ardito).
32 —T—At Madeline's home.
33 —T—"I know some millionaires, the Van Dreams." Repeat Serenade—Ern. (Allegretto) Theme.
36¼—T—Bradford gets material for his new novel.
39½—T—"There's Higgins, president of the peanut trust." Tete-a-tete—de Koven (Allegro commodo).
44½—T—"Peanuts are getting littler every Saturday."
45½—T—"James, what are you doing?" Ragtime Pipe of Pan—Romberg (Allegro moderato).
47¾—T—Cavemanism, a new art.
49¾—T—"You may think she's ugly, but she's real." Repeat Serenade—Ern. (Allegretto) (Theme).
54 —T—"Mrs. Van Dream wants me to marry Dolly. What shall I do?"
54¾—T—More material for Bradford's novel. Here's To You, My Sparkling Wine—Edwards (Allegro moderato).
58¾—T—"Why Brewster Bradford, what are you doing here?"
60 —D—When the cave-man enters the saloon. Agitato No. 1.
60½—D—When he leaves the saloon. Caressing Butterfly—Barthelemy (Allegretto).
64 —T—Smagg cares little where his path leads him.
66 —T—The Bradfords set out on their honeymoon. Organ Prelude.
66½—T—Smagg follows the spark. Love'e Wilfulness—Barthelemy (Andante appassionato).
68½—T—After a year, the spark has grown, etc.
69 —T—Far into the night. Daffodils—Carvel (Andante moderato).
71½—T—A visit to the steel works.
73¾—D—When Smagg and Madeline mount horseback. Agitato No. 2.
75 —T—Cave-man conquest. Repeat Serenade (Allegretto) (Theme).
75 —T—The End.

NAT GOODWIN JOINS MIRROR.

Nat Goodwin, the famous stage personage who has made but one venture into the world of films, has signed a long term contract with the Mirror Films, Inc., whereby he will appear before the camera exclusively for that organization during the life of the contract. The scenario department of the Mirror has been at work for a week or more on the first screen stories in which Mr. Goodwin will appear and will have at least three ready for the director who will handle Mr. Goodwin's company before the beginning of activities at the Mirror studio at Glendale, Long Island, which is anticipated to be very soon.

Back of the signature of Mr. Goodwin which was affixed to the contract is a story which has a sentimental as well as a commercial aspect. Mr. Goodwin has been a warm personal friend of Clifford B. Harmon, president of the Mirror Films, Inc., for many years.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

ONE of the first duties of every motion picture exhibitor of this country is to become a citizen and arm himself with the privilege to vote. Appeals to exhibitors to stand by their rights are of no avail if the exhibitors are not in a position to do so. It is assumed, and the records appear to bear out the assumption, that nearly all exhibitors in the motion picture business are citizens and are entitled to vote, but there is reason to believe that there are exceptions. It has been suggested that the Bureau of Licenses should make citizenship one of the qualifications for motion picture licenses, and not grant them promiscuously. Every exhibitor should be a voter—an active voter. If he is not he cannot defend his rights on the basis of his fellow exhibitor. Sympathy, co-operation and financial aid may be forthcoming, but the power at the polls is also needed. The picture man is no longer to be scoffed at. He is a part of an established industry, which has a claim to the laws. He has a right to be heard and to have representation. The picture men who went to the polls at the last election demonstrated this by not only helping to roll up a tremendous majority against the constitutional amendment, but also by defeating the assemblyman who introduced the censorship bill at the last session of the Assembly in Albany. All picture people should profit by the example.

I am frequently asked to give advice regarding investment in stock of motion picture concerns. I wish to state emphatically and for all time that I will not encourage such investment. Those who are inclined to do so must do so without any encouragement from me. It is true that people have made thousands of dollars in the business and there is a great future for the moving pictures, but I will not encourage anyone to invest in them. Such investments are controlled entirely by local conditions, as it were. Past experience has shown that moving picture stock dealings have not been profitable. Whether conditions have changed is left to the judgment of investors. In days gone by such investments were dependent chiefly upon the producing end. Now that and the ownership of theaters are combined. To the impartial mind the latter seems to add to the risk. It is a grave question as to whether the roles of producer and house manager can be combined with profit.

It cannot be disputed that the photoplay reigns in popularity in the amusement world—that is it is the favorite with the majority of the amusement seeking public, but there is danger that that popularity may be more or less impaired by certain speculative influences. The legitimate theatrical field was killed in that manner. Certain combinations secured control that not only regulated the salaries paid the performers and the admission prices to be paid by the public, but actually put the playwrights upon a scale that stumped their pride and ambition. That is the danger that seems to threaten the photoplay field today. Dividends cannot be ground out of mere popularity. The play must be the play, whether it be the spoken or the silent, and the mere fact that a name or group of names is associated with it will not serve as a guarantee to the investor. As has often been said, the motion picture business is a distinct one. While apparently on a level with the regular theatrical business it differs from it. In the speaking play a good actor or actress may save a poor production. In the motion picture the play itself must win. In the commercial line the products have a standard that can be maintained by certain formula. Not so with the motion picture. The successful formula of to-day may be a failure to-morrow. The standard of production may be maintained, but the production itself may not show it to the satisfaction of the audience. In the theatrical line the public taste is far more fickle than it is even in the line of fashions.

The most unfortunate feature in connection with the motion picture business is its apparent quick road to wealth. Secondary is the ever present ambitious individual who imagines that a few months of apprenticeship in the business has made him a master. How many players I know who have caused their friends many a loss by their ambition. One I know, who thought he had all the keys of the trade at his finger tips, led his best friend to part with and lose $15,000. Another caused others to spend much more and, instead of prospering, is now playing cheap vaudeville time. Another is now touring the "hayseed towns" in an effort to establish local schools of motion picture acting.

There may be thousands, even millions, in the motion picture business, but the profits are earned by hard work. The returns are not picked like berries from the bush. A successful photoplay cannot be produced every day. One brand of coffee or other product may hold public favor for years and bring immense profit to the producer. Not so with the photoplay producer. Thousands of dollars may be spent and the best of talent may be used on a production, and still the public may turn its back upon it. There is no stability of taste on the part of the public with regard to amusements and the producers are unable to weigh that taste to a degree that will justify a computation on returns. It cannot be disputed that the life of the photoplay is immeasurable at the present time, yet speculative measures may completely change the aspect within a short period. In the mad rush for wealth many people are endangering the motion picture business. The secrets of the business have now become so broadcast that it is a very easy task for some commendable work to be turned out in a short time, and in a very unpretentious place, but such is not the rule, and a success by accident is frequently used as a vehicle to impose upon the public, and thereby endanger the welfare of the business as a whole. If the newspapers could be induced to deal with motion pictures on the same, apparently, disinterested scale that they do with the legitimate shows, the public might be more liberal in its views on certain photoplays. On the contrary the daily press seems over anxious to take every opportunity to "knock" the motion picture.

Which recalls to mind comments recently made by a leading daily newspaper of this city. It commends the action of the society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the case of a rider and horse going over a cliff for a moving picture in the Adirondacks. Ausable Chasm was the place where the "crime" was committed. The local reporter stated that the horse and rider made a plunge of eighty feet. The society representative hurried from New York to the scene and found, by actual measurement, that the plunge was but forty-five feet. The horse escaped uninjured, but the rider had his leg broken. The victim and all those who could be associated with him, were put under bail for trial. The horse was not arrested. He has traveled all over the country as a high diver.

About two weeks ago a person advertised for one hundred men to meet at a certain point on the North River to take part in a moving picture scene. They were to be paid $1 each. When the crowd assembled they were paired off and told to combat as they would if arrayed against each other as British and German soldiers. They did so, and several were injured. There was no editorial comment upon the incident. The producers of the scene evidently did not have money enough to keep up the publicity.

Instead of taking hold of direct cases the newspapers attack the business as a whole. It is truly a subsidized press that will publish day after day articles referring to an uninjured horse under the guise of defending the cruelty to animal cause when it will not even comment upon an imposition made upon human beings.

"Old Sam" Bullock, of Cleveland, deserves credit for the fight he is making on the Ohio censors. He was prosecuted because he refused to cut out a subtitle reading that the board of censors was "conceived in iniquity, born in sin and dying in disgrace." The jury disagreed and there is to be another trial. The censors couldn't take a joke. Suppose the statement be the truth? It has no bearing on the film, on questions of morality or public policy. If the publication was a libel Mr. Bullock should have been prosecuted on such a charge. If a similar statement had appeared in a newspaper owned by Mr. Bullock there would have been no prosecution. The case brings to light the line that is drawn between newspapers and motion pictures on the question of freedom of thought. Les Temps, Paris, is protesting against military censorship and very properly says "there are institutions which improve with custom. Such is not the case of censorship" and adds that the censors are not only placing themselves above law regarding freedom of the press, but are also menacing the liberty of the country.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Street Car Advertising.

EVIDENTLY street car advertising is growing popular. It is only lately that many comments on this form of publicity have come in, and this is the first reproducible photograph to accompany comment. This is sent in by R. B. Wilby, of the Strand Amusement Co., Montgomery, Ala., and shows the one sheet boards used for the Strand. These are larger than the average board, which is required to conform to the height of the dash, which is more the half sheet size, requiring a specially printed bill or a cloth banner. Mr. Wilby writes that it costs him "sixty" to use the boards, but does not specify whether week or month and does not say how many cars the payment covers. The house is required to supply and affix its own boards and to do its own pasting.

With a reasonable cost per car, there are few forms of advertising that are better, provided that the cars run on good streets, but it must be remembered that it is not merely street car advertising that is good but the advertising on street cars that take the bills through the desirable portions of the town.

The effect is much the same as the perambulating bill board or sandwich. If you lay out a route for a sandwich man you send him where the bills will be seen by the greatest number of desirable people. In the same way, you must judge the value of this car advertising by the number of cars, their routes and the cost per car as compared with the probable result.

If your cars run up and down the main streets where they are most likely to be seen by a great number of persons, then those cars are worth more to you than cars running down side streets and simply feeding the traffic streets. The same number of persons will ride and these may see your advertisement, but you will not only lose the transient traffic, but the people who ride are less apt to see the advertising on a side street than if, after they left the car they could still see the bills on other cars. Like all billboard work, the effect is not immediate but cumulative, and you want to get the paper where not one but a succession of bills will be seen, on the proposition that one or more may be overlooked where one of a dozen must be seen.

What the drawing power of any form of advertising will be is wholly dependent on local conditions, and this is a factor you must learn from experience as applied to your own house, but as a general plan the use of cars is excellent if the low is small enough to make it worth your while to make a general appeal.

And in a recent issue of the Stamco Post Mr. Wilby voices another thought of general interest when he says:

> The manager of one of the largest exchanges in the South, talking to this young man, declared it his opinion that the value of the picture shown in a theater could possibly be no more than fifty per cent. of the program, the balance being made up of projection, house service, and music, with particular emphasis upon the music. And there, we repeat, is where the Strand stands in a class alone in this section.

In other words, you do not merely run motion pictures, but you strive to give them an environment that adds to the comfort of the patrons and conduces to the frame of mind that makes the pictures seem most enjoyable. In a recent issue the Billboard voiced the same idea in other words when it said that the reason of lack of greater success was a lack of real showmen in the business. We need not only house owners but house managers; and managing means the best possible conduct of a house permissible with the making of a reasonable profit.

Folder Programs.

Nikitas Dipson, of the Family, Batavia, N. Y., sends in some folder programs, eight pages about three by six, but varying slightly with the stock. Generally he gives a page a day, save when he has some feature, when he spreads it over two days and condenses the rest slightly. The best form carries the day and date in a panel at the top and this should be used as a regular feature. It gives a finish and definiteness to the divisions that cannot be gained in any other manner, though a straight underline in two point rule is less expensive and still good. Something of the sort should be used. Where two days are run on the same page, these should be cut off by the use of double line rule instead of light single line. Apart from this, the display is generally well planned and well written. There is plenty said about the plays, but the space is not crowded, and the comparative sizes used make for a good display. Mr. Dipson seems to have discovered that six, eight and ten point faces will get the same relative effect as ten, twelve and eighteen point in combination. Of the three sent in for criticism, we think the one dated October 11th the better form. Speaking of The Moving Picture World, Mr. Dipson writes:

> I cannot be an hour without it. Other papers may be good but—I don't know—I am used to the World.

That's the way others—many others—feel. They are used to the paper that has led them to success.

An Auto Float.

H. E. Hinrichs, of the Royal, Minonk, Ill., sends in a photo of his auto placarded with a Mary Pickford play. As the play was "Behind the Scenes" we think that the title would have helped business, and should have been incorporated in the placard. But there is a lack of novelty in a placarded auto alone. If the house had a set of scenery, a box could have been built and placarded with the fact that Miss Pickford was behind the scenes. Something more than a sign on the side of a car is needed to gain more than passing attention. A dressing table might have been set on the floor of the tonneau before which a pretty girl in a bathrobe, presumably covering a stage costume, or in stage costume itself, could have been making up, the sign explaining that it was Mary Pickford making up for "Behind the Scenes" at the Royal tonight. It is a simple matter to get some crude form of display that will greatly increase the pull of the layout. Even some noise maker would be better than nothing, and it is always possible to get a small boy and supply him with a home made triangle.

Might Be Changed.

Stringer's theater, Gainesville, Ga., sends in two pieces, a weekly program and a form letter. The latter might be changed to good advantage. In the first place, it starts off "Honorable Friend." That is not a happy greeting. It suggests a spirit of servility. Then it starts in to complain that the house is not given proper support and to argue that the attendance should be better. Nothing succeeds like success and a confession of failure invariably argues something wrong. The same thing might have been said in a different way. Do not say that you have been giving one of the best programs ever to no business. Say that you are giving surprising value and are astonished that more do not awake to their opportunities. Instead of saying that you have been offering two dollar pictures for five and ten cents and yet the people have not awakened to their opportunities, say "The same pictures we are offering at regular admission cost city theater goers from a quarter to two dollars, and it is one of the beauties of the Motion Picture Business that you get precisely the same picture and at the same time. You do not have to wait for a 'number two' company to happen along. You get the number one company when it is new." Tell the arguments in favor, but do not "make the poor mouth."

And we believe that it is a mistake ever to announce that pictures have been passed by the Board of Censorship. Do not allude to the censorship question as though some such censorship were necessary. Say that you have seen the pictures or know and approve of them, but never put forward a censorship opinion as something necessary and essential to the standing and quality of a picture.

The program is a door knob style in red and green on white. The combination is too gaudy. Red and black would be better and just as pronounced. It is seldom that double printing pays for a house program and when it is done, the colors selected should not be too bright. Red and green is good for poster work, but seldom gives good results in small bills unless one color is little used.

And before getting on to the next program, it might be well to suggest that perhaps the very people who will not come for ten cents may be interested were the prices raised to fifteen or twenty. It has happened and can happen again that the higher price suggests a greater value and therefore a greater desirability.

Features Music.

The Victoria theater, Harrisburg, Pa., features music almost equally with the pictures. They have a unit orchestra and make a noise about it, featuring the program for the week, and giving a cut of William P. McBride, its chief engineer. The program is a peculiar shade of gray brown, printed in black, with one page for the program, one for house chat and one for the musical program and a little more house chat. We think the program proper could be improved were the dated days raised to the top of each section and set in italic instead of running casually in the center of each panel. The dates will show better, the suggestion of a formal program will be better maintained and the man who is looking for something to see on a certain night will have less trouble.

Very Neat.

The Colonial, Pittsfield, Mass., sends in a very neat invitation to its opening. It is a correctly sized card of good stock, printed in a strong blue with an ornament in tint of the same color. There is no aiming at engraved effect, but a clean and very pretty letter is used; but one face throughout, save for the house name, and it bears in every way the suggestion of refinement and good taste. It gives the house the best possible start.

Showy.

The Elite, Mishicot, Wis., sends in a very showy piece of paper in the shape of a throwaway in red and black on white. It is showy and effective because intelligent use of the color is made. Just because they had it, they do not smear it all over the paper, but use the red for border, the house name and one other line, and leave the rest in black to be the more easily read. This is the great trick in using color. If you have two colors, let the brightest be used to set out the other and not to work in combination with it. You will get a better and far less confusing effect.

Another example, a card program, is not so well done. It is a two day program, and the days are not dated, save on the face, and there is no mention of the house in three of the four pages, the only time the name is used being a semi-advertisement on the back. The name of the house, the name of the city or town, the location, if in a city, and the date should always show on the front page. Here there was more than ample room, and we get bare white space and the essentials left out. This could be very much improved.

The program sent is for Saturday and Sunday and the latter day carries the announcement that admission will be ten cents. Presumably Saturday is ten cents, too, but nothing is said. The town people probably know the admission kinks, but there may be a commercial traveler at the hotel who is interested, not that the difference will materially alter his decision.

Too Much Shears.

It is all right to clip stuff from the trade paper to save writing something for the house program, but the house program for the Theatrette, Fort Scott, Kansas, gives a third of a column on the front page to the announcement of a change of management in a theater in Newark, N. J. We fail to see that this will greatly interest the local patron. The Theatrette is a nice little publication, but the pen is a better business maker than the shears.

More Clips.

The Crown theater, Mobile, Ala., is another house with a paper cutting editor, and he does not even turn to the trade papers but tells that a cup of strong coffee will remove the odor of onions from the breath and gives working diagrams for the construction of egg muffins and of muffins without eggs, which is not likely to fill one with a yearning to see certain films. The issue is sixteen pages, but twelve pages will be better until there is more advertising obtained, for there is so much white space that it looks bare and unfinished. The newspaper advertising, on the other hand, is overloaded with words. The program should be built up and the newspaper work cut to permit the use of stronger display through the employment of some white space as well as larger display lines.

Could be Augmented.

The Columbia theater, Victoria, B. C., sends in a program that might be improved by telling more about their current films. They use two subjects a week, three days each, but they do not tell enough about these subjects to gain much interest save from the regular fans. It would pay to read up on the coming attractions and write half a dozen lines of interesting description of each subject. They might, too, take the second page for house talk instead of clip stuff, though they have a lost and found department on that page, the finding for the week the sample covers including a set of false teeth. This might be given more space than the five point used, but it appears to have been set to suggest a newspaper classified advertisement. It should be set in eight point and given a twelve or fourteen point head. A program is not really good until it is doing all the work it can for a house, and house talk beats lifted stuff, though the lifts are all right if there is room for both.

Another Birth.

A. S. McCabe, of the Orpheum, Fort Wayne, Ind., sends in a house program "just born." It is a promising infant, but it has not learned to talk as yet, at least there is no house talk or other than the announcement of the musical programs. The text for the attractions day by day is carefully prepared; nicely done, indeed, but something more is needed, particularly where there is a campaign for foreign advertising. The only trouble is that the house program gets but the smallest third of each page where it should be given a shade the best of the division. Mr. McCabe, who is the advertising manager, adds this clever stunt:

> During the projection of the Valeska Suratt picture, "The Soul of Broadway," this week, this theater "got across" a unique publicity stunt by arranging with the leading dry goods, millinery and shoe stores to devote one of their display windows to bizarre designs of wearing apparel resembling those worn by Miss Suratt in the photoplay. The theater arranged to have artistically printed cards put in each window reading thus: "Models of Gowns (or Shoes, as the case might be) Worn by Valeska Suratt in 'The Soul of Broadway' at the Orpheum Theater Today." Suffice to say the idea brought unusual results via the box office.

For Reprint.

The advent of the Majestic Monthly, put out by the theater of that name in Columbus, Ohio, is always a bright week in these parts, for the editor writes the stuff that it will be good for others to copy. In the current issue he has a good talk on the work of the projection operator then adds this for the usher:

> The alert young fellows who stand ready to take you to a seat when you enter the picture house, do you ever give them a thought, except at a crowded performance when they are perhaps unable to find a seat? These ushers have their problems, too. The editor was speaking to the head usher the other day about it and he admitted that he, also had a message for the magazine readers.
> The chief thing to remember, he told us, is for the patron to tell the usher immediately just where in the house he wants to sit and how many seats he desires. Then the usher can show him with some speed and accuracy to the desired place. "Left aisle, pretty well down, three seats," would be a sample of a request as it should be made. Furthermore, there is nothing more embarrassing to an usher than to get some seats in the best locations he can find and then to have the patrons stop rows and rows behind him.

Train your employees to make theatergoing pleasant for the patron, but also train your patrons to make it easy for the ushers to make it pleasant for them. As a starter reprint this item in your own program and then run a standing line in blackface that runs something like:

> Tell the usher where you wish to sit and he will try and seat you there.

Letter it on the entrance door that it may be seen on entering, and in every way seek to create the impression of service. Your success is only partly dependent upon the films you run. Make your house a home of entertainment in all of its features and not merely in film.

Memories.

Dave Udell said he was going to come in regular.

S. E. Wall said he was going to send a whopping big letter "soon."

A NEW HELP FOR MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World)

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and type-setting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. Mr. Sargent tells all he knows and this includes what several hundred successful exhibitors have told him. More than 100 examples. An introduction and then 299 pages of solid text. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. Handsome clothboard binding. By mail, postpaid, $2.00

Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Ave., New York

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Inquiries.

Questions concerning the writing (but NOT the marketing) of photoplays will be replied to without charge if addressed to the Photoplaywright Department and accompanied by a fully addressed stamped envelope. Questions must be typewritten or written with pen and ink.

Questions as to the financial standing of concerns or the probable markets for specific or certain styles of stories cannot be answered.

In no case and under no circumstance will any manuscript or synopsis be handled and if sent will be returned without reply.

A list of addresses of producing companies will be sent if the request is made direct to the publication office, but not where request is made to this department.

Yes, But—

HERE is part of an unusually interesting letter from a correspondent in Washington. He has hit upon a good method of studying plots, but a better would be not to write what is shown in the screen, but what should have been shown. It is very true that stories and synopses are not always in agreement because the cutting room "fixes up" what the director has already fixed up, and little is left of real story, but you can learn as much from the mistakes as the successes and get a clear idea of what a plot should be. The writer says:

> A study exercise I have found of benefit, in connection with your instruction in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, is to write a synopsis of a picture I see on the screen and then compare my synopsis with the story of the picture published in the World. True these published stories are somewhat sketchy at times, and in some cases it will be found that the story and the picture will not entirely agree, but it is good practice. The exercise can also be carried further and a brief criticism written of the picture which can be compared with the reviews published in the World.
> In a recent issue of the World you publish the comments of an editor on the immense amount of trash that is submitted to the companies by would-be playwrights. Your object in publishing the statement, judged from your writings, was to impress upon your pupils the fact that it is necessary to work long and patiently in order to be successful as a writer of screen plays. I note, however, that it is the practice of some writers connected with the motion picture industry to comment in a sarcastic manner on the fact that every man, woman and child in the United States is trying to write scenarios. This is not good policy. Unfortunately there are, no doubt, some men and women trying to write photoplays who are not, either by training or temperament, adapted to this kind of work. As an example of what this general interest may produce, however, it might be pointed out that Italy, a nation of musicians has produced some great composers, and if we have become a nation of playwrights there is every reason to believe, and even already evidence to prove, that we will produce the leaders in this new art. Good instruction is the proper procedure; the sarcastic gentlemen, when they make fun of the servant girl, are only killing the goose.

As to the attitude of the editors and readers, it is very true that they seem to hold the mass of writers lightly in esteem, but then our correspondent can have no idea of the sort of stuff that is poured into the studios day after day. He cannot realize the impertinence, the effrontery and the exasperating complacency of these would-be authors. It is pretty hard—almost impossible, for any person with a knowledge of literary values to hold down an editorial job for six months and not feel a contempt for the small-minded, but big headed authors who grind out their drivel and then grow indignant when checks are not forthcoming for stories that were old when Edison was unborn. He cannot realize the thefts the editor sees day after day, the calm, untroubled appropriation of stories from last week's Saturday Evening Post and the current magazine back down through the ages to the time of Adam.

When the business was new, all editors helped the authors because they had to create a new class of writers. They still give their help to the promising and give of their personal time as well as that belonging to their employer, but even here the promises are not kept and abuse is as likely to be the thanks the editor gets as his appreciation.

Italy is a nation of musicians and has produced many famous singers, instrumentalists and composers, but for all that the impressario of La Scala does not sit down and teach theory and counterpoint to every truck driver who brings in a few sheets of ruled paper with some marks on them nor give a lesson in voice placement to the scrub ladies. Italy is a land of music, but the ambitious first prove their merit before they receive much assistance, and because a certain tenor was a butcher, it does not follow that all other dealers in flesh goods should be carefully watched for incipient vocalism. The sarcastic gentlemen when they make fun of the servant girl do so because they realize that no amount of instruction can replace the want of brains.

Every editor deserving of the name is willing to help and help generously when help will do any good, but something more than a desire for money must be the foundation of a would-be author's claims to recognition. Don't blame the editors. Blame the school advertising that tells that anyone can earn an income of fifty dollars a week writing and selling two plays every seven days.

Gymnastics.

To improve your plotting ability, take the time now and then to do some freak stunts. Write a story about a parlor match or a can of condensed milk or a left-handed monkey wrench or something. It may not be much of a story and then, again, it might be. One afternoon Harry Hoyt jokingly remarked that he thought he would write a story about a white rat as he had no other ideas, and we told him if he was any good he would. It turned the joke on him, but the Kalem release that resulted was favorably commented upon by the critics for its novelty of idea, something about a man who sent a tame rat down a speaking tube to obtain help.

There is only one excuse for a trained man being unable to write a plot about anything, and that is a temporary case of brain fag due to excessive production.

Sit down right now and write a story about a man who suddenly finds himself in London with nothing but German gold and notes. See what you get in the way of synopsis. Send it inside of 250 words and with a return envelope and we will comment on it for you, if you wish.

Courtesy.

For a couple of months there was some one in Rochester who seemed to spend much time telling others that if they would send us a stamp we would send them a sample script. This was not true, but when the letters came in—and there must have been a couple of dozen of them—we told them that the Lubin company would send a free sheet that included a sample script. Just one of the two dozen odd wrote again to say that the slip had been procured and to thank us for the suggestion.

Honest.

Now and then it is possible to get a laugh even out of a photoplay department. Comes a letter that does not look very intelligent (yes, letters can look intelligent or otherwise) in which the writer says:

> Why do you say there are good stories in the bible? I have read it carefully and do not find any.

Now, wouldn't that shake you up just a little? The writer reads there there are stories in the bible, so he reads it and then kicks that it is wasted effort. But let's see.

Henry and John are brothers. Henry loves Gladys. John also loves her, but he is content to conceal his love and bide his time. They go for a walk near a river. The next day Henry's body is found. All around are evidences of a struggle. Beside him is a favorite cane, a stick with a head of unusual design, perhaps in the form of a horse's hoof with a tiny horseshoe attached. John's body is not to be found, but a rapid river nearby suggests the reason. It is probable that the murderer or murderers disposed of John's body, but were frightened away before they could similarly dispose of Henry's. Two years later John turns up. He tells a story of finding himself on the edge of the river, being picked up by a barge captain and carried to the river's source. A scar on his head explains the aphasia. Now he has recovered memory and has come home. All goes well for a time, but he seeks to make love to Gladys, who cannot overcome her dislike for him. One night, while he is visiting her she sees Henry's cane. The tiny horseshoe just fits the scar on John's brow. Shocked into confession, he admits that he killed Henry to get him out of the way, receiving the blow on his head in the struggle.

That is not precisely like the story of Cain and Abel, but that was the inception of the story and "The Mark of Cain" would make a good title had it not been used so often before.

Suppose that David Jocelyn is ruined by Peter Higginson. They have been business rivals and by underhand methods Peter not only wrecks David's business but does it in such a manner that the failure is made to seem to be the result of David's dishonesty. The disgrace breaks his heart and he dies. David's mother, or perhaps his wife, swears to be revenged. She knows that Peter is intensely superstitious. She goes away and reappears as a clairvoyant and gets Peter into the toils and wrecks his business, partly through her advice and partly through use of the information she obtains from him. Disgrace does not kill Peter, but loss of his money is worse than death to him. David has been avenged.

There is no very strong resemblance to Saul's visit to the Witch of Endor, but this is the source of the plot. Understand that we did not mean to be read as saying that all you had to do was to open the book and find a plot all ready. You must add imagination to suggestion, but if you really are an author and not a faker, that is what you will do in any case. The bible is a great source of inspiration if you know how to use it, but so, too, is the dictionary or the Consular Reports or anything else that will serve to start you. The bible was mentioned because it is unusually rich in suggestion.

Misplaced.

An author writes that he has a story that won praise from Phil Lang, but which was not purchased because it showed railroad men in an unfavorable light and they did not care to make it. He asks where to send it next and we told him to send it to the morgue.

This holds good in any case. Do not write stories that show men as a class in an unfavorable position. Take this railroad stuff that Kalem makes, for instance. We know many exhibitors at division points who have built up big business running the Helen stories and advertising to railroad men. There are many picture theaters where the yardmaster has an arrangement whereby the theater near the yard will flash a slide when a man is wanted, and many times this reaches him where a message to the employee's house will not be received. Probably there are two or three hundred thousand men in the railroad business who are partly attracted to the theaters by railroad films. Is it to be supposed that their interest can be kept up by showing railroad men as sots and fools? The business of these men is important to house managers and so it is important to the exchanges and the manufacturers and it would be foolish in the extreme to show a drunken engineer running his train into a freight or a conductor killing a man by throwing him off the rear platform.

In the same way there are hundreds of traveling salesmen who are among the picture theaters' best patrons. It would be poor policy to produce films in which these men are depicted as home wreckers and generally dissolute.

Play for clean, well placed interest. Do not make enemies of patrons. Get stories that will appeal to and be approved by classes and throw the onus on individuals. Then you can sell.

Saving Footage.

Use film when you must have it, but save it where you can. And don't get the idea that you positively must have eighty scenes to the reel and invent scenes just to fill. You can have eighty scenes if you need them and they are short, but you can use but forty if the scenes, or some of them, are longer and forty scenes will tell your story.

Do not, for example, have the clownish suitor come to the window and peep in, then cut to the interior to show the girl sees him, go outside to show them greeting, move him to the doorstep and so into the room, when it would be as effective if the man came directly into the room or if he came to the door and was then ushered in.

This sort of stuff is all very well when a director is trying to pad or when he wants to build up and emphasize by delaying the big scene, but it is a waste of footage to indulge in similar elaborate development of every action. Each scene should have a direct bearing on the story and contribute to the general effect a result equal to its footage. If this is not the case, the development is poor no matter how tricky and "cute" the planned action may be. The best story is the one most simply told. It must be told not only simply but directly and with the least possible amount of lost motion. It should not, of course, be so cut down to the bare necessities that the effect is lost through the suddenness of the happenings, but use the in and out action for big stuff and do not force it everywhere just because it was effective in some play you saw.

Continuity.

In your eagerness to get plenty of meat into your story do not ignore continuity, for the meat will be hamburger steak if it is all chopped up.

Too little attention is paid to real continuity, not the elaborate continuity that gives a dozen scenes to establish a single action, but the true continuity that avoids an abrupt change. Scores of pictures fail of their full effect because they are not properly cut. Jim dashes out of Helen's parlor after his rejection. Immediately we see him come into his own home, grab up a revolver and try to choke himself with it. This is too sudden. It would not pay to show Jim come out of Helen's house, exit through the gate, come down the street, come down another street, enter his own yard, enter the front door, then hang his hat in the hall, go up stairs, come to the top hall and so, at last, to his room, but we can avoid the suggestion that Jim has the magic carpet of Suleiman and saves even jitney fare. We can, for instance, get this:

11. Parlor—Jim proposes—Helen rejects—he pleads—she is firm—he roughly siezes her—kisses her—exits—Helen stands by the table—dejected—likes Jim but doesn't want to marry him and is sorry to wound him.

12. Front of Helen's—Jim comes out—looks back—half hopes she will come to door—turns and goes out of picture.

13. Parlor—Helen stands by table still—looks about—shakes head—wipes tears from eyes—exits.

14. Jim's room as in No. 3.—Jim enters—throws off coat—dejected—sits on bed—looks at bureau—gets up—takes revolver from bureau—examines—raises to head.

Now we can go on with the story and there will be more interest because the two big scenes have been divided by lesser action (it is too early yet to have crisis follow crisis, scene by scene) which enables the spectator to get ready for the next shock that a crisis represents.

In many produced pictures it will be found that the lack of continuity is due to the removal of scenes to gain space, and often there will be found other scenes that might better have been removed to let in the connection scenes. This is poor cutting and not bad manuscript work, but too many scripts show the same fault of disconnection where later scenes are used that might be eliminated in favor of the more important action, action that is unimportant in itself, but important in that it connects two essential scenes.

Not Quite.

A writer who conducts a photoplay writers' department in a southern paper gives this advice:

> The importance of the title is not fully appreciated by the novice. How important it is may be gathered from the almost absurd statement of a text-book writer, himself an expert scenario writer and critic on one of our most prominent screen weeklies, that the proper way to write a photoplay is to find a catchy title, then set to work and write a story around it. Yes, it sounds like take a button and sew the coat to it; but such is the state of photoplay literature at present. The main object is to get the spectators into the house and you have to attract their attentions by a good title.

This is not quite what was said. What we did say is that one way to get a plot is to get a catchy title and write a play around it. This does sound absurd, but many writers know that it is a good way to go to work now and then, though not always. For example you think of the title "Making Henry Happy." That sounds catchy. All that remains is to find a story to fit it.

Who made Henry happy? How did they make him happy? Why did he need to be helped to happiness? Find the answers and you have your story. Perhaps Henry has had a quarrel with Bess. John, Henry's friend, tries to pour oil on the troubled waters. Perhaps he does, or perhaps he adds a lighted match and makes matters still worse.

Suppose that Henry and Bess have fallen out because Bess thinks that Henry is too tame. Perhaps Jack dresses as a woman, goes to Bess's house and acquaints him with Henry's lurid past. Perhaps this convinces Bess that Henry is the dashing, roistering blade she wants him to be, or perhaps she is more than ever certain that she does not want ever to see him again.

Perhaps the title is to be ironical. Perhaps Henry's happiness is about the last thing that John plans for, the object being to get Henry in worse than ever. This, too, would make a good comedy, or it can be supposed that Henry is unhappy because he is not married and half a dozen friends labor to supply him with a wife with such success that Henry faces five or six breach-of-promise suits. There are lots of ways of making Henry happy and most of them will provide a story.

In the same way "In the Last Trench" might be a war story, a story of a failing business campaign rallied at the last moment or the low ebb in the life of a girl who is suddenly forced to make her own way in the world. Here, too, are countless possibilities.

Writing to a title is not the only proper way of plotting, but it assuredly is one way, and a good one. The author who would keep his product up cannot have too many ways of arriving at an idea for when one plan fails to yield results another may, and with several established schemes there is generally one way that will work when others fail.

Actor Talk.

Every little while some one writes that they know that stories are stolen because a friend of theirs, a prominent photoplayer, has said that all editors steal plots.

This sounds convincing to the outsider, for surely a man who plays in the studio should know all about it, but as a matter of fact most actors know as little about play writing and the editorial department as the rankest outsider. Many of them do not even know how to write in proper form and they have no point of contact with the script end, but they wish to appear important and well informed and since the author seems to be of the opinion that stories are stolen they confirm his fears and are believed. Their testimony is worthless.

Suspense.

A. Van Buren Powell, in the October Writers' Monthly, offers an excellent description of suspense in an article on gaining interest. He writes:

> If you just simply give a dog a bone he crouches and eats it. That's all. But suppose you held it too high for him to reach, and when he barked, teased him a little, made him jump and struggle, wag his tail, plead, and finally, hooking his front paws around your wrist, drag your hand down and get the bone. He would have been more interested, wouldn't he? And he'd appreciate that bone, too.

The advice is equally good for characters and spectators. Make the spectators beg because the hero has to beg, for in the well written story the suspense that comes to the hero and heroine is shared by the men and women interested in the outcome of the story. This is only a bit of a most interesting article, one that it will pay you to read.

"We" and "You."

From the number of correspondents who write that "We have just done this," or that "We have just done that," it would seem that many think the plural to be the proper form. It is not. Kings and editors alone use the plural; kings because they imagine they are the whole works and editors because it is considered egotistical to use "I" instead of "we" or "this writer." In a personal letter it is not only out of place but suggests a lack of familiarity with conventions.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended until the excellence of such article has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 114.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor.

How many lenses are there in the objective? Explain fully. Suppose you got them mixed while cleaning, how would you tell "which is which" and which surface to place toward the screen? How and how often ought your lenses to be cleaned?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 108.

The Roll of Honor on question 108 consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Tex.; M. W. Larmour, Waco, Tex.; W. C. Crawford, Brooklyn; M. Nosti, Tampa, Fla.; C. A. Dann, Toronto, Can.; A. H. Cuff, Gravenhurst, Can.; A. D. Hotaling, Orlando, Fla.; Wilson Hays, Barton, Md.; H. Gordon, Tampa, Fla., and F. V. Poyser, Brandon, Manitoba.

The reply of M. W. Larmour has been selected for publication.

Reply to Question No. 108.

By M. W. Larmour, Waco, Texas.

The Question:

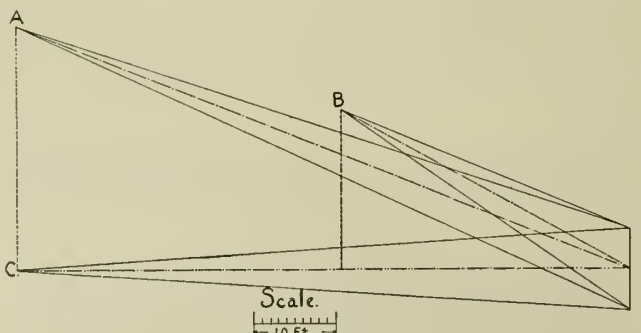
Suppose you have a very steep pitch in projection, what could you do to secure sharp focus both at the top and bottom of the picture? Can a picture be made sharp all over under these conditions?

The Answer:

The best results can be attained where a steep pitch in projection is encountered by stopping down the projection lens, tilting the aperture plate forward by loosening the bottom screws and slipping a thin piece of tin under the bottom part of the plate, and tipping the top of the screen back.

By also remedying the keystone effect the above treatment will improve a picture a great deal, provided the picture is carefully focussed; but a steep pitch cannot, under any conditions, be made to give a picture as perfect as where the machine sets squarely in front of the screen.

The inclosed diagram, drawn to scale, illustrates the great difference in distance the rays of light from the aperture have to travel to reach the screen where the pitch is excessive.



In condition A the center of the screen is 29′ 9″ lower than the center of the aperture. Center of aperture to center of screen is 80 feet. Center of aperture to top of screen is 78′ 8″. Center of aperture to bottom of screen is 82 ft.

In condition B the center of the screen is 15′ 5″ lower than the center of the aperture. Center of aperture to center of screen is 40 ft. Center of aperture to top of screen is 37′ 9″. Center of aperture to bottom of screen is 42′ 7″. This shows why a picture cannot be correctly focussed where the pitch is abnormal. Take condition B, for instance, the rays have to travel 4′ 10″ farther to reach the bottom of the picture than they do to reach the top, and when the top of the picture is exactly in focus the bottom will be 4′ 10″ off. The only thing to do would be to focus the center of the picture, which would leave both the top and bottom parts approximately 2 ft. 5 ins. out of focus.

If managers would, before planning their theaters, draw a diagram, to scale similar to the inclosed, of their proposed pitch, they could readily see what difficulties will be caused by sticking their operating room any place where it will be out of the way, rather than placing it as squarely in front of the screen as possible.

What Brother Larmour says about managers and architects exercising a little common sense in planning theaters is absolutely correct, as has been already pointed out many, many times by this department.

Not Practice, But Study.

George McBath, Tampa, Florida, sends in answer to Question 107, and says:

> Local 321 has signed up the Kinodrome Theater here, which has been employing non-union men, and the New Strand has also blossomed forth with two of our men, so you see our flag is flying high. I join Brother Nosti and thousands of other operators in recommending the Handbook and the Hawkins works, as the latest and best books published on projection and electrics. This is my first attempt at answering the questions, and naturally there will be mistakes, but "Practice makes perfect."

No, Brother McBath, you haven't got it quite right this time. In a thing of this kind it is not practice but study that makes perfect, and study is fortunately a thing which cannot be denied to any of us, though apparently some of the good friends think it ought to be.

I am, indeed, glad to know that Local 321 is getting along so nicely. And now let me give a little word of caution, in excuse for which let me say I was for many years actively identified with the labor movement. One of the greatest dangers which confronts a union, the membership of which is made up of men who have not had a wide experience in labor affairs, lies in the tendency to get "chesty" as soon as some success is accomplished. I don't mean that you boys will do anything of that kind, but, nevertheless, you may, hence this advice. Many an organization has been wrecked by success, meaning by this that as soon as they won two or three small scraps they got a mistaken notion that they were invincible, and, forthwith, proceeded to try to turn the earth over. Old labor organizations like, for instance, the locomotive engineers, the bricklayers, and plumbers do not make that mistake. Probably you won't either, but just the same to you and other comparatively young organizations I would say, don't get excited over success, but just keep pegging along, getting a little here and a little there where you can, and, above all things, never get into a fight as long as you can attain your end without it. Many a man has shaken his fist under another man's nose and had the everlasting tar licked out of him, whereas had he used a little soft soap instead of his fist he would have won his point without trouble. My compliments to Local 321. May her troubles be few and her joys many. P. S.—Please don't jump to the conclusion that I don't believe in fighting at all. I most emphatically do believe in it, but ONLY as a VERY LAST RESORT, after soft words and all other methods have failed; also, I believe that if a fight is forced on a union, then the only method to pursue is to use every legitimate weapon and fight to win. But remember that neither dum dum bullets or stink balls are regarded as "legitimate weapons."

A Success.

Local Union 321, Tampa, Florida, gave a banquet and ball recently, which proved to be a decided success. Affairs of this kind, where the men are brought together in social intercourse, do a great deal of good. The affair lasted until almost daylight, and when at the finish the tired ones settled themselves on the roost, and closed their eyes for what remained of a night's sleep, the happy faces wore the "smile that won't come off."

The editor was honored with an invitation, and a correspondent in describing the affair says: "And believe me, there was only one thing missing, and that was you." Well, I would have enjoyed being there, but, as I told you before, it is a long, long ways to Tippertampa.

Instruction Book.

The Precision Machine Company has gotten out an illustrated and excellent instruction book for the Simplex. This book will be sent out with all new purchases; also it may be had by addressing the Precision Machine Company. It is a thirty-two-page pamphlet, well bound and of convenient size for operating room use.

Articles Beneficial.

F. Haley, Bristow, Oklahoma, says:

> The articles in the department have been very beneficial to me as an operator, but I am seeking more light, both literally and figuratively. My picture, at its sharpest focus, is very dim most of the time, and the major portion of the trouble lies in a very fluctuating current, due to fault at power house. When it is most even there is a regular pulsation, which is quite distinctly visible on the screen. The operating room equipment is the best we can get. There is a Wagner converter, a new Power's Six A, motor driven, and we have meniscus-bi-convex condensers. In October 16th issue appeared Table No. 1 giving proper distances to place the lenses, but it was not carried far enough for my machine. My throw is 94 feet. The objective lens is a 7 inch E. F., with a 5⅛ back focus. Across the face of the lens the diameter is 1 7-16 inches. The condensing lenses are set with the 7 inch concave convex at the back and the 9 inch bi-convex lens in front. These lenses are placed as closely together as I can get them, but are, nevertheless, ⅜ inch apart, and the arc is 4½ inches behind the back condensing lens. One other trouble is that the picture seems to dance up and down on the screen. I have toiled with the idler of the intermittent until I think it is as nearly as right as possible. The machinery has only been in operation about six weeks, so there should be no worn places. I clean the sprockets with tooth brush and gasoline after each show, and wash the whole machine with gasoline occasionally, following the Handbook instructions as closely as possible. Does the fluctuating voltage constitute my whole trouble? I am supposed to get 30 to 60 amperes, with a voltage of 70. Am using ⅝ inch cored Bio carbons above and ½ inch solid below. Why should the polarity change while the arc is running? Sometimes it switches half a dozen times while we are projecting one reel, and the arc has never yet been without a flame. Do you think it would be best for my manager to install his own power plant for the arc? Am much interested in the light ray experiments.

Well, always provided the voltage fluctuates as much as you say, you will have a hard job getting good results, unless you do install a power plant. But I cannot advise very intelligently without knowing what you are paying per K. W. Do you mean to say that the power plant is supplying 70 volt current? That is very unusual. I think you will find it is 110, and that it is the secondary or D. C. circuit that is giving the 70 volts. If your D.C. current pulsates it is evidence that your converter is "racing," and if the polarity switches while the arc is in operation there is something radically wrong somewhere, and you should immediately take the matter up with the manufacturer of the converter. The most likely thing is that one of the connections has been wrongly made.

As to the picture dancing up and down, why you will have to describe the condition more clearly. If your sprockets are clean, and the movement is regular, four times every revolution of the machine crank, then there is something wrong with your intermittent, or its shaft. If, on the other hand, the movement is irregular it may be due to slack tension, or fault in the film itself. Describe the effect more in detail and I can probably do something for you.

Your objective lens is not large enough in diameter. It should be not less than 2 inches, and your arc is ALTOGETHER too far from the lens. I would advise you to order either a Preddy or Elbert condenser mount, get an objective lens with an aperture not less than 2 and preferably 2½ inches in diameter (though I think you will have to have the Power Company send you a special front plate) and until you do you will continue to have light loss, and lots of it, too. When you get a lens of that size you can then match up according to the table referred to, and you will, I think, be surprised at the increased illumination of your picture. The table will, however, bring your arc up to between 3 and 3½ inches from the lens, and I fear unless you have an Elbert or Preddy mount you will break a good many lenses.

As to the carbons flaming, why try ¾ cored above and ⅝ inch solid below, or you might also try ⅝ cored below, using whichever you like better. The arc will be steadier with the cored, but there will be added arc gas at the wrong place and it will somewhat diminish the efficiency of the light. The flaming is probably due to carbons working above capacity.

The Table Did It.

Charles A. Dentelbeck, Toronto, Canada, writes:

> Well, brother, I have set tight, and have been experimenting with your experiments. Now I will loosen up a little. In October 30th issue, Friend E. W. Nichols, Pasadena, Cal., set forth his flicker troubles. I had the same difficulty, but instead of a rotary converter I have two motor generator sets; instead of two Simplex, have two Power's Six A machines, and instead of two Keno 2½-inch lenses, I have two Gundlach No. 2, or half size. Am using 50 amperes, generated at 75 volts, projecting a 17-foot, 4-inch picture 112 feet on a plaster screen. Made all kinds of shutters, but did not get proper results. In talking to the manager of an optical company here I told him the story of my difficulties, and he showed me a letter from the Gundlach lens people saying the Nicholas Power Company made a special shutter for the Gundlach half size lens. I wrote the Power Company, and the enclosed letter is the result—no charge for the special, only return my old shutter. Well, the new shutter gave better results, but still I had travel ghost and was not satisfied, and that was where you came in. I got out the light ray tables, October 16th issue. The dope for a 2½-inch diameter lens at 4 7/16 back focus was, according to the table, two 6½-inch condensers 14 inches from the aperture, the condensing lens[illegible] inch apart. My crater is now 3 inches from the back condenser with a Preddy condenser mount, and, Brother Richardson, the result is that I will now put my picture up against anything I have ever seen. Cannot find the slightest discoloration in any part of it, which means that the illumination is perfectly even. Am operating in the only 10, 15 and 25 cent straight picture house in the city, except the Strand, and, believe me, I have to deliver the goods because my manager knows his business. Brother C. A. Dann of this city is in our local now. He joined a month ago and we find him to be a very nice gentleman. Incidentally, we have had a good, thorough house cleaning in our local, so good luck to you, Brother Richardson.

Comment, I think, is scarcely necessary. Up to date every report I have had from those who have tried the tables have been favorable, except in cases where the equipment could not be made to meet the conditions. It is now up to machine manufacturers to so change their equipment that the apex of the front condenser can be gotten 24 inches away from the film, and it is very much up to lens manufacturers to increase the diameter of their objectives. Good luck to the local. Maybe next summer I may find time to visit our Canadian brothers. I certainly would like to.

Diameter Too Small.

R. E. Wicker, Pinehurst, North Carolina, says:

> Am running a Power's Six A with an objective lens having a 1⅝ inch aperture. Distance from back plane of objective to aperture plate 3¾ inches. What condenser combination should I have? The tables published in the World did not cover this combination. Am projecting an 11 x 13 picture at 90 feet, using 110 volt current through a compensarc. At this writing have a 7½ condenser combination and get a fairly good light, but wish, if possible, to improve.

If you will remove your lens and place a sheet of white paper approximately where its back combination now is, noting the size of the light beam at that point, I think you will see what is wrong. The diameter of your lens is altogther too small. You should have one with not less than a 2 inch opening. Until you get a lens of larger diameter I cannot suggest any improvement. That table is, I think, right, and if the equipment is not right, that is the fault of the equipment. You can't make equipment that is totally wrong fit very well, no matter what you do. Get a lens of larger diameter is my advice, though you may have trouble following it. We will only get lenses of proper diameter when enough of you put up a strenuous kick and refuse to accept lens makers' word that their lenses are of proper diameter when they are NOT.

He Objects.

P. O. Gandrean, operator Casino theater, Burlington, Vermont, writes thusly with regard to the criticism of his projection, published October 30th:

> I have been employed at the same theater since, February 24, 1909, and am still on the job. My critic came in, I think, about 1911 and I gave him instructions on the projectors for something like two years. He very well knows that if our projection is poor we have the crowd, and are still doing business at the old stand. I have the old departments bound in volumes since 1909 (when it was the "Trouble Department"), and as for wages, why I am getting mine. If my friend, the critic, is a live wire he must be on short circuit. The other theater is a vaudeville house with 1,400 seating capacity, with pictures between the acts only—not really a picture house at all. I am awake at least a part of the time, since I read the World just as soon as it comes in, and keep them, too.

Brother Gandrean, after a careful examination of your letter and an examination of the facts you cite, while I may be in error, I believe you have just simply become a little careless. I don't think there is any doubt about your knowledge, but remember this: knowledge is of small value if we get careless and fail to apply it, and the fact that you are doing a good business in spite of faults in projection is no proof that the faults ought to be there. I am glad to see that you did not get angry and that you answered your critic like a man. A jolt of this kind often does us good. I get careless myself sometimes, and then some one lands a bump hard enough to rattle my teeth and I wake up from my doze and—mentally thank the bumper for having performed a genuine service.

Helped Him Very Much.

George Hoffstatter, St. Paul, Minneapolis, encloses forty cents for first and second set of questions and says:

> As soon as the new Handbook is out I want one. Am a regular reader of the World, and particularly of the projection department, which has helped me very much in my work. Am anchored to a Simplex machine sixty-six hours a week. Have been about six months at the machine and would like to have some of your visitors pass an opinion on my work. I would be curious to know how it would sound in print.

Well, if you served an apprenticeship and have studied, so that you have both the theory and the practice, and are careful to apply your knowledge, there is no reason in the world why it would not sound well. When I had been running a locomotive for six months I considered myself a pretty good engineer, and looking back now I can see I was too, though I was a very much better one a few years later.

Comment on Question No. 93.

John Solar, Watertown, New York, says:

Noting your request for comment on third part of the answer to question 93, August 28th issue, why Friend Smith's diagram does not show the true action of rays passing through a condenser. Taking ray A, for example, which is a straight line, it is impossible to pass light through a lens, or condenser without refraction. (Not true, Brother Solar. If a ray is passed directly through the center of a lens it is not refracted. Brother

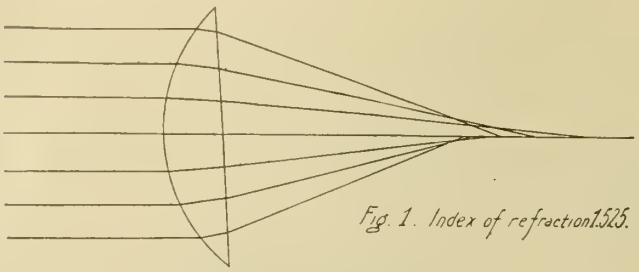


Fig. 1. Index of refraction 1.525.

Smith, however, shows ray A as a straight line, which is wrong. Under the conditions shown ray A would be refracted.—Ed). Brother Griffiths says: "I do not think that imperfections in a conderser, other than those which cause color to be projected to the spot on the aperture, would injure the definition of the picture on the screen. The direct result of imperfectly placed condensers would be a comparatively poor image of the crater at the aperture, and, incidentally an injury to the illumination on the screen, but not necessarily poor definition or focus at the screen." In my opinion, Friend Griffiths is right.

I have made a diagram of a condenser ¼ inch out of square with the principal axis of the combination, and drawn the rays to the index of refraction for crown glass. In observing the figures, we see that the rays of the lower half of the lens are focused nearer the lens than are those of the upper half; also that spherical aberration is nearly corrected in the lower half. This seems strange, but if the laws of refraction are correct, then it must be true. However, in this case, the condition applies only to a small part of the lens. If we start at the extreme lower half of the condenser and swing around in an arc of 90 degrees in either direction, we arrive at a horizontal line through the plane of the condenser. In swinging through this arc, the rays gradually change direction until we arrive at the horizontal line, at which point the direction of the light is the same as if the lens were set square. It is evident from this that light passing through the lens near the horizontal line across the center of the condenser will only be slightly affected, and that in passing through near a perpendicular line through the center it will focus closer to the condenser in the lower half than in the upper half. The result is that in any position we may place the condenser combination with relation to the objective we have unequal angles from the aperture to back of objective. In other words, the diverging beam will be at a greater angle on one side than on the other, consequently there will be loss of illumination.

I do not see there would necessarily be a loss in illumination, Brother Solar. That there would be uneven illumination I grant you, but providing the objective receives the entire light cone there could, I think, be no loss. As to the rays focusing more closely to the lens in the lower half, why, that is but natural, since the angle is made greater by tilting the lens in the direction you have it. If it were tilted the other way the same thing would be true in reverse. I see no reason, however, why spherical aberration should be reduced. As a matter of fact I think it would be greater. However, don't let this fact escape your observation, viz., in tilting the lens you have not in the least altered the angle on the convex side, nor would you alter it if you tilted it still more. The only alteration is on the plano side, where it seems to me the action ought to be precisely the opposite to what you have it, since the upper half presents a greater angle and the lower a less angle than it would were the lens set perpendicular, always assuming that your lines are drawn precisely as per the index of refraction. These things, however, I think, are rather highly technical. Still, they serve a good purpose. It is well to know not only what happens if our condensing lenses are out of square with each other or if the front plane of the front lens be out of square with the aperture of the machine, and we cannot arrive at a complete understanding of such matters unless we also know the why and wherefore of the effect. Understand that I am not disputing your claims, but merely setting the matter forth as it looks it me.

My Comment.

W. C. Evans, Sherman, Texas, whose letter head contains a neat cut of a motiograph projector, and the statement, "Motion Picture Operator since 1906. Member Local 280, I. A. T. S. E." sends in some film faults and says:

Here are a few of many of the bad patches I am compelled to cut out in order to be able to run my program. We are on circuit, receiving service from one of the Dallas, Texas, leading theaters, therefore I don't know whose fault it is, but let us have your comment, anyhow. Am also sending you a few broken carbon tips. Am using 220 D. C. and about 20 or 25 amperes at the arc with ⅝ cored carbon above and ½ inch solid below. Every time I strike an arc I lose my crater, and using another make of carbon, under the same conditions, they do not break off at all. What is your idea of the reason for this?

In closing I wish you many happy hours, and send best regards to yourself and our department.

Why, as to the film faults, you should have sent the name of the theater from which you receive the service, and I would have promptly taken the matter up with same, and had the fault traced. The only comment I can make is that circuit service is almost invariably bad service, and it is a thing that ought not to be allowed at all. It is brought about through the combined cupidity of the theater manager and exchange. Film in bad condition is dangerous, both to the eyesight of the public, and from the fire hazard standpoint, and circuit film is almost always in bad condition before it gets back to the exchange, therefore it seems to me that it would not be at all outside the province of our public employes (officials) to prohibit films being used on circuit, obliging them to be sent back to the exchange for repairs from each theater.

As to the craters breaking off, why it is hard to name the cause. The Henrion (it was a long time ago, but I think that is the way it is spelled) used to do the same thing. They give a very white light, and aside from that single fault were excellent; but I stopped using them on account of that one thing. It is a mighty serious thing to have your crater break off right in its center. I would sugest that you stop using the offending carbons, and notify the importer of your reason for abandoning their use.

Must be Twenty-One Years Old.

Denver, Colorado, has an ordinance which went into effect September 1st, which provides that no license will be granted to an operator under the age of twenty-one. It is estimated that about one-third the Denver operators are under the age limit thus set up, and the question is raised as to whether these minors will or will not be affected. They have been operating, some of them, for a considerable time, but the ordinance apparently fails to take that circumstance into account.

It has long been the opinion of this department that the best interests of the industry, as a whole, would properly be served by refusing to license very young men as moving picture operators. However, we believe that most certainly those men who are, and have been working for some time as operators ought by all means to be exempt from the operation of the ordinance. The city of Denver cannot very well say that it was right, proper and safe to allow them to run a moving picture machine for an extended period, and now say it is not right, proper and safe to license them, particularly in view of the fact that they are now at least somewhat older than when they were permitted to work. This is a hard question, I know. It must be conceded that in this day and age young men are being forced out into the world to earn their own living at tender years, but motion picture operating at its best (and that is the only way we can consider it) calls for a great deal of painstaking care, good judgment and knowledge in several directions—more, I believe, than we can fairly assume very young men to be in possession of.

If a two years' apprenticeship was required, as it ought to be required, a young man could start at nineteen and receive his license when he was twenty-one. However, a two years' apprenticeship presumes a high class workman, and I am afraid such an apprenticeship will never be brought about until such time as the managers themselves have come into a more thorough understanding of the responsibility they owe to the public, and the industry as a whole. It may perhaps be contended that whereas there should be a minimum age limit, still 21 is too high. Well, who shall say where the limit ought to be fixed? I think but few disinterested persons would contend that it ought to be as low as 16 or even 17. I doubt if any large number would contend for 18 or even 19, but perhaps 21 does seem a little stiff. I would like to hear from operators and managers on this point, but operators writing on this point should give their ages.

Jack Knife Set.

B. H. Yeo, Montague, Prince Edwards Island, says:

Am using two rheostats in multiple on 125-cycle current. During the first part of show the light is fair, but toward the last there is a dividing line on the curtain. Set carbons as for D. C., but could not get a brilliant light. Am running on jack knife set. The carbons seem to burn the right shape, but the cone burns ¼ inch up in carbon, which spoils the crater. Can you help me out in the problem?

The only way I can help you out is to advise you to set your carbons as per Fig. 101, page 211 of the Handbook, or as per Fig. 99, page 210, but I don't even advise the Fig. 99 set. The jack knife set gives you a higher c.p. per ampere, but it cannot be depended upon for even illumination. I would suggest that it will pay you better to get a good, low voltage transformer (economizer, inductor, compensarc, etc.) rather than to take alternating current through rheostats, and that you then use 60 amperes with the D. C. carbon set.

State Examination.

A. D. Hotaling, Orlando, Florida, says:

I have been a reader of the world, and a student of the department for four years, though this is my first "offense." The department is certainly a great help to operators who take pride in producing results on the screen. On January 1, 1916, there is to be a state examination for all moving picture operators in Florida. I am sure it will be a great help to all who have applied themselves to the study of their profession.

Yes, provided, always, that the examination is a real one, as let us hope it will in this case be. Glad to know you approve our more or less humble efforts. Will try to continue to deserve your approval in future. Come again when the spirit moves.

Champion Small-Town.

C. Plambeck, Dorchester, Ia., says:

> I enjoy reading the World very much, particularly the projection department. Have your Handbook and have improved projection in my theater from or through pointers or information taken from both the book and department. And now I am in trouble. Have a Power's Six machine with a Power's Six or "Perfect" arc lamp, using 5/8 inch cored carbons above and ½-inch solid below—Electra carbons. I have trouble in keeping a white spot; the circle soon dies down, or diminishes in size, or the spot becomes oval in shape. Have to keep feeding the carbons all the time. Might say I feed them together every three or four minutes anyway. If I do not the spot becomes dim or small in size. Get my current from a 60-volt D. C. plant located in the building which can develop 50 amperes at 80 volts if necessary. Can you give me a clue as to what is wrong? I see you even print items with regard to picture theaters being run in small towns. Have you on record a smaller one than this, which supports a permanent moving picture theater? The population of Dorchester is about 125. I run two shows a week—occasionally three. General Film service, and expect to run features once or twice a month, beginning with this month. Seating capacity 160.

Really, old man, I had to laugh when I read your statement that you had to "feed the carbons every three or four minutes." My dear sir when I was operating I venture the assertion that I fed my carbons oftener than once every sixty seconds. You cannot get good, even illumination and allow the length of your arc to vary much. From what you say I think your main trouble is that you don't feed the carbons often enough. You should stay right there by the machine and feed your carbons often and just a little at the time. It is also quite possible that the voltage varies considerably. In fact I presume that in all human probability voltage fluctuation constitutes a part of your trouble. In order to get continuously good light you must have steady voltage. In a part of your letter you speak of "cutting in and cutting out 15 ohms resistance." Why, if you cut in 15 ohms resistance you would have to have 300 volts pressure in order to get 20 amperes. You evidently have made the mistake of supposing that each contact on your rheostat represents a certain number of ohms, whereas each contact actually represents one or more coils or grids, which would offer a fraction of an ohm resistance. No, I do not know of any town of less than 125 population supporting a theater. I guess you are in a class all by your lonesome in that particular respect.

"Daylight" Screen.

Nat I. Brown, director of sales of the Minusa Cine Products Company, St. Louis, Mo., says:

> Just finished very careful reading of the projection department of Nov. 6 issue. Notice the article on "Daylight" screens, and to show you how strong we are "for" your statements, we enclose herewith one of our catalogs showing our method of advertising "Daylight" screens. There have been more than 15,000 of these catalogs put in circulation among our dealers throughout the United States and Canada. We also have carried similar mention in a number of other advertising booklets. We wish to congratulate you on the stand you have taken on this matter, and to assure you that it meets with our hearty approval.

Now, the editor does not wish to get into a scrap with the screen manufacturers. He simply objects to the use of the term "daylight" in connection with screens, in view of the fact that, when it comes right down to rock bottom, there is, as previously pointed out, no such thing on the market. The term is simply misleading. Somebody started to advertise daylight screens, and at that stage of the game the advertiser was probably honest; he really thought he had that kind of article, but we understand better now, and know there is no such thing as a practical daylight screen, meaning by "practical" a screen which can be used for theatrical performances. We, therefore, object to the use of the misleading word, and are much pleased that the Minusa Company has, in their catalogue, taken the same stand. We trust other screen manufacturers will fall in line.

From Grand Rapids.

John Vander Mate, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes:

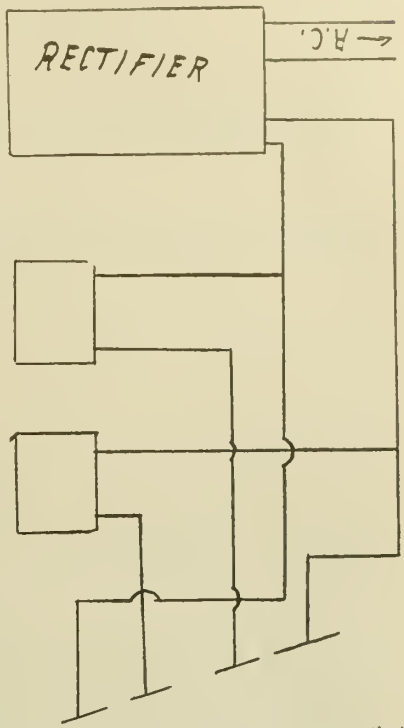
> A word from Grand Rapids to let you know we are still on the map. I am a member of Local 291, I. A. T. S. E., and proud of it. We are 100 per cent. organized, and I believe we may say that projection is good in all the houses, even in the suburbs; however, it is, of course, always subject to improvement. I am the owner of the Handbook and the Hawkins Electrical Guide; also a reader of the department, into which this is my first attempt to break. Hope I am welcome. The new Strand theater, of which I am chief operator, opened Sept. 18, 1915, and has the most modern operating room I have ever worked in, or for that matter have ever seen. It has hot and cold water and everything to make the operator comfortable. In closing I wish you success in every way. Am looking for the new edition of the Handbook.

Well, you won't have to look so very much longer I think. We hope to have it out before Christmas, but——! Anyway I have now turned in all the manuscript and am reading proofs to beat the band—some job. That is the kind of report I like to get from a town. My compliments to the members of 291. Let the good work go on. Certainly you are welcome. The latch-string is always on the outside for our friends—and enemies, too, for that matter.

Has His Burglar Tools.

San Francisco, California writes:

> Have just received my set of burglar's tools, and am going to try to break into the department. Have been a reader of the World for the last five years and have been working in this city since 1908. Find enclosed wiring of my stereopticon. Am using 18 amperes at each lamp (ammeter test), and have cut out all but one grid of each rheostat (Powers). Have been using the lamps for the past eight months, and they work fine.



I see no reason in the world why you should not use a rectifier on two lamps wired the way you have it, because, in effect, you simply connect each lamp to the D. C. side of the rectifier, with one grid of resistance in series therewith, thus, to all intents and purposes splitting the rectifier D. C. output into two separate circuits. The wiring is shown in the drawing. I am glad to hear from San Francisco. I have been deeply disappointed in the attitude of the local there. I had believed it to be composed of high-class, broad gauge men. Well, I'm afraid that view is subject to some modification, though I am very reluctant to accept that conclusion. At any rate I do know positively that at least a considerable proportion of the membership are not traveling via the narrow gauge track.

Lens Diameters.

The recent experiments have brought out the fact that objective lens diameter is an exceedingly important thing, and one to which entirely too little consideration has been given in the past. In the light of present knowledge it is not too much to say that insufficent objective lens diameter is costing the exhibitors of America hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in wasted light, which means in other words, wasted power.

It is not so easy, however, to suggest the best remedy for this condition of affairs. The nearest thing I could see to a solution at the time the light ray experiments were printed, was that the diameter of the lens be one-half its E. F. up to 5 inches E. F. and 2½ inches for all lenses above 5 inches. This, however, it seems to me, while a possible solution, still is likely to breed confusion. In considering this matter, while it might add somewhat to the cost, and while it is possibly for manufacturing reasons impractical, still if it can be done, a really good solution would be to make all motion picture objective lenses with a 2½ inch opening and supply them with an Iris or other diaphragms, by means of which the operator could stop the lens diameter down to fit local conditions.

This would have the advantage that it would allow machine manufacturers to provide for a standard lens mount. I would welcome discussion on this point. It is one of very great importance in which both managers and operators are vitally interested.

It is exceedingly difficult to get lens manufacturers to make any improvement of any kind whatsoever, but if we can decide on what is needed I believe we can get it, therefore let us get our heads together, and between us all I think we can come to the right conclusion, and in the end secure what is needed.

Information Wanted.

Claremore, Oklahoma, issues a requisition for the following information:

> I have two spots at the aperture and, as a result, a ghost on the screen. My condensers are 6½ and 7½, taking current through a Fort Wayne Compensarc-Simplex lamp. Have tried to eliminate the double spot and ghost by moving the condensers back and forth, using lenses of different focal length, but it did no good.

In the first place, Claremont, by all means use at least 40, and preferably 60 amperes. Use two 5/8 inch cored carbons, and set them the same as you would for D. C. (See page 209 of the Handbook); then try giving your lamp a greater angle. This combination should straighten you. The double spot is probably largely due to your lamp not having sufficient angle. You are getting light from both the upper and lower crater, and it is exceedingly difficult to superimpose the two crater images thus formed exactly over, or upon each other. As to your lenses, I would recommend that you match your optical system in accordance with Table No. 1, Oct. 16 issue.

More Static Trouble.

J. F. Reed, Mgr. Connecticut Film Mfg. Co., New Haven, Conn., writes:

> The article in your issue of October 9th headed "Elimination of Static," was read with much interest by the writer, as our camera men use brass handles, but are still troubled with static and I would like to ask George W. Lawrence, through your department, if he uses a metal tripod.
> I always understood that the reason for using a metal handle was to ground the electricity which was generated by a camera while in motion. Our experience has been that we have more static when we use a brass handle than when we were using a wooden handle and pictures were being taken absolutely under the same conditions.
> Our camera men are using Prestwich cameras, and most of our work is done out of doors.
> I am enclosing herewith a piece of negative which shows the particular form of static which we get on our films while using a brass handle, also a piece of negative which shows the static we get when using a wooden handle; both pieces of negative were exposed by the same camera.
> Can any one offer any explaination of the different results obtained by Mr. Lawrence, and ourselves?

Static is without doubt, one of the worst and hardest things that a cameraman has to buck up against. I am going to confess right at the start that I do not know how to avoid it absolutely, although I have tried many of the remedies that have been suggested for its elimination.

The man who can discover or invent a sure-fire method for avoiding static can win a fortune and the undying gratitude of a host of cameramen and manufacturers.

Of course we all know that static is caused by high tension electrical discharges generated by the friction of the moving film against itself or some substance with which it comes in contact. Cold and dryness seem to be favorable conditions for the production of these discharges; for that reason many camera men have devised various means of heating and moistening the air inside their cameras. Some place a sponge cup with a wet sponge inside the camera and various chemicals, like glycerine, alcobol, ether, acetone, tetra-ethyl chloride, amyl acetate, etc., have been recommended for lessening the vapor tension inside the camera. Some cover the pressure plate with felt or other fabric which they keep moistened with water or various chemicals, but while some of these devices have proven useful to a certain extent, none of them have proven specific.

A pad which engages the perforated edges of the film and kept lubricated with three-in-one oil is used with considerable success by one studio.

They claim that the small amount of oil absorbed by the edges of the film is not enough to interfere with the development of the image and that the lubrication of the film reduces the friction which causes static.

In many cases static markings have been made on the film in one way or another before it is placed in the camera. I have seen static in positive film, which is not nearly so sensitive to electrical discharges as negative stock, so bad that it could not be used. Both negative and positive stock are liable to show static markings caused in rewinding or in perforating and, with positive, in printing. It is a very good plan when static troubles are encountered to take off pieces of different rolls, before each operation which might possibly cause static, being sure to mark each piece and the roll from which it comes for easy identification and then develop all the pieces together on the same rack without exposing to the light. In this way the cause can generally be located and, by raising the temperature and humidity in the room where the trouble occurs or taking more time and care in rewinding according to the source of trouble, eliminate it.

Many different ways of heating the camera have been devised. Hot bricks, soapstone foot warmers, hot water bottles, Japanese pocket stoves, alcohol heaters, etc., have been used inside and outside the camera and in the camera case. Resistance coils connected with storage batteries, small battery lamps in light, tight metal cases, hot water coils heated from outside the camera with alcohol, oil, gasoline and prestolite tanks have been used. Padded felt and wooden cases have been made to envelop cameras with only the lens and handle and view finder visible so that the camera might be operated while still wrapped in its snug overcoat.

Some have maintained that static is caused by uneven temperature; that is, that it did not matter how cold or dry it was, that if the camera were of an even temperature in every part that there would be no static. An operator at Saranac Lake in the coldest part of the winter claimed to have gotten away from old static by always leaving his camera and loaded retorts for the next day in an unheated outhouse so that they were thoroughly chilled when he went to work the next day.

Others place their film rolled as loosely as possible in some sort of a humidor to get it moist before using when they have static trouble.

Numerous ways of dissipating the electricity have been tried, such as the metal handle recommended by Brother Lawrence for allowing it to escape to the earth, via the body. Metal tripods, grounding wires and chains from the camera or tripod head to a metal stake stuck in the grounds, static machine collectors, such as metal brushes, amalgam pads, tinseled retort mouths, etc., have all been tried without marked success.

All of the foregoing is by no means indicative that precautions should not be taken to avoid static, on the contrary, every possible reasonable precaution should be taken. Keeping the interior of the camera warm and of a certain degree of humidity will undoubtedly reduce static to a minimum and by using X back or so-called non-static stock, static can be reduced to a very small percentage.

Mr. Reed sends two samples—one taken with a wooden handle and one taken with a brass handle. The one taken with the wooden handle has markings of an irregular character, such as might be caused by cinching or tightening a roll or by rewinding rapidly, still there seems to be a recurrent pattern as near as I can make out from the short strip of four pictures. The one taken with the brass handle is plainly recurrent in every frame, showing that the discharge or spark takes place on the film somewhere in the gate between the loops.

You can therefore probably remedy this form of static by changing your gate fittings. Remove all the cloth fittings and replace with polished metal.

Lens Flare.

A Middle West cameraman is having trouble with his lens.

> I would like to have you advise me through the columns of your well-known publication, in regard to a peculiar flare or haze in motion picture negatives taken with my 50 mm. Carl Zeiss original lens, used on my Williamson Camera. The lens is mounted in the regular Williamson rack and pinion mounting and sets back at least 2½ inches from front of mount, which should give ample sun shade. Please find enclosed piece of negative containing this peculiar defect which should give you a better idea of the trouble. There is nothing in the focusing tube behind the exposure window to cause reflection that I am able to discover, in fact, the proposition has got me guessing. In taking pictures of any object where there is a strong light above them there seems to be a light streak in the dark edge of the building or any other like object.
> I seem to be unable to get the usual amount of depth of focus in my pictures of late; always keep the lens as clean as possible and even when stopped down to the lowest stop with lens racked in as far as possible and lens barrel back as far as it will go in the jacket, I find that in some cases the picture seems to be out of focus on the objects about 100 yards from the camera. My idea of this is the atmospheric conditions present, cause this out of focus effect, but would like to have your reliable suggestions and advise me on this matter.

He sends a sample of film which shows a very bad halation from the high lights of the picture. As his lens is protected from extraneous light by the hood and a Carl Zeiss Tessar—is generally very free from halation of this kind it is evident that there is something on the lens glass which is causing this diffusion. The most likely explanation is that several little drops of oil have been thrown upon the back of the lens by the camera movement and being nearly transparent and invisible have not been noticed. If this is not the cause look for checking or discoloration of the Canada balsam with which the lens cells are cemented together. I think, without doubt, the trouble lies in some almost invisible foreign substance like grease or oil somewhere on the lens glasses.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Edna May to Act for Vitagraph

Former Comic Opera Favorite to Work in One Picture for Benefit of Red Cross.

EDNA MAY, former comic opera favorite of two continents, the wife of a wealthy New Yorker, and one of the most beautiful women in the world, is to appear in motion pictures. She has made a contract with the Vitagraph Company calling for her appearance in a single feature film, for which, according to the statement of the company, she is to receive $100,000.

Financial gain was not the motive that lured Miss May from the privacy of her married life. The entire amount will be turned over to the Red Cross and other worthy charities in which she is interested. Well remembered and loved as "The Belle of New York," at the Casino theater, New York, several years ago, Miss May, since her marriage in June, 1907, has been out of the limelight's glare.

Edna May.

It was due to the efforts of Albert E. Smith, treasurer of the Vitagraph, that she agreed to pose in motion pictures. Both he and Commodore J. Stuart Blackton had met Miss May socially, and her rare type of beauty woke them to an immediate realization of the possibilities of using her in scenes for their company They pleaded along charitable lines, and won out thereby.

"Now that I have promised to appear in the picture," said Miss May yesterday, at her Fifth avenue residence, "I am anxious to begin. Of course, the Vitagraph Company has already photographed me in some tests, and Mr. Smith assures me that I come up to his most optimistic expectations. I want to feel that the results will be well worth while, especially since I am to act in but one picture."

Mr. Smith is equally enthusiastic over the test film that has been taken and is certain the Edna May film will be a photoplay classic. The subject in which she is to appear has not yet been announced.

Few actresses reached the heights of popularity, both in America and abroad, that Miss May attained as Violet Gray in the comic opera, "The Belle of New York." Following "The Belle of New York," she starred in "The Casino Girl," "An American Beauty," "The School Girl," "The Catch of the Season" and other operatic successes both here and in London. In January, 1907, Miss May created the title role in a new comic opera, "Nellie Neil," at the Aldwych theater, London, and won new honors.

Miss May was born in Syracuse, N. Y., and at the age of seven appeared in a production of "Pinafore" in that city. Her first appearance in New York was as Clairette in that operetta, "Santa Maria," then showing at Hammerstein's. She played in Hoyt's "A Contented Woman" for a season and was then selected by Lederer for "The Belle of New York."

KLEINE FINISHES MAX MARCIN'S STORY.

"The Law of Blood," Max Marcin's story, written as a starring vehicle for Miss Alma Hanlon, was given its finishing touches at the Kleine studios last week. Scenario authorities claim "The Law of Blood" an extremely able dramatic offering, charged with many situations of great power. In it Miss Hanlon has been given numerous opportunities and has risen to the occasion splendidly. She will be seen in three distinct roles in "The Law of Blood"—a youthful mother, a child of fourteen and a young woman of twenty-two, parts which her own youth permits her to portray convincingly.

Arthur Hoops, who won many plaudits as the result of his work in "The Danger Signal," is co-star with Miss Hanlon in "The Law of Blood." The subject is scheduled for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

Roland E. Blaisdell Marries

Treasurer and Part Owner of the Queen City Film Corporation of Buffalo Takes a Wife, Gertrude J. Stokes, of Hamburg, N. Y.

THE Moving Picture World has received an announcement in the mail that reads like this: "Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stokes announce the marriage of their daughter, Gertrude J., to Mr. Roland E. Blaisdell on Wednesday, November the twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and fifteen, Hamburg."

Mr. Blaisdell is well known in film circles in both New York City and Buffalo. He is a member of the New York Screen Club and has recently gone into the Queen City Film Corporation as partner in the business and treasurer. He is a well liked young man and a son of George Blaisdell of the Moving Picture World staff. We all extend to Roland and his bride the best wishes and much happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Blaisdell spent their honeymoon in New York City.

METRO BOOSTERS EAT AGAIN.

The Metro Boosters' Club released another weekly food feature at Healy's gustable projecting room Tuesday night, November 23, in which thirty-five of the liveliest members of the Metro family appeared. The principal interior set used was the Jungle Room, where a practical grill was operated by emotional chefs and waiters, who dispensed real beefsteak and other things. Richard A. Rowland and Joseph Engel were the directors of the gripping feature production, which teemed with action, and ran for five hours straight, without a cold screen.

Mr. Engel furnished the copy of the spoken inserts and captions, introducing the principals as they appeared. With a shout of "Lights!" from Mr. Engel, B. A. Rolfe flashed his ump-teenth carat diamond ring, and the battery of cameras started to click. If any criticism could be made at all, the story of the food feature did not contain suspense. But what it lacked in suspense it more than offset with continuity and thrilling moments. Every member of the all star Metro cast was provided with an adequate role and met the occasion with the proper tempo.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE LIBERTY.

Even with extra morning matinees, "The Birth of a Nation" was unable to take care of the belated patrons anxious to see D. W. Griffith's great spectacle at the Liberty theater the past week. Owing to this unusual demand and the piling up of thousands of mail orders from out-of-town patrons, the engagement of this record-breaking attraction has been extended for a limited period. The run will be maintained at the Liberty with matinees daily, the same as heretofore. The management had hoped to terminate the run on Saturday, but when it was found that the house was practically sold out for every performance the latter half of the week and numerous patrons were unable to make reservations, hurried arrangements were made with Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger to remain in the Liberty theater for an indefinite period.

CALL FOR BALTIMORE MEETING.

The Exhibitors' League of Maryland will on November 30 hold their first big meeting of the fall season at the Hotel Raleigh in Baltimore. Our National President, Fred J. Herrington, will address this meeting, and we have invited all the exchange and accessory men together with the exhibitors from all over the State of Maryland. A liberal luncheon will be served, and it is also arranged for several good entertaining vaudeville acts.

The object of this meeting might be termed a general "Get-Together Meeting" in which both the exhibitors and exchange men will discuss in general the conditions existing throughout the entire State.

Vice-Pres. M. P. E. L. of A.

MUTUAL TOOK ARMY-NAVY GAME.

Exclusive motion pictures of the great Army-Navy annual gridiron contest, played at the Polo Grounds, N. Y., on Saturday, November 27, taken under the auspices of the Mutual Film Corporation, will be released to the public December 9 in the regular Mutual program.

Chicago News Letter

Graft Charges in Chicago

Latest Troubles of "The Birth of a Nation" Involved in an Alleged Offer to Dispose of the Minor Embargo for $6,000.

THE Chicago City Hall has been fairly sizzling during the past week over the charge that a demand for $6,000 was made by a "fixer" on the managers of "The Birth of a Nation," for which in return the city officials, who were opposing in the courts the Epoch Producing Corporation's efforts to secure permission to show the pictures to minors, would be called off.

George Bowles, Chicago manager of "The Birth of a Nation," at the Colonial, was first approached in the office of the theater and declined to pay the money, though the "fixer" stated that if the money was not paid the show would probably be closed. Manager Bowles then notified J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Epoch Producing Corporation in New York City, who came on to sift the matter. Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Bowles had a meeting with the same "fixer" at the Hotel Sherman, where the demand was renewed and again refused.

Mr. McCarthy has declared the "fixer" stated that "no money need be paid until the job was done," and Mr. Bowles has given out that the "fixer" was willing to arrange it so that the amount could be paid in installments, if there was any objection to having the lump sum appear in one item on the books at the Colonial office. Mr. Bowles has also stated that the "fixer" who approached him was not a city official, and that he has no proof that the "fixer" had the power to do what he said he could do.

Messrs. McCarthy and Bowles have made a careful record of every conversation with the "fixer" on the subject, and have sworn to their accuracy before a notary public and have also the depositions of witnesses.

The preceding paragraphs touch on only one attempted holdup. The sequel reveals what appears to be a plot to force the Epoch Producing Corporation to sell the state rights of "The Birth of a Nation" for the states of Illinois, Indiana and Iowa at a ridiculously low figure. A representative of the group in charge of this scheme, it is said, informed Messrs. McCarthy and Bowles to this effect: "You can't do business in Chicago, but we can, and will, take the Chicago rights off your hands." The representative continued details regarding his offer, and when he was given a flat refusal by the Epoch Producing Corporation's managers made the threat: "Well, you fellows can't get by in Chicago. We could fix up things with the administration, but you can't. You'd better sell out or they will close your doors."

The representative of this alleged group or syndicate informed Messrs. McCarthy and Bowles that its members included a prominent state politician, a purchasing agent of a large Chicago company and a business man well known in Chicago theatrical circles. It later developed that the names of Governor Dunne, George H. Baird, purchasing agent of the Pullman Company, and A. M. Gollos, president of the Photoplay Releasing Company, were mentioned in the rumors that spread over the city.

On being advised of the rumor, Governor Dunne replied emphatically: "I have had not one single thing to do with it, directly or indirectly. I never heard of the plan. It never was put up to me or hinted at to me. I do not know Mr. Baird, that I now recall, or the other gentlemen you name."

George H. Baird, being asked what he had to do with the proposition, said:

"Sometime ago, in the summer it was, Mr. Gollos came to me with a business proposition regarding the film. He said he would suggest that we buy the state rights in Illinois and nearby states, saying he thought he could get this for about $40,000. His idea was that if we couldn't get this we could get it on a percentage basis through the company of which he is head. He wanted particularly, he told me, to get the booking privileges.

"I did not have the money to put into the scheme, and told him so. That was the end of the matter so far as I was concerned. I regarded it as a good business venture, because the film was attracting large houses.

"Nothing was said about meeting trouble in the courts. In fact, I had read about the injunction matter and, seeing that the show ran right along, assumed, of course, the troubles had ended. Mr. Gollos, so far as I know, had nothing to do with any attempt to satisfy any courts; at least, no such suggestion ever was made to me."

In connection with Mr. Baird's statement Lou M. Houseman, well known as sporting editor of the old Inter-Ocean, also in theatrical and business circles in this city, and also at one time associated with A. M. Gollos in the "Sarah Bernhardt at Home" films, stated:

"Mr. Baird is correct. He knew nothing of the deal from other than a perfectly legitimate angle. He thought that the rights for the picture were for sale as to certain states.

"He did not know that Manager McCarthy of the Epoch company had told George Bowles and me he would rather take the reels into the middle of a ten-acre lot and touch a match to them than to sell them to Gollos under the pressure which Gollos claimed to be able to exert."

Replying to the rumor connecting him with the attempted state rights deal, A. M. Gollos said that he knew nothing about the plan and never spoke to anyone in Chicago about it, the latter part of his statement conflicting with that made by Mr. Baird.

In answer to the Houseman statement Mr. Gollos replied:

"Within three days after "The Birth of a Nation" had its inception at the Illinois theater I was approached by Lou Houseman and told that I could 'purchase the state rights for $75,000.' This was the first intimation I had had that the film was for sale and the first time that I had heard any price named. I was well aware that the picture would be a money-maker, but both I and my partner, whose name I do not care to disclose at this time, felt that the price mentioned was too high.

"A short time afterward I met J. J. McCarthy, the New York manager for the Epoch Film Company, at the Illinois theater, and he said that the film could be had for $75,000. I still paid little attention to the matter, but following a conference with my partner we decided to make a bid for the picture, and set the figure that we were willing to pay at $60,000. Of this amount, $45,000 was to be for the Illinois rights, including the city of Chicago, after the picture completed its run at the Colonial theater. The balance of $15,000 was our offer for the rights in the state of Iowa."

Mr. Gollos afterwards went to New York twice to try and arrange with H. E. Aitken, president of the Epoch Producing Corporation, for the purchase of the rights to Illinois and Iowa, but failed, Mr. Aitken asserting that he had nothing to sell.

J. J. McCarthy in an interview given in New York City said concerning the Houseman and Gollos controversy:

"I have made half a dozen trips to Chicago during the last six months and I have talked with a number of men regarding letting the rights for "The Birth of a Nation" film.

"I believe Mr. Houseman and myself talked over the matter. However, I do not remember the details of our conversation. As I stated, so many discussions were under way that I cannot recall all of them.

"I do not remember the specific $40,000 mentioned. I do not believe they are the figures entering into my conversation with Mr. Houseman. I cannot remember the dates of my conversations with Mr. Houseman, nor can I remember any further details offhand.

"I do not believe the name of A. M. Gollos entered into the conversation. I do not know Mr. Gollos, nor have I heard of him as far as I can remember before today."

The last paragraph flatly contradicts the Houseman statement regarding Mr. McCarthy's reference to Mr. Gollos. The latter has prepared a suit against Mr. Houseman for the recovery of money alleged to have been lost by him through his connection with Houseman in the Sarah Bernhardt films.

State's Attorney Hoyne has announced that he is ready to go ahead with an investigation, as soon as evidence is given him of any attempted holdup or graft in this matter.

Richard S. Folsom, who was the Corporation Counsel who directed the city's contest against the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" states that he does not know either Mr. McCarthy or Mr. Bowles, and that no one has ever come to see him, either in their behalf or to ask for a halting of the suits. "At no time did any 'fixer' come to me, and if my name or that of anyone in my office was used it was without my knowledge. The case is still in the courts and is being fought just as bitterly as in the start."

Manager Bowles has directed attention to the excessive requests for free tickets to "The Birth of a Nation" by politicians and City Hall officials.

"We must have given away to politicians and their friends more than $20,000 worth of tickets," says Mr. Bowles. "Major Funkhouser is the only one in the City Hall asking for seats who paid for them. I still have scores of letters in my files which show how we had to take care of city officials."

"The Girl and the Game" Serial.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, arrived in the city Saturday, November 20, making a short stay at Salt Lake City on the way.

He announced that the new serial, "The Girl and the Game," in which Helen Holmes will be featured, will shortly be launched by the Signal Film Corporation and released through the Mutual Film Corporation. James P. McGowan has been appointed director, and the production will be made in Los Angeles. Frank Hamilton Spearman is the author of the story. He is well known as a writer of railroad stories, and as "The Girl and the Game" will abound in thrilling scenes on the rail Mr. Spearman is particularly fitted to invest them with a realism and atmosphere that will appeal to the spectator, be he trained railroad man or ordinary citizen.

Mr. Spearman will write his story of the serial for newspaper publicity, after being present during the production of the various scenes and incidents. By this means the newspaper story and the story told in the pictures will harmonize, thus preventing confusion in the minds of those who read the written story and afterwards view the pictures.

The plan adopted in the production of "The Diamond from the Sky" will be followed in the matter of the number of reels in each release, and in the use of the word "Chapter" instead of "Part" for each release. There will be fifteen chapters in the serial and each chapter will contain two reels.

The first release will be made on Monday, December 27, and the first chapter of the written story will appear in the Chicago Herald, the Chicago Evening Journal and the Chicago Evening Post in due time for Chicago patrons to familiarize themselves with the characters and the opening events.

Mr. Hutchinson left for New York Tuesday evening, November 23, and on his return will remain in Chicago for the Christmas and New Year holidays.

Big Success of the Theatrical Hospital Benefit Association's Ball.

The Theatrical Hospital Benefit Association's ball at the Second Regiment Armory, Saturday night, November 20, developed pretty much into a moving picture affair, inasmuch as the chief attractions of the evening were Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, of the Metro program.

One of the leading spirits of the ball was Alfred Hamburger, head of the Alfred Hamburger Enterprises, and the chief attractions were furnished by Arthur H. Spiegel, M. H. Spiegel and S. J. Spiegel, of the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation, who also put up a beautiful silver loving cup for the best dancers of the evening, which, by the way, went to Mr. Barber King and Miss Mildred Brown. Frank Powell, director of the Equitable, presented the cup.

Mr. Spiegel also was responsible for issuing a publication which appeared about midnight, giving a complete report of the ball. The name of this publication was the "Equitable World" and it gave full information about the ball, its reasons, effect and success. The publication made a big hit when it appeared.

The only real spirited bidding on the doll which was auctioned for charity was between M. J. Spiegel of the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation and Mr. Bushman, the former bidding it in at $130.

The Equitable and World Film booth was one of the centers of attraction, because of the fact that registrations were accepted for entrance into the contest, by means of which the World Film Corporation will select several girls from various parts of the country to appear in moving pictures, and to become stars if they have sufficient ability.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Walter W. Evans, Jr., traveling representative of the Precision Machine Company (Simplex), came into the city Saturday, November 20, after a long trip through the Middle West and as far south as Oklahoma City. Mr. Evans visited, in order, during this trip, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Colorado Springs, Denver, Omaha and Kansas City. He reported that conditions in the supply line were very good, and especially so in Pittsburgh, Kansas City, St. Louis and Denver. The exhibitors in these cities also were showing to fine business. In Kansas City and Denver, exhibitors were using features chiefly. The exhibitors in the latter city have finally broken away from the five-cent admission, which is now charged for matinees, ten cents being the charge at night, for programs of from five to six reels. Mr. Evans informed me that Oklahoma City is booming just now, not only in moving picture circles, but in all-around business. McCall and Robertson, of Cushing, Okla., are building a new picture theater in Oklahoma City at a cost of $80,000. This will be the largest house on the chain of moving picture theaters owned by these gentlemen. They expect to have the new house ready for opening about the middle of February. Mr. Robertson is president of the Farmers' Bank at Cushing and is well known throughout the state as an able financier and business man. The admission prices in the state of Oklahoma in moving picture theaters, generally, is ten cents. Mr. Evans will make Chicago his business headquarters after January 1, 1916, and will travel from it as a center.

Frank L. Hough, manager of the Kleine Optical Company, Chicago, visited St. Louis Friday, November 19. He was invited to the Rothapfel banquet given that evening at Lipp's restaurant. A large and enthusiastic gathering of exhibitors, exchangemen and film representatives was present.

Watterson R. Rothacker, general manager of the Industrial Moving Picture Company, this city, has given me the pleasant news that at the termination of the company's fiscal year just ended a special forty per cent. cash dividend was declared. This was in addition to the one per cent. dividend which was declared regularly every month throughout the year. The figures require no comment, and hearty congratulations are extended the able general manager of this growing concern.

Harold P. Brown, director of the Northwest Weekly Service, Minneapolis, writes me that the recent accident at the Wisconsin-Minnesota football game at Madison, Wis., happened squarely before the lens of Cameraman Fred C. Place, who had the good fortune at the time to be grinding on a line plunge of Pudge Wyman of the Gopher team. Fully fifteen hundred people were banked up in a cheering mass on the bleachers when Wyman hurled himself into the midst of the clashing grid warriors. At the tensest moment the background of human faces suddenly broke at the left, with a V-shaped opening against the sky. The V widened. The right arm quickly stretched out and settled down, leveling the mass of humanity to the ground, while the left arm crumpled back for a short distance. William A. Lochren, president of the Weekly, was near the cameraman at the time of the accident and has written the titles so that the spectator is given the full dramatic effect of the scene. Cameraman Place was so close to the bleachers that he found it necessary to panorama in order to follow the progress of the sinking bleachers.

Chicago has been all agog for several weeks past over the escapades of old Captain George Wellington Streeter, a squatter for many years past on new made ground near Lake Michigan, which was formerly a tract of shifting sand. Captain Streeter claims that, owing to his squatter rights, his property is outside the jurisdiction of Chicago and of the state of Illinois and that he is answerable only to the federal authorities for his action. When Chicago saloons were recently ordered closed on Sundays, Captain Streeter ignored the order, and persisted in dealing out intoxicating beverages to the hundreds that gathered at the Streeterville home. One Sunday, recently, the Chicago police made an exciting raid on the Streeter premises, and the Captain and his wife and other trustics tried to hold them up with shotguns, rifles and other weapons, the result being that the Captain and his force were badly man-handled. Moving pictures of the raid were taken by a cameraman of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, and appear in No. 93 of that series.

I. Van Ronkle, manager of the Chicago office of the V-L-S-E, Inc., tells me that his office force and he himself had a very pleasant surprise one day last week. Everyone in the office, from the janitor up to the manager, received a check made out in his or her own name from the New York main office of the company. These checks totaled $1,500 and represented the employees' share of the profits made by the company for the thirteen weeks past. The lowest check was for $30 and the amount ranged well up in the hundreds, as the position of the recipient grew more important. Mr. Van Ronkle states that he never saw a more delighted crowd in his life, and that everyone in the office immediately deposited his or her check in a bank. Needless to state, everyone in the office has been made more enthusiastic in their duties, and that no one is permitted to say a word against V-L-S-E in their presence.

Highland Park, a small suburb of Chicago, not within the city limits, has decided on having an "inexpensive" censor of moving pictures. An ordinance has been drawn up providing for a censorship board, with one member, and submitted to the commissioners. The cause of this censorship fuss was a petition from the Ossili Club, filed by Mrs. W. J. Fyffe. This lady acknowledges that she never goes to see moving pictures but that she had heard that some objectionable pictures had been shown. She also acknowledged that she did not know what the objectionable pictures were. This incident clearly shows how "intelligent" the craze for censorship of pictures is in some localities.

"The Battle Cry of Peace," after a successful run of six weeks, was withdrawn from the Olympic Saturday night, November 27. It will be succeeded by "The Warring Millions," a German war propaganda subject, made by the American Correspondent Film Company. Real battles and real war scenes are shown in these pictures, it is announced.

The New Strand theater, this city, has installed a $20,000 pipe organ. This addition to the instrumental force of the Strand's symphony orchestra will contribute strongly to the musical accompaniment of the pictures. The management announces that "filmharmonic" concerts will henceforth be given at this house. H. B. Pearce, the organist of the Strand Company at Orchestra Hall during the recent summer season, will fill the same position at the New Strand. Mr. Pearce is a talented interpreter of moving pictures with organ music, and his appointment at the New Strand will be hailed with pleasure by its numerous patrons.

"Damaged Goods" broke all records at the La Salle theater last week; but it has been decided to withdraw it after Saturday night, November 27. It will be succeeded by a program of Fox features. The first will be "The Galley Slave," in which Theda Bara is featured.

The Tribune's staff in the editorial and composing rooms played star parts in "The Power of Publicity," several days last week. This film subject was chosen as winner in a recent prize newspaper contest, and is being produced by Essanay.

The Rev. Dr. W. T. McElveen, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Evanston, Ill., was unable to show his moving picture program on Sunday evening, November 21, as intended. When asked to explain, the Rev. gentleman replied, "We simply were not ready." It has transpired that the real cause was due to the fact that the moving pictures on the program had not been inspected by the Evanston censor board, and the law requires that all films shown in Evanston must be inspected by the board. The Rev. gentleman evidently prided himself on the fact that his judgment was above both the law and the censors.

Miss Maud Gale, who plays the piano accompaniment to the pictures in the Gayety theater, South Chicago, prevented a panic in that house one night last week, when smoke from a basement ash barrel in the theater filled the auditorium. Following the rule in such cases, Miss Gale played the "Star Spangled Banner," while the manager calmly cautioned the spectators to leave in order. No one was hurt.

Sirignano's Banda Roma, well known in the principal cities of the country as a talented musical organization, has been engaged by Alfred Hamburger to interpret the pictures at his Ziegfeld theater. The patrons of the Ziegfeld have complimented the management on this new acquisition.

Essanay's fine six-reel production of "The Raven" was the big screen attraction at Alfred Hamburger's Ziegfeld theater this week. The initial presentation was given Saturday afternoon, November 27.

On Monday, November 29, the management of the Studebaker was again taken over by Jones, Linick & Schaefer. Triangle programs will be offered, though much shorter than under the former regime. The price, as has already been announced, will be 15 cents for matinees and 25 cents for evenings.

The Chicago November Grand Jury will take up the series of outrages perpetrated for some time past in moving picture theaters, by means of "stink" bombs, in its investigation of labor troubles in the city. This phase of the inquisition will involve the Chicago Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local No. 110, I. A. T. S. E. Indictments for malicious mischief will be laid in cases where there is sufficient evidence.

Thomas Persons, superintendent of the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, was in the city a few days last week, conferring with President William N. Selig, of the Selig Polyscope Company, on business matters. Mr. Parsons, when seen, spoke enthusiastically of the photoplays now in course of production at the Selig studios on the Coast. "I have been in the film business for many years," said Mr. Persons, "but I want to say that certain films now in course of production at our western studios are among the best I have ever seen, in point of story, acting and photography.

My friend, J. A. Maddox, manager of the Majestic theater, Columbus, O., has just forwarded a copy of the "Majestic Monthly," which is issued by the Majestic management. This monthly is really a booklet of twenty-four pages, and Mr. Maddox states that it is read by 75,000 people in central Ohio. The reading matter is varied, and, in addition to valuable information about photoplays and players, has many news items that are valuable to the trade. There are also articles by some producers, and a query page devoted to correspondence. The typographical appearance is enhanced by neat half-tone illustrations.

JAMES P. COGAN, PREMIER SCENARIO EDITOR.

James P. Cogan, who is now associated with the Premier program in the capacity of scenario editor, has had a vast experience in the motion picture business. Starting as an exhibitor and exchange man many years ago, he found that his previous newspaper and magazine experience particularly fitted him for scenario work. He therefore took up this class of work with the Biograph Company, working with Griffith and Sennett. For three years he did the editorial work at the Edison studio, and later with both the Reliance and Majestic companies at their studios in West Twenty-first street.

Few men are better equipped for the exacting work of scenario editing than James P. Cogan. His early experiences as a newspaper man, his intimate knowledge of the motion picture industry and his broad outlook on life particularly fit him for this class of work.

The policy of the Premier program will be to produce one five-reel feature weekly, each picture being adapted from some famous play or novel. To this class of work Cogan brings an eye for the dramatic—a knowledge of what the exhibitors require—and that indefinable touch of human nature which makes an artist of a craftsman.

MALCOLM DUNCAN WITH GEORGE KLEINE.

Malcolm Duncan, Harrison Grey Fiske's versatile leading man, is a welcome addition to the list of stage and film stars now engaged at the Kleine studios. Mr. Duncan was engaged last week to play the leading juvenile role in "Wild Oats," a feature now in process of filming. Duncan has been given an exceptionally competent support, in the persons of Alma Hanlon, Ruby Hoffman, Frank Belcher, William Anker and Herbert Hayes. Aside from his long and successful stage experience, Mr. Duncan has frequently been seen in film, notably in George Kleine's "The Money Master" and "The Spendthrift" with Irene Fenwick.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. VON HARLEMAN and CLARKE IRVINE

MAYOR SEBASTIAN APPOINTS NEW CASINO BOARD.

Judge Tugwell to Have Hearing—Quinn on Warpath Runs "Damaged Goods to Such Crowds That He Is Arrested for Blocking the Sidewalks.

MAYOR CHARLES E. SEBASTIAN of Los Angeles has named five persons to act upon the new censor board, to take the place of the last one which was demolished so sensationally two weeks ago. The list which was sent to the Council contains the names of Austin C. Shafer, Neal P. Olsen, Clarence Ferguson, Mrs. E. E. Sherrard and Mrs. Grace Mellus Thomas, all of whom are prominent persons who should, if put in full control, act wisely in censoring pictures here. Mr. Shafer is a former member of the city council and prominent in Grand Army circles; Mr. Olsen is secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association; Mr. Ferguson is connected with the Los Angeles Saddlery Company, and Mrs. Sherrard and Mrs. Thomas are active in women's club work.

As yet Judge A. P. Tugwell, former president of the local board, has not had his public hearing, but that event should occur this week. He is ready to meet the council committee and tell his side of the story, which caused the wrecking of the old board.

For the present, and since the board went on the rocks, there has been no censoring of pictures in this city and it seems that no one has made any kick of any official about the manner in which the theaters have been run. J. A. Quinn of the theater bearing his name has started on the second week's free run of "Damaged Goods." He is running to such packed houses that at one time he was arrested on a charge of blocking traffic, but the judge only cautioned him to be more careful in the future.

In the meantime Mr. Quinn is pressing his fight against permanently organizing the board of censors. Already he has signed the majority of film manufacturers on the petition which requests the council to establish the office of film commissioner for one man. His duties will be to see that the orders of the national board are carried out, and it looks as if he would succeed in completely abolishing the censor board here.

DEATH OF LESLIE REED.

Flying "A" Actor Killed While Working in the Pictures at Santa Barbara.

From Santa Barbara comes the sad news that Leslie Reed, a young actor playing leads with the American Film Mfg. Company, met an untimely death at Chalk Rock on the Santa Ynez River where he jumped from a stage coach, his hands tied behind him, over the face of a cliff in the river. In making the leap the unfortunate man tripped and instead of landing in the water struck his head on the rocks. The leap from the stage coach was a scene in an American feature called "The Ride for Life," and filmed by Director James Douglas. The director had pleaded with Reed not to make the jump himself, but have a man trained to perform such feats "double" it for him. Reed scoffed at the suggestion and made his leap—to death. When the body struck the rocks Douglas unmindful of his own danger, leaped over the chalk cliff—40 feet high—into the river. As Douglas grasped the floating body in his arms Reed opened his eyes for a fraction of a second, met the eyes of the director and essayed a smile of triumph that he had made the leap so realistic. The smile flickered and faded; there was a quiver and Reed was no more.

The death of Reed has thrown a pall of gloom over Southern California filmdom. Although a newcomer in the ranks of picture actors, he had, in a few short months, won for himself an enviable place among his associates as well as with the public.

The young photoplayer was but twenty-six years of age, and the day before he died was his birthday. He was born in England and had only been over here a comparatively short time. When the war broke out Reed was in British Columbia. He wanted to return home and enlist, but his mother wrote and implored him not to go, as his two brothers had already joined the colors, and to lose them all would break her heart. Soon after she read in the war bulletins of her eldest son's death in the battlefields of Flanders, and the shock killed her so she was thus spared the grief of mourning the loss of Leslie.

The funeral services are to be held at 10 o'clock Monday, the 22nd, at the German Lutheran Church of Santa Barbara, and will be attended by the several hundred employees of the American Film Mfg. Co.

PARAMOUNT GIRL ENTERTAINED IN FRESNO.

Anita King Presented by the Mayor with the Keys to the City—Also Much Feted in Other Cities.

Anita King, the popular Paramount girl, who recently returned to the Lasky studios from her trans-continental motor trip, was invited last week to Fresno as the guest of Oliver Kehrlein, the proprietor of the Kinema theater. When the citizens of that city and the neighboring towns heard that Miss King would make the trip they planned a welcome for the popular screen star. The Lasky girl was met at Selma, a small town near Fresno, by the Mayor, and invited to address the pupils of the city schools. In Fresno she was welcomed by Mayor Alva Snow and the principal citizens. She dedicated the arch to the entrance to the city and was presented with the key to the city of Fresno by the Mayor and the city officials, after which ceremony she spoke to the pupils of the normal school of the Fresno High School.

In Oakland, the Chamber of Commerce invited Miss King to speak at their weekly luncheon to some 350 business men on the progress of motion pictures, and to lay the corner stone for the new Turner & Dahnken theater.

In response to an urgent call from Sacramento she paid a visit there and then went to San Jose where she addressed the Chamber of Commerce. While in San Jose the manager of the Turner & Dahnken theater in Berkeley telegraphed that the people of his city and six thousand students of the University of California were desirous of meeting a young lady who had the strength, courage and determination to motor alone across the continent. Miss King addressed the students at the big university and was about to journey elsewhere when the Lasky studio fearing that she might become exhausted from her strenuous tour, ordered her home again.

SELIG SIMIAN SCARES SCHOOL TEACHER.

Creates Excitement Among the Populace When Taking a Stroll from the Zoo.

A well dressed and very gentlemanly monkey, a member of the Sacred Simian family of India, escaped from the Selig Zoo one day this week, and for a time caused quite a sensation among the residents of Garvanza and Highland Park. Incidentally the Simian gentleman ventured into the gymnasium of the Lincoln High School, and frightened Miss Elizabeth Worthen, the instructor there.

Fortunately there was no class in action, or hysterical rioting might have resulted. As it was Miss Worthen alone suffered from the shock. Rushing to the building she frantically called up every zoo in the city. Selig zoo reported one monkey absent, and when told the missing Simian was seen immediately dispatched seven men to the spot. When they arrived he was gone. Tales from frightened natives about a monstrous ape roving around the streets finally trailed the fugitive and brought on his capture.

The monkey came to the Selig zoo a month ago in company with another monkey of the same sort from India. They are said to be the only specimens now in the United States.

LUBIN PLAYERS ARRIVE.

Director Arthur D. Hotaling to Produce Comedies Here with Mae Hotely as Star.

Arthur D. Hotaling, the well known director who for the past four years has taken Lubin pictures during the winter season in Florida, arrived in Los Angeles Tuesday last week. He was accompanied by his wife known on the screen as Mae Hotely, and their daughter, Leola May. Director Hotaling will produce comedy pictures here with Mae Hotely as leading lady and establish another studio for the Lubin company on the coast.

When interviewed Mr. Hotaling stated that he was looking for a suitable location and that the site of the proposed studio was not yet decided upon.

SELIG PLAYERS ARRIVE FROM CHICAGO.

T. N. Heffron, Grace Darmond and James Bradbury were also new arrivals to the Los Angeles photoplay colony during the week past. Mr. Heffron has been producing at the big Chicago plant for some time and Miss Darmond and Mr. Bradbury are well known screen players. They will take part in some of the pretentious Jungle pictures now being produced at the Selig zoo.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Rehearsals have been started this week at Griffith's studios on a new play for De Wolf Hopper. We are informed that it is a high-class modern comedy containing many laugh-causing situations. The scenario is written by Tod Browning and Chester Withey, the latter who prepared the screen adaptation of "Don Quixote."

Fay Tincher, who played "Dulcinea," the beloved of Cervantes' hero, will play lead opposite Mr. Hopper. Edward Dillon who staged "Don Quixote" will produce this second play.

Norma Talmadge, the Griffith player, has leased Anna Pavlowa's house in Hollywood. The exterior of the bungalow is of early Spanish architecture, and the interior, due to its simplicity and artistic arrangement of furniture and wall hangings, is wonderfully attractive.

Miss Talmadge, with her mother and sister, Constance Talmadge, also of the Fine Arts studio, occupy this bungalow, which is located within walking distance from the Fine Arts-Triangle studio.

They had a picture day last week in Tijuana, the little Mexican town across the border. Hundreds of San Diegans and visiting tourists journeyed across the line to take in the sights. Prominent among the visitors was Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and members of the delegation who were in San Diego with the Liberty Bell. Moving pictures of the Mexican fair were taken by a Hearst-Selig cameraman. Many features were staged for the camera, including bull fights, cock fights, races, etc.

Preparations will be started this week for the New Year's Eve Moving Picture Carnival, which the Southern Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association plans to give at the Shrine Auditorium on the night of December 31st. The following committee has been appointed to handle the affair: S. MacIntyre, J. S. Lustiz, A. P. Tugwell, Jack Root, M. Gore, W. H. Cornfeldt and Seth D. Perkins.

Attractive young women willing to invest $25 to satisfy their ambitions to act in the silent drama complained in Police Court this week against the operations of Charles Steavens, alleged proprietor of a labor bureau, No. 740 South San Pedro street.

One young woman stated that Steavens had told her he would secure work for her in one of the major motion picture studios upon payment of $25. She was suited for the work, according to his opinion, she said, and he thought he would have no trouble in getting her a position that would return her a lucrative salary. .

She said she waited and waited, and still waited, and no word of the fulfillment of her ambitions arrived.

Two other women testified that Steavens took their money and secured no employment for them. Steavens was fined $20.

Wilfred Lucas, who plays leads with Marie Doro in "The Wood Nymph" will be featured in "Acquitted," a film version from the story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, adapted for the screen by Roy Sommerville.

The cast includes Sam deGrasse, Mary Alden, Bessie Love and Elmer Clifton. Paul Powell who produced "The Lily and the Rose" will direct this production.

A 200-foot brick smoke stack was blown up with dynamite one day this week as part of a thrilling scene in a Triangle-Keystone play.

A million bricks were volleyed into the skies when the powerful charge of explosive was touched off.

The Keystone Film Company purchased the gigantic chimney and adjacent kiln buildings last spring, but not until now has there been an opportunity to use them in a picture.

The Keystone Film Company has filed its answer in the Superior Court to Eddie Foy's suit for one week's salary of $2,000 and transportation for himself, wife and seven children back to New York.

Foy's suit was filed several weeks ago. He declared he had been discharged in violation of a contract. The Keystone Company in its response admits that Foy was discharged, but asserts he broke the contract by refusing to appear in at least four plays.

Mr. Foy alleged in his complaint that the stunts were too realistic. He objected to walk in Limberger cheese, have a custard pie thrown in his face, and have a cold stream of water from a big hose played on him when attired in a nightgown.

William Jerome, the song writer, called at the World offices this week for a friendly chat. Mr. Jerome has spent several weeks on the Coast writing musical scores for Triangle-Keystone productions. He is now about to return East after a brief visit to San Francisco, and the big fair. Jerome and his equally famous partner, Jean Schwartz, who wrote "Chinatown," own and operate "The Stage Shop," a popular music store in New York City. They publish their own songs.

G. A. Metcalfe, the supply dealer of San Francisco, made us a pleasant call this week. Mr. Metcalfe is opening a branch office here at 728 South Olive street, where he will have a complete line of machines and supplies.

Other callers this week at the World office were R. W. Horn, traveling representative for the Nicholas Power Company, and W. E. VanDuyne of the Pacific Amusement Company. Mr. Horn who makes his headquarters in San Francisco, stated that he finds business exceedingly good and a gratifying demand for the new Powers model.

Ding-Dingelie-Ding rang the telephone. "Yes?" "This is the Isis theater. You are invited to a funeral." "Who is dead?" "A palm. The deceased is to be buried at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Have you seen the procession?" We had. Two pallbearers in black shrouds solemnly carrying a potted palm with the inscription "to be buried at 2 o'clock at the Isis theater." The populace gasped and gasped in sheer wonderment. The funeral of a palm was a clever and timely advertising stunt by James C. Quinn, proprietor of the Isis theater, and a brother of Damaged-Goods-Superba-Quinn.

Palms are a touchy topic in Los Angeles. Tax payers had to pay last spring for $30,000 worth of potted palms to decorate the streets, and this week the city council decided that potted palms were a nuisance and menace to health and ordered the whole decorative business to be removed, permanently and forever from the city streets, and hence the row.

Word comes from the Pallas studio that production will be started this week on a film adaptation of Maurice Maeterlincks "Monna Vanna," featuring Constance Collier, the noted English actress. Miss Collier, as will be remembered, appeared to great advantage in "The Tongues of Men," a recent Morosco feature.

May Allison had quite a nasty fall last week while working in one of the scenes of "The Other Side of the Door," now being produced at the American studios. She was supposed to jump from a window, a fall of five feet, but missed her reckoning and dropped ten feet further. She was so shaken up that she had to be carried home and was confined to bed for several days. Fortunately no bones were broken so the popular player was soon back to work again none the worse for her mishap. Her next part will be in "Lilla of the Sulu Seas."

Vivian Rich will soon appear in a photoplay written for and around her and very nearly named after her for it is entitled "Viviana." Miss Rich just returned from Arizona where she was much feted.

Arthur Shirley, the Australian actor, is playing the part of John Vassar, the leading role in Thomas E. Dixon's big photoplay production, "The Fall of a Nation." All the week past Shirley has been on horseback leading his troops of two thousand "soldiers," who were tented and fed by the company. George Sargent is directing this picture.

Director R. S. Sturgeon came down from the mountains of Bear Valley this week long enough to order provisions, give instructions at the studio, cut and assemble two reels of "God's Country and the Woman," his current production for the V-L-S-E. program, now being made in the hills, see it run, say hello to the World man, and visit his wife and the young family. No he is not very busy, but all his time is taken. He went his way with promises of a fine wild duck for Thanksgiving, that is if he could shoot one. Anyway we hope he trees some of the animals.

Herbert Rawlinson, featured player for Mr. Laemmle's Broadway features, had a birthday and as a result of the event he is sporting all kinds of fine things. One article we noticed soon after the famous man's natal day was a bark on his young and spirited car, and we were wondering who presented him with a cut-out for the muffler.

H. D. Naugle, manager of the local V-L-S-E. exchange, returned this week from a trip down into the depths of Arizona booking the Big Four features. He said they were welcome to talk war but that it did not seem to hurt our business here any. Mr. Naugle returned with a suitcase loaded to the rails with cactus candy, which he distributed to a few of his personal friends. He described the growing industry and told how they saw down cactus trees and make delicious candy out of them. And believe me, it's good, too.

James Horne is the latest victim of the "gas fever." Forgotten is the white horse on which the Kalem producer directed the "Grand Hotel" series and "Stingaree" pictures. One bright morning this week he greatly astonished his

Mr. Horne has just completed the ninth episode of "Stingaree" and is now revising a scenario for a new production.

Every time that we visit the Biograph studio we run in with some old friend we knew a couple of years ago who had gone East with that company last season. This year many of the same faces are there, but then there are many new ones.

Charles Bennett who was with the Vitagraph, and who played many fine character parts, is again under California skies, only he has changed over from the Biograph to citizenship, and is awaiting another engagement, which he is loath to announce for a few days.

Oscar M. Larson who formerly did much of the work for Al Hale when he was making comedies for Kalem, is now assistant to J. Farrell Macdonald, one of the directors now working here. Larson is a busy man and a hustler and deserves the progress that has been afforded him. He can act too, b'gosh!

Editor Albert Glassmire also wrung our hand and whispered that he had plotted up a play and sold it in the East. That's good news also. He calls it "The Devil's Workshop," and it must be a hot place at that. Mr. Glassmire is as busy as ever reading the scripts and writing a few in between the busier moments.

Gene Lewis, the husky writer of scenarios, was also on deck and came down to the last meeting of the Photoplayers club.

Travers Vale was busily directing Louise Vale in a big picture with Rose Ruben and a promising young woman, Helen Brady, in the cast. The other persons about the large plant were busy too.

We met the genial Lee Daugherty, manager of the Western branch, who was talking busily to some visitors when we arrived. I said that I had intended meeting the train when they arrived and he smilingly replied, "Oh, that's what the matter was. I thought something was wrong when we arrived here; now I know, I missed that smile of yours."

Manager Parsons of the new Triangle exchange is as busy as a soldier in Europe who is on the firing line with a rifle that has a jammed barrel. The new program is going so well that he is signing them up every day. One man who had listened to the Triangle talk for some time without a murmur of anything promising, laughed at the big idea, but after the first week's run at Clune's auditorium he snook up to the office and put his name to a contract for a year. We withhold his name.

Tally's theater, as usual, is being crowded to the curbs with lovers of the film drama. Mr. Tally ran "Madame Butterfly" last week, and the demand for tickets was so strong that the picture was held over for a split week. The remainder of this week "Bella Donna" is being run.

The Junior Mr. Tally and the Mary Pickford Cabinet Display.

Reserved seats for the entire house are now being sold exclusively here, and the management is well satisfied with the plan, as many people would not wait for seats, but desire to go in immediately. Hereafter the theater will be run just as the large legitimate houses are operated. Mary Pickford in this offering drew the second largest week since she appeared in one some months ago.

As an advertising feature Mr. Tally drew a unique little display from the paper. The picture of Mary in the Japanese garden was cut out and pasted on cardboard. An artist painted in trees, etc., and on a large sheet, placed about six inches behind the cut-out, he painted a scene, with the snow-capped Fujiyama in the distance. This sheet is transparent, and at night looks most realistic. The drawing power of the device was shown by the large number of passersby who stopped to gaze into the cabinet.

In presenting this feature from the Paramount program, Mr. Tully has gone himself one better by putting "atmosphere" into the house, for from the time one steps into the lobby until he is seated, one is transported to Japan.

J. A. Barry, a former newspaper man of the West, and who is connected with the publicity department for Griffith in New York, is a visitor to Long Beach, his former home. Incidentally this publicity man says that the film industry in Los Angeles is more of a magnet to Easterners than either of the West Coast expositions, and that is probably very true.

Miss Ethel Weber, who is the third person in the triangle of heavy thinkers who produce big features for the Universal under the Smalley banner, has purchased a Class A looking motor car, a roadster finished in black and white, and it must be a powerful brute the way it barks. Miss Weber helps her sister, Lois Weber, and Phillips Smalley, put on their pictures.

For some time Alan Hale has been seen on the screen as a leading star but now he is to be more than starred in coming Lasky releases. Mr. Lasky signed Mr. Hale this week and the big husky star leaves the old Biograph for the Paramount producers. As yet no definite plans have been laid but it is certain that Mr. Hale will be seen in some of the best that will be made by the big company.

Al W. Filson is playing the part of his life in a Selig picture which is fast nearing completion. It is the character Biff Schulte, the policeman who camps on the dangerous trail of Chick Hewes, the crook, played by Harry Mestayer. The story is called "The Dragnet," and is a film version of Willard Mack's successful play called "Kick In." The story is being produced by Frank Beale. The part is just the one for Al W. Filson, who will be remembered from vaudeville days with Lee Errol, when he did a skit written by George M. Cohan especially for the couple called "A Tip on the Derby."

While at Bear Valley, this trip, the Vitagraphers had a lot of fun. Bill Duncan, when asked by Sturgeon if he could paddle a canoe, replied that he certainly could. At the test it is sad to relate, Duncan did everything but paddle. He is powerful, and power is not as essential in propelling a canoe as skill. However, now he can go like the wind, but he carries the name of "Paddling Nelson," in lieu of "Battling Nelson."

The weather has been ideal ever since the first rain and everyone is shooting lots of film. The only difference is a slightly lowered mercury.

Since the Selig forces have been consolidated at the zoo studio and the Edendale plant moved over, the place is a busy one. Bob Daly is engaged in producing a three-reel drama featuring Fritzi Brunette. It is called "The False Alarm." Mr. Daly, who is one of the best known directors on the coast, has just finished a five-reel feature for the big program called "Unto Those Who Sin," and it also features Miss Brunette.

Director General Henry McRea of the Big U forces held a pre-view of the five-reel feature photoplay "Undine," the water picture made by Henry Otto out in the Pacific Coast islands, with Miss Ida Schnall featured. The picture was projected at the Woodley theater on Monday evening at 11, with many press and picture people present. It was voted a success.

That those who make the pictures are deeply interested was proved here this week when Lasky's "Chorus Lady" was given its first run at Ocean Park, in the Rosemary theater. This was the first time the complete film had been projected, not even the players had seen it. We attended, as guests of the Raymond Brothers and Mayor Sams, of the theater, and noticed many picture makers present. Little Miss Marjorie Daw, who played the part of the slip of a country miss who comes to the city to visit her big sister, Cleo Ridgley, was wonderful in the part. Several other players traveled all the way to the beach to see the first projection of the film.

Miss Doris Schroeder, who for the past two years or more has been with the Western Vitagraph, went away on a vacation. She chose Bear Valley, a secluded sort of spot way up in the hills, and when she arrived at the mountain retreat, far from the maddening crowd, where she would not see a player with makeup, or smell raw film, or hear the bang of a typewriter, what was her surprise to hear "Action! action! a-c-t—come on there, get some pep into that scene. Show some life! What's the matter with yuh?" bawled out by a Lasky director or some other director who was "on location" in the hills getting scenes for a big picture. Farther on up the river the poor scenario writer came upon the band of Vitagraphers who were filming "God's Country and the Woman." California is full of picture people.

So far Captain Cupid controls the situation here with the Balboa army of lovers in the lead by several couples. This week the seventh pair in four months have trotted up to the altar and come away linked for life. This time the youngsters were open and above board, planning the wedding and letting everyone in on the secret. Previously, they disappeared and were gone several days then we heard from some city nearby that a knot had been tied with two players of film fame. The persons who got our best wishes this week are Richard Johnson, a character man, and Lulu Bower, a young actress.

While visiting the Laemmle plant last week we held converse with the big chief, Henry McRae, and while he was relating some of his exciting experiences with different heads of departments, he thought of something and told us of a fine new horse that he had just received. The young and spirited animal is a "peach," and it is so proud and spirited that he has named it Peacocke. The genial head of the Coast Universal studios is a boy when it comes to a good horse, and he delights in riding the animal while inspecting the hilly portion of the great plant here.

A message from Las Vegas, New Mexico, we presume it is somewhere down below the rim of the desert, says that the Selig players were honored guests of the manager of the Browne theater one night this week. They were entertained with a feast in the ice cream parlor, a row of seats in the playhouse, and afterwards a barbecue luncheon. Among the present ones we noticed the names of Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, George Martin, E. A. O'Brien, Pat Chrisman, and others. 'Rah for the moving pictures!

Oh, for the life of an exchangeman if he sells V-L-S-E. features. This week tis said H. D. The dividend totalled $1,007.88. Not half bad!

Australian Notes

By Our Own Correspondent.

Sydney, Australia, October 23, 1915.

VERY little seems to be known in America about pictures in Australia; yet I think that Australians are as great picture fans as there are in the States. Sydney has a population of 700,000, and over 75 picture houses. Of these about 20 are in the city proper and are continuous shows. The remainder seat from 750 to 2,000, change the program twice a week (except the first-class houses) and charge 3d., 6d. and 1s. (5 cents, 10 cents and 25 cents) admission. The first-class houses (about 8 in number) show first-class features, running for a week. They charge for admission from 6d. to 2s. 6d. (10 cents to 60 cents). We get a good variety of American features here. Pictures shown lately have included: "A Builder of Bridges" (Frohman-World), "Lola" (World), "The Unafraid" (Lasky), "The Dancing Girl" (Famous) and "Woman and Wine" (World). The latter, shown in the Crystal Palace, the largest house in Sydney, drew record audiences, no less than 50,000 seeing the picture in the week (six days).

Sunday pictures have not arrived here yet, but if some enterprising manager should start them the practice would become general.

Australian Films, Ltd., are advertising "Hypocrites." It has been passed by the censor here, and Mr. Black, chief secretary, said it was the best photoplay he had ever seen. The same company recently produced "The Loyal Rebel," in five reels, a story taken from Australian history. The cast included several stage stars and was directed by Alfred Rolfe, son-in-law of the famous Australian producer, Alfred Dampier, who directed many famous pictures, nearly all of which were released by the Sawyer Company in America about eighteen months back. Messrs. J. C. Williamson, Ltd., the most prominent theatrical managers in Australia, have produced "Within the Law" and several other stage successes with Miss Muriel Starr, no doubt well known to Americans. These have not been released yet, so I will have more to say regarding them at a later date. Clement Mason's Cine Co. got an injunction against Australasian Films the other day to prevent them (Australasian Films) showing Essanay-Chaplin comedies. Before the injunction, the Chaplin comedies were shown at as many as 15 out of the 20 theaters in Sydney proper.

Pictures to be shown include "The Marked Woman" (World), "Carpet from Bagdad" (Sclig) and "The Eagles' Nest" (Lubin).

Kind Sirs:—Your letter of the 13th at hand and contents noted carefully.

I have two days, Saturday and Sunday, that I am going to give some exchange.

I have been running less than 40 day stuff and am not telling an untruth when I say that I show pictures that are from 8 to 15 days old in this town. Do you believe it?

Do you believe it? I pay $1 per reel, paper included.

Do you believe it?

The pictures I show are free from rain, clean, complete and in good condition. Do you believe it?

There are a lot of exchanges after the business these days. Do you believe it? Their offers are fine, goods new—and us "little town" fellows have a chance to show our patrons "good goods." Do you believe it?

I know all exchanges will come to it in time and then the climax. Do you believe it?

Several exchanges start well but it don't last long. Of course, they have good excuses to offer. I can't show rotten film here as I am too close to KanKaKee and when I show "old has beens" then I drive my patrons over those nice roads fifteen miles to KanKaKee. But when I show that KanKaKee has nothing on us then they stay home and forget KanKaKee.

It's a hard game, and in order to let the little fellow live, you fellows must give (us) then the goods too.

Respectfully yours,

"Divorcons"

Biograph's Adaptation of Famous Play Makes Entertaining Four-Part Picture Comedy—A Single Reel Reissue.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

VICTORIEN SARDOU'S "Divorcons," one of the most famous of all stage comedies, makes an entertaining picture for an intelligent audience, despite the enforced elimination of the playwright's brilliant lines and necessary alterations in the incidents of the plot. The adaptation holds consistently to the spirit of the original and presents the same lesson in a manner at once humorous and cynical. A story so typically French in thought and substance remains French even when the characters are interpreted by Americans in American settings; and the marital problem with which "Divorcons" treats, it may be added, is quite as pertinent here as abroad.

It will be recalled that in handling the eternal triangle, Sardou eliminated the outwardly jealous husband. He chose, instead, a man who seemed to fall in very readily with his wife's intention of getting a divorce that she might marry her cousin. And the woman, finding freedom so easily attainable, experiences a renewed interest in her husband. They come to a happy understanding at a little dinner party for two in a private dining-room, while the cousin is undergoing several unpleasant experiences.

The most entertaining scenes in the first reel, showing the progress of the affair between the flirtatious young wife and her amorous cousin, were photographed on a bathing beach. In view of the interest aroused by the players, one may overlook the somewhat slow development of the story, which acquires greater speed in later reels—the reels that bring about the success of the husband's plan to hold his wife, and the complete discomfiture of the cousin. Much of the action is laid in an elaborately staged cabaret restaurant where a gay throng gives a realistic depiction of expensive night life. Dell Henderson as the husband, Dave Morris as the cousin and Gertrude Bambrick as the wife are effective in the three principal roles.

"Fate," a one-reel Griffith production, soon to be reissued by the Biograph Company, is a masterpiece of dramatic suspense culminating in a real thrill. It is a vivid story of rough woodsmen, with early scenes giving careful preparation for the big situation of the picture, that in which a log cabin is blown to pieces by an explosion of powder. The human and dramatic interest centers in the almost miraculous escape of two innocent children and the just punishment of a troublesome ruffian. Mae Marsh, Bobby Harron, Lionel Barrymore and Charles H. Mailes appear in this excellent photoplay.

"The Cave Man"

An A1 Vitagraph Featuring Robert Edeson and Released on the V-L-S-E Program.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

HERE we have Vitagraph at its very best and I do not know that I could go any higher in the dictionary of laudation. Mr. Edeson has never had a part more thoroughly suited to his splendid personality and his equally splendid acting powers. He is most ably supported by Fay Wallace, whose screen debut in this feature is sensationally successful. Every man and woman in the play is perfect in his or her part. Lillian Burns as Dolly Van Dream showed exceptional abilities as a commedienne. In the selection of the right and convincing types, the producers have lived up to their best record and perhaps surpassed it. Settings and photography are of the highest standard imaginable and if there is the slightest flaw anywhere in this feature it has escaped me altogether. The dozen reviewers present gave it a quick verdict of "Most Excellent," which is a rare thing, indeed.

The plot is interesting and withal highly diverting. In the course of its clever development the foibles and shams of what is called "Society" are held up to ridicule. There is no malice in the ridicule, every thing is perfecty good-natured and that's why it is so genuinely laughable. It is a story that in the first part holds us by its oddity, that amuses us in its gradual rise and then thrills and grips us in its sudden turn and its most satisfying climax. The plot takes its origin in the strange whim of a frivolous and perhaps somewhat cynical society woman, Miss Mischief. She takes it into her head to make a social lion out of a coal heaver. She resorts to a clever artifice, which need not be told in detail here. The coal heaver has never been touched by either the ordinary or the extraordinary refinements of civilization and has, of course, never dreamt of entering society. Miss Mischief, with the aid of two barbers and "a ton of energy" and a gents' furnishing store and a tailorship, makes the quondam coal heaver very presentable. She then introduces him into society with results which the pictures describe far more truly than could any words of mine. In turn he becomes a "sociologist," an art critic, an artist and a social hero. His vision grows broader in the mean time. The ordinary scenario writer would have ended the story here by letting Miss Mischief and the hero fall in love with each other and go to the parson, deftly inserting about one hundred and fifty feet of wedding festivities. Nothing like it happens. The coal heaver, whose ambition has fed on his manhood, perceives that he has been but "a man on a checkerboard" and his wrath against Miss Mischief awakes with a terrible explosion. He realizes that he is capable of achieving big things in this life and he goes forth and, beginning away down at the bottom, he achieves them. At the height of his wealth and his power he again meets Miss Mischief, who now yields herself willingly to the man of superb physical and moral power. To say that this film play essays at fully 100 per cent is stating the plain truth.

"The Alster Case"

A Mystery Story in Five Parts by Essanay, with a Strong Cast Headed by Bryant Washburn, Jno. H. Cossar and Miss Ruth Stonehouse.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

"THE ALSTER CASE," directed by J. Charles Haydon, is an absorbing mystery story by Essanay, in five reels, that holds the spectator's attention in eager expectancy until the final scenes unravel it. The complications put moving pictures to a severe test in the effort to make the story clear to the observer and at the same time to cast an air of mystery over that which is to follow, so that the real culprit is not discovered until the end, but the feat is accomplished without any lavish use of subtitles I am glad to state.

In the production of such a story in moving pictures the greatest care must be exercised not only in withholding information, but also in furnishing it when absolutely necessary. The director may be prone, from his own knowledge of the story, to think that he has at certain points given the necessary links in the chain for the spectator's benefit, when in reality he leaves gaps that sorely puzzle the observer and mar the solution. In "The Alster Case" this is avoided by much painstaking thought and careful direction.

The murder of the wealthy old maiden lady, Cornelia Alster, who has adopted two orphan children and brought them up as her nieces, is so hidden in mystery that five people are under the grim suspicion of the law. Trask, the Sherlock Holmes of the story, is seen following up every clew that gives promise of leading to the guilt or innocence of each of the five suspects. He weaves a web around each in turn that points to guilt, but in every case save one the investigation shows innocence. Needless to say that in a story of this type the pictures themselves must narrate it.

Bryant Washburn assumes the role of George Swan, the young lawyer who was appointed by Cornelia Alster as executor of her estate, on the evening before her murder. His impersonation of the part is marked by his customary art and finish. Trask, the detective, in the person of John H. Cossar, dominates the story, and the entire cast. Beatrice and Linda, the adopted orphans, are cleverly represented by Misses Ruth Stonehouse and Betty Scott.

The Cornelia Alster of Louise Crolius is a strong characterization and brings out well the peculiarities that mark that type. Miss Beatrice Styler, who is cast as Agnes, the maid of the Alster home, impresses one by the bold individuality given that character.

The release date has not been fixed at the time of writing, but it will be some time in December through V-L-S-E, Inc.

"The House of Fear"

Pathe Exchange, Inc., to Release Another of the Ashton-Kirk Series in Five-Reel Gold Rooster Play.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE second of John T. McIntyre's "Ashton-Kirk" stories to be filmed under the direction of Aronld Daly and Ashley Miller is scheduled for release on Dec. 3rd, and proves to be an absorbing melodrama, of which its producers may be justly proud.

Arnold Daly as Ashton-Kirk, Investigator, is at home in the part, and is supported by an unusually competent cast, among whom are Jeanne Eagels, Sheldon Lewis and Charles Kraus.

The House of Fear is the home of one Cramp by name with whom reside his sister and his aunt. The origin of the mystery which seems to hover about the house lies in the fact that some forged currency plates that had been engraved by Cramp's father for an unscruplous Mexican named Alva, had not been delivered to the said Alva, and at the death of Cramp senior at the hand of an agent of the Mexican's, had been hidden underneath a large stone in the cellar of the Cramp home.

Ashton-Kirk, who is young, studious and imbued with the spirit of adventure, undertakes to solve the mystery of the house, and is successful in doing so. On the night on which Alva and his agents enter the secret tunnel leading to the cellar, confident that nothing can stand in their way to the recovery of the plates, the young "investigator" is on the spot, pistol in hand, and is in a short time master of the situation.

Charles Kraus, as the detestable cripple, Alva, does a fine piece of work. There are others in the cast whose names we would be glad to know, for instance the actress who plays the role of Miss Hohenlo, the aunt of Cramp, and also, it is revealed at the close of the story, the wife of Alva, which, of course, accounts for the strange part played by the woman in the manipulation of events in the house of fear.

The production has been splendidly produced and has action every moment of the film.

"The Broken Law"

William Farnum Is Star in Romantic Melodrama Produced by Oscar Apfel for Fox Program.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

"THE BROKEN LAW" will meet the requirements of exhibitors who find Fox productions profitable. It has the dramatic, the sensational and the sex elements that the public has come to expect in the productions of this company, and the story is not more extravagant than one might properly anticipate in a melodrama of the stamp.

William Farnum is a truly heroic hero. In quest of a long lost half-sister he joins a Romany tribe and fights his way into the leadership. A jealous rival falls before his prowess and then, intent on vengeance, persuades a young woman to accuse the handsome leader of causing her downfall. According to the laws of the tribe the accused man is flogged and driven from the camp and a like punishment is meted out to the girl, who later is identified as his missing relative. The real culprit, a titled Englishman, and the villain of the story, is brought to justice at the moment he is about to marry a wealthy girl. A shot through the window brings the ceremony to an abrupt close and the gallant Romany leader opens his arms to receive the fainting bride. There is nothing now to interfere with the continuance of their pleasant romance.

The mortality in "The Broken Law" is rather high; five deaths and all but one due to violence. The aged leader of the Romanies is hurled from a cliff, Esmond's half-sister dies soon after she has been brutally flogged, the villainous duke is shot and the deformed wanderer who aims the bullet promptly ends his own life. The writer of the scenario solved his plot largely by the process of elimination.

Director Oscar Apfel's production is highly picturesque and punctuated with thrilling incidents, such as an automobile crashing through a bridge railing and into a river; the fight between Mr. Farnum and another candidate for the leadership and the struggle of the Romany girl to escape from the clutches of the duke. The cast includes Dorothy Bernard and other able players.

"Life Without Soul"

A Five-Reel Drama, Founded Upon Mary W. Shelley's Famous Old Novel, "Frankenstein"—Produced by the Ocean Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE production of the five-reel drama, "Life Without Soul," reflects credit upon the Ocean Film Corporation. Jessie J. Goldberg, who made the scenario, taking for his basis the famous old story of "Frankenstein," by Mary W. Shelley, has dodged the pitfalls that such a subject contains by leaping boldly over them. In other words, he has not attempted to explain the impossible, but has secured free rein to his imagination by having the supernatural events take place only in the brain of his hero. Everyone is familiar with the weird tale of "Frankenstein," of the young scientist who creates a being cast in the human mold, but without a human soul. The history of the monster, how he dominates his maker and becomes a menace to everyone within his reach until he is destroyed, has fascinated thousands of lovers of the grewsome and the unnatural. In adapting the story for the screen, Mr. Goldberg has troubled neither himself nor his future patrons with the psychologic aspect of the theme. If one wishes to read a deeper meaning in the fate of the man who aspires to grasp the power of omnipotence, he must do so without assistance. The author of "Life Without Soul" has been guided by but one purpose—to build a photoplay which appeals to the emotions rather than to the intellect, and is at all times good entertainment by reason of its directness and cohesion of plot and the strangeness and attractiveness of its theme. The picture easily fulfills its mission. Supplemented by the resources and excellent judgment of the director, Joseph W. Smiley, and the equally efficient acting of the cast, the author of "Life Without Soul" has wrought a photoplay of distinct merit. Great diversity of incidents and scenes, of views of deep chasms, wild glades, desert sands and the ocean's wide expanse, are intermingled with glimpses of the young scientist bending over his creation in his laboratory and of tranquil home life.

The most valuable member of the cast is Percy Darrell Standing. His embodiment of the man without a soul adequately conveys the author's intent. He is awe-inspiring, but never grotesque, and indicates the gradual unfolding of the creature's senses and understanding, with convincing skill. At times, he actually awakens sympathy for the monster's condition—cut off, as he is, from all human companionship. William W. Cohill, George De Carlton, Jack Hopkins, Lucy Cotton, Pauline Curley, David McCauley and Violet De Biccari are the remaining members of the cast.

"Barbara Frietchie"

Picture Based on Whittier Poem and Clyde Fitch Play Is Produced for the Metro Program.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

PRODUCED by the Popular Plays and Players and for release by the Metro Corporation, this five-part Civil War drama, starring Mary Miles Minter as Barbara Frietchie, has much to recommend it in the way of a story, settings and acting. The director was successful in catching the atmosphere of a southern town in war time; the action in the picture is never allowed to drop and it all furthers the selling of a dramatic story and a pleasing romance that is brought to an unconventional close. The author of the scenario deserves credit for his daring in permitting death to remove his hero and heroine, his only concession to the usual demand for a happy ending being a double exposure scene showing the union of the spirits of the deceased lovers.

With this climax and with the stirring scenes illustrating verses from Whittier's poem, the concluding reel becomes the most memorable of the five, although there is much in the preceding parts to arouse interest and arrest the attention. Miss Minter is an irresistibly sweet Barbara Frietchie. We meet her on her eighteenth birthday when she is the center of a gay party given in her honor. Soon Captain Trumbull, a young Union officer, is brought into the action and the love affair, around which the plot is built, is immediately introduced. The story, save in occasional details, is not essentially different from other Civil War plays. Barbara's brother, a Confederate officer who returns home when the town is in the possession of the Northern troops, figures prominently, as does a young Southerner who goes insane when Barbara rejects his love. Characters such as these and the incidents arising out of their conflicting purposes are not unusual, but they are made distinctly interesting as presented here.

There is a genuine thrill in the final scenes showing Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, as Barbara, defiantly waving the flag she loves as the Confederate soldiers tramp through the street. Then comes the shot that mortally wounds the granddaughter of the venerable woman and finally the pathetic picture of the young lovers united in death. Guy Coombs gives an impressive portrayal of Captain Trumbull. This is a production that invites the best sort of musical accompaniment.

"Armstrong's Wife"

A Finely Finished Lasky Picture in Which Edna Goodrich Makes Her Screen Debut.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

EDNA GOODRICH makes her first appearance on the screen in this strong and stirring play. While her newness to the task is unmistakable her attractive personality and her unquestioned dramatic power amply suffice for the task the play imposed upon her. Two very fine film stars support her: James Cruze and Thomas Meighan. Both Meighan and Cruze had parts which were eminently suitable for them and both acted with evident enthusiasm and complete success.

Cruze, acting the part of a smooth, suave but utterly unscrupulous scoundrel, disputes the possession of May with Meighan, a childhood friend of May who is passionately in love with her, but who lacks the glittering surface qualities of Cruze. Miss Goodrich gains in confidence and power as the play progresses. Settings and photography are excellent and there is the indefinable touch and tinge of beauty which is so characteristic of Lasky plays.

The development of the plot is strong and quite logical in the beginning, but begins to wobble toward the end, though the climax is very fine indeed. The gambler played by Cruze is likewise a bigamist. When he becomes a fugitive from justice, having killed his partner in a quarrel, he discovers May in the Canadian woods, where he has found refuge from the pursuing police. Both May and her true lover know that the gambler is a bigamist and that he has no legal or moral rights which they are bound to respect. Indeed, they have but to notify the police to get rid of him at once and for good. In spite of this the bigamy is never mentioned by May, though she gets into several tight corners, from which she could have freed herself in an instant if she had reproached the gambler with his deception. Under the circumstances one begins to wonder why the bigamy of the gambler was shown at all. With this quaification the play skillfully sustains the interest in the story to the very end.

"The Warning"

A Genuine Film Masterpiece of Uncommon Dramatic Power, Featuring Henry Kolker, and to Be Released on the Equitable Program.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

IF THE word "wonderful" had not been abused to so woeful an extent, I would unhesitatingly speak of this production as truly wonderful. Exhibitors have been so constantly deluged with a daily flood of superlatives that they have most reasonably become suspicious of all terms of high praise.

Scene from "The Warning" (Equitable).

Confessing this handicap, I must also confess my inability to speak of this picture in other terms that those of the highest praise.

First of all, I was impressed with what may be described as the dramatic dignity of the production. Class and power accompany every inch of the film. One chord there is in the dramatic and emotional register which will always wake its vibrating echo in the human heart—the relentlessness of Fate. If ever the screen illustrated the old principle that "consequences are unpitying" it is done in this play.

It is true that there is a most happy and gratifying ending, but it comes most unexpectedly and we are just about ready to shed a tear of sorrowing sympathy for the man who fell over the edge of the precipice when we discover to our intense relief that he stopped just short of the fatal step and that, having had a most fearful warning, he parts company with the terrible destroyer of souls and renews his allegiance to the fireside.

"The Warning" shows with unsurpassed art and under the form of a powerful drama the gradual disintegration of a man who has been conquered by strong drink. Though good-hearted and jovial and a lovable husband and father, he cannot resist the subtle and insidious poison of sweetened and flavored alcohol, most commonly known as whiskey. He has a responsible position, a charming wife, a good sister, a bright and lovable little boy; everything, in short, which ought to make for contentment and useful activity. The evil spirit in the luring guise of liquor tempts him constantly. Then comes the warning. Warnings in dreams have an element of mystery and weirdness. Under very clever dramatic handling and with the help of splendid acting this warning of the weak-willed drinker is visualized in the most startling and wonderfully convincing way. When he discovers that he has been troubled with a vision of his probable fate and with an effort rouses himself to shake off the memory of the things he has beheld the audience is most deeply affected, for they, too, find it difficult to believe that they have witnessed a dream—everything had been so real and so realistic. I dare say there is not one man or woman in the audience who does not believe that the unfortunate weakling had really joined the children of perdition.

The power of the theme lies in its absolute simplicity. The simpler the story the wider are the circles it moves, the more direct is the appeal and the more profound and lasting must be the effect. A simple theme handled with the highest artistic and dramatic skill acquires a momentum that strikes into the very depths of the human heart. "The Warning" is fully entitled to be thus described.

There is much of supreme film art in this production. The local color is so true and so well chosen that it amounts to one of the real points of merit. There is some allegory as part of the dream and the director has imparted or sought to impart a Dantesque touch to it. There is much allegory which comes as an occasional interlude in the progress of the play and that part is splendid. The other part which continues the punishment of the drunkard after death while quite justifiable as part of a dream appears to be not quite as felicitous.

The play is bound to make innumerable friends for the motion picture in circles where ignorance and prejudice prevail today. High as this merit is, I do not count it the chief merit of the play. The chief merit is its extraordinary value as an entertainment. The dramatic and artistic appeal of the play is irresistible everywhere.

Too much praise cannot be given to the actors and actresses. Henry Kolker gave a superb impersonation of the man who stood on the brink of the abyss. The part of the wife was taken in splendid fashion by Lilly Leslie. Master Frank Longacre made a charming and real boy. The other parts were all in capable hands, but none was better than the Camille of Mayme Kelso.

"The Taking of Stingaree"

Rumor and Excitement in Kalem Two-Reel Offering—Serial of Australian Bandit Holding Up Well.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

STINGAREE is captured in this installment, "The Taking of Stingaree," of the serial; but he escapes and there is good amusement in it, so that it makes a very enjoyable picture. The interesting character, after the bandit himself, is the police inspector, Cairns, played by Thomas Lingham. One may notice that this is the same player who took another character in the former installment; but that won't matter at all, for it is—or he makes us feel it so—a different Thomas Lingham altogether, and an absolutely different character that he pictures. His chance to play different characters around this same theme is more brilliant than that of even the leads, for, whatever their abilities are, they have the same idiosyncrasies to hold to and must perforce (play as convincingly as they can) make the same kind of impression in each succeeding installment, whereas the character man can register his versatility anew with every two-reel part. Let us not unintentionally imply that it is not a big thing for the leads to maintain a consistent and convincing impression throughout a long serial; for it is. True Boardman, as Stingaree, and Marin Sais, as the girl who can sing, must be praised each time; but we have the pleasure of praising Lingham freshly each time. James W. Horne, the director, will, we believe, call attention to the good quality of his work in this serial more than ever before, well known as he is and able as he is recognized to be.

The fun rises mainly from the jealousy between two police inspectors who both want to be the one to make the capture of the bandit. Stingaree overcomes a youthful member of the force and takes his uniform. In this he fools and has amusing fun with one of the inspectors. While he is tying this one to a tree, the other, Cairns, creeps up and has Stingaree covered. It looks bad for the bandit; but the inspectors get to a hot discussion over the coming reward and it gives the bandit another chance, of which, you may be sure, he makes good use. It is sure to be a popular offering.

"CROSS CURRENTS," a five-reel Fine Arts feature by Mary H. Connor, directed by Francis Grandon, under the supervision of D. W. Griffith, is admirably typed and handled. physical strength to advantage, while not detracting from talent as an actress. The story carries her from the stilted posturing of the drawing room to the free expression of her intelligence in an extremely difficult performance. The cast is strong throughout, Courtenay Foote distinguishing himself, and the scenic effects are well chosen.

"Crooked to the End," a two-reel Keystone, is a scream. The constant intermingling of the perilous with the ludicrous, the really perilous in many cases, is bound to make some excitable members of any mixed audience hysterical. There seems to be no falling off in the quality of these releases—to the contrary, they are improving. "Crooked to the End" is so crowded with exciting incidents that one can only marvel at the tremendous amount of ingenuity and hard work compressed into so small a space, reversing conditions in the average five-reel feature. A sure winner.

"Between Men" exploits William S. Hart and his theory that the man of great physical strength and strong native impulses is bound to count, if not to win, in a clash with the forces of ultra refinement, especially when those forces spell moral decadence. Perhaps Mr. Hart is right—he certainly gets a sympathetic hearing. "Between Men" is a story of gratitude, admirably told, as a rule, though slightly anticlimaxed, where it should have had a snappy ending. The cast of men is magnificent. J. Barney Sherry and House Peters fully share honors with Mr. Hart. The stock exchange scenes are probably the largest of the kind ever shown on the screen, and the whole play is generally successful.

"The Gray Mask"

Shubert-World Film Melodrama Is Characterized by Fast Action—Edwin Arden in Leading Role.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE melodramatic story in this five-part picture was taken from a scenario by Charles Wadsworth Camp and directed by Frank H. Crane with Edwin Arden and Barbara Tennant in the leading roles. The scenes move at a rapid pace and introduce a number of exciting incidents, arising out of the efforts of the leader of a band of crooks to gain possession of the formula for a deadly explosive, concocted by an aged inventor, who determines that it shall be the exclusive property of his own government. One gathers from the first reel that a country supplied with this terrible explosive would be amply prepared for war. It is made the excuse for all manner of crime, also for astute detective work on the part of Mr. Arden.

The plot is ingenious rather than convincing, for the author did not waste much time on motivation. Having a wealth of incident to deal with, he presented melodramatic scenes in rapid succession, allowing an audience little opportunity to question the likelihood of what is happening on the screen. The one aim of the picture seems to be to startle and to thrill, and in that it achieves its purpose.

There is a murder early in the action—the murder of the detective engaged to marry the heroine of the tale—and it remains for Jim Grath (Mr. Arden) to track the murderers of his brother officer, as well as to keep the explosive from falling into unfriendly hands. In both of these missions he is materially aided by Nora, who stops at nothing to avenge the death of her lover. She becomes a member of the gang and having won the confidence of the chief is permitted to attend the most secret conferences. The climax of the story finds Jim Grath, disguised in a gray mask, impersonating a trusted member of the band and with the girl's assistance he thwarts the schemes of the conspirators.

Mr. Arden makes the most of a part that does not permit of much characterization, Miss Tennant is satisfactory as the heroine and in other respects the picture is well cast. One of the most thrilling scenes shows an automobile falling into the river between a ferryboat and the slip.

"A Trip to the Argentine"

The Roy Chandler South American Pictures Give Valuable Insight Into Life in the Argentine.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ACCORDING to Roy Chandler's South American series, affairs of every-day life progress much the same as they do on the sister continent; at least in the region of the Argentine.

Several thousand feet of film cover the trip from New York to Argentina. It ends at that point of particularly beautiful significance where the Argentine meets Chile, a spot marked by a monument known as the Christ of the Andes, and which was erected in memory of the treaty of eternal peace established between these two countries years ago.

These pictures, which made their New York debut at Carnegie Hall on Wednesday evening, November 24, were accompanied by a travel talk by Spring Byington Chandler, in which she told many amusing incidents which occurred during the trip to the Argentine. The first stop at Barbados, B. W. I., gives an interesting glimpse of this quaint spot in the West Indies. Then we hurry on to Bahia, Brazil; then to Rio de Janeiro and its wonderfully beautiful bay and surroundings, including a splendid view of Sugar Loaf Mountain, seen from the harbor. Hundreds of feet of film have been used in illustrating the beauties of the south American metropolis, Buenos Aires, showing its principal streets, parks, hotels, its shopping district, its banks, which includes a branch of our National City Bank, established in 1914, and illustrative of one of the most important links in the commercial relations between the Argentine and the United States.

Very little that is interesting in this wealthy republic has been omitted in the Chandler pictures. The agricultural possibilities of Argentina have been exploited to the full. And we are specially impressed with the splendid specimens of cattle thrown on the screen. We see also the Argentine cowboy or Gaucho as he is called, in all his glory, engaged in occupations varying from breaking bucking bronchos to the gentler forms of recreation such as dancing the native dances with the pretty maids of Argentine.

There is also given a splendid insight into the Quebracho industry, tons of the bark of which is shipped to the United States to be used for tanning purposes, etc. Nor is the navy of the Argentine forgotten, for we are treated to more than one view of the gigantic dreadnought "Rivadavia" with her crew of hearty marines.

Among other interesting items of the series are views of the Falls of Iguazu, possibly the largest in the world, with a drop of 210 feet. These scenes are a revelation to those ignorant of the immensity of these marvelously beautiful waterfalls. Then there are the granite quarries of San Pacho, the Argentine oil fields at Comodore Rivadavia, the ancient Jesuit ruins of Misiones, the Trans Andine railway passing through the Andes Mountains toward Chile, and Mount Aconcagua of the magnificent elevation of 23,000 feet, and then at last the beautiful emblem of Peace already spoken of.

The remarkable educational value of the Chandler South American series cannot be overestimated. They are of a clear quality of photography, and their footage encompasses only things worth while.

"The Prince and the Pauper"

Marguerite Clark in Dual Role Finely Portrays the Twain Characters in Lavish Production of Famous Players.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN THAT marvelously interesting three-volume biography of Mark Twain written by Albert Bigelow Paine considerable space is given to telling how the great writer confided to Daniel Frohman the vitalizing before the footlights of his "The Prince and the Pauper." The writer does not recall the date, but is strongly of the impression it was in the eighties.

Scene from "The Prince and the Pauper" (Famous Players).

It is singularly fitting that the initial frame of an unusually artistic production should set forth that "Daniel Frohman presents Marguerite Clark in 'The Prince and the Pauper.'" Probably the only regret of Mr. Frohman in connection with the screen presentation is that the famous author could not have seen it.

This Famous Players picture was made under the direction of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford. It is saying much to suggest that it is as good as their previous best; from the production side perhaps it is their greatest. From all angles "The Prince and the Pauper" ranks high. The staging is superb; the acting, even on the part of those portraying the humbiest characters, is of the best; the photography is likewise. The story, in spite of the handicap imposed on a director by the use of the dual role, is not only interesting but contains strong moments, situations that stand out from the depth of human interest contained in them. The triumph of the Famous Players is all the more notable when it is borne in mind that there is not a lover in the whole five parts.

Marguerite Clark finely balances the characters of the prince and the pauper, the one accustomed to all the care and homage that could be lavished on a child, the other, Tom Canty, reared in extreme poverty. The pauper in the garb of the prince is the pauper in manners; the prince in the clutches of the outlaws is still the prince in spirit and in act.

William Barrows, as the Earl of Hertford, the head of the Court, is deserving of the highest praise. William Sorelle, the swashbuckling defender of the prince in trouble, might have stepped out of the book. It is interesting to note that Mr. Sorelle was a member of the Edison cast in "The Prince and the Pauper" when that company put out the subject in a single reel in 1909. William Frederick as the burly father of Tom made a convincing brute.

There is not space sufficient to elaborate the situations that stand out, nor yet the many examples of unusual staging, but reference must be made to the coronation scene in Westminster Abbey. The entrance of the swashbuckler at the command of the rightful prince formed a combination of drama and background that is out of the ordinary.

"The Primrose Path"

Five-Reel Broadway Universal Feature, by Bayard Veiller, with Gladys Hanson and Hal Forde in Leads.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IT REQUIRES strong and dignified treatment to adequately portray a situation in which a wife gives herself to an admirer whom she detests in order to save the life of her husband. There must also have preceded this momentous decision a succession of events making it seem the only way out of her difficulty. Fortunately for this production, written by Bayard Veiller, the issue is properly led up to and the wife, portrayed by Gladys Hanson, carries the scene convincingly. It is the soul torture of the wife and her visible, heroic suffering that form the strong features of this number.

Scene from "The Primrose Path" (Broadway Universal).

The first two reels bring before the observer a familiar enough situation, in which a country girl falls in love with an artist, the latter portrayed by Hal Forde. The father objects and the girl elopes with the artist. The chief novelty in this opening portion is in the artist's picture, which he calls an allegory of life. The girl poses for him as Purity, standing at the juncture of the hill of Endeavor and the Primrose Path.

They go to Paris and after a long struggle with poverty and failure, the husband becomes very ill. The landlord is threatening to dispossess them and the wife turns to the art dealer, who had previously tempted her. All of the latter part of the story is worked up with strong interest. The husband learns of his wife's sacrifice and forgives her.

"A Yellow Streak"

Lionel Barrymore Is Featured in Strong Drama Produced by Columbia Corporation for Metro Program.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

IT IS easy to enthuse over this picture. One might not go far wrong in naming it as the most forceful production offered by the Metro Corporation in recent months. Will Nigh, who fills the double role of author and director, may have made a slip here and there; but any minor defects that exist are easily forgotten in view of the dramatic quality of the story and the strength of the acting. During his long experience in photoplays Lionel Barrymore has given many telling performances, but it is some time since he has had a more effective role than that of "Barry" Dale, introduced as an "atom" on Wall Street and later met in the Jekyll-Hyde character of a man who is an outlaw and a minister by turns.

"A Yellow Streak" is melodramatic and at the same time plausible. The author managed to make each point in his plot appear as a probable consequence of preceding events and he did not have to force things to bring about the big situations in the picture. Mr. Barrymore is quite at his best when all of the characters are moved to the West and the former stock broker, robbed of wife and fortune, starts life again on a strangely new basis. As the minister he is a weak-minded, good-natured soul; as the outlaw he is the terror of the country.

Love interest in the picture is introduced with the first meeting of Barry and Mary Austin, another atom of city life. She is on the point of suicide when her impulse is altered by a chance encounter with the equally miserable man. Chance again brings them together in the West and the romance is developed in an unconventional way, for which audiences should be thankful. The final reel is marked by the swiftest sort of melodramatic action, culminating in a realistic fight between Mr. Barrymore and William Davidson, playing the part of the girl's unscrupulous tormentor. Irene Howley gives an earnest, sympathetic performance as the girl, and actors in other roles are up to the high standard of the production. In the matters of settings, lighting and photography the picture excels.

"As the Twig is Bent"

A Stirring Three-Reel Photoplay of Army Life in the Philippines—Released by the Lubin Company.

THE opening scenes of "As the Twig Is Bent," a three-reel Lubin drama, written by Julian Louis Lamothe, take place when the hero is seven years of age. He and his twin brother are the children of unhappily mated parents, the mother a society loving woman, and the father a victim of dissipation and profligacy. The couple separate, the father taking one boy and the mother the other. When they arrive at manhood, George Booth enters the army, as an officer; Herbert, his brother, enlists as a private, after stealing from his father. Both young men are sent to the Philippines. Herbert deserts and becomes the companion of a native girl, his craving for liquor making him utterly reckless. In the meantime, George has incurred the enmity of his colonel by coming between him and the woman he loves. Discovering the marvelous likeness between the brothers, Colonel Vail gets George out of the way, then takes Miss Thomas to the hut where Herbert, sodden with liquor, is being fondled by the native girl. Miss Thomas is made to believe that the man in the hut is George. She breaks her engagement and is betrothed to the colonel. The situations employed by the author to bring his story to a satisfactory ending are ingenious, diversified and replete with action. The scenes that are supposed to take place in the Philippines are cleverly counterfeited, and there is a kaleidoscopic change of events, and a steady pressure in the gauge that marks the interest. Producer Wilbert Melville has handled his subject as though the task was a congenial one, and the military details in the picture have been well looked after.

The twin brothers are played by L. C. Shumway, as a dual role. He makes each of the men a distinct individuality, and acts the strong scenes given to both, with sure art and telling effect. Velma Whitman's portrayal of the Filipino girl is an uncommonly good bit of characterization, and Helen Eddy realizes to the full the heroine, Grace Thomas. Jack Holt, Melvin Mayo, Louis FitzRoy and Eleanor Blevins are also in line for a favorable report.

"The Buzzard's Shadow"

Five-Reel Masterpiece of American Military Life and Adventure.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A WELL-CONSTRUCTED story, leading up to a strong crisis, "The Buzzard's Shadow" is distinctly a motion-picture play, most of the scenes being painted in the open by that generous artist the sun, scenes of large perspective impossible on the stage from an effective point of view. The adventures of a United States Scout and Special Messenger, Sergeant Barnes, carry the main line of interest, an intrepid character admirably impersonated by Harold Lockwood.

Barnes makes two deadly enemies through his assertive contempt for whatever is ignoble in human nature. One of these is a renegade half-breed, who is roughly handled by the Sergeant for maltreating a horse. The other is Doctor Deschamps of the army, whom Barnes treats in a high-handed manner, demanding his resignation on discovering that the physician is attempting an intrigue with the Colonel's wife.

Scene from "The Buzzard's Shadow" (American).

Deschamps is the more dangerous as an enemy. He pretends to comply with the demands of Barnes at a moment when the latter is to be sent upon an important errand to another post across the desert.

The physician poisons the sugar with which Barnes sustains his horse on long rides, and the half-breed follows the scout to rob him of water. Barnes loses his horse, staggers alone on foot and is driven insane by thirst and haunting buzzards. He is given up for dead by a relief party, but he has been rescued, and he recovers his mental balance. He is on his way back to the post when he is brought into a highly dramatic encounter with the men who attempted to put him out of the way. The military scenes are of particular interest at this moment.

Under the direction of Joseph De Grasse, Digby Bell has just completed his work in the production of Ida May Park's filmization of George Ade's play, "Father and the Boys." The story is told in five reels with Lon Chaney, Colin Chase, Harry Ham, Louise Carbasse, Mae Gaston, Yona Landowska supporting Mr. Bell. It will be released as a Broadway Universal Feature on December 20.

"Life's Pitfalls"

Edward E. Kidder's Three-Reel Photodrama, Produced by the Edison Co., Has Well Drawn Characters and a Firmly Woven Plot.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

DOMESTIC happiness and the sanctity of the home are treated of in this three-reel photoplay, by Edward E. Kidder, and the subject, as handled by the dramatist, is prolific of intense situations. Mr. Kidder, whose experience as a writer of successful works for the spoken stage has been a wide one, shows that he possesses many of the qualities necessary to scenario writing. His method of construction bears a marked resemblance to the well-made melodrama of his own period of greatest production—a class of plays that rewarded virtue and punished vice with "even handed justice," but made no pretence to any other mission than to interest and entertain. "Life's Pitfalls" fulfils the same office. It tells the story of a man, rich in the love of a good woman and blessed with health and fortune, who allows himself to become entangled in a clandestine affair with his wife's maid. The girl is beautiful, passionate and madly in love with her employer. She does not hesitate to attempt the life of her employer's wife, and matters are brought to a tragic climax. This varient of "the eternal triangle" is admirably set forth in the three reels devoted to the photoplay in question, Miriam Nesbitt playing the mistress, Harold Meltzer the master, and Sally Crute the maid. The selections are all judicious. The minor members of the cast and the production in general deserve the same meed of praise.

Rupert Julian is at work at Universal City, Cal., on the production of a one reel drama by Anthony Caldeway entitled, "The Sword on the Shield." Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson have the leading roles.

Mutual Activities

Many Productions Scheduled at the Various Studios Contributing to the $8,000,000 Program.

UNDER way at the studios of the Mutual Film corporation are some of the most varied and extraordinary photoplays ever produced. They are scheduled for release in the near future in the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program. Word comes from the studios of the American Film company, Inc., which releases five weekly, one tri-weekly and masterpictures through the Mutual, that two companies of players are at present out on picture-taking tours, and that the remaining companies are busily engaged with pictures of more than usual interest.

Director Donald Macdonald and his company are on Santa Cruz Island this week taking scenes for a picture entitled "Across the Sunset Sea" which is to be filled with some of the most magnificent background ever reproduced in motion picture film.

This "Clipper" star feature will be an innovation in the Mutual or any other program, since its story of sea life will include settings never obtained before of these islands, off the beaten track followed by Californian sightseers, and rarely visited by others than the inhabitants.

Director William Bertram has left with his company of "Mustang" players for San Pedro, Cal., to take exteriors for the sixth picture of the "Buck Parvin in the Movies" series, "Water Stuff," in which Arthur Acord, the American star, is making a popular hit. Director Bertram's company has just completed the fifth picture of the series, "Author! Author," which includes some of the finest night effects ever filmed.

The two Gaumont companies at the company's winter studio in Jacksonville, Fla., are at work in the support of Miss Stella Hammerstein, the daughter of the operatic impresario, Oscar Hammerstein, and Malcolm Williams, the Broadway star.

Richard Garrick is directing Mr. Williams in a special feature which has not yet been named. In support of the popular actor, who appeared last season in "The Phanton Rival," are Charles W. Travis, Albert Macklin, Lucille Taft, Helen Marten, James Levering, Harold Winston and Allan Robinson.

For Miss Hammerstein's support, Director William F. Haddock has chosen Flavia Arcaro, Kathleen Butler, Henry Pemberton, Leonard Kraske, John Reinhard, James Levering, Sydney Mason and James Davis. The play in which they are working is entitled "The Ace of Death," and is a strong melodramatic subject written by O. A. Belson.

The Gaumont Casino Comedy company at the studios at Flushing is in the midst of the production of four single reel funny pictures featuring Cissy Fitzgerald. This week, "Cissy's Prescription" is being filmed, under the direction of Edwin Middleton. Miss Fitzgerald is being supported by Budd Ross, Charles Craig and Thim Mares. Next week they will commence the production of "Cissy's Valentine" and "Curing Cissy." The other two pictures of the series are already finished.

Word comes from the David Horsley studios in Santa Barbara that two thrilling pictures including the Bostock animals are under way and that one has just been completed, to be released December 16.

"The Arab's Vengeance," a drama in two reels written by Miss Theodosia Harris, author of "The Martyrs of the Alamo" and other successful photoplays and now of the Horsley scenario staff. The setting of this story is in Arabia, and includes many wonderful desert scenes. Miss Margaret Gibson plays the lead. She is supported by Roy Watson, John Oaker, Fred Morrisey, B. Singh (an Arabian actor) and the Bostock animals, directed by Capt. Jack Bonavita. This is the first picture produced under the direction of Ulysses Davis, the new Horsley director.

Mr. Davis is at present at work on his second picture, "The Winning of Jess," scheduled for release December 23, including most of the same people in the cast who were in the former picture.

William J. Dauman, the other new director who has just been added to the Horsley forces, is at present directing his first picture. This will be in two reels, and will also include the Bostock animals. It is entitled "The Terror of the Fold," and is filled with thrills from start to finish.

One of the most remarkable pictures under construction is the Thanhouser feature, "Silas Marner," in which Frederick Warde, the Shakespearian actor, is being introduced to the pictures under the direction of his son, Ernest Warde, a regular member of Mr. Thanhouser's producing staff. A second personage of unusual interest is also playing in this picture. This is the charming and beautiful Mlle. Valkyrien (The Baroness De Witz) who has just completed a Than-o-Play picture, "The Valkyrie."

George Foster Platt has gone up into Connecticut with a company headed by Florence LaBadie, the pretty Thanhouser star, to take the exteriors of the Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture, "The Five Faults of Flo," which will be released later. Harris Gordon is playing opposite Miss LaBadie in this picture which pictures the five faults of a beautiful girl—one in each reel, being pride, envy, fickleness, extravagance and jealousy.

Director Eugene Nolan is producing another forthcoming Mutual Thanhouser release in the drama, "In the Name of the Law," in which Gladys Hulette, Morris Foster and John Lendberg are being featured. There are several comedies under way at the Thanhouser studios, Arthur Cunningham, Barbara Gilroy, Ethel Jewett and Carey L. Hastings are appearing in one picture, at present being produced by Arthur Ellery. The title of it is "Reforming Rubbering Rosie." Claude Cooper is playing the lead in a second comedy, "Hilda's Husky Mother." He is supported by Louise Emerald Bates and Frances Kayes. This comedy will be released late in December.

At the studios in Los Angeles, the Signal company is engaged in the production of the thrilling new serial, "The Girl and the Game."

Miss Helen Holmes, the "railroad girl," lead in "The Girl and the Game," new Mutual photoplay in chapters, is being put through experiences sufficient to terrify the ordinary girl. These, coupled with real railroad "color," splendid direction and photography are making of the Signal production the most realistic series of its kind ever produced.

The first release will appear December 13.

"Mice and Men" Company Returns.

Marguerite Clark and the supporting cast sent to Savannah, Ga., by the Famous Players to film "Mice and Men" for the Paramount Program, have returned to New York, after spending three weeks in the South.

"Mice and Men," which was written by Madeline Lucetto Ryley, was first produced at the Royal Academy, Manchester, in 1901. As a result of its great success it was again staged in London at the Lyric. Its production in England is associated with the distinguished names of Sir Johnston and Lady Forbes-Robertson, who starred in the play on the other side. In 1903 "Mice and Men" made its first appearance in the United States at the Garrick theater when Annie Russell starred in the piece supported by her own company, the playing proving to be one of the season's greatest hits. The scene of the story is laid in the South.

The subject was produced under the direction of J. Searle Dawley, and among those who comprised the cast in support of Miss Clark were Clarence Handyside, Charles Waldron and others of theatrical importance.

Comments on the Films

Exclusively by Our Own Staff.

General Film Company

AN AMBASSADOR FROM THE DEAD (Lubin), Nov. 22.—Paul Powell, the writer and producer of this one-reel drama, has gone to a new shop for his material. His theme has the merit of novelty and he has fashioned it into a worth while photoplay. Melvin Mayo, L. C. Shumway, Velma Whitman and George Routh meet every requirement.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 93, 1915 (Selig), Nov. 22.—The start of the Liberty Bell from San Francisco on its homeward journey leads the list. The other items include: Sunday closing riots, Chicago; football game at Deaf and Dumb school, Washington; burning opium pipes and drugs, San Francisco; Russian official war films; Yale-Princeton football game, New Haven; monster searchlight, Los Angeles; big fire, Cambridge, Mass.; man drops ninety feet, Haverhill, Mass.; tornado, Great Bend, Kans.

LOVE AND LAW (Vitagraph), Nov. 22.—William Duncan is the author and also the leading actor in this one-reel comedy, which has its full share of funny situations. Mr. Duncan plays his role cleverly. George Stanley and Ann Drew also do good work.

OH, DOCTOR (Kalem), Nov. 23.—The supply of burlesque comedy in this one-reel picture is copious and of admirable quality. Bud Duncan, Charles Inslee, Harry Griffith, Ethel Teare, Margaret Rand and a leaky water pipe are the cause of the hilarity.

LIMBERGER'S VICTORY (Lubin), Nov. 23.—A burlesque on the once popular war drama is treated in the most irresponsibly comic manner during the progress of this one-reel farce. Edwin McKim, the author and producer, is ably seconded by the efforts of D. L. Don, George Egan, Alice Mann and John I. Delson.

ANIMATED CARTOON DRAWINGS OF GREATER NEW YORK (Essanay), Nov. 24.—The novelty, skill and interest in the subject should make this animated cartoon a popular success. The whole thing is surprisingly well done. Scenes in the Canadian Rockies are on the same reel.

SONNY JIM AND THE FAMILY PARTY (Vitagraph), Nov. 24.—This is a Thanksgiving day story and Sonny's adventures in search of his holiday turkey are very amusing. Tefft Johnson has filled the reel with familiar touches of human nature, and the climax will be relished nearly as well as Sonny does his dinner. Bobby Connelly is as cute as ever as the small hero.

THE MAN FROM TOWN (Biograph), Nov. 25.—Alan Hale and Isabel Rea have the leading parts in this one-reel drama. The story does not sound any great dramatic depths, but has considerable action, and virtue triumphs over vice in the most approved fashion. It is well acted and produced.

FLORENCE TURNER IMPERSONATES FILM FAVORITES (MinA), Nov. 25.—A thoroughly delightful bit of Miss Turner's mimicry at its best. It is a gem of an offering to brighten a program, but will appeal only to those who have seen some pictures, enough to know the difference in the brands. It is reviewed at more length on page 1505 issue of Nov. 20, 1915.

GHOSTS AND FLYPAPER (Vitagraph), Nov. 25.—A rattling good one-reel comedy, written by Louis B. Rose, the flypaper episode of this picture would start a mummy to chuckling. Anne Schaefer, Marguerite Reed, George Kunkel, Albert Vosburgh and Otto Lederer give a spirited performance of the picture. Produced by Ulysses Davis.

BRONCHO BILLY'S LOVE AFFAIR (Essanay), Nov. 26.—The contrasting scenes of life in the rough and in polite society are a prominent factor in the success of this one-reel drama. The story is a deft piece of work, and G. M. Anderson fits snugly into the part of the hero. Ruth Saville, the new leading woman of the company, is a valuable acquisition.

A SOCIETY SCHEMER (No. 5 of "The Ventures of Marguerite"—Kalem), Nov. 26.—In this number of the Marguerite series, the young lady is pursued by a fortune hunter, a valuable necklace having considerable to do with keeping up the interest. The story was written by A. Van Buren Powell and produced by John E. Mackin. Miss Courtot and her gowns are as attractive as ever.

MEG O' THE CLIFFS (Lubin), Nov. 26.—The amount of good old-fashioned melodrama in this one-reel photoplay will delight lovers of the theatric. Maude Thomas' tale is an excellent one of its class and has been effectively produced by Melvin Mayo. Violet McMillan is pleasing as the unkempt heroine, and L. C. Shumway, Melvin Mayo, J. B. Brice, Vivian Caples, Jay Morley and Adelaide Bronti complete a competent cast.

PRESSING BUSINESS Vim), Nov. 26.—A generous supply of knock-about comedy will be found in this one-reel farce. The producer has kept everyone moving to quick time, and each individual member of the cast seems to enjoy his work.

ALL FOR THE LOVE OF A GIRL (Vitagraph), Nov. 26.—L. Case Russell, the author of this one-reel comedy, has invented a new and laughable phase of the Woman Suffrage question, and furnished Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew with neatly fitting parts. Mr. Drew's sure-fire comedy methods are bound to result in explosions of laughter all through the reel.

ROSES OF MEMORY (Edison), Nov. 27.—An appealing little romance is told in this one-reel drama, written by Edward S. Kern. The incidents are well chosen and put together in a workmanlike manner. Edward Earle, Bessie Learn, Augustus Phillips and T. Tamaoto leave nothing to be desired in the playing.

THE DYNAMITE TRAIN (Episode No. 55 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Kalem), Nov. 27.—There are a number of extra-special "thrillers" in this installment of the "Hazards," the saving of a man by Helen while riding on the pilot of a locomotive being among the best. E. W. Matlack's scenario is a vigorous one, and Helen Gibson and her support bring out all the points.

BLAMING THE DUCK OR DUCKING THE BLAME (Lubin), Nov. 27.—Straight comedy is the keynote of this one-reel offering, in which Billie Reeves plays the leading role. The comic situations are decidedly laughable, and Earle Metcalf shows excellent judgment in his production of the reel. Mr. Reeves, Carrie Reynolds, Jessie Terry and the rest of the cast do justice to their task.

TWO DAUGHTER'S OF EVE (Biograph), Nov. 26.—Another D. W. Griffith reissue, played by Henry Walthall, Claire McDowell, Lillian Gish, Elmer Booth, Walter Miller, Gertrude Bambrick, Antonio Moreno and Madge Kirby. The story is a contrasting one of domestic life and the stage, told in Director Griffith's swift and illuminating method.

General Film Company Specials.

THE MODEL'S ADVENTURE (Kalem), Nov. 22.—Art student life in the Latin Quarter of Paris is treated interestingly in this three-reel photoplay. The love interest centers in an American sculptor and his model. The plot moves along with commendable speed, and the atmosphere of the studio is maintained with skill. Paul Gilmore is excellent as the sculptor, and Phllo McCollough, Alma Reuben and Ethel Fleming complete a well-chosen quartet.

A THING OR TWO IN MOVIES (Chronicles of Bloom Center, No. 4—Selig), Nov. 22.—A very amusing burlesque on the taking of motion pictures is the subject of this installment of the Maibelle Heikes Justice and Wm. Lord Wright serial. The many odd types of character in Bloom Center, Constable Plum, Chubby Green, Postmaster Pash, Selina Tubbs, and the rest, are as funny as ever, and director Marshall Nellan has given them plenty of laughable business.

THE PAPERED DOOR (Essanay), No. 23.—The situation in this two-reel photoplay which gives the offering its title is adroitly led up to by the author, Mary Roberts Rinehart. The story and characters are filled with human nature and dramatic appeal. Ruth Stonehouse is pathetic as a neglected wife, and Edmund F. Cobb, Thurlow Brewer and Peggy Sweeney are equally proficient in their respective roles.

AN ENEMY OF MANKIND (Kalem), Nov. 24.—In the first two-part episode in the series of "Stingaree" stories, written by E. W. Hornung and produced by the Kalem Company, exhibitors will find an interesting drama very well acted by True Boardman, William Brunton, Marin Sais and others in a well-balanced cast.

THE REPROACH OF ANNESLEY (Biograph), Nov. 24.—An adaptation of a novel by Maxwell Gray, released by the Biograph Company in three reels. The story is finely produced and reasonably interesting in the development of the situation arising out of the love of three men for one woman. Jack Drumier, Franklin Ritchie, Louise Vale and Herbert Barrington are in the cast.

THE MEDDLESOME DARLING (Lubin), Nov. 24.—Shannon Fife has given an entirely new turn to a plot that starts out on the old track. "The Meddlesome Darling" is not a happy title, but Mr. Shannon's two-reel drama has life, interest and is carefully constructed. His treatment of an elderly woman, played by Marie Sterling, makes her almost the central figure of the picture. The remainder of the capable cast is composed of Francis Joyner, Lilie Leslie, Kempton Greene, Rosetta Brice and William Cohill.

AS THE TWIG IS BENT (Lubin), Nov. 25.—A review of this picture is printed in this same issue.

THE RING OF THE BORGIAS (Edison), Nov. 26.—A four-reel melodrama of modern life, interesting in plot, and well acted. A review of the picture was printed in the issue of November 27, on page 1674.

SAINTS AND SINNERS (Vitagraph), Nov. 23.—The material for a strong, closely woven photodrama has been supplied by Ouida Bergere, in this three-reel picture. The situations are highly dramatic and demand earnest and intelligent work at the hands of the company. Maurice Costello, Leah Baird, Adele De Garde, Paul Doucet, Garry McGarry, Van Dyke Brooke and Betty Young are equal to the task assigned them. Mr. Brooke's production of the picture is excellent.

THE EDGE OF THINGS (Essanay), Nov. 27.—In the character of Betty Marsh, the heroine of this three-reel drama of modern life, Edna

Mayo has one of those sympathetic roles which she plays so convincingly. The plot has many fine dramatic moments, and Miss Mayo's embodiment of a young girl fighting the battle of life unaided, is human and sincere. Bryant Washburn's share in the picture is in line with his past record—thoroughly honest and satisfying.

A "MODEL" WIFE (Vitagraph), Nov. 27.—This two-reel photoplay is classed as a comedy-drama. It was written by E. Lawrence Gibson, and runs more to comedy than to tense situations. However, it is bright and amusing, and affords Lilian Walker an outlet for the display of her dimples, high spirits and command of her art. Antonio Moreno, Louise Beaudet, L. Rogers Lytton, Lillian Burns and Helen Pillsbury are also in the cast.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE BROKEN LAW Nov. 22.—Oscar Apfel produced this sensational and generally interesting five-part melodrama with William Farnum in the role of a young literary man who becomes the leader of a Romany tribe. The picture contains a number of stirring incidents and is adequately acted by Mr. Farnum and those in his support, including Dorothy Bernard.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE (Popular Plays and Players), Nov. 29.—Mary Miles Minter makes a beautiful Barbara Frietchie in a stirring picture based on Whittier's poem and the play by Clyde Fitch. The director was successful in suggesting the atmosphere of a southern town in war time. Guy Coombs, Wallace Scott, Mrs. Thomas W. Whiffen and Fraunie Fraunholz are prominent in a well-chosen cast.

A YELLOW STREAK (Columbus), Dec. 6.—Lionel Barrymore is seen at his best in this strong five-part drama produced by the Columbia Corporation for the Metro program. As author and director, William Nigh must be credited with one of the best pictures offered by Metro in some time. The story is convincing and the character portrayals are excellent, with Irene Howley and others giving Mr. Barrymore adequate support.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 47 (Mutual), Nov. 19.—A variety of well-photographed events makes this an interesting number. The subjects include a test of a new sea-sled; a parade of decorated automobiles at Sterling, Ill.; practice with big guns; deaf and dumb students playing football, and an assortment of scenes taken near the battle front in Europe.

THE WIDOW WINS (Casino), Nov. 28.—A bright farce based on the efforts of a press agent to get sensational publicity for his star, presented with considerable humor by Cissy Fitzgerald. The story is cleverly developed and makes more than ordinarily good entertainment. Miss Fitzgerald is just the actress for a role of this description.

CHARLIE'S TWIN SISTER (Novelty), Nov. 29.—In this comedy Charlie tries to get even with Harry, his college chum, for leaving him to foot it from town to his home burdened by a heavy suit case. Charlie finding his sister out dresses in one of her evening gowns, and interviews a gentleman burglar who attempts an invasion of the house. Harry comes on the scene also, and some amusing times ensue.

SEEING AMERICA FIRST, No. 12, "Lake Mohonk, N. Y." (Gaumont), Nov. 30.—This number of the series gives some interesting views of Mohonk Lake and vicinity. As is usual with "See America First" films, it is well photographed and instructive. On the same reel with the Harry Palmer cartoon, "Keeping Up With the Joneses."

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES (Gaumont), Nov. 30.—In this number Pa McGinis gets an opportunity to make himself famous as a lecturer on affairs at the battle front. Some cats in the back yards of neighboring buildings add color to the scene by attempting to furnish sound effects.

BETTY BURTON, M. D. (Novelty), Dec. 1.—A western-comedy in which a young woman doctor, upon coming to the western town, is besieged with cowboy patients, all of whom pretend to have some ailment. The climax comes when one of the boys really becomes ill, and at first disinclined to believe him, she at last cares for him, and the result is a match of permanent duration.

CHECKING CHARLIE'S CHILD (Falstaff), Dec. 2.—In this comedy the mother of the child goes to a bridge party and leaves the youngster with its father. Charlie's employer takes objection to his time in the office being spent taking care of his child. The child is, therefore taken to a department store by the porter and checked at the nursery. A mixup of babies occurs later because the porter loses the check.

A SHOTGUN ROMANCE (Cub), Dec. 3.—George Ovey manages to get a few laughs out of conventional slapstick situations. He is capably supported by players who make the most of not very inspiring opportunities. A fair offering.

A TANGLE IN HEARTS (Casino), Dec. 5.—Rather an amusing comedy in which the affairs of Cupid go far astray of their mark. The comedy will be found amusing, although the plot is slight.

THE HOUSE PARTY AT CARSON MANOR (Thanhouser), Dec. 5.—This is a weird sort of a story that is, however, none the less interesting on this account. The cousin of a wealthy young man with the aid of an East Indian chemist tries to do away with him so that she can gain possession of his money, which is scheduled to come to her by right of inheritance at his death. A rose tree sprayed with a deadly poison causes her own death as well as that of the gardener of her cousin's home, while the intended victim remains uninjured.

MINNIE, THE MEAN MANICURIST (Falstaff), Dec. 6.—Rather an amusing comedy in which Minnie takes a position as manicurist in a barber shop, and vents her spite in various disagreeable ways. The ordinary audience will find considerable food for laughter in this picture.

PRETENSES (Beauty), Dec. 7.—An amusing comedy in which a guard in a bank and the daughter of an engineer of a steam roller meet and leave in each other's minds rather elevated impressions of each other's social importance. These impressions are cleverly presented in the picture through double exposure scenes. A good deal of amusement will be found in this picture.

CLARENCE CHEATS AT CROQUET (Falstaff), Dec. 9.—This is an ordinary sort of comedy in which two rival lovers have differences, and the one wins out because of his honesty; or rather Clarence gets in wrong because he cheats at croquet. There is considerable amusement to be got out of the comedy.

NOBODY'S HOME (Beauty), Dec. 11.—In this amusing one-reel comedy a young couple elope, and rent a beautiful home for a day, just to make believe that the young man is very rich. The parents of the contracting parties meet in a very unusual manner, both desiring to buy the identical house that has been rented by the young couple. The affair ends in the home being bought for the young people.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

LITTLE CAPTAIN OF THE SCOUTS (Thanhouser), Nov. 9—A two-reel number with a slight plot. The girl's little brother has a liking for toy soldiers. He is mischievous, but she hopes to make a gentleman of him. He joins the Boy Scouts. Later a young cadet arrives from West Point, who brings home the little brother when he becomes lost. Of course the West Point man wins the girl's heart. The number has some interesting action, but the plot could have been much stronger.

FATHER AND SON (Reliance), Nov. 10.—A three-reel production bearing on the labor question. The story is rather overdrawn according to its development in film, and the characterizations are not consistent. For instance, we can hardly conceive of a man of the cruel nature of the father and proprietor of the box factory changing his ideas to such an extent, and on such quick notice, as to disguise himself and go among his employes in order to discover real conditions and the thoughts of these people in connection with himself.

LESSONS IN LOVE (Rialto), Dec. 1.—The cast of this three-reel production include Lucille Taft, Hal Forde, James Levering, Helen Marten and others. The story of this picture hardly called for three reels of film in which to tell it, and the production is not quite up to the standard of other Rialto productions we have seen.

STANLEY AND THE VOO DOO WORSHIPPERS (Centaur), Dec. 2.—A two-part picture with Mona Darkfeather, Capt. Jack Bonavita and others usually in the cast of Centaur animal pictures. The atmosphere of the production is very well maintained, and the story as it progresses is fairly interesting, although we must admit that the oftener the animal actors make their appearance the more pleasing the picture is. The elephant, the lions, the tiger, leopards, etc., that the Horsley menagerie affords are not without their charms.

HIS VOCATION (Thanhouser), Dec. 7.—An interesting two-part drama in which a young woman and a man with whom she has fallen in love at a summer hotel finds out afterward the cause of his sudden withdrawal from her society. It happens that he is a clown in a circus, and concludes that she would never marry a man of his vocation. One day, however, when the circus is visiting her home town, her little sister who is very ill, cries to be allowed to go to the circus. A clown from the circus consents to come to the house to do funny tricks for the child's amusement, and turns out to be the young man of the summer hotel. The friendship is cemented, and afterward a wedding ceremony is performed.

THE BUZZARD'S SHADOW (Mutual Masterpicture—American—No. 50), Dec. 9.—A very effective five-reel feature with Harold Lockwood, May Allison, Harry Von Meter, William Stowell and other competent players in the cast. The story tells of the villainy of a surgeon stationed at a U. S. Army post at the edge of the great American desert. His victim is a young scout who is sent on a special mission over the desert. He pours poison over the sugar which the young scout carries with him to feed to his horse. A special review of this picture will be found on another page of this issue.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

CHIMMIE FADDEN OUT WEST (Lasky), Nov. 22.—A laughable subject featuring Victor Moore. This picture, like its predecessor, is filled with humorous situations and is bound to please. A review of this feature can be found on page 1680 in last week's issue.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF J. RUFUS WALLINGFORD, No. 9, "Detective Blackie" (Pathe), Nov. 29.—The ninth episode is entitled "Detective Blackie." In this episode the confidence men relieve the town of Spangerville, and incidentally one Henry Closby of the dishonest financial clique, of $60,000, on behalf of the Ward girls, whose father suffered losses at the hands of said clique. The episode is a good one, containing many amusing situations.

NEAL OF THE NAVY, NO. 14, "The White Gods" (Panama Films), Dec. 2.—The last but one of this series shows us the life of the chief characters of the play among the cannibals on the desert island upon which they have all been cast through the machinations of the villain Hernandez. It is intensely interesting and leads easily toward the climax of the next episode.

THE HOUSE OF FEAR (Gold Rooster Play), Dec. 3.—A five-reel adaptation of one of the John T. McIntyre stories in which Ashton-Kirk, Investigator, appears. Arnold Daly is the star, supported by Jeanne Eagels, Charles Kraus, Sheldon Lewis and others equally competent. A full review of this splendidly staged melo-drama appears on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 194 (Universal), Nov. 24.—An entertaining collection of views, picturing the Liberty Bell in transit, Dr. Haiselden, a 71-mile gale in New York City, war scenes and others.

A SAPHEAD'S REVENGE (L-KO), Dec. 5.—An eccentric comedy number, featuring Peggy Pearce, Ray Griffith and others. The girl goes to a dance with one admirer and the other puts soft soap on the floor. The fun is of a rough, knockabout sort and the number proves fairly amusing.

THEIR QUIET HONEYMOON (Nestor), Dec. 6.—A good comedy number by Al. E. Christie, featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Betty Compson and Jane Walier. The situation of the two young married couples at the some hotel is very amusing. Polite farce comedy of an appealing sort.

SLIM, FAT OR MEDIUM (Imp), Dec. 7.—A "rube" comedy number, by Roy Clements, featuring Victor Potel and Lillian Hamilton. The girl is wooed by numerous suitors and some funny small business is pictured. A pleasing number of this particular type.

THE AWAKENING OF PATSEY (Victory), Dec. 8.—No. 2 of the "Little Stories from Real Life," by Jacques Jaccard. Peggy Conrady, A. D. Blake and Raymond Russell, play the leads. A good story of theatrical life from behind the scenes. Interesting and well handled throughout.

THE FROLIC OF THE MARIONETTES (Powers), Dec. 9.—A half-reel number, picturing Prof. Charlarte's performing manikins, a familiar vaudeville act. The stage settings are elaborate for this type of act and it is quite pleasing.

A Ditmars educational subject will be released on same reel, to be entitled "Nature's Monstrosities."

KEEPING IT DARK (Nestor), Dec. 10.—A good comedy number by Gertrude Hynes, with Stella Adams, Harry Rottenberry, Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher in the cast. The newly-married couple say nothing of their children, but employ them secretly as servants. This handles familiar subject matter in a new and enjoyable way.

Universal Film Mfg. Company, Specials.

THE PHANTOM FORTUNE (Gold Seal), Nov. 30.—A three-reel offering, by L. V. Jefferson, featuring Hobart Henley, Louella Maxam and others. The gilded son is a young man whose parents have sacrificed everything to let him have his way. He almost stuns them by marrying a moving picture actress, but all turns out well in the end. The plot has numerous stock elements and doesn't get up much real feeling. At the same time the cast is agreeable, the scenes are interesting and it makes, on the whole, quite good entertainment.

THE WHITE SCAR (Broadway Universal Feature), Dec. 6.—This five-part subject, starring Hobart Bosworth, has strong dramatic quality, is well acted and finely photographed. It is staged in picturesque backgrounds. It was review at length in the issue of November 27.

THE ROAD TO PARADISE (Universal Special Feature), Dec. 6.—This two-reel number is the last episode in the new series of Terence O'Rourke adventures. J. Warren Kerrigan, Harold Holland, Lois Wilson, Harry Carter, and Maude George appear. In this Terence is suddenly called by Beatrix to save her from an unwelcome marriage alliance with Duke Victor. The number is well-constructed and full of interest. A duel with swords makes a good feature. A good number.

IDOLS OF CLAY (Gold Seal), Dec. 7.—A three-reel number, written and produced by Robert Leonard, who also plays the leading role. He is assisted by Ella Hall, who does some delightful work, first as the little girl who idolizes her man of clay and later as the mature woman whose love remains true after his release from prison, where he had been sent for another's crime. The story is one that gets a strong hold on the sympathies and is much better than the average offering. The close is effective.

SIN ON THE SABBATH (L-KO), Dec. 8.—A two-reel low comedy number, featuring Billy Ritchie, Louise Orth, Gene Rogers, Reggie Morris and Alice Howell. Billy appears first as an unfortunate flirt and later as clerk in a drug store. His job is to dispense booze to men customers in the back room. The situation around which the story is built is familiar to the average small town resident and has a humorous side. There is some funny business in this, particularly in the closing scenes, where the back room is suddenly converted into a place of worship. When the women appear the men are reading Scripture lessons and singing hymns.

THE LITTLE LADY ACROSS THE WAY (Imp), Dec. 10.—A sparkling comedy number in two reels, by May B. Havey, in which smiling Matt Moore and Jane Gail make a reappearance on the screen after a considerable absence. Matt's experience with his first sweetheart renders him something of a woman hater. His unconventional neighbor breaks up his peevishness and makes his world brighter. The number is unusually pleasing, though the one-piece bathing suit is out of place in polite comedy

THE LION'S WARD (Bison), Dec. 11.—A three-reel number, by James Dayton, featuring George Williams, Betty Schade, Paul Bourgeous and Countess Martina. The story is located in the African jungle and is much like numerous predecessors. The plot is not particularly strong and merely serves to display lions, leopards and other beasts in their native haunts. The story is a little slow compared with previous offerings of the kind, though the settings are very good throughout.

V-L-S-E, Inc., Specials.

THE NATION'S PERIL (Lubin), Nov. 22.—Another well-defined plea for prepardeness, this five-reel drama contains a number of realistic battle scenes and is acted by a thoroughly capable cast. The scenes are laid around Newport.

Edison Busy with Kleine-Edison Features.

The Bronx Studios of the Edison Company resound to the hum of clicking Cooper-Hewitts, the husky voices of hard-working producers and the hammer of scene crews in the "finishing touch" process now being given the Edison output scheduled for release during the late winter and early spring through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

"The Destroying Angel," a five-part drama featuring Mabel Trunnelle and Marc MacDermott, was completed last week and is now being shipped to Kleine-Edison branches. In the opinion of critics neither Mabel Trunnelle or Marc MacDermott has ever done better work than that in "The Destroying Angel." Incidentally, this is the first feature in which these popular players appear together. "The Destroying Angel" is scheduled for release December 8.

Work is progressing rapidly on a number of other Edisons which will feature Viola Dana, Marc MacDermott, Miriam Nesbit and Mabel Trunnelle. "The Catspaw," founded on William Hamilton Osborne's celebrated novel of that name, is almost ready for preliminary screening. The theme of Osborne's "The Catspaw" is too well known to require comment. The leads have been placed in the able hands of Miriam Nesbit and Marc MacDermott.

Viola Dana, that winsome beauty whose extraordinary work in "Children of Eve" added a host of friends to her legions of admirers, is busily engaged in the filming of a five-reel story entitled "The Innocence of Ruth," by William Addison Lathrop. Edward Earle, a newcomer in the Edison ranks, will play opposite Miss Dana. Her talent and originality, coupled with her beauty and enviable popularity, are sure to commend "The Innocence of Ruth" to exhibitors.

One of the recent scenario acquisitions on which Edison producers place great faith is a recently purchased script called "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong." This is an unusually good story for film purposes, possessed of great originality of theme and many striking incidents. It is founded on the well-known novel of that name by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," "His Brother's Keeper," "Born to Save," etc.

"The Crucifixion of Philip Strong" will feature Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness. It is adapted for the screen by Francis M. Neilson.

"The Other Girl," the successful Augustus Thomas stage play which is being filmed by the Raver Film Corporation, has several scenes which are laid in and about a physical culture health resort. In the original stage production Mr. Thomas staged these scenes about the William Muldoon Health Farm at White Plains, N. Y., where many millionaires repair their health.

Mr. Muldoon is considered somewhat of a czar on his farm. His command must be obeyed to the letter and he will not let anything interfere with the daily routine which starts at four in the morning and lasts until eight in the evening. It was therefore with no little difficulty that permission was secured to utilize his property.

Mr. Muldoon had never seen pictures taken before. In fact, he had never seen a motion picture and was somewhat averse to having his system broken into when the players arrived and he learned what they wanted. When his old friend James J. Corbett, who is being starred in this picture, appeared on the scene he readily gave his consent. After he watched the people at work for some time he became deeply interested, so much so that he consented to appear in several of the scenes and invited the players to stay for a week. As all of them were in good health and four o'clock in the morning is earlier than they are accustomed to rising, they decided that they would sooner take pictures in the studio in Staten Island.

Many of the trainers and some of the exclusive paraphernalia to be found only on the Muldoon farm appear in the picture, giving the scenes the atmosphere called for in Mr. Thomas' script.

New M-in-A Posters Are Receiving Praise.

The innovation of semi-cartoonic posters by M-in-A Comedies has proven successful, judging from the large number of complimentary letters which the company has received from exhibitors throughout the country.

Not satisfied with the regular style one-sheet and believing that a comedy film deserved something unique in the line of advertising, M-in-A Comedies hit upon the plan of a semi-cartoonic one-sheet. Every week this one-sheet caricatures some particularly ludicrous scene of the current release.

Although the company finds these posters considerably more expensive and troublesome to make, the result seems to justify the added effort, as it enables the exhibitor to display something new and novel in advertising as well as putting a distinguishing character upon M-in-A Comedies.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE SILVER LINING" (Flying A).

It is said that "every cloud has a silver lining," and proof of the correctness of the moss-covered saying is artfully set forth in "The Silver Lining," which is a two-reel "Flying A" special to be released November 29 on the Mutual Program. Miss Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh are employed in the leading roles, and Roy Stewart, famed for his film villainy, is cast as the bold, bad man of the piece.

Vivian, in the role of Nell Allen, is a pretty stenographer.

Scene from "The Silver Lining" (American).

As is always the case, for dramatic purposes, the employer winkingly suggests that there is a way in which the young typist can better herself. Tearfully the girl runs to her father, who is at home hovering at death's door. Rather than have his daughter make the supreme sacrifice, the father commits a crime and is cast into prison. Nell obtains employment as a housekeeper. Her father escapes and in secret dwells with her The sheriff arrives and finds the old man dead.

Then, from behind the cloud, comes the silver lining. Richard Grant offers his heart and soul and is accepted. "The Silver Lining" throughout is teeming with pathos. Miss Rich gives a most capable interpretation of the role assigned her, as do the others in the cast.

"THE WHITE SCAR" (Broadway Universal).

Hobart Bosworth in the Universal Broadway Feature, "The White Scar," is at his best, while the play, which is of the Canadian Woods, of the great Wild, the Hudson trading posts, Indians, hunters, and trappers, is one in which all Mr. Bosworth's smooth acting ability can be displayed to the best of advantage. The story is a simple story of pure, honest love—and a villain. Love where all the world loves a lover, for the people of the North always look upon a loving couple as the most happy creatures on earth.

Mr. Bosworth is ably supported in "The White Scar" by Jane Novak, Anna Lehr, Frank Newburg, Norval McGregor and Ronald Bradbury. Mr. Bosworth plays Na-Ta-Wan-Gan, a white trader, which is the Indian for "great trapper," as he was known to all his Indian friends.

"The White Scar" will be released early in December.

COWBOYS PRESENT JACCARD WITH GUN.

In the future when Jacques Jaccard has occasion to employ a fire-arm to carry his orders to distant points among the hills he will use a fine, brand new, pearl-handled, blue-steel, thirty-eight Colt on a forty-five frame of Frontier model and he will carry this formidable weapon about with him in a hand-carved holster which will hang from a hand-carved leather cartridge belt. The weapon was given to him as a mark of respect and admiration by the cowboys who worked under his direction in the production of the five-reel feature, "A Knight of the Range," in which Harry Carey is starred.

LOU-TELLEGEN IN "THE UNKNOWN" (Lasky).

Lou-Tellegen, internationally famous as a romantic star of the stage, who for several years was leading man for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, having appeared with the famous French actress on two of her American tours, will make his second appearance in a Lasky production on the Paramount Program in "The Unknown," the first public showing of which has been set for December 9.

The scenes of "The Unknown" are laid in Algiers and on the great Sahara desert. The Foreign Legion is a military sanctuary, stationed on the edge of the desert, where men who have met with misfortune or disgrace may redeem their past by bravery and honorable service. No questions are asked and no papers are required to explain who or what they are when they make application for membership. A man is taken for what he is and not for what he was. Into this organization comes Lou-Tellegen, in the guise of an English ne'er do well. The captain of the company is called "Devil Destinn."

The romantic features of "The Unknown" are concerned with the adventures of the young Englishman, his love affair with an American girl and trouble with his captain. The production is lavish in detail. George Melford is the director and the cast includes Theodore Roberts, Dorothy Davenport, Hal Clements, Horace B. Carpenter, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton and other members of the Lasky stock company.

"THE RUN ON PERCY" (Selig).

"The Run on Percy," fifth in "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," is released in two reels on Monday, December 6th. Chubby Green, Johnny West, Selina Tubbs, and all the other Bloom Center characters which have proven so popular will be seen in "The Run on Percy."

Percy Pinkham has invested all his money in the "Bloom Center Bugle" and writes his old uncle asking for a loan. The uncle comes to investigate his nephew's conduct, and finds him playing poker. He writes Percy a note that he must marry some Bloom Center girl within twenty-four hours or he will be disinherited. Johnny West, correspondent for the County Seat newspaper, embodies the uncle's proposition in a newspaper story, and all the girls with matrimonial inclinations make a run on Percy.

Percy asks Margaret Tate to marry him at once. She agrees, but when she sees the newspaper story, she thinks Percy is mercenary and refuses to have anything to do with him.

Scene from "The Run on Percy" (Selig).

Percy avoids the crowd, sneaks home and writes a note to his uncle, saying that in justice to the girl he loves he cannot marry within twenty-four hours. Then he goes to Margaret and tells her that he has sacrificed his ineritance for her. She then realizes that he truly loves her. Percy's uncle then writes a letter to his nephew, stating that his previous letter was only a plot to make Percy realize the seriousness of life and the value of a good wife.

Le Saint Talks on Adaptations

Says the Williamsons' Story of "The Journal of Lord John" Is Admirably Suited to the Screen.

RECENTLY remarked E. J. Le Saint, feature director at the Universal's Pacific Coast studios: "As a rule, I believe there is no other work that picture producers dislike to handle more than the adaptation of novels, however popular those novels may have been in book form. The reason is obvious to picture people, for they realize just how difficult it usually is to picturize the action which is told so simply in the printed words of the story. It sounds very simple when the story is read. It may be full of action and oftentimes the inappropriateness of that action for a screen presentation does not occur to the producer until he makes the attempt.

"In the production of this recent work of C. N. and A. M. Williamson, 'The Journal of Lord John,' however, I must admit that I have run into the exception to the rule. There is present throughout the entire story exactly the type of action that lends itself most readily to film presentation. It is specially strange coming from these authors, for in the rest of their works this particular type of action is far from predominant, which would make it appear that they had studied the requirements of the screen before attempting to write for it—a process, by the way, which might be emulated to good advantage by other prospective scenario writers, whatever literary experience they may have had.

"Throughout its entire length the plot hangs together unusually well. There is action a-plenty without reverting to the melodramatic, and despite its continuity of action the episodes are so arranged as to make it not imperative that the spectator see all of them to appreciate any one of them. I should say, in fact, that the story as a whole is admirably adapted to the use the company intends to make of it—a connected series."

KARR SAYS "HOME" IS FICTION.

Darwin Karr, a leading man for the Essanay company, smiles when he hears that the photoplay actor has a chance at home-life that the touring actor never has an opportunity to enjoy. He says that statement sounds to him like the enchanted lands that were reached by boarding a magic carpet in the tales he used to read when he was a youngster. The reason for his cynicism is made up of a series of circumstances, which if seen in the cards would have told Mr. Karr that he was to travel.

Mr. Karr signed up with Essanay in the east last summer, joining Joseph Byron Totten, Essanay director in Connecticut. Mr. Totten with his eastern company traveled through Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New York, making photoplays. Then he returned to Essanay's Chicago studio and Mr. Karr was with him. Three days after the leading man's arrival, he went to Tennessee on a picture. Finishing there, his director got orders via telegraph to proceed to Georgia to take some scenes there. On his return to Chicago this time, Mr. Karr was ordered down to Indiana on another picture. A camera vidette that penetrated the wilds of upper Wisconsin on a hunt for exteriors carried Mr. Karr as one of the riders. So when you talk to him of home-life, he smiles and agrees with you and admits that it must be nice.

BILLIE BURKE STUDIES PICTURES.

Miss Billie Burke is devoting a considerable part of her time to studying the obverse side of the picture game to the one she saw while making "Peggy" at the Triangle-Ince studio. She is often to be seen at the Knickerbocker theater looking at the excellent films supervised by Ince, Griffith or Sennet and noting the modes of appreciation and the relative popularity of the respective stars and plays. In fact Miss Burke is rapidly getting the film eye and will soon be an unequalled authority on the public as well as the theatrical side of photographic appreciation.

The extraordinary success this and the last two seasons of generic plays dealing with provincial character types and locales have lent extraordinary interest to Miss Burke's vehicle in filmland entitled "Peggy." Advance reports from the coast say it is as striking a depiction of Scottish character and temperament as was "Peg O' My Heart" for the Irish and middle class English types; "Hobson's Choice" for Lancashire and "Quinneys" for the Yorkshireman. Miss Burke, as is well known, is part Scottish by ancestry. She said the other day at the Knickerbocker that filming "Peggy" was a sheer delight, so beautifully were the scenes adjusted to the Scottish Highlands, and so faithfully had the characteristic Highland atmosphere been preserved.

EXCHANGEMEN WANT RAVER PRODUCT.

For the purpose of negotiating for the territorial rights of the Raver Film corporation productions the following exchangemen called on Harry Raver, president of the company, in the past few days: J. F. Cuberly, general manager, Zenith Feature Film company, Duluth, Minn.; I. H. Kuh, E-I-K Film company, Chicago; N. Palley, manager, United Film service, Detroit, Mich.; William J. Benedict, Kriterion company of Boston, and J. E. Donahue, Union Film and Supply company of Boston.

THEATRICAL HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

If you had happened to be in front of Grace Church recently at 6 o'clock in the morning you would have witnessed a scene which, strangely enough, was a replica of one which occurred just thirty years ago. At that time Denman Thompson, searching for a background for posters to be used in the exploitation of "The Old Homestead," was photographed while posing before the old church in his familiar make-up as the venerable rustic character which he made famous the country over. Frank Losee, who is playing the Thompson role in the Famous Players Film Company's adaptation of "The Old Homestead," stood before the same old church in the same attitude assumed by his predecessor, garbed in a duplicate of the costume which Mr. Thompson wore thirty years ago. This time, instead of the still picture, the motion picture camera caught the moving figure, for Mr. Losee, after holding the position for a second, walked quietly away from the church, as though he had just been attending service there.

PREMIER PROGRAM SALES DEPARTMENT.

John W. Heaney has associated himself with the Premier Program in connection with the Sales Department. Mr. Heaney is well known throughout the motion picture industry, with which he has been connected for several years past, having at various times successfully exploited pictures.

"The Japanese Torpedo Boat in a Storm," which excited such favorable comment when shown at the Strand in New York, was among Mr. Heaney's best-known efforts, the picture being owned and marketed by him.

Mr. Heaney's early commercial experience started in the financial district, but for many years past he has confined his attention to motion pictures, in which industry he has been deservedly successful and popular.

NEW ENGLAND BEING SHOWN IN "SEE AMERICA FIRST."

The Mutual Scenic series, "See America First," produced by the Gaumont Co., is now showing scenes in New England. Boston has been released, and the next reel will give interesting animated views of a trip through the Berkshires, including a trip to an immense paper manufacturing establishment. Following this will come pictures of Portland, Me., and the White Mountains. On the same reel with these are animated cartoons by Harry Palmer, giving the adventures of Pa and his family in "Keeping up with the Joneses."

FORTY GOLD KING SCREENS IN ONE ORDER.

S. H. Jones, president of the Gold King Screen Co., of Altus, Okla., recently secured an order for forty Gold King screens from the University of Oklahoma, to be used throughout the state in the various schools for demonstrations in the Agricultural Department. Mr. Jones made a demonstration of his celebrated screen before a committee headed by J. W. Scroogs, the director at Norman, Okla., and Mr. Jones was given the order with no hesitation.

"BIG VOICE GIRL" NOW A UNIVERSALITE.

"The girl with the big voice" is the latest recruit to the pictures. This is Marjorie Lake, who has been heard in vaudeville for the past three years and who has just concluded an engagement on the Orpheum Circuit.

Miss Lake joined the forces of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universial City this week, and has become a member of the Joseph De Grasse Company. Mr. De Grasse cast Miss Lake for a role which fits her most satisfactorily and needless to say, she is extremely happy in her new work.

Miss Lake is blessed with the happiest of dispositions, and she radiates joy to every one about her. Miss Lake's wonderful voice was heard for some five years in musical comedy, and during that period she directed her own company.

UNIVERSAL DUPLICATES MOULIN ROUGE.

Good examples of fidelity to detail are numerous in a recent creation of Leon Kent in his production of F. McGrew Willis's three-reel drama, "Transgression." The story called for Paris atmosphere and its night life. Under the supervision of Mr. Kent a duplicate of the famous Moulin Rouge was made from photographs of the original. Of course, the fact that this director is a native of that city was largely responsible for the exactness of the imitation. Not content with having made a replica to defy detection, he went a step further and after long sessions with the master electrician found a way whereby the front of the building could be lighted just as it is lighted in reality. The necessary scenes before the edifice were made at night and the effect is little short of marvelous.

"The Wanderers," produced by William Wolbert, with Mary Ruby, who will be remembered for her excellent work in "The Lorelli Madonna;" William Duncan, of "The Chalice of Courage" fame; Hazel Buckham and Otto Lederer in the principal characters and "The Return of Eli Judson," directed by Dave Smith, with George Holt in a strong dual character, have been received by the Vitagraph Company at Flatbush from the Western Vitagraph Company at Los Angeles, California, and are listed for early release.

"THE SPY'S RUSE" (Kalem).

A novel invention for use in war that has really been found practicable in preliminary tests by Secretary Daniels' Naval Board of Advisors furnishes the principal element of interest in "The Spy's Ruse," a Kalem production that will be released December 31 as an episode in the "Ventures of Marguerite." The invention is a torpedo deflector, the work of a New York electrical expert. In model form it has been tested and approved so that mechanics are now at work on the construction of the apparatus in its real size for an actual demonstration with a navy Whitehead. The Kalem production shows the model as built and shown to the Advisory Board.

Kalem has enlisted the hearty co-operation of the engineer responsible for the torpedo deflector and it is promised that succeeding episodes of the "Ventures" will show many other products of his ingenuity, which are at present known only in scientific circles.

In "The Spy's Ruse" the deflector is made the object of interest to the representatives of a foreign government. Bob Winters, Marguerite's admirer, is the inventor of the apparatus which will deflect a torpedo in its course and turn it at right angles to the original aim. Bob's assistant becomes a tool of the foreign agents and succeeds in stealing the model on the day planned for a demonstration to the United States officials. Marguerite is thrust into the whirl of events when the thief, pursued by Secret Service men, hides in her auto and secures her help in eluding them by telling her that he is escaping from foreign agents who are endeavoring to steal Bob's invention. How the Secret Service men finally capture their man before the foreign agents can come into possession of the model, and how Marguerite is relieved from an exciting predicament is told in the closing scenes of this Kalem production.

MR. LASKY SAYS "THE CHEAT" IS GREATEST PLAY

It will come as a surprise to the thousands interested in motion pictures that Jesse L. Lasky, president of the producing firm which bears his name, believes that his company's production of "Carmen" with Geraldine Farrar as the star, has been equaled if not surpassed by a new production entitled "The Cheat," in which Fannie Ward appears as the star. Like "Carmen" it was produced by Cecil B. DeMille, and Mr. Lasky, in a letter to William W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, declares it is the best picture Mr. De Mille has made.

In view of the widespread praise which has come to the Lasky company since the release of "Carmen," with Miss Farrar as the star, it might be assumed that the Lasky company executives would be content with laurels which that notable production has brought to them.

MAYOR MITCHEL AND THE KIDLET CO-STARS.

Mayor Mitchel, city officials and the New York police force will play important roles in a motion picture in two parts which will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation. The picture is entitled "The Baby and the Boss" and deals with the plot of a little girl of six years old to get her favorite policeman promoted. The role of "the baby" is played by Helen Badgley, the Thanhouser "Kiddie."

Bob Ellis is to assume charge of Kalem's "Ventures of Marguerite" company. In addition to directing this series of single reel dramas featuring dainty Marguerite Courtot, Mr. Ellis will enact "heavy" roles.

"THE STAB" (Reliance).

"The Stab," Reliance feature, well illustrates certain advantages which the screen has over the stage. "The Stab" has to do with a crime and the all but conviction of an innocent man for it. George Landon, a business man, allows his wife, Ruth, to visit friends in a city some distance from her home. The wife, being a flighty woman, pretends to be unmarried and in this way attracts the attention of a number of admirers.

A number of exceedingly well-known Reliance players appear in the cast of "The Stab." Irene Hunt plays Ruth, the wife, with a full sense of her flighty values. Mabel Wiles is Alice, who, it is suggested, is eventually to make the bereaved father and his small son happy. Margerie Wilson, who appeared so successfully with Douglas Fairbanks in "Double Trouble," is Pauline. William Hinckley, who is usually cast in matinee idol parts, makes a fine characterization of George Landon, the business-man-husband. George Beranger and Charles Gill are also in "The Stab."

Chester Withey, known the country over as the author of the funny photoplays in which Fay Tincher and Ed "Komic" Dillion, gloom killers, appeared, shows his entire mastery and dramatic technique as the author of "The Stab." He uses dramatic values as certainly as he did pure comedy values. His photoplay was produced by Director Fred J. Butler.

"THE BUZZARD'S SHADOW" (American).

The great American desert is the setting of "The Buzzard's Shadow," a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, produced by American Film Company, and carded for release December 9. "The Buzzard's Shadow" is a spectacular production with Harold Lockwood and May Allison in the leading roles. Hundreds of United States soldiers, regulars from the garrison at San Diego, appear in the picture.

The scenic effects in "The Buzzard's Shadow" are remarkable. No effort was spared by the producers. It is complete and correct in detail and is a thoroughly enjoyable picture. It was directed by Thomas Ricketts. In addition to Lockwood and Miss Allison, William Stowell, Harry Vonmeter, Alice Ann Rooney, Dick Loreno, Betty Harte and the child, Virginia Fordyce, have important roles.

"STAR" EXTRAS WITH CISSY FITZGERALD.

Heads of departments of the Gaumont Company at Flushing showed their versatility recently by appearing in a photoplay with Miss Cissy Fitzgerald. Director Edwin Middleton, at work on "The Widow Wins," a Casino comedy, required some extra men to fill a hotel lobby. As it was only a flash, the amateur actors from the office insisted on having a still taken to prove they were in the play. In the picture, from left to right, are Charles Walsh, an actor; B. H. manager (holding newspaper); back of him is C. M. White, assistant to the general manager; Charles Febvre, South American representative; W. G. Jenny, cashier; Harry King Tootle, publicity manager; Miss Fitzgerald, and Charles Craig, an actor.

"CURLY" (Clipper).

"Curly" is a three-reel American Clipper feature and is enacted by an exceptionally competent cast, including Lottie Pickford, William Russell, Charlotte Burton, George Periolat, Eugenie Forde and Lizette Thorne. This is the first of the much-talked-of three-reel Clipper films in which these former stars of "The Diamond From The Sky" appear. It will be released on the Mutual Program Dec. 11th.

Miss Pickford plays the role of Curly, a black-haired girl of the slums and her rendition of the role is delightful. Mr. Russell plays the part of the wealthy young Brewster, who fosters a mission and befriends Curly. The artful villains of the piece are Miss Burton and Mr. Periolat, who enact the roles of the impecunious impostors who live by their wits on society's highest plans. Miss Forde contributes the exceptional character acting for which she is justly famous.

Donald McDonald of the American directing corps was intrusted with the production of "Curly," and the film shows the finished technique of which this young director is master.

"BLIND JUSTICE" (Essanay).

That the bread we cast upon the waters returns to us and that no good deed is unrewarded is the moral contained in "Blind Justice," a charming little story in three acts with Henry B. Walthall in the leading role.

The story tells of the interests of Elsie Harding, a young girl, who has been influenced by a novel to take up slum work. There she meets a derelict, sees in him the traces of past promises and makes him into a man again, so much of a man that she falls in love with him. Then she learns that he is a writer who has been in the slums for material for a novel.

Mr. Walthall brings to the part of Jack Langdon, the derelict, all the charm of the finished actor. His Langdon is, at first, crude, uncouth, suspicious of the world and its people and seemingly afraid of kindness. His rehabilament to the ranks of decency is gradual but perceptible. At the last, he is a gentleman, smooth, suave and polished. The incidents are convincing, logical and interesting. It is a well constructed photoplay, well directed and well acted.

"A SHOTGUN ROMANCE" (Cub).

Aside from the comedy attractiveness characteristic of all Cub Comedies, the release of this brand December 3, on the Mutual program under the title of "A Shotgun Romance," holds special interest in that it presents George Ovey's new leading woman, Miss Belle Bennett, for the first time in a David Horsley production.

Miss Bennett is a rapturously beautiful and accomplished actress and aids George Ovey, as Jerry, in unfolding one of the most humorous vehicles ever provided for the funniest man in America. She is the daughter of the well known theatrical manager, Billy Bennett, and has a great deal of theatrical as well as motion picture experience.

The plot deals with the amusing vicissitudes of Jerry and his sweetheart (played by Miss Bennett) and the truly heroic manner in which fatherly wrath is turned to paternal blessing.

In the supporting cast are such well known comedians as George George, Louis FitzRoy, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully and others.

"THE SIREN'S SONG" (World).

"The Siren's Song" tells a story of how a young man from a country town comes to New York and is inveigled in an illegitimate banking proposition. The schemers make their escape just in time to elude the duped depositors who make a run on the bank, wrecking it, and causing the arrest of the country lad. He is sentenced to four years' imprisonment, after which he decides to begin life anew in a foreign country.

On board the steamer, he meets the couple that caused his downfall. After a fierce battle he is thrown overboard from an ocean-going steamer (falling 75 feet into the water). After drifting all night, he is rescued by a fishing smack and landed in a small New England village. He secures employment and makes many friends among the inhabitants.

His enemies, ignorant of his presence in this village, appear to blackmail a rich widow, who is living with her daughter in seclusion in this town.

The hero hears of their presence, and, knowing they mean no good, investigates, and threatens to send them both to prison if they do not leave the village immediately. They realize he has the upper hand and surrender.

There is also a beautiful love story entwined in "The Siren's Song" which gives it a sweet and pathetic touch.

"THE OGRE AND THE GIRL" (Lubin).

In the three-part Lubin release, "The Ogre and the Girl," for Thursday, Dec. 9, Clay M. Greene has written and produced a feature for regular release of a more than notable value.

Taking for his theme a beautiful story of love and sacrifice of the wicked and ugly old man of the hills, the Ogre, and drawing with a marked master hand the characters of the Scene from "The Ogre and the Girl" (Lubin).

Ogre, the Girl, the Lover and the Discarded One, Mr. Greene has molded a story of stirring and sterling quality and added to it the touches of a master hand at directing.

Prominent in the cast are Geraldine O'Brien as the Girl, Kempton Greene as the Lover, C. J. Elmer as the Discarded One and Bernard Siegle as the Ogre.

"STRANGLED HARMONY" (Vim).

"Pokes and Jabbs," in "Strangled Harmony," the Vim release of December 10th, use music as the theme of their comedy. Following their rule that each comedy must have a plot, this release is no exception and, in fact, depends upon its plot for most of its laughs.

The story has to do with Ethel, a young girl, who is passionately fond of music. The rich Mr. Jabbs wooes her. But she will not have him and his money because he has no music in his soul. She gives her love to Pokes, a poor violinist. When he sells his violin, he loses her love and she reconciles herself to Jabbs. She improves her mind by reading novels and teaching her ten children music—much to unmusical hubby's disgust. Pokes yearns for her—but he doesn't know that oftimes it is better that we do not get what we strive for the most!

In this release "Bobbie" Burns and "Walt" Stull appears as Pokes and Jabbs, supported by Ethel Burton and the rest of the Vim funmakers.

"BONDWOMEN" (Kleine).

This Kleine production will rank with the strongest features of the year both in theme and presentation. It tells a story of interest to every home because it deals with a problem that must be solved in every home and solved satisfactorily, too, if harmony is to prevail. It is of equal importance to the husband and wife, and sometimes, as in "Bondwomen," it proves the rock upon which the matrimonial craft is wrecked. The plot in "Bondwomen" is unfolded from such an impartial viewpoint that must satsify, no matter which way our sympathies predominate with regard to this important family issue. Maude Fealy in the titular role, Norma Ellis, wife of Doctor Hugh Ellis, enters wholly into the spirit of "Bondwomen" and produces one of her best pieces of work before the camera. As the scenario was partly rewritten according to her suggestions she is able to interpret its lines and situations not only in a flawless manner, but in a brilliant, heart-gripping way that scores heavily. She is supported by a company of unusual excellence and a splendid, satisfying picture results. "Bondwomen" is scheduled for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, Dec. 15.

"THE LOVE OF LOTI SAN" (Selig).

A most meritorious Selig Diamond Special in three reels, "The Love of Loti San," will be released through the General Film service on Thursday, December 2. This strong picture play is the more noteworthy because of the fact that Miss Bessie Eyton, the captivating Selig star, appears for the first time as a Japanese maiden. She is supported by a carefully selected company of players, including Edw. J. Piel, Al W. Filson and others. Many beautiful and interesting scenes from old Japan are introduced during the course of the action.

Scene from "The Love of Loti San" (Selig).

"The Love of Loti San" deals with the love of a Japanese girl for her American husband, a civil engineer. Finally his former "flame" arrives in Japan and he again becomes infatuated as in days of old. Stricken with Oriental plague, the American calls constantly for his old love, but as entering his room means death, the woman hesitates. Then it is that Loti San hands over her baby to the American woman and goes to the bedside of her husband, there to sacrifice her life in caring for him.

Miss Eyton is particularly charming in the role of a Japanese girl, and there is not a dull moment in this Selig production.

"A DEAL IN INDIANS" (Cub Comedy).

An exceptionally large cast, headed by funny George Ovey, and including two newcomers—Belle Bennett and Rena Carroll —together with the regular members of the stock company, furnish in "A Deal in Indians," the Cub Comedy release for November 26, a rollicking farce which is said to be one of the most entertaining of all Cub Comedies turned out so far.

The subject permits of a large number of laughable scenes. Jerry, played by George Ovey, is again in the toils of the law, but by an ingenious scheme succeeds in escaping, only to fall into the hands of a band of Indians, the chief of whom commands that the captive shall die. The Chief's daughter successfully pleads for Jerry's life and obtains her father's consent to marry him upon condition that Jerry adopt the paint and clothes of the tribe. Having no alternative, Jerry is made up as an Indian.

A professor of natural history, seeking an Indian to accompany him on his lecture tour, buys Jerry from the chief of the tribe and takes him to his home. But the Princess cannot bear to be away from Jerry and follows him. Arriving at the professor's home she creates such a disturbance with Jerry that the police are called. The officers, recognizing the painted Indian, first straighten out matters and then return Jerry whence he came—to jail.

As a laugh-producer the picture is said to be exceptional and in respect to technicalities it is easily within the high standard of the Cub releases.

"THE RIFT WITHIN THE LUTE" (Lubin).

Anthony P. Kelly's four-part feature, "The Rift Within the Lute," a story of a country girl's trust for the suave man from the city, which under the direction of Joseph Kaufman of the Lubin Company, has been in the making for the past three weeks, has received its finishing touches and the stamp of approval have been placed upon it by the directing force and management of the company.

Director Kaufman and Author Kelly are both to be highly complimented for the excellent production and signal praise is due to dainty little June Daye, the Lubin star, who plays the leading role of Kate Merry, as well as to the newcomers to the Lubin Stock Company, Inez Buck, formerly of "The Misleading Lady" company, and Craufurd Kent, the new Lubin juvenile leading man.

"THE ARAB'S VENGEANCE" (Centaur).

Ulysses Davis, the director, signed recently by David Horsley, has finished staging his first Centaur Feature. It is to be called "The Arab's Vengeance" and is scheduled for relase on the Mutual program December 16.

The story, written by Miss Theodosia Harris, of Mr. Horsley's scenario staff, is laid in Arabia and has to do with an Arab's thirst of revenge for fancied wrongs inflicted. It is an absorbing drama with the added effect of some vivid scenes of the desert country.

Margaret Gibson, one of the most beautiful actresses in motion pictures, heads the cast, assisted by Roy Watson, John Oaker, Thomas Morrissey, David Allen, B. Singh and others. A contingent of the Bostock animals also appear in scenes that are spectacular and novel.

MUTUAL WEEKLY TO SHOW PARIS FASHIONS.

And now women are to see the gowns of fashionable Paris just as Paris itself sees them on the boulevard and at the opera. Pell Mitchell, editor of the Mutual Weekly, is happy over the receipt of a cablegram from the Société des Etablissements Gaumont of Paris, announcing the shipment of several hundred feet of hand colored fashion pictures of models furnished by leading Paris dressmakers.

These colored animated pictures are for the fashion section of the Mutual Weekly exclusively. Already this department in the Mutual Weekly is recognized as the standard of latest Fifth avenue models, and the showing of gowns from the French capital carries the Mutual Weekly even a step farther in showing the women of America the latest fashions.

"BLACK FEAR" (Metro).

"Black Fear," which is presented with an all-star cast, which includes Grace Elliston, Edward Brennan and Grace Valentine, is a coming Metro picture now being completed in the Rolfe studios by Director John W. Noble. The story deals with the menace of certain drugs to the young, the chief victim in the play being a small boy.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" rounded out the 100th regular performance in New York at the Vitagraph Theatre, on Wednesday, matinee, October 27th.

"A MAN'S MAKING" (Lubin).

In "A Man's Making," the Lubin five-reel feature which is released through the V-L-S-E, Inc., office on Monday, December 6, Director Jack Pratt, who is also the writer of the play, has conceived a remarkable human interest story which will appeal to young and old alike.

Mr. Pratt has taken for his main theme the fall through youthful folly of a rugged young American at college, where "good times" and prowess on the athletic field are paramount in the mind at the expense of proficiency in studies—and the later rise to success and real manhood through a grim determination and fighting the seemingly hopeless battles of life.

Richard Buhler, the favorite of the speaking stage, whose years as star in stock and later as star of "Quo Vadis?" and "Ben Hur," is seen in his second appearance under the Lubin banner in the role of the son who rises to the heights of success and to the aid of the father who had disowned him to teach him the lesson of life.

Opposite to Mr. Buhler in the leading feminine role is dainty Rosetta Brice, the Lubin star, and in the support of these two favorites are Herbert Fortier, George Clarke, William H. Turner and Nelson Hall.

Features of the picture are the terrific fight between the two one hundred and ninety pounders, Buhler and Hall, which, beginning on the sands of the beach, is carried to the cross trees of the storm tossed fishing schooner at sea. Wall Street, "The little crooked street with a river at one end and a graveyard at the other," as it has been termed by Anthony P. Kelly, who is responsible for the scenario of "A Man's Making," is depicted with its whirl of finance, the stock exchange and curb market, etc. Another feature of the picture is the scenes of the football game played at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, in which "Dick" Buhler played right half on the U. of P. 'Varsity team and in which the entire 'Varsity team of that University appear.

WILL BOOK PREMIER PROGRAM.

Eugene Marcus and Lewis Newman of the Eastern Booking Office, Philadelphia, Pa., while in New York this week were seen at the offices of the Premier Program. The Eastern Booking Offices, Inc., will handle the Premier Program in its territory, and expressed entire satisfaction with the deal just closed.

Eugene Marcus said: "There is an excellent field for the activities of the Premier Program. We exchangemen, who come into direct contact with the exhibitor, fully appreciate his crying need for more moderate feature rentals, provided always that the reduction in price does not mean a let-down in the merit of the picture.

"Today the motion picture business is sharply competitive, and many towns that even last year had only one theater today have two or more. Allowing for the normal increase in theater attendance, which cannot exceed 50 per cent. in the course of one year, the fact still remains that with an even distribution of patronage each theater can only legitimately expect 75 per cent. of the attendance of the previous year when it had the entire field to itself.

"In making the above assertion, I am only dealing in generalities. Some theaters are more ably conducted than others, and the picture itself is, of course, of prime importance. We believe, of course, in Premier pictures, and are backing this belief with actual cash, and in the business world I have been unable to find anything more convincing.

"Many people make the assertion that motion pictures have reached the climax of their ability to interest the public, and, therefore, to produce profits; but I know that such is not the case. The profits may be smaller than heretofore, but a more careful proportioning of income to expense and more just expenditure of the actual cash necessary for the conduct of the business can only mean increased prosperity for the exhibitor and through him the entire industry."

"CAMILLE" (World).

The World Film production of "Camille," in which Clara Kimball Young is playing the title role, is fast nearing completion. As far as they have taken the picture, it gives promise of being the best vehicle Miss Young has yet had. Paul Capeliani, who portrayed "Armand" with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt in Paris, is appearing in the same role in the screen version with Miss Young. His brother, Albert Capeliani, is the director, and having witnessed the French version of "Camille" has taken advantage of the foreign ideas and is making this a realistic reproduction of Mme. Bernhardt's.

ELECTRIC SELLING MACHINES IN DEMAND.

The Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register company reports an ever increasing demand for their electric ticket selling machines, and state that their factory, although running 100 per cent. capacity, is four weeks behind with orders.

Among recent orders is one from Mr. Moe Mark for his beautiful new Strand theater, Lynn, Mass. Mr. Mark's company is now using a total of eighteen automatic ticket sellers, including one at the Strand theater, New York City. This machine handled, during the week beginning October 21, about 150,000 admissions, demonstrating its value as never before.

The Automatic company reports that plans are being made for the enlargement of their factory in St. Louis and the establishment of additional agencies for next year.

JOE LEE WITH THE PREMIER SALES DEPARTMENT.

Joe Lee, whose activities in the motion picture business dates back some years, is now associated with the sales department of the Premier Program. Mr. Lee is a man of vast experience in the requirements of both the exchange man and the exhibitor and is known from coast to coast, having traveled most of this country in the interests of various moving picture concerns.

Mr. Lee has been New York representative for several exchanges located in different parts of the country. At present he is busily engaged in building up and completing exchange organization of the Premier Program, a field where his activities find ample scope.

The Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines, Iowa,

as it now appears under construction. The building occupies one-quarter of a block. There is a miniature moving picture show in it. Electric elevators carry auto trucks up to the second floor where they can load and unload film. There are stock rooms, store rooms, and an office lobby 18 by 55 feet, and all the latest improvements.

STRONG CAST IN "THE UNWRITTEN LAW."

According to reports from the Pacific Coast, the cast supporting Beatriz Michelena in "The Unwritten Law," now being produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation, is an exceptionally strong one. Among the members thereof are three who played prominent roles in "Salomy Jane," the first photoplay in which Miss Michelena appeared. They are Andrew Robson, William Pike and Clarence Arper.

The motion picture public will be impressed by the wide dissimilarity in each case between the parts played by the three in "Salomy Jane" and those they are essaying in the present production. Their success with both goes far toward evidencing the wide range of their histrionic versatility.

William Pike, who is playing opposite Miss Michelena in "The Unwritten Law" and appears in the role of a wealthy young candidate for Governor, was Red Pete the stage robber in "Salomy Jane." Andrew Robson is Larry McCarthy, the political boss, in the present picture, while in the former one he impersonated "Yuba Bill," the hale and philanthropic stage driver. Clarence Arper, who added the comic element to "Salomy Jane" in his characterization of Starbottle, is now Dr. Mahler, a prominent physician.

RICHARD BUHLER IN "FATE."

Daniel Carson Goodman's original five-act play, "Fate," a tense and powerful story of railroad life, is the vehicle selected by the Lubin management for the next appearance of their star, Richard Buhler.

"A Man's Making," the play by Jack Pratt, also directed by him and which was adapted for the screen by Anthony P. Kelly, has been completed and the production of "Fate" will begin at once. Mr. Goodman in writing this new feature has built a character for the lead around Dick Buhler, which will offer that already popular photoplay favorite the opportunity to appear at his best, with the same opportunities for his leading lady Rosetta Brice.

Others of the cast are William H. Turner, Arthur Housman, Francis Joyner and Inez Puck.

The picture will be taken at the Philadelphia studios and at the Lubin Betzwood plant. It is scheduled for release through the V-L-S-E, Inc., offices early in the year.

Director Jack Pratt will be in charge of the making, with "Ever Ready Teefy" as the assistant and Fred Chaston at the camera.

"OVER NIGHT" (World).

James Young is putting the finishing touches to his comedy feature, "Over Night" Mr. Young's specialty is the direction of refined and amusing comedy. His successes in "Little Miss Brown," "Marrying Money" and others are well remembered. Moreover, Mr. Young is an artist and a litterateur in the titling of films. He is always sure by his humor to give you many smiles while you look at the pictures. Some part of the action of this film takes place on a Hudson River steamboat and you will have some very realistic views on board. Then there is the great suffrage parade, now part of history, having regard to the fact that New York turned down this subject on Election Day, 1915. Vivian Martin is at her best, and is most winsome in this picture.

AN OVERWORKED TICKET SELLER.

Undoubtedly the automatic ticket selling machine at the Strand theater in New York would take a first prize for the seven day run of week beginning October 31. This was the week of the Lasky production of "Carmen" with Geraldine Farrar and the busy little ticket selling machine handled about 150,000 admissions for the week. The manufacturers of the machine, the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company, have their factory running at full capacity but report a month's arrears in filling orders. As a consequence they are at work on plans for an enlargement of their St. Louis factory.

SIMPLEX CATALOGUE.

We have just received the 1915-16 catalogue and illustrated Parts Price List of the Precision Machine Company for their Simplex projectors. Inclosed in the same envelope is a new instruction book fully illustrated and containing short and complete instructions on unpacking, installing, etc., as well as the detail illustrations and instructions on operating originally prepared for the Richardson Handbook. Both booklets are strongly and suitably bound and will prove welcome helps to all Simplex owners and operators.

"BABE" HARDY, VIM FAT MAN.

No motion picture comedy company seems quite complete without a fat man. In Vim Comedies, "Babe" Hardy, a 350-pound laugh-provoker, fills this role. One of the few fat comedians who is not burdensome to himself, Hardy can turn handsprings, roll-overs and flipflaps with the agility of the most finished acrobat. While with the Lubin Company his broad laugh and pleasant smile and "Hardy" specimen of manhood won him many admirers. He claims that he has by no means expended all his mirth and has a new supply of stunts on hand for the Vim releases.

Robin Williamson, another recruit from the Lubin forces, has also joined the Vim players. Williamson will take character roles and his original line of caperings will prove a valuable asset to the Vim contingency.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

E. N. WALLOCK is a new member of Balboa's producing staff. He is putting on a multiple reeler in which Jackie Saunders, the Balboa girl, is the featured player. John Mackenzie, the veteran cameraman, has been assigned to this company, and he is getting some splendid shots. Mr. Wallock is one of the most experienced directors in the business. For many years he was with Selig's prior to joining Balboa.

Lanier Bartlett has written an appealing drama in two reels, "Just As I Am," which was inspired by the famous hymn of the same name. An all star cast, including Wheeler Oakman, Eugenie Besserer, Edith Johnson and Frank Clark, add to the impressiveness of this subject. Colin Campbell, who produced "The Rosary," "The Carpet from Bagdad," "The Sands of Time," etc., directed "Just As I Am."

Vitagraph Director C. Jay Williams is producing "By Love Redeemed," for the Vitagraph Company, with a cast that includes Jewell Hunt, Belle Bruce, Logan Paul, Garry McGarry, Anders Randolf, Arthur Cozine and Jay Dwiggins.

Director John G. Adolfi has just completed the production of "Joan o' the Hills," an Imp-Universal feature, with Violet Mersereau and Harry Benham in the leading roles. The scenes are laid in the Ausable Chasm, near Port Kent, N. Y.

Jack McDermott is the newest addition to Kalem's Glendale "Ham" Comedy forces. Mr. McDermott will assist Director Beaudine in addition to playing the juvenile leads.

After an extended vacation, Joyce Moore is once more back playing in the Balboa feature films. She will be remembered as having played the feminine lead opposite Henry Walthall, in the Balboa production of "Beaulah," when she more than acquitted herself with credit.

In "The Love of Loti San," released in three reels as a Selig Diamond Special on Thursday, December 2nd, Bessie Eyton enacts for the first time the role of a Japanese girl. "The Love of Loti San" is from the pen of Lyllian Brown Leighton, another Selig star who was formerly a newspaper writer.

The Vitagraph Company will produce Frances Aymer Mathews' "The Thirteenth Girl," with Arline Pretty, Julia Swayne Gordon and Robert Whitworth, portraying the principal characters under the directorship of Theodore Marston.

At Kalem's Glendale, Cal., Studios, the filming of the $10,000 series from E. W. Hornung's romantic novel, "Stingaree," is going rapidly forward and the first two-act episode, "An Enemy of Mankind," will be released Wednesday, November 24th.

The next Vitagraph screen story in which the distinguished actor, Charles Richman, will be seen is a picturization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's "Heights of Hazard," to be released as a Blue Ribbon feature in five parts.

Miss Edna Roland, who last season played "Mag Haggerty" with Thomas J. Ryan (Ryan and Richfield) in the Mag Haggerty sketches, has signed with the Pike's Peak Photoplay Company of the Associated Program.

Robert G. Vignola has completed work on Kalem's production of "The Black Crook," a four-part spectacular feature based upon the famous Kiralfy extravaganza, and is about to depart for Jacksonville, Fla., where he will remain for the winter.

Director McRae Webster of the Imp-Universal forces is directing Edna Hunter and Harry Bennam in a new Imp three reel feature.

The publicity department of the Gaumont Company has just issued the first of its series of clip sheets to supplement the work being done in the Mutual Program. This will be sent weekly to newspapers and periodicals and to all exhibitors requesting it. "Gaumont Gossip" as it is called will deal with customary data about Gaumont photoplays and actors which will appear of interest to the movie "fan."

A Springfield Boycott

Seemingly Legal Boycott by Indirect Allusion Causes Trouble to Manager Meyhew, of the Reel Theater at Springfield, Mass.—Took an Operator Into Partnership—Not Satisfied with His Weekly Part—No Salaries at the Reel.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, New England Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

MANAGER W. H. MAYHEW of the Reel theater at Springfield, Mass., claims that the moving picture operators of his city are attempting to boycott his playhouse. He claims that they have no reason for such action and the union officials declare and logically explain that they are not boycotting him.

The labor men carefully explain that they are merely "peacefully picketing." They realize that the law prohibits boycotting. They have stationed a man on the curb in front of the playhouse with a sign, that reads, "If you are in sympathy with an equitable wage for labor, patronize theaters employing union help." The sign does not mention the name of any particular theater.

On the counters of many of the stores in the neighborhood of the theater, the union officials have left small cards for distribution. These read, "Union men and their families will stay away from the Reel theater until they employ union operators. They are declared unfair to organized labor by the Central Labor Union." The operators are not violating any law in doing this, but if they passed the cards to persons on the street, there would be a violation.

One day, the business agent of the union was showing these cards to passers-by in front of the playhouse. Mr. Mayhew, who is a special officer, attempted to arrest him. The union official resisted. A regular patrolman came up and declared that the union man was within his rights.

Mayhew insists that he is not against organized labor. Nobody in his theater receives a salary. It is a stock company and every one connected with the house is a stockholder. At the end of each week, not a cent of salary is paid. The company declares a dividend and the stockholders receive an amount commensurate with the number of shares which they hold.

The fight originated when Raymond Bartlett went into partnership with Mayhew. Mayhew, who was a member of the operators' union, states that he tried to secure Bartlett's admission to the union, but was unsuccessful in his efforts.

Union officials claim that this fight will be worth watching.

MITCHELL GRANDBY PROMOTED.

Mitchell Granby of the Fox Film corporation has been appointed manager of the company's Toronto office. For the past year, Mr. Granby has been attached to the New England office as a roadman and during his connection here, he has made many friends. Manager Harry F. Campbell deeply regrets the departure of Mr. Granby, who proved himself to be an efficient film salesman.

H. HIRSCH TO HAVE NEW SERIAL.

H. Hirsch is preparing his bookings for the new serial, "The Girl in the Game," which he will handle in New England. He reports that the exhibitors of this territory are very enthusiastic over this picture, which will feature Helen Holmes. Mr. Hirsch has successfully handled several serials in New England.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG WINNER

Manager Frank H. Vine of the New England office of the World Film is rejoicing over the outcome of the Boston American's popularity contest. The untiring work of Mr. Vine and his associates was alone responsible for the victory of Clara Kimball Young, who was elected by popular vote to lead the grand march at the ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League with Governor David I. Walsh.

KRITERION PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

Bernard M. Corbett has resigned from the presidency of the Kriterion Film Service of New England. He was the founder of this service in this territory.

Salem, Mass., to Try Special Children's Shows

Chamber of Commerce and Associated Charities, Y. M. C. A., School Board and Other Organizations Form General Committee to Choose Shows.

AS a result of conferences between the Salem, Mass., Chamber of Commerce and representatives of the Salem Associated Charities, Young Men's Christian Association, Salem School Board, and many other organizations, a series of motion picture shows especially adapted to children will be given every Saturday morning at the Salem theater. Four successive shows will be first given. If the project is a financial success others will follow, if not, they will be abandoned.

The program for the shows will be selected by a general committee, of which Sumner W. Cushing of the State Normal School is the chairman. With Miss Ethel B. Osborne of the Associated Charities, Mr. Cushing was the prime mover in cooperation with Keon Brothers, owners of the theater, in bringing about these special shows.

The purposes in initiating this show are to offer a show to which parents may feel safe in sending their children; to give a moving picture program under the most favorable auspices for an admission fee of ten cents; to give a program worth while and entertaining; to create a demand for films of merit, educational value, and wholesome in their lines of entertainment, free from vulgarity and violence.

The committee in charge consists of Sumner W. Cushing; William W. Andrew; Miss Elizabeth H. Dunham, Mrs. Alvah P. Thompson, Mrs. Clarence Hayward, Rev. John E. Charlton, John H. Bosshart, Mrs. Mary A. Walkley, Miss Mary A. Barry, Mrs. Harlan P. Kelsey, Christian Lantz, John A. Davis, James F. Maley, Mrs. Annie L. Warner, Miss Ruth Shattuck, Herbert C. Farwell, Ernest B. Luce, and Miss Ethel B. Osborne.

Picture Men Fall Under Blue Laws of Jersey City

No Sunday Shows Allowed in Jersey City—Four Picture Show Managers Arrested for Open Theaters—To Make Blue Laws Ridiculous.

By Jacob J. Kalter, Newark Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FOUR arrests of moving picture managers were made last Sunday for violation of the vice and immorality act. Those arrested were: Isadore H. Schlessinger, manager of the Orpheum theater, at the Five Corners; Edward Kenny, manager of the Hippodrome, at 1023 Summit avenue; Hiram Rosner, manager of the Academy, at Central avenue, near Thorn street. The police also arrested John Fellis, moving picture operator at the Orpheum. The men were all paroled for appearance in court.

Immediately after the arrests of the four men had been made Frederick C. Henn, counsel for the moving picture men, entered the cigar store of Franklin M. Jones, and after purchasing a cigar, had the proprietor arrested. "This fight will be continued until the old blue laws are thrown into discard," was the only comment of the lawyer.

Newark, however, has been much more fortunate than her sister city. Practically every playhouse in the city was open for the special benefit performance last Sunday. Among those open were: Strand, Loew's, Kenney's, Newark, Lyric, Liberty, Lyceum, Court, as well as many of the smaller houses.

F. D. HUNT'S NEW EXCHANGE.

The Independent Film Company, of which F. D. Hunt will act as manager, has opened up offices in the Strand theater building. The local exchange will book the productions of the Greene Film Co., of New York. The Independent is a branch office of G. W. Bradenburgh, of Philadelphia. Beginning with the first of the month, the features of the Treble-Clef Motion Picture Co. will be booked through the Independent. Mr. Hunt was formerly connected with the Supreme Feature Film Company, of 607 Broad street.

PATHE EXCHANGE BUSY.

The new headquarters of the Pathe Exchange in Newark are a hive of industry these days. Manager Reinlieb reported last week to the Moving Picture World's representative that business was all that could be expected at this season of the year. O. H. Westfall is now on the road for the New Jersey branch of the Pathe Exchange. Another popular innovation that has been started here by Pathe is the Newark section in their weekly news pictorials. This section contains views of local and suburban happenings of importance.

TRIANGLE PLAYS FOR STRAND.

Beginning Sunday, November 28, Triangle plays, together with latest Keystone comedies, will be shown at the Strand theater, Newark. Manager Gurseil has been successful in booking the Triangle features exclusively for his house, as it is generally understood that the Strand will be the sole exhibitors of the Triangle pictures in Newark.

ROSENBERGER'S CONVICTION STANDS.

A recent decision of the Supreme Court of New Jersey aroused considerable interest among the state's moving picture exhibitors. The decision was the sustaining of the conviction of Walter Rosenberger for operating his Long Branch theater on Sunday. The court, in rendering his decision, said that the operation of moving picture shows on Sunday was clearly a violation of the vice and immorality act. In view of the hard fight being carried on by the Jersey City exhibitors, the decision was a hard knock.

COURT CHANGES HANDS.

The Court Amusement Company has purchased the Court theater, Market and High streets, Newark, N. J. The house will be under the management of N. Myers.

OPERATOR'S LICENSE REVOKED.

William Uessler, of 25 Vernon avenue, Newark, moving picture operator at the Lyric theater, had his license revoked by Captain C. Albert Gasser, of the Bureau of Combustibles and Fire Risks, for a period of thirty days. It is alleged that Uessler left the booth in charge of an inexperienced operator during the performance late Tuesday night, and in his absence the film caught fire. The few persons who were in the theater at the time were not aware of the fire. The damage was slight.

EDWARDS WITH HEARST-SELIG.

Nelson E. Edwards, of 401 Beech street, Arlington, N. J., who has become famous for his daring in taking moving pictures at the Panama Exposition, in San Francisco, and also at the Mexican War, will start for Germany and Austria next week in the employ of the Hearst-Selig Company.

Philadelphia Ball Coming December 8

Turngemeinde Hall to See Big Gathering of the Film Clans—Many Brilliant Stars Will Sparkle—New York Screen Club Members Invited to Attend.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

FINAL preparations have been made for the Exhibitors' Ball, to be held on December 8 at Turngemeinde Hall, Broad street and Columbia avenue. Tickets may be purchased at many points, including the Exhibitors' Booking Offices, 1339 Vine street, and Gimbel's department store at Eighth and Market streets. According to indications, this is going to be the social event of the season and a record-breaking attendance is assured. Elaborate advertising is being carried on and everything that would tend to make the affair a success has been given a thorough trial.

Each day increases the total of favorites who will grace the ball with their presence. Latest reports are that Viola Dana, Mabel Trunelle, Miriam Nesbit and L. N. McChesley of the Edison Company will attend, as will also Virginia Pearson of the Vitagraph. Professor Henry Clyde, of the famous Cortizzos School for Dancing, will direct the grand march, which will be led by Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. Invitations have been forwarded to the president and members of the famous Screen Club of New York and the assurance of many of the Screen boys to attend has been received. Music will be rendered by the best talent obtainable and the dancing will continue until the wee small hours of the morning. Have you bought your ticket yet?

COURT JUSTIFIES MANAGER'S TREATMENT OF SNOOP.

William Katz, manager of the Stanley theater, 16th and Market streets, was relieved by Judge Sulzberger of a fine of $25 and costs imposed upon him by Magistrate Hogg for alleged interference with an employe of the State Board of Censors.

The employe, it was said, had gone to the theater and demanded admission to the booth where the moving picture machine was being operated for the purpose of ascertaining whether the film being exhibited bore the stamp of approval of the State Board of Censors. Manager Katz refused to allow the inspector to enter the booth while the machine was in operation, pointing out that it was against the special order of the fire marshal to permit anyone except an expert operator to do so at such a time. It also was contended that the inspector could have obtained the desired information by remaining in the audience and witnessing the exhibition of the film on the screen. Simply another case of an employe of the State Board of Censors endeavoring to impose upon his authority.

CORRY, PA., EXHIBITOR FINED FOR SUNDAY OPENING.

H. W. Parker, well-known proprietor of a moving picture theater in Corry, Pa., was recently fined $4 and costs for operating his theater on Sunday. Mr. Parker is defiant and promises to continue to open on the Sabbath until he sees fit to not do so. The authorities promise to show Mr. Parker the error of his ways and an interesting time is looked for. Here is one exhibitor who is not afraid to fight for his rights. He declares that he is not doing so in order to obtain any cheap publicity, but that he believes that every exhibitor has the right to open his theater on the Sabbath.

Jake Becker to Manage at Parkway.

Jake Becker, one of the partners in the Becker theater, 17th street and Snyder avenue, has taken the management of the Parkway theater, located at 40th and Poplar streets. Mr. Becker is one of the most experienced exhibitors in Philadelphia.

Censorship Arrests in Scranton.

Owners of eight moving picture theaters in Scranton, Pa., were recently arrested at the instance of J. A. Burier, clerk of the State Board of Censors, charged with having exhibited pictures not approved by the state board.

Philadelphia's Garden Theater Redecorating.

Charles Goldstone, proprietor of the Garden theater, 53d street and Lansdowne avenue, has recently had the interior of his establishment artistically decorated so as to closely represent the vision suggested by the name. Mr. Goldstone has been running feature pictures and reports business as being fine. He has lately taken the management of the Franklin theater, 52d street and Girard avenue.

Buffalo Operators Give Sixth Annual Ball

Motion Picture Operators Give Enjoyable Affair in the Lake City—Good Attendance and Fine Time the Features of the Evening.

By Billy Bison, Buffalo (229 Oxford Ave.) Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE sixth annual ball of the Buffalo Moving Picture Operators was held at German-American hall in that city, Wednesday evening, Nov. 17, and was a marked success. A well-prepared programme was published by the organization. The music and list of dances were very acceptable. The affair was in charge of the following committees: Officers: H. De Verneuil, Sr., president; W. W. Matchette, vice-president; L. Hager, financial secretary; M. Ostrowsky, treasurer; E. Sugg, secretary; H. De Verneuil, business agent; dance and entertainment committee, J. A. Buck, chairman; Burt Ryde, secretary; M. J. Affachiner, treasurer; reception committee, A. A. Geddis, chairman; Fred Taylor, F. Davison, G. Dell, Leo McGuire, A. Miller; floor committee, B. Ryde, chairman, W. Dion, C. Austin, D. Martin, W. Schwend, E. Bugman, W. W. Matchette, L. Hager, B. Pinzel, P. Steves, Marshall; refreshment committee, M. J. Affachiner, chairman, Burt Ryde, J. A. Buck; wardrobe committee, C. Gehl, chairman; G. J. Johnson, L. Yager, H. Webster, J. Aikens; finance committee, M. J. Affachiner, chairman, Burt Ryde, J. A. Buck; publicity committee, A. White, H. De Verneuil, Jr., G. Goodfellow, S. Geddis, E. Hunt, Leo Steves.

Syracuse, N. Y., Orders Theatre Lobbies Cleared.

In Syracuse, N. Y., orders have been issued to the proprietors of moving picture houses by the department of public safety that the lobbies of all the houses must be cleared of picture standards, popcorn booths and obstructions of every kind. The department was disposed to be lenient until the discovery was made that a company was making agreements with a number of proprietors to put popcorn stands in their lobbies.

Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, Gets "Peace" Feature.

Manager Shea, of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, recently sent word from New York that he had arranged for a special engagement of "The Battle Cry of Peace" at that theater for a week, beginning Sunday, November 28th. Following the announcement, Miss Philomena Cavanaugh, press agent for the Hippodrome, sent many communications to the members of patriotic and educational societies, announcing the engagement. Enthusiastic responses were the results. Buffalo newspapers also devoted considerable editorial space to the show.

G. A. Hickey Effectively Boosting Triangle.

George A. Hickey, manager of the Buffalo branch of the Triangle Film Corporation, recently gave a private exhibition of three moving picture productions which his company will release shortly. The exhibit was held at the Ellen Terry theater, Buffalo, and was largely attended by exhibitors and newspaper men. Through the medium of the Buffalo newspapers, the praises of the Triangle Film are being sounded effectively by Mr. Hickey.

Advertising Ethics

Washington, D. C., Strongly in Favor of Governmental Discouragement of False and Faking Advertising—Extravagant Statements, Scenes Not in the Pictures But Advertised Are Aimed at—Many Complaints.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

IT will be incumbent upon the members of the motion picture industry to be more conservative in their claims to the public if the members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and allied interests are successful in obtaining the aid of the Federal Government in driving unfair and fake advertising methods out of the channels of commerce, pleas for which were made by representatives of the various organizations at a hearing held at the Hotel Willard by the Federal Trade Commission last week.

In Washington of late attention has been drawn to an increasing number of advertisements which actually contain fraudulent statements or are so worded as to misrepresent and to mislead the public. Several of these have caused considerable bitterness on the part of those who conduct their business along more conservative lines and these were to be used as a basis for action to be taken in the future.

In speaking on this subject, Joseph P. Morgan, manager of the Princess theater, said to the correspondent of this paper: "I was glad to see your story on fraudulent advertising in a recent issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, and also to know that there are good prospects of the Government taking up the matter. I do not know of anything that will hurt the business nearly as much as catch-penny schemes to attract the attention of the public. I do not mean legitimate publicity stunts, but where a man actually advertises with the intention of misleading the public."

Harry Crandall, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the District of Columbia, denounced the practices of men in all lines of business who resort to such methods as those in controversy. "I am one of the many," he said, "who are anxious to at least make our own, the motion picture business, clean, and I think it would be a good thing if the Federal Trade Commission would take up the advertising subject.

Extravagant Statements in Ads.

"I have noticed in the advertising, not only of the exhibitors, but of the manufacturers, many extravagant statements tending to mislead. Take for instance the question of paper. It has come to my attention that scenes were depicted on paper as forming a part of a motion picture production which, when projected on the film, could not be discovered. I have also noticed that very often the exhibitors are not quite as careful as they might be in their newspaper advertising and in handbills and slide announcements. I am sure that this has an ill effect upon the business of all of us, and, as stated at the hearing of the advertising men, 'misleading advertising decreases the value of honest advertising and denies an honest advertiser the benefits to which he is entitled by buying advertising space.' I am personally a large user of newspaper publicity and naturally I would like to see such advertising placed upon the highest plane."

When asked for his views on the subject, Fred Stein, operator of the Maycroft, one of the best known of Washington's exhibitors, gave credit to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for always endeavoring to urge upon its readers the desirability of fair, clean advertising. "I believe in fighting fair and think that to resort to fake or misleading statements is detrimental to the interests of all. I have noticed some few examples of improper advertising, but much of this can be considered in the light of accidents, for very often copy is made up in a hurry and mistakes thus occur. I am sure all of the exhibitors of Washington are in accord with the work being carried on by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and that good results will obtain from their activities."

Complaints on False Advertising.

Charles H. Porter, president of the Chicago Advertisers' Club, declared at the hearing that he could file one hundred complaints for investigation, and that if the club sent out letters he was sure it could file five thousand cases in the next thirty days.

Commissioner Davies said he would be glad to receive complaints from the clubs, and from individuals, and where individuals filed complaints, the commission would be glad to have the national organization appear as an intervener, thus, while the commission made no announcement as to its policy, the fact that it invited complaints and declared its intention to investigate them, was taken as indicating its viewpoint.

R. RUSSELL ROBERTS MARRIES.

R. Russell Roberts, a member of the K. & R. Film Company, of New York City, and Miss Frances E. Kell, also of that place, and said to be a member of a prominent theatrical company, were quietly married last week at the Raleigh Hotel. After the ceremony, the couple left for New York for an extended honeymoon trip that will take them to Pittsburgh, Chicago and many other western cities. Mr. Roberts is well known in Washington. While here he makes his headquarters in the Film Exchange Building, on E street, near Ninth street, Northwest. The interests of his company in this territory are attended to through the local United Film Service office, of which Sidney E. Lust is the manager and proprietor.

I. Glaser Resigns from Leader Theater.

I. Glaser, who for the past six years has been manager of the Leader theater, on Ninth street, Northwest, has tendered his resignation to the District Amusement Company, operators of that house, and will engage in other pursuits. It is stated that the officials of the company have received his resignation with no little regret.

Garden Theater to Be Made Over.

Tom Moore has announced that, pending the initial showing of the Triangle Film Plays at the Garden theater, the entire interior of his Garden theater will be repainted and re-decorated to conform with the auditorium of the Knickerbocker theater in New York. The walls will be done in deep old rose, and the ceilings and dome will be in deep buff with gold and old rose trimmings. The doors will be finished in Colonial mahogany, and the woodwork in pure enameled white. New carpets will be laid and the draperies and hangings will be in harmony. The exterior will be brightened and renovated.

The Niagara theater on Seventh street, near G street, Northwest, has been remodeled and now becomes store property. This is the second motion picture house in this city similarly treated within the past few weeks.

National Exchangemen's League Formed

Washington, D. C., Exchange Men Meet in V-L-S-E Office and Form Organization to Combat Trade Evils and Further Co-operation Among Members.

A NUMBER of exchangemen last week gathered in the offices of the V-L-S-E Company, at 811 E street, Northwest, for the purpose of forming an organization to be known as the National Exchangemen's League. The object of this new association is to combat such trade evils as may be brought to its attention, to further co-operation among its members, and to investigate into any proposed legislation that may come to its attention with a view to keeping the home office thoroughly advised thereof and to aid exhibitors where necessary.

Frank B. Spurrier was selected to head the organization as chairman, C. W. Bunn, of the World Film, will be vice-chairman, while the office of secretary-treasurer will be filled by Clarence L. Linz, of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

As reported in a previous issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, there is on foot a movement to bring about censorship and Sunday closing in the District of Columbia. This was one of the first matters brought to the attention of those present, and in view of the fact that there is little or no definite information available on this matter, it was decided that Mr. Brown, of the Metro Film Company, Mr. Senning of the Fox Film Corporation, and Mr. Hyman, of the General Film Company, should constitute a committee to investigate the matter and to bring in a report at the next meeting.

Sidney B. Lust, of the United Film Service; Mr. Day, of the Metro Film Company, and Herbert M. Osborn, of Pathe, Inc., were selected as members of the membership committee.

The committee previously appointed to investigate the matter of censorship will also serve as the executive committee, to which all matters of moment requiring quick action will be referred.

During the course of the meeting it was pointed out that conditions in this territory showed a decided improvement, both as to business volume and business practices. The reports thereon were very encouraging and would give evidence of the fact that a busy fall and winter season is in prospect.

It was agreed that the various meetings be held in different exchanges, the next one being assigned to the World Film Corporation offices, the others to follow in turn.

Those who took an active part in the meeting were Frank B. Spurrier, Sidney B. Lust, Mr. Hyman, Mr. Brown, Mr. Day, Mr. Bunn and Mr. Senning.

POLITICAL POWER OF PICTURE MEN IS NOTICEABLE.

Washington exhibitors, interested in the subject of national and local censorship, are taking heart at the recent report contained in a local newspaper which stated that "The influence of the moving picture is now being felt in politics. State Assemblyman Mitchell, of the Twenty-first New York district, author of the motion picture censorship law, has been defeated for re-election by a majority of more than 1,200 votes. His election was considered certain.

"He had received the nominations of both the Republican and Independence League organizations and was opposed by two rival candidates who were expected to divide the opposition.

"The motion picture people organized a campaign against him and made it effective by selecting one of the opposing candidates to receive their support."

The exhibitors who organized this opposition have the congratulations of their fellows of the National Capital who today express the regret that they have not the right of suffrage that would enable them to take similar action should such be necessary.

says regarding the

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

"The Improved Edition Goes On—Bigger and Better Than Ever—It Is My Order"

On the next three pages appears briefly the digest of what is surely the most important statement and promise ever made on the subject of news in motion pictures

The Memorable Interview with Mr. Hearst

SOMETHING over two years ago a motion picture man with a keen sense of values was able to win the attention of Mr. William Randolph Hearst. The publisher of the greatest newspapers and magazines and owner of the International News Service, with various subsidiary departments supplying all the important news publications in America with text, news and photography, had for years previously, appreciated and employed motion pictures.

The result of the interview was the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. An arrangement was made with the Selig-Polyscope Co. of Chicago whereby that Company was to act as print manufacturer and distributing agent.

With the Hearst organization's advent in the field came a new meaning to motion pictures. With the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, exhibitors began to vie with each other in the presentation of "beats," "scoops," and it became no unusual matter for a motion picture audience to view great events immediately after their occurrence.

William Randolph Hearst having inaugurated the Hearst-Selig Weekly, through his great news gathering organization, produced the reel in every detail, watched its growth, and visualized its possibilities. The point should be made that there are opportunities in the news reels which so far surpass those of any printed medium that the field is as wide as publishing. The possibilities for making the news reel a tremendous power with myriad activities are unlimited.

The Hearst-Selig News Reel performed its work in its day, but after consultations with exhibitors, exchanges, the Hearst editors and camera men—a plan and prospectus for a greater and better news reel as it should be was laid out.

The proposition was revolutionary—as revolutionary as the modern day newspaper is over the small town four pager. It called for such sweeping improvements, changes and evolutions that even to encompass the scope of what was suggested was a task.

The plan was discussed and developed in every detail. Then the question of the expense of this gigantic plan was considered.

"What do you estimate this will cost?"—Mr. Hearst asked.

The spokesman hesitated.

The figure was a startling one but he mentioned it. The Chief thought for a space of not more than a moment and he wrote the attached memorandum.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST
NEW YORK

Dear Mr. MacManus:-

Following the brief outlined to me this evening, I authorize you to proceed and make the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial right.

The innovations are good — make them.

The enlarged scope is essential. Proceed to the limit.

I want you to hesitate at no-point because of expense.

Make the Hearst-Vitagraph right.

Sincerely yours,

W R Hearst

Thus the greater news reel comes into being. On January 1st it is to make its first appearance.

In order to bring the manufacturing company closer to the Hearst headquarters, an arrangement has been made with the Vitagraph Co., embracing all its branches whose tremendous plant and well known facilities assure the success of the new plan. It is to be known as the

HEARST-VITAGRAPH
NEWS PICTORIAL
(Formerly the Hearst-Selig Weekly—Now Better)

The Greatest News Gathering Organization in the World

IN the publishing business editors look to the Hearst Organization for their news. They know that through Hearst news comes in the quickest and most accurate manner.

The International News Service supplies a thousand newspapers in addition to magazines of all types with a complete telegraphic report of the world's happenings.

The International Film Service, the allied company supplies these same publications with rush photographs of the most timely events. In addition to this William Randolph Hearst employs special staffs for each of his various newspapers, including the New York American, and Journal, the Chicago Examiner, San Francisco Examiner, Atlanta Georgian, Boston American, etc. In addition to this he employs correspondents, specially retained for his magazines including the Cosmopolitan, Hearst's, Harper's Bazar, Motor, etc.

The manner in which the Hearst organization maintains a vigilant watch of the world is unquestionably the greatest example of efficiency known. Talk about a governmental spy system! Why there is not a city, town or hamlet that appears on the map which has not its Hearst correspondent and photographer on the ground.

This is why if the Sultan of Turkey is passing through Bagdad, a photograph of him is made by the Hearst Photographer and rushed to America. This is why if there is an important event from Maine to Mexico as soon as the news can be dispatched a Hearst man takes the picture and the news with him.

This is why, to relate an actual instance—down in Philadelphia a short time ago when the Roebling fire occurred a Hearst photographer had his films delivered in New York City before even the Philadelphia men were on the ground.

When you are supplied by William Randolph Hearst and his news and photographic service you may be assured that no one can be ahead of you first and generally you are ahead of any one else.

The New Hearst-Vitagraph Offers Many Innovations

The news reel lives or dies on one essential—news.

THEREFORE, the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial will get you the news first—will get you the news right, will get you the news that is interesting; will get you "scoops."

But outside of this there are several points which are tremendously valuable to the exhibitor.

First—The Hearst Vitagraph News Pictorial will come to you independent of any other service. It is not going to be packed in as an adjunct to comedies and dramas; it is not going to be just one of several things that are handed to you indiscriminately. It must stand or fall on its own merit because you will buy it separately and insist on its making good separately.

Second—a system has been worked out whereby the exhibitor names his price for the service. It is the most revolutionary move made on the subject of releases, dates of release and prices concurrent with these dates and with the exhibitors territory.

Third—the country is to be divided into zones—that is to say that if you are located in San Francisco you are not going to be served with the same news as though you lived in New York. International news will be supplied to all the zones, but each zone headquarter will maintain its own individual news gathering establishment in its own territory and will supply local pictures along with state, national and international events.

Fourth—for those theatres desirous of obtaining it a "special extra" service will be added. It will consist of photographs of unusual importance. A section of film will be rushed by messenger, special, etc., to the exhibitor.

Not only will the Hearst-Vitagraph be made right but it will be given a popularity by a campaign of advertising which will send people to the theatres where the reel is shown.

Fifth—a system of lobby announcements and posters which will have the atmosphere of news, rush, telegraphic effect has been worked out.

A number of other ideas have been collated into a book which outlines the whole proposition of the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

Joined with the
VITAGRAPH

(America's Greatest Producing Company)

MAN to man with the Hearst Organization, there will be working the great Vitagraph Company. Add to the camera staff of Hearst, the camera staff of Vitagraph. Add to the news gathering facilities of Hearst, the news gathering facilities of Vitagraph. Add to the Hearst institution the Vitagraph institution.

Thus you can gain a conception of the immensity and power of the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

The Vitagraph Organization has been noted as a producer from its inception averaging higher than any other always. Despite the fact that Vitagraph has in the past years given America master pieces and head liners, there has never been a single picture bearing the name of Vitagraph which has not been up to the mark.

To measure up to Hearst and his Organization, is not a difficult matter for Vitagraph.

But to Vitagraph of all the field, the selection was made for proper co-operation and masterly direction.

To Vitagraph all the honor that is Hearst's is equally given.

VIRGINIA NEWS NOTES.

Interesting New Theater for Norfolk.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A DEAL for the property on the west side of Park avenue, south of Brambleton avenue, in Norfolk, for a community center, has been closed by the Park Theater Company, Inc. A charter is soon to be applied for, it is stated. The present building will be thoroughly remodeled and will contain a modern motion picture theater having a seating capacity of five hundred. Two modern stores will be located on the first floor. The project contemplates an expenditure of about $30,000. The contract will be awarded early in the month and work thereon will be commenced at an early date.

Arrow Film Corporation.

A charter has been granted by Virginia to the Arrow Film Corporation of Richmond, maximum capital of $350,000 and a minimum capital of $1,000, the par value of the stock being $100. The officers of the new corporation as named in its charter are given as W. W. Crump, of Richmond, president, and Albert F. LeVino, of New York, secretary. The company is to engage in the motion picture business.

Will Build in Hopewell, Va.

Announcement has just been made that C. Cohan & Company, of Hopewell, have purchased four lots for $10,000 in that place on which they intend erecting a modern theater which will have a seating capacity of about eight hundred. There will be four stores in front with a large lobby. The building will be both permanent and very ornamental, it is said. A Richmond company, it is reported, has been awarded a contract for the brick construction and the work of assembling the necessary material has already been commenced.

NASHVILLE THEATER GIVES TICKET BARGAINS.

By G. W. Crain, Jr., Tennessee Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Parthenon, of Nashville, Tenn., recently advertised bargain days at the theater when five admission tickets, worth fifty cents, were sold at the box office with each purchase of one admission ticket and twenty-five cents additional. In other words, six admission tickets were sold for thirty-five cents. The special bargain days were put on during the exhibition of the film, "His Wife," in which Geraldine O'Brien takes the leading part.

GETS RETURN OF LASKY "CARMEN."

The management of the Fifth Avenue theater, of Nashville, Tenn., had so many requests for a return engagement of Geraldine Farrar, in "Carmen" that the management decided to secure the picture for a second run. The play went about as well during the return engagement as at the first run, and the house was well packed at all performances.

Features Popular at Tennessee Houses.

The Majestic, No. 2, of Memphis, Tenn., recently featured the Essanay production of Charles Chaplin in the comedy playlet, "A Night in the Show." This picture was so different from most of the appearances of the famous comedy artist that it was the subject of a great deal of comment. It was said that the picture was the best one of its kind ever seen at the theater, and it undoubtedly drew big crowds.

"Madame Butterfly," the Famous Players-Paramount visualization of John Luther Long's famous classic, was the subject of interest at the Alcazar of Chattanooga, Ten., during the early part of last week. Miss Mary Pickford, as usual, drew capacity audiences. A special musical program was furnished by Prof. Oglesby, who tickles the keys on the console of one of the special moving picture instruments.

H. C. Holah Promoted

Pittsburgh Manager of the Pathe Exchange Goes to the Chicago Office of the Same Company—A Step Up as Reward for Able Work in Present Position —Has Increased the Local Business Almost 300 Per Cent.

Special to Moving Picture World from Pittsburgh News Service.

MANAGER H. C. HOLAH, for the past year head of the Pathe Exchange in Pittsburgh, Pa., was transferred last week to the Chicago office of the same company. Mr. Holah's new position is much greater in importance than his one in this city, as the Chicago office is the second largest exchange in the country. Mr. Holah appreciates the promotion and says that he will do all in his power to make the Chicago branch the largest in the country.

During Mr. Holah's one year's service in the Smoky City he has brought wonderful results, having increased the business almost 300 per cent. He is expected by his host of friends in and around this city to do likewise in his new position.

While Mr. Holah is yet a young man he has had large experience in the motion picture business. He was an operator and manager of theaters for five years. He became assistant manager to Mr. Goff of the General Film Company's offices in Cleveland, Ohio, five years ago. He also opened the Eclectic office in Cleveland April 13, 1914, and on the 8th of last December he came to Pittsburgh as manager of the Pathe exchange.

B. F. Lyon, formerly of the home office in New York and who recently opened the branch at Newark, Ohio, is Mr. Holah's successor at the Pittsburgh Pathe exchange.

J. L. EVANS TO GO TO ARGENTINE

J. L. Evans, a well known motion picture man, formerly with the Fox Film corporation working out of the Pittsburgh branch, was called over long distance by Harvey B. Day, of the Fox Film in New York, last week and asked to come immediately to that city to arrange for a visit to South America. The Fox Film corporation recently opened an office in Buenos Aires and as Mr. Evans is acquainted in that part of the globe and understands Spanish he was deemed a good man to take on the trip.

THEATER HAS NURSERY.

Fond mothers may now check their "young hopefuls" like an umbrella or a cloak, go to the theater and see a performance with perfect peace of mind and absolute assurance that the babe is well taken care of.

At the Sheridan Square theater in the east end section of Pittsburgh, Pa., such an innovation has just been introduced. A nursery has been established on the mezzanine floor of the theater, quite removed from the auditorium and the noises of the street. It is close to the playroom, where older children may be kept while their parents see the pictures.

The nursery contains four cribs. It is steam heated and is presided over by a nurse. The checking system makes quite impossible any mixup of babies.

ERIE'S STRAND NOW RUNNING.

The new Strand theater, on State street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, Erie, Pa., was opened to the public last Sunday, November 14, and has been playing to record breaking crowds ever since. The entire cost of the new theater is close to $100,000, the decorations and furnishings of the building costing more than $20,000. The seating capacity is nearly fifteen hundred. It is constructed throughout with steel and concrete and is fireproof.

Most of the smaller theaters in Erie, Pa., last week reduced their prices of admission to 5 cents as a result of conditions as a whole have been in a slump during the past few weeks. It is thought that the slump in business is only of a temporary nature and the business will surely assume its normal condition very soon.

PITTSBURGH OPERATORS NOMINATE OFFICERS.

At the last meeting of the Pittsburgh Union Operators, the following candidates were nominated for the respective offices: For president, R. Freeman, J. Richardson; vice-president, J. A. Rhodes, R. McKelvey, J. Harrison; recording secretary, Joseph Dean, H. Spang; financial secretary, H. Brooks, Joseph Dean, J. Goucher, J. Sipe, J. Urben; business agent, R. Freeman, Joseph Sipe, R. McKelvey, S. Steinberg. Election will take place Sunday, December 5, and an exciting election is anticipated, as all the candidates are out to win.

Hazelwood House to Be More Beautiful.

Smith's theater in Second avenue, Hazelwood, Pittsburgh, Pa., is closed for an indefinite period, and the house is being repaired and remodeled. A new front is being put in and the place is being redecorated and generally improved in appearance. When finished for opening it is expected to be the prettiest theater in this section.

Triangle Films in Johnstown.

The policy of the Cambria theater in Johnstown, Pa., has been changed lately with great success. "The Birth of a Nation" was shown November 8, 9 and 10 with record breaking business. The house was then closed for three days and on the following Monday it was reopened with Triangle service. These pictures are put on in an elaborate manner, including special stage settings.

New Millheim, Pa., House.

The handsome new theater which will be opened to the public on December 1st in Millheim, Pa., is to be called the Auditorium. The theater is up to date in every way. It has a seating capacity of 375. The equipment includes a Brush electric light plant. Dr. G. S. Frank is president of the company which will conduct the theater; L. W. Stover is secretary and treasurer and William S. Shelton is manager.

E. G. Frame Starts Picture House for Coal Company.

The Loyal Hanna Coal & Coke company of Philadelphia, Pa., who recently built a model town in Cairnbrook, Pa., seeking amusement for their people, they decided to equip a moving picture.

E. G. Frame, assistant to the general manager, who operates a theater in Philadelphia, has been put in charge of equipping the theater for the Loyal Hanna people. He recently visited Pittsburgh and placed an order for equipment with Ludwig Hommel, 422 First avenue.

The new theater seats 300 persons and is modern and up to date in every respect. The projection outfit is comprised of Powers machine and Fort Wayne compensarc.

Alexander S. Moore, Thomas P. Doyle and William D. Amann have applied for a Pennsylvania charter for an intended corporation to be called the Buena Vista Amusement company of Pittsburgh, Pa., the character and object of which is maintaining and operating places of amusement.

Russ C. Roshon, manager of the Roshon Photoplay Service of Johnstown, Pa., has announced that, owing to the increase of business he has been compelled to rent another room in the Garden theater building in addition to the quarters which they already occupy.

Cincinnati Politics

Mayor Spiegel Signs Iniquitous Measure Providing Jobs for Political Friends at Expense of Picture Theaters—His Honor Wants to Err on Side of Safety—Exhibitors' League Meets Matter Diplomatically.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Cincinnati Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE ordinance requiring moving picture theaters to employ a member of the stage hands' union as an extra "electrician," to sit around and draw his breath and a salary, was approved last week by Mayor Spiegel, as it was generally believed it would be. Safety Director John R. Holmes, after a conference with the building commissioner, reported to the mayor that he believed the ordinance to be unnecessary, and recommended its disapproval; but in spite of this, and of the fact that the mayor had previously indicated he would act in accordance with the views of the safety director's office, the ordinance was signed.

The mayor stated, after signing the measure, that he had originally intended to allow the ordinance to take effect, under the law, without his signature, but changed his mind and signed it, because he decided that no possible precaution which could add to the safety of the women and children patronizing the theaters should be omitted, and that if he was mistaken, he preferred to err on the side of safety. The ordinance as finally passed requires all moving picture houses which have movable scenery and asbestos curtains to employ stage hands; and as an elastic construction of the term describing the houses concerned will bring very nearly all of the theaters in the city within its terms, virtually all exhibitors are affected.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held a meeting shortly after the ordinance was signed, to consider what action, if any, should be taken. It was decided to take the matter up with the union for the purpose of attempting, if possible, to agree upon an amendment to the ordinance which might make it less comprehensive and burdensome. If this proves to be impossible, the League will probably fight the ordinance in the courts, on the ground that it is unconstitutional because it requires the employment of unnecessary persons. Many lawyers have expressed the opinion that the ordinance could be defeated, although others are dubious, as it is based on the "police power" of the city, and might for that reason be sustained.

ROTHAPFEL'S VISIT.

The visit to Cincinnati last week of Samuel L. Rothapfel, of New York, one of the best-known exhibitors in the country, was a really notable event among local exhibitors and film men, a considerable gathering listening to an interesting talk by him on the occasion of a luncheon in his honor at the Hotel Metropole. Charles Weigel, of the Alhambra, acted as toastmaster at the luncheon, which was held under the auspices of M. J. Burnside, of the Cincinnati Mutual Exchange.

I. LIBSON SUPERVISES OPENING OF DENVER THEATER.

I. Libson, whose local interests now cover the Strand, the Walnut, the Family and the Bijou, is rapidly becoming one of the biggest figures in the moving picture business in Cincinnati, by reason of the houses which the Keith-Harris concern, in which he is interested, is acquiring elsewhere. Mr. Libson left a few days ago for St. Louis and Denver, in which cities he will supervise the opening of houses to be owned by the company. The Garrick theater, in St. Louis, which will be used for pictures in that city by the company, will be managed by W. F. Jackson, formerly manager of the Walnut, which is now operated here by the Keith-Harris interests, and in Denver the company has just taken over the Taber Grand. This theater has heretofore been devoted to the speaking drama, but will at once be converted to the exhibition of moving pictures exclusively. Mr. Libson will be gone for some days.

COLONIAL REOPENS WITH FILMS AND MUSIC.

The Colonial theater, on Fifth street, has re-engaged for its winter season, in connection with its new policy of showing multi-reel features only, the six-piece orchestra which proved so popular last winter, under the direction of Alvin Stephens. A musical program quite as good as any heard at the leading "legitimate" houses is rendered at each performance at the Colonial, and the orchestra is already proving a first-class drawing card.

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" LOCAL PREMIER DEC. 8.

R. S. Shrader, manager of the Cincinnati offices of the V-L-S-E "Big Four" combination, was host to a number of local exhibitors and others interested last week, at a private showing at his office of the big Vitagraph production, "The Battle Cry of Peace." There was considerable interest shown in this big picture, which had not been seen in Ohio, and the opportunity for an advance glimpse of it was proportionately appreciated. A public showing of the picture will be made for the first time here in the auditorium of the Hotel Sinton on the afternoon of December 8, this unusual arrangement having been made in consideration of the interest which it is felt the topic handled by the picture has for many people.

PIQUA'S STRAND OPENS.

The Strand, the newest and finest theater in Piqua, O., was opened to the public on Monday evening of last week by Manager Fred L. Adams, with large crowds celebrating the occasion and lending their presence to make the opening a complete success. The building is of fireproof construction and is equipped with a handsome pipe organ and other up-to-date features.

New Huntington, W. Va., House.

The Leland Amusement Co., of Huntington, W. Va., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000, and will construct and operate a handsome moving picture theater in that city. M. L. Stafford and others, all residents of Huntington, are interested in the company.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

League's House Warming

Cleveland Headquarters of Northern Ohio Exhibitors' League Are Formally Opened—Meeting Rooms and Comfort Rooms.

By J. D. Raridan, Cleveland Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

HOUSEWARMING was held Nov. 23 at the new headquarters of the Northern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League on the fourth floor of the Republic building in Cleveland. One of the rooms, to be used as a meeting place, is equipped to seat more than 100 persons. Other rooms are furnished for offices and reading rooms. The headquarters were formally opened this week.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the League Tuesday, the enrollment of many new members from northern Ohio towns in the vicinity of Cleveland was reported. League members are working on a plan to eliminate the practice of exhibitors outbidding each other for popular "first run" films.

WILD CENSORS STILL OUT FOR SAM BULLOCK'S SCALP.

Members of the Ohio Board of Motion Picture Censors have announced their intention to revive the case against Samuel Bullock, Lorain avenue theater proprietor, who has conducted a fight against them on his screen. Bullock used slides bearing the sentence, "Censorship was conceived in iniquity, born in sin and is dying in disgrace." The censors procured his arrest on a charge of violating the state law, but the jury disagreed on the first trial and Bullock was freed.

Bullock is continuing his fight. (Our apologies to real Indians.)

NEW PICTURE COMPANY IN CLEVELAND.

Articles of incorporation for a $250,000 company to operate a motion picture studio in Cleveland are to be filed soon. Johnny and Emma Ray, comedians, together with a group of Cleveland capitalists, Guy L. Watson, former president of the Educational Films Company of Chicago, and Robert H. McLaughlin, author of "The Eternal Magdalene," now running in New York, are to be the incorporators. The company is now occupying headquarters in the Marion Building in Cleveland. Members say they are not yet ready to announce the site of the studio, which will be equipped to handle four scenes at a time.

Aetna Film to Build Near Cleveland.

The Aetna Film Company of New York, which has recently opened a training school for motion picture players at 1764 East 55th street, Cleveland, will soon erect, it is said, studios on the shore of Lake Erie near Cleveland. The site was selected, officials of the company say, because of the natural scenic effects to be obtained. In the training school five courses are offered, including every branch of the film production profession, from writing scenarios to presenting plays.

A. Jenkins is chief director, Andre Boudre, scenario editor, F. A. Held, chief camera man, and M. F. R. Trostler, director of pantomime, dancing and physical expression.

Cleveland Pleased With "Peace" Feature.

"The biggest thing in history," is what Cleveland critics have said of Commodore J. Stuart Blackston's "The Battle Cry of Peace," which opened last week at the Metropolitan theater in Cleveland. The play, based on Hudson Maxim's book, "Defenseless America," seems to have made a particularly strong impression in Cleveland, where a large percentage of the population is foreign born with near relatives on both sides in the European conflict.

The Rothapfel Banquet.

More than 100 Cleveland exhibitors were guests at a banquet at the Hollenden Hotel Tuesday night, when Samuel L. Rothapfel, widely known exhibitor now traveling for the Mutual Film Company, was the principal speaker. C. M. Christenson, Cleveland manager of the Mutual corporation, was toastmaster at the dinner.

WILL FILM MAMMOTH CAVE.

Announcement has been made of the closing of a contract between Judge A. S. Janin, manager of the famous Mammoth Cave property, and L. Law Siple, of New York, a representative of a producing company, for the manufacture of a film and exclusive rights to the cave for the scenes of this film, which will be six to eight reels in length. The film will be of historic and dramatic interest and will properly portray the beauty and grandeur of the cave, which is classed as the sixth wonder of the world. Many people all over the country would undoubtedly take great interest in seeing the picture.

Making a picture in Mammoth Cave is a great task, as the cave is bathed in Cimmerian darkness, and artificial lighting will have to be employed. It is proposed to erect a lighting plant at the entrance of the cave, and extend wires throughout for operating the various lamps, spotlights, mercury attachments, etc., which will be needed to light up the recesses sufficiently. A play will be woven in which the days of the fairies up to the present time will be portrayed. Scenes from other parts of the state, including the Kentucky Derby, will be featured in the play.

Some scenes will also be taken in Florida in order to give the desired range of action. The title of the picture will probably be "The Mammoth Cave Girl and Her Magic Harp." Among notable scenes will be the fairies dancing to the echoes on Echo River, in the cave. The discovery of the cave in 1804. The Indian and Pioneer days, the stage coach, and the salt peter vats from which material was obtained in 1812 to make powder for the American armies. One of the scenes will be a wedding at the natural bridal altar in the cave. Several hundred people and several months' time will be required to make the picture. College students from the state, and a Kentucky girl will probably be used in making the great photoplay. It is understood that the scenario will be completed at once and operations will start in ninety days.

Business Notes—Personals—Bits of Showmanship—New Projects. .

The management of the Washington Opera House, at Maysville, Ky., reserves its entire balcony for the colored theatergoers. Maysville has a large colored population for a small town, and the negroes are good patrons of the show house. The management recently donated the entire balcony seat sales to aid the Domestic Science Department of the Colored High School.

William Tapp, manager of the Knickerbocker Theater Co., of Louisville, recently returned from a short trip to Danville, Ill.

G. A. Bleich, manager of the Queen theater, of Owensboro, recently turned over the theater for the use of the Woman's Club for the benefit of the Associated Charities. An interesting program was arranged through the efforts of local artists, and three interesting films were also shown.

Moving picture men of Western Kentucky are interested in the outcome of a suit which was recently filed by Henry Slow, of Evansville, Ind., against the Royal theater, of that city. Slow sued for $3,000, alleging that he was ejected from the theater a few days previously and that he was greatly humiliated.

Heavrin & Barrass, of Hartford, Ky., have opened a new moving picture theater known as the Star. The opening show was free to all and the house was packed. An electric piano and a full four-piece orchestra are featured. The theater is roomy, well ventilated and very attractive.

A. B. Arnett, of Midway, Ky., who operates the Majestic, reports that he has taken a lease on a moving picture theater at Winchester, Ky., and will take charge of the new house on December 1. Mr. Arnett has been in the moving picture business in Central Kentucky for several years and is well known.

Unionism in Louisville

Musicians' Union Again Causes Trouble—Walnut Street Theater Orchestra Put on Strike to Compel Management to Unionize Throughout—Musicians Could Not Persuade Operators to Go Out in Sympathy.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Louisville Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

UNION troubles are again being experienced in Louisville with the musicians. The Walnut Street theater recently opened up with the Triangle Program and an eighteen-piece orchestra. Arrangements were made whereby the theater would also use its $15,000 mechanical orchestra, which was played by a non-union musician. Later the musicians objected to the non-union musician being employed in the theater, and to settle the objection the management brought a union musician from one of its other houses to operate the instrument, in other words, merely swapped operators. The musicians were not satisfied with the arrangement, claiming that the company would have to employ union musicians throughout all of its houses. The management refused to comply with the demand, with the result that the orchestra went out on strike, and a non-union orchestra was employed, things going right along. It is understood that the musicians are now trying to get the machine operators to start a sympathetic strike throughout the chain of theaters controlled by the Broadway Amusement Company, but it is further understood that the machine operators are not in sympathy with the demands of the musicians, and that the storm will blow over.

ENTERPRISE FILM INCORPORATED.

The Enterprise Film Syndicate, of Louisville, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,000, divided into 2,000 shares of the par value of $1. The incorporators are N. M. Sweet, R. W. Conant and N. J. Shelton. The company will be a subsidiary of the Children's Feature Film Company, of Louisville. Officers are: R. W. Conant, who for a number of years was connected with the production departments of the Kalem, Lubin and Selig studios, president; N. J. Shelton, Louisville, vice-president; N. M. Sweet, secretary-treasurer. G. H. Milliken, formerly associated with the Beckman Studios, is chief of the camera staff. G. H. Kendrick, formerly traveling representative through Central and South America for Pathe, will be its traveling representative.

Various members of the organization are representatives in the district for the Hearst, Selig, Pathe and Paramount weeklies. These special films will be made in addition to commercial, municipal, historical, educational, scientific and scenic films, in short all small work which the Children's Feature Film Company is not licensed to handle, and which will fill in time while the parent organization is being established.

The concern has on hand and on order the most complete and modern camera, artificial lighting outfit, developing and laboratory equipment in this section of the country, which will enable it to produce absolutely first-class subjects, and the company is now ready to book future business in motion picture photography, interior or exterior, under all conditions.

The concern has sold its first subject, the local "Gymkhana," an automobile matinee, held at the State Fair Grounds, to Gaumont, released Nov. 18, in Mutual Weekly No. 46. At present the concern is filming the launching of the Inland Navigation Company's freight barge No. 1, at the Howard Shipyards, Jeffersonville, Ind. This is the largest steel self-propelled freight barge on inland waters and is the first of a fleet of 35 to be built for use on the Mississippi and other rivers in the central district and South. The Inland Navigation Company, of New Orleans, La., granted the concern exclusive rights on filming this barge.

Officers of the company state that for future work, contracts have been signed with world-famous scenic properties, advertising local and educational subjects. This work will keep the company busy for some time to come.

TO BUILD A NEW THEATER AT 2D AND A STREETS.

Max Simons, a real estate man of Louisville, and Arthur Mann, a well-known attorney, are behind the organization of a new company which will erect a new moving picture theater at the corner of Second and A streets in the southern part of the city. This theater will cost about $25,000 and will have a seating capacity of about 750. The plans are now being drawn by Joseph & Joseph, local architects, and it is understood that most of the stock of the company has been subscribed in advance. The lot is 80x200 feet and is in the wealthiest suburban district in the city. Numerous apartment houses in the district are counted on for a large proportion of the patronage of the new house. It is understood that incorporation papers will be filed shortly, and that building will be started about the first of the year.

FRED SHELDON SALES MANAGER FOR ANTI-FLICKER CO.

Fred Sheldon, who for the past few months has been in charge of the Green Dragon theater, of the Majestic Amusement Company, at Shelbyville, Ky., has been appointed sales manager for the Commonwealth Invention syndicate, which is marketing the anti-flicker attachment made under the Fullenlove patents for moving picture machines. This attachment fits any machine, and is now in use in most of the local theaters.

ANTI-SPITTING CAMPAIGN IN LOUISVILLE THEATERS.

An anti-spitting campaign has been started in Louisville by Health Officer W. Ed. Grant, who is aiming his campaign directly against persons who spit in moving picture houses and other theaters. Some five years ago a campaign was launched, and after numerous arrests spitting on the streets, floors and sidewalks ceased for a time. The ordinance carries a fine of from $1 to $50 for each offense. The health authorities have stationed five sanitary inspectors on the streets and in the moving picture houses. While these deputies have not the power of arrest, they do have the power to take names and addresses and later to swear out warrants for the offenders.

For the present offenders will be presented with a pink card, on one side of which is a warning, and on the other side a copy of the anti-spitting ordinance.

Moving picture men are heartily in favor of the enforcement of this law, as many complaints are heard from ladies having clothes ruined from tobacco juice on the floors and between the seats of the moving picture theaters.

Amend Code in Detroit

Common Council Considering Amendment of Building Code—Broadens Privilege of Motion Pictures in Assembly Halls Without Movable Scenery—New Ordinance Introduced by Alderman Barnett—Reported to Special Committee

By Jacob Smith, Detroit Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ON Tuesday evening, November 23, the following ordinance to amend a part of the building code was introduced into the common council of Detroit by Alderman Edward Barnett:

"That Section 27 of the Building Code be amended to read as follows: This class shall cover all buildings having no movable scenery and used as assembly halls for a concourse of people, whether for purpose or worship, instruction or entertainment, and shall include armories, libraries, museums, railroad depots, churches, church houses, schools, pavilions, lodge buildings, or assembly halls, and shall also include all motion picture theaters, not employing movable scenery, provided, however, that when any such building or part of building shall be used for exhibition of motion pictures, it shall comply in all respects with the fire protection required for minor theaters as set forth in Sections 4, 6, 8, 9, 10 of the Building Code."

The ordinance was referred to a special committee. This amendment meets with the general approval of exhibitors because assembly halls to show pictures must live up to the same fire restrictions. It will also stimulate the use of motion pictures and thus will also be of benefit to the exchange and producer.

ROTHAPFEL MEETS MANY DETROIT EXHIBITORS.

Samuel L. Rothapfel addressed over one hundred exhibitors and exchange men of Michigan and Ohio on Monday evening, November 22, at the Hotel Tuller Roof. The event in every way was a huge success.

Mr. Rothapfel arrived in Detroit in the morning and was the guest of G. J. Trask, manager of the local branch of the Mutual. Mr. Trask acted as toastmaster and called upon some of the leading exhibitors and exchange men for brief remarks. Among them were A. J. Gillingham, John H. Kunsky, Thomas D. Moule, Frederick Ingersoll, Harry I. Garson, and M. Harlann Starr.

The complete roster of those who attended the dinner were: S. L. Rothapfel, New York; G. W. Trask, A. J. Gillingham, A. D. Hersch, John H. Kunsky; E. W. Butcher; F. E. Powers, G. B. Schulten, Harry I. Garson, George McArthur, Frank M. Duncan, Jacob Smith, Moving Picture World, G. Doc Owens, J. F. Husten, H. D. Palmer, Frederick Ingersoll, H. E. Smith, Michael W. Schoenherr, J. M. Wood, T. D. Moule, W. M. Davey, Harry W. Irons, A. D. Smith, D. C. Shook, J. O. Brooks, M. Harlan Starr, D. Leo Dennison, Howard O. Pierce, George W. Trendle, H. White, C. W. Buermele, J. P. Souders, George A. Harrison, J. R. Brett, F. J. Tulp, William Winn, Arthur Hoganson, W. Richards, C. A. McVicker, J. E. Stocker, Fred R. Rumler, J. C. Ritter, H. F. Fowser, Bert Williams, C. A. Congrove, J. J. Dreiling, C. J. Debute, C. C. Pippin, C. N. Sutton, all of Detroit; C. E. Smith and E. A. Zorn, Toledo; J. C. Mack, Indiana; J. H. Landen, Jackson; A. J. Moeller, Howell; B. J. M. Neal, Lansing; T. M. Lake, Paw Paw; V. J. Bradford, Defiance, O.; G. J. Huepenecker, Toledo; F. P. Reichert, Port Clinton; V. A. Wood, Milan; V. C. Decker, Paw Paw; E. M. Simons and M. H. O'Leary, Adrian; and J. R. Dennison, Monroe.

Editor T. P. Junkin Joins Gillingham Staff.

Tom Parker Junkin, managing editor of the Grand Rapids Herald, has resigned his position effective December 1. He will become assistant general manager of the A. J. Gillingham photoplay enterprises in Grand Rapids.

Arthur Caille Finds World Ads Pay.

A. Arthur Caille, of Caille Bros., makers of theater ticket devices, said to the World representative: "We are certainly getting loads and loads of letters and inquiries in response to our advertisement in your paper. They come from all parts of the world. We are getting orders every day and our factory is busy taking care of them. We have surely found the World a very valuable medium for our ticket devices. The number of inquiries alone proves that exhibitors who are on the lookout for methods and ways of improving their surroundings are subscribers and readers of the World."

Satin Goldfiber Screens Making Good

Frank M. Duncan, of the Satin Goldfiber Screens, Inc., 2134 Dime Bank building, Detroit, reports that business is far ahead of expectations. "The way exhibitors are taking to our new screen is the best evidence that we 'have the goods,'" he said. "We are supplying our screens to the best houses and we have yet to find a single case where a Satin Goldfiber screen proved anything but satisfactory. Our advertisement in the World is giving us good results."

The following item was sent from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.: "A Tangled Trail," a local photoplay with amateur actors, was the attraction at the Temple theater, Sault Ste. Marie on November 19 and 20. So large were the crowds at every performances that the management was obliged to rebook the picture for November 26 and 27. The amateur contest and the production of the film were handled by the Chippewa Film company."

New Family Theater at Adrian, Mich., Big Success

Manager E. M. Simon Shows Imagination in Putting On Special Features—Is Making His Picture Theater a Valuable Asset to His Community.

ONE of the livest exhibitors in the southern part of Michigan is E. M. Simon, of the New Family theater, Adrian. He is using big-town ideas in a city of about 10,000 and is making a big success of his theater, which only goes to prove that methods employed in the large theaters in the large cities can be carried out just as successfully in the smaller theaters and in the smaller cities.

For instance, in connection with "Madam Butterfly," produced by Jesse Lasky and released through the Paramount, Mr. Simon used incense from his stage; distributed chrysanthemums to the ladies, served tea at both the matinees, and gave his house a typical Japanese atmosphere. Movable serving tables were used for serving the tea; girls dressed up as Japanese maidens passed around the tea. The "color" and "atmosphere" given this production was even better and superior than in some of the larger cities. Everybody in Adrian was talking about "Madam Butterfly" and the result was capacity business during the two days it was shown.

Mr. Simon recently formed the New Family Children's Drama League. He gave free performances in the morning on Saturdays for children only. The entertainment usually consisting of a travel picture and a comedy. So popular did these free shows prove that he has found it necessary to give two and three performances in the morning. It was operated like this. He picked out one banker, one clothing merchant, one jeweler and one drygoods dealer, who distributed the tickets. There was no charge. The object in distributing the tickets in this way was to get the leading merchants interested. When other merchants saw how popular the Drama League was becoming, they asked Mr. Simon what was necessary to become a member. Mr. Simon then told them the charge was $10 per year and that they could distribute a certain number of tickets each week. Every leading merchant in Adrian is now a member of the league, which is doing a great deal of good for the boys and girls of that city. "It costs about a few dollars for lights, film, etc., every Saturday, but the publicity and advertising we derive from the free shows is worth it."

LANSING MAY HAVE A DUPLEX THEATER LIKE DETROIT'S.

Lansing, Mich., may have a duplex moving picture theater similar to the Grand Boulevard duplex theater in Detroit. Lansing men who are stockholders in the Detroit theater are said to be interested in the project. Fuller Claflin, the Detroit and New York architect, who originated the duplex theater, has been a frequent visitor to Lansing.

The success of the duplex theater lies in the fact that they have two auditoriums, each one having a picture screen and each one entered from the same lobby. The program for these theaters consists of a run of short pictures, first in one auditorium and then in the other, followed by a feature picture as the program's main attraction. The patrons are ushered, on their arrival, into which ever auditorium the short pictures may be running, after which the feature film follows in the same auditorium. Doors close on an auditorium the moment a feature film is started, resulting in a disturbance to no one. Regardless of when a patron arrives, he sees the feature picture from start to finish.

JUDGE SADLER'S MANISTEE ASSERTION CORRECTED.

It seems to be the self-delegated task of many Chicago public men to carry the banner of the Chicago board of censorship. Judge Sadler of Chicago recently took advantage of this privilege on the lecture platform at Manistee, Michigan, to state that moving picture houses along the Pere Marquette Railway lines were getting the "garbage" thrown out of the Chicago houses by the Chicago censors. This is denied by local papers, which state that those persons who have seen both Manistee and Chicago picture shows will agree that the Windy City has no monopoly upon good programs.

Chosen Michigan News Items of Interest.

Reports from Battle Creek, Mich., are that the prevalence of moving picture theaters seems not to have affected the business of the Lyman H. Howe picture show. This year that company had the best receipts of any in its year's visits.

Two or more good sized potatoes admitted patrons to a special matinee at the Opera house in Marquette, Mich. The spuds were donated to St. Luke's Hospital.

The Civic Committee of the Woman's Club at Charlotte, Mich., has appointed Mrs. W. M. McPherson and Mrs. M. P. Hart to confer with moving picture theater proprietors in an effort to have them bring desirable films to the city.

Poet Lindsay on Films

Nicholas Vachtel Lindsay, Newest Apostle of Beauty, Whose Poetry Is Surely Making a Big Hit, Takes Up the Moving Picture Question—Is Now Preaching with Films as His Text and Advertising His New Book.

By Frank H. Madison, Illinois Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE best censorship of moving pictures is public sense of beauty."

This is the gospel being preached up and down the middlewest by a new evangel, Nicholas Vachel Lindsay, of Springfield, a poet of international reputation. His ideas have been given recently to the Illinois State Federation of Women's Clubs at Rockford, to the Woman's University Club at Grand Rapids, Mich., and he is soon to speak on "The Art of the Motion Picture" under the auspices of the Drama League at Jacksonville, Ill.

"The motion picture," he declares, "should have the art qualities of a painting in action, of sculpture in action, or of architecture in motion, according to its classification.

"The motion picture needs great artists for producers—men of imagination, of spiritual vision, men who understand the basic principles underlying pictorial art such as the arrangement of lines and spaces, of composition, balance, the color values in light and dark.

"The action film should have the power and art qualities of great sculpture. For instance, before producing a cavalry charge the producer should study such classics as the horses in the Parthenon frieze. The power and beauty of classic art should be applied to the modern pictures. The intimate film of which Enoch Arden is the best example should have the qualities of a great painting." He recommends a study of Dutch and Flemish art in this connection.

"Other classifications are the splendor film of which the fairy story is an example; the crowd film which was exemplified in 'The Italian'; the religious film of which the best example is 'Judith of Bethulia,' and the patriotic film of which 'The Battle Hymn of the Republic' is one of the best examples."

A new book, "The Art of the Motion Picture," by Mr. Lindsay, will soon be published by the Macmillan company.

BARKER SWAN SERVICE MOVES.

Peoria, Ill., New Headquarters of Educational Films Promoters.

The Barker Swan Film Service, which has had headquarters at Chicago, will remove to Peoria. The contract has been let for a $50,000 office and studio building. The studio will be 66x100.

This service has been active in the past in promoting the exhibition of educational and industrial pictures.

Edwin L. Barker, president of the company, has been in Peoria, where the association of commerce is taking an interest in the enterprise. Secretary A. H. Shields has been on the ground a good deal of the time.

Peoria was selected because of its location in the heart of an agricultural country, suitable for scientific farming pictures, and it also has as representative a group of industries as would be found in any city in the middle west.

QUINCY TIRES OF CENSORS?

Sentiment has developed among aldermen in Quincy, Ill., in favor of abolishing the local board of censors. This was revealed at an informal discussion of censorship at which aldermen, exhibitors and a representative of the board were present.

Will Give No More Prizes to Youngsters.

Because objections were made that the practice savored of a lottery and was not best for juveniles, the Star theater, at Evanston, Ill., has discontinued its plan of giving a child's bicycle at every Saturday morning show for children.

"Nation" Film Coming Earlier.

The Temple theater, at Alton, Ill., got an earlier booking on "The Birth of a Nation" than expected. The show was scheduled to move from St. Louis to Alton for Nov. 30 and Dec. 1. The original booking was for January. The Washington theater, at Belleville, Ill., also got it early—Nov. 28.

The Grand theater, at Centralia, Ill., also has this picture for an early date.

Praise for Rutland, Ill., Opera House.

Deputy state fire marshals are interested in good equipment in moving picture houses. After giving the Opera house, at Rutland, Ill., a clean bill on its operating room, a deputy said: "I find one in about 500 as good."

Allow No Baby Carriages in Lobbies.

The Waukegan, Ill., police department has issued an order forbidding the standing of baby carriages in lobbies of moving picture theaters. It is said as many as eleven carts had been seen in a single lobby, constituting a peril in case of hurried exit.

Color Question Is Deep Rooted.

Referring to the probable Supreme Court test by Jacksonville negroes to compel moving picture exhibitors to discontinue segregation of whites and blacks the Decatur Review says wisely:

"The drawback to this sort of thing, so far as colored people are concerned, is that it does not get them anywhere. Practically they are not in improved position should they succeed in winning the third round of the legal engagement. Many of their well wishers fear it would leave them in poorer position. Differences of this kind are beyond the power of the courts to adjust."

Rent Went Up 100 Per Cent. a Year of Ten Years.

A. Siegfried, lessee of the Big Bijou theater, at Decatur, Ill., celebrated the tenth anniversary of that house. Evidence of the advance in the business is that he now pays $500 a month for the building he first secured for $50 a month. For big week features he ran "Zaza," "The Girl of Yesterday," "Salvation Nell," "Sin," "Blue Grass" and "The Price of Her Silence."

Protests Against War Tax Penalties Are Futile

Exhibitors Who Fail to Pay War Tax on Time Find No Sympathy in Treasury Officials—Failure to Pay in Time Not Good Economy.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

PROPRIETORS of Michigan moving picture theaters must pay the 50 per cent. penalty for failing to file returns to comply with war stamp act of 1914. One Copper Country exhibitor who protested against the enforcement of the fine received the following reply:

"This office is in receipt of your communication protesting against the imposition of a fifty per cent. penalty against you on account of failing to file return as operator of a moving picture theater.

"Replying, you are informed that, under the provisions of the Act of October 22, 1914, you are required to file return with the collector of internal revenue during the month of November, 1914. Upon faiure to make return, either formal or informal, a fifty per cent. penalty automatically accrued, and there is no authority vested in this office to relieve against the imposition of such penalty."

LYRIC AT MANISTEE OPENED THANKSGIVING DAY.

The opening of the new Lyric theater at Manistee by the Fitzpatrick-McElroy Company was fixed for Thanksgiving Day. Sam Krause of Chicago is manager. The house, which seats 650, will use Paramount and Metro pictures. Seven or eight reels will be given for fifteen and ten cents and on Saturdays and Sundays, vaudeville will be added and ten and fifteen cents charged.

Kansas City First Runs

Interesting Situation Confronts Exchanges—While Suburban Houses Like Second Runs, Only Few Downtown Houses Take First Runs and None of Them Want Seconds—Fox Manager Cuts Off Suburban Contracts to Get City Trade.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

THE downtown situation in Kansas City is in a mix-up condition at the present time, but the future holds bright prospects. The unfavorable feature is the difficulty in getting first-runs into theaters—only two houses are taking them on straight contracts now, the Royal and the Willis Wood, though the Maze has very recently been entering actively into the progressive game. The glowing future holds the promise of two or three big, high-class houses in the business district, which it is said will undoubtedly take first-run stuff. Which will be very, very pleasing to the exchange men.

At present first runs can be placed easily enough in the suburban theaters—at the lower prices. But the downtown houses don't want, after the outlying theaters have had the pictures, to pay at the high prices. The films are, of course, easily placed in suburban houses after they have been shown in the business section; indeed, there seems some times to be really a desire to get good early releases that have run downtown.

The first manager to take the bit in his teeth and force the issue is Charles W. Harden of the Fox Film. He announced this week that he had cut off all his suburban accounts, ten of them at the time, and would not release another feature in Kansas City until he could get a first-run account in the downtown district for at least seven days. The last suburban house on the list is the Prospect theater, running "The Wonderful Adventure." Mr. Sullivan, the manager, threatens to open a downtown house himself, to put on first-run Fox features!

The Fox material is going fine in the territory, and Mr. Harden said he had about reached the limit. He is in every town of any size in the territory. He recently added two accounts in St. Joseph, Mo., making five in that town.

H. THACHER BUILDING A FINE HOUSE IN SALINA, KAN.

Hail to Herbert Thacher, who is going to give Salina, Kan., a touch of real high life in the moving picture business! Mr. Thacher is having plans made for a fine playhouse at Salina, which will be opened March 1. It will be one of the best in the state—and in the West. It will have a seating capacity of 1,000, artistic decorations, everything of the best from projection equipment to rugs; will be built of reinforced concrete, and the whole will cost around $100,000. Mr. Thacher knows Salina through and through—and he knows the town wants something like what he is going to give it. He lives there. His brother "Bill" runs the Royal theater there, and Mr. Thacher himself was formerly a partner in that enterprise. Latterly Mr. Thacher has been traveling for the Universal Film & Supply, Kansas City, and has been accomplishing some very substantial good for the industry, through his co-operative work with the exhibitors. The new theater will be on Main street, in the heart of the city.

WITH LOCAL EXCHANGE MEN.

B. E. Edwards, formerly with the Picture Playhouse Film, and J. S. Stout, an exhibitor and picture man well known in Chicago territory, have been added to the traveling force of the World corporation, Kansas City.

Simon Libros is holding the fort at Kansas City, for the Picture Playhouse, and reports that he is discovering a large amount of favorable opinion, especially for the "Pearl of the Antilles" and the "Flame of Passion." He will remain until he has selected a manager for the branch.

L. J. Doty, formerly in Oklahoma City for the company, is now supply man for the Universal Film & Supply Company, Kansas City. Mr. Doty is aptly described by the publicity department at Kansas City as a "busy guy—long, lean, hungry looking, but has the necessary requirements for a supply man."

Messrs. Nutt of Los Angeles, Roderique of San Francisco, and McHenry of Dallas, managers of World Film Corporation branch offices, stopped off in Kansas City with T. Y. Henry of this branch, on their return from the convention at Chicago recently.

Ten Cent Matinees at Willis Wood.

The Willis Wood, now showing Triangle films, has reduced its matinee prices. It now charges ten cents for any seat in the house from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m., the evening prices remaining the same, 10 cents to 25 cents.

"MARTY" WILLIAMS OF THE METRO PICTURE SERVICE.

If, in Kansas City, you are looking for a real old timer in the moving picture business, seek out "Marty" E. Williams, manager of the Metro Picture Service. He dates back before the war. He went through the war—right on the firing line—with the J. W. Morgan Film Co.

Early in Mr. Williams' career he was an acrobat, and a cracking good one, a member of the original Mardo troupe. He ran across many moving picture shows, and got acquainted with the men from the inside, long before he entered the game. He became an exhibitor in 1901—a tent exhibitor, and was with the leading carnivals from 1901 to the spring of 1907. Then he went with Mr. Morgan, at Joplin, Mo.

"Marty" Williams.

Those were the days when a rental agent had to know all about the operating and exhibiting end of the business, how to repair machines, and fix the gas lights. Exchanges were also supply houses, then—or at least the customers looked to the exchanges for much help in the purchase of supplies. Mr. Williams fought through the crisis with Mr. Morgan; he was in charge at Kansas City, to which the headquarters had been moved, when the classic events of St. Louis in 1913 took place. Mr. Williams then went to the Universal office at Kansas City, as manager under George McGee, then field manager of the company at Kansas City.

Mr. Williams became manager of the Mutual Film Corporation of Kansas City July 4, 1914; and, July 19, 1915, resigned to accept the managership of the Metro Picture Service, with territory of Missouri and Kansas, headquarters at Kansas City. He once knew every exhibitor in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, and parts of other states, by their first names—and he knows most of them now, though the days of the familiar "Bill" and "Joe" have gone in the picture business as well as in other lines of trade in the West. Eight years is not very long—but J. W. Morgan, now retired, occasionally drops into Mr. Williams' office and they talk over old times.

S. E. Wilhoit, proprietor of the Jefferson theater at Springfield, Mo., has purchased H. B. Deimer's interest in the Princess theater at that place, and will put on Fox features two days a week for second run. These features have first-run two days at the Aladdin there.

A Worthwhile Suggestion

Omaha Manager About to Show the Griffith Spectacle Printed on Program Account of Things Negroes Can Be Proud of.

Special Correspondent to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

AS a balm to the negroes in Omaha, Manager Sutphen of the Brandeis theater printed on the program of "The Birth of a Nation" the following statement, prepared by interested Omaha residents:

"It is a noteworthy fact that should never be forgotten that during the Civil War, while the men of the South were absent from home fighting to keep the shackles on the slaves, their women and children were left solely under the protection of the slaves and there is not a single case on record, as has been pointed out by Henry W. Grady, of the Atanta Constitution, and by other equally representative Southerners, where a negro ever betrayed his sacred trust. The negro men were the protectors of the white women of the South during those dark days in the nation's history. We regret that this significant side of the story has nowhere been adequately protrayed or even suggested in this photo-drama in which so much of the darker side of human nature and passion has been heightened and dramatized."

An effort was made by negroes to secure an injunction preventing the showing of the film, but District Judge Redick refused to issue it. The negroes did not renew their efforts after learning that in the event a restraining order should be granted which should not be sustained by the courts after subsequent hearings, the plaintiffs would be liable in damages for loss of profits caused by stopping the showing of the film, and a bond adequate to cover such damages would be required by law before the restraining order would be binding.

Mayor Dahlman, who introduced an anti-race prejudice show ordinance, said it would not interfere with "The Birth of a Nation," declaring that he did not think it fair to damage an enterprise which came to the city in good faith, prior to the introduction of a prohibitory ordinance.

STANDARD THEATER CO. TAKES NEW NAME.

The reorganization of the Standard Theater Company as the Empress Theater Company, a Nebraska corporation, means a booking office in Omaha for vaudeville and moving pictures for about twenty houses in the middle West. W. Ledoux, of Winnipeg, Canada, is president and manager; A. Lemarquand, of St. Paul, is vice-president, and Paul Lemarquand, of Minneapolis, secretary and treasurer. Denver and Kansas City houses are on the circuit.

UNION PICKETS CALLED UPON BY COURT TO ANSWER.

Members of the Operators' Union in Omaha were ordered to appear in the District Court to answer charges of contempt of court by violating the court's order to have only "peaceful picketing" in front of the Princess theater. Affidavits made by the cashiers were to the effect that various pickets walked up and down yelling, blew cigarette smoke in women's faces, and used language which exceeded "the persuasion of the patron's will."

GLAD TO PAY TO SEE GOOD FILMS.

The Lyric theater's program de luxe, consisting of two Triangle and one Paramount picture—enough to furnish an entire afternoon or evening's entertainment, has been received with popular acclaim in Minneapolis. The augmented prices of 25 and 50 cents have proved no discouragement to the public, as is attested by the packed theater every evening.

The reserved seat feature is making a very favorable impression. Society women have been quick to grasp the opportunity to give matinee parties and have engaged as high as twenty seats at a time for the entertainment of friends. The matinee price is lower than the evening—any seat in the parquet or first four rows of the balcony being twenty-five cents.

NEIGHBORHOOD HAS TO GO TO SCHOOL TO SEE CHAPLIN.

A new puzzle for the folk who so conscientiously oppose moving pictures of every form and kind has been raised in the Bremer School of Minneapolis.

Teachers, parents and others equally well intentioned have effected a "safety zone" around the schools, in which no pictures may be shown. Now comes the Bremer school with its own machine and shows a reel of Charlie Chaplin, followed by "Richelieu." "The Spy," "Salomy Jane," a fairy tale and a Walker Whiteside drama have all been on the program.

Oliver H. Miller, principal of the school, which is one of the Minneapolis' public schools, says not all the films need be educational but that other films which will attract the crowd are allowable.

Minneapolis Girl Gets Chance with Lasky Co.

A Minneapolis girl is soon to join the Jesse Lasky company in New York. This is Irene Warnecke, nineteen years old, and she says that she has "had it in mind to go into the movies" ever since they started. She is also interested in writing photodramas, and is just completing her first scenario. Miss Warnecke has been promised a chance to do minor parts, with advancement if she makes good. She will leave Minneapolis for New York in time to begin work the first of the year. Miss Warnecke attended school in Minneapolis, graduating at the Whittier school.

Father of H. H. Buxbaum Dies.

H. H. Buxbaum, manager of the General Film company's local office, has just returned from a week in Boston, whither he was called by the death of his father, F. Buxbaum.

A Neighborhood House

Minneapolis Theater in Residence District Proves as Big a Success as Are City's Downtown Houses—Manager Prosper Schwie Has Attracted Patrons from All Sections and Made It Influential in Its Own.

THE story of the Calhoun theater has proved to Minneapolis picture men what they doubted a year ago, that a motion picture house in the neighborhood district of the city can play to as large an audience, show as high-class productions and be made in every way as successful as the best of the downtown houses.

The Calhoun theater was completed a little more than half a year ago. It was made to seat 800, and was made good to look at. The interior and exterior are of mosaic brick, with indirect lighting of handsome art glass light fixtures, bricked in loges, attractive stage and the other finishings that make the house pleasing to theater patrons. It is owned by the Calhoun Theater Company, a group of Minneapolis business men, and is situated on Lake street, near Hennepin, on the cross business street that runs through the heart of the residence district. Prosper F. Schwie, then in charge of the Lyric, was made manager of the theater and a venture that downtown business men viewed with misgivings was launched. The Calhoun and the idea of neighborhood theaters has made good, so good in fact that Mr. Schwie says the theater now draws much of its regular patronage from downtown. The theater is being doubled in size, an addition at the rear being now under construction, which will bring its seating capacity to 1,500 and make it equal in size to any in the city, and bigger than all save one, the New Garrick.

The enlarged theater will be ready for use early in December. Its entire cost is in the neighborhood of $105,000. Mr. Schwie is still manager and he has succeeded in making his house a social influence in his neighborhood. One of the activities that he helped to promote is that of special children's programs. Several of these special programs have been given at the Calhoun last Spring and this Fall, under the auspices of club women and parents' and teachers' associations of the neighborhood. On Nov. 6, a special program for children was given, and the Paramount Cinderella, and current comedies were shown to 1,500 children who crowded the streets for nearly a block back in the ticket line.

The Calhoun shows on its regular programs Paramount and World features, the Mutual Masterpieces and Equitable and Metro releases.

Another thing that Mr. Schwie is doing to put him on the moving picture map with the best of the managers is the issuing of an unusually attractive little film pamphlet each week. It is an eight pager and is done up attractively in brown with pictures of the currently playing star as a cover design, and filled with gossip of the film favorites and bits or movies news for his patrons.

The Calhoun has also started on an extensive advertising campaign, using the daily papers for good-sized ads through the week and on Sundays.

F. S. MYER, GENERAL MANAGER OF WESTERN CRITERION.

Fred S. Myer, formerly connected with the Minneapolis office of the Laemmle Film Corporation and with various theatrical and moving picture ventures in Chicago and other cities, has returned to this city as general manager of the Western Kriterion Film Service, which was organized last February and which opened its local office March 8. He also controls the rights of "The Melting Pot" and "Uncle Sam At Work" and has already placed extensive bookings for these well-known features.

MAYOR NYE PERMITS "NATION" FILM TO SHOW.

"The Birth of a Nation," the film play which has given trouble to various Minnesota officials including mayors, police chiefs, district judges and the state supreme court, will run unrestricted in Minneapolis, according to a "pajama interview" granted during the early morning hours a few days ago by Mayor W. G. Nye.

The "Birth of a Nation" was staged here at the Shubert theater. Mayor Nye, acting on the complaint of a number of citizens, ordered the play stopped and threatened the exercise of his charter authority to revoke the license of the Shubert theater, if he was not obeyed.

Manager Bainbridge, of the Shubert, appealed to the district court and obtained a temporary injunction restraining the Mayor from the arbitrray exercise of this power. On a hearing the district court ruled in favor of the mayor and when Mr. Bainbridge carried the case to the supreme court that high judicial body also upheld the mayor's power.

With his power to censor moving picture films, as well as other features of municipal life well established, Mayor Nye felt he could afford to be generous, so he appointed a committee of 100 representative citizens, men and women, to review the play, promising he would abide by their decision.

The committee witnessed the picture and by practically a unanimous vote decided it was worthy of production. There was a slight division of opinion as to admitting children less than 12 years of age but the controversy, in the main, is settled and the play will proceed.

Minneapolis to Have Censor Board of Eighty Persons

Men and Women Representing a Dozen Civic, Religious and Charitable Organizations to See Films Challenged by Anyone—Representative of Exhibitors Invited.

MINNEAPOLIS is soon to have a board of moving picture censors.

This board is composed of approximately 80 persons, men and women, representing a dozen organizations—civic, religious, charitable and otherwise. Some of the best-known residents of the city are represented, also some not so well known.

Mayor Nye, after his recent controversy over the "Birth of a Nation," in which he was sustained by the state supreme court, decided to let this board now in the process of organization pass on this particular film and it is understood will also call on the same body for opinions as to future films which may be challenged for any cause.

As yet no practical moving picture producer or manager is represented, but it is said the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association is to be asked to name a representative.

The entire project is ridiculed by Judge Willis Brown of Salt Lake City, president of the National League for Wholesome Moving Pictures. He says local censorship is ridiculous and cites these reasons:

Feminine censorship is silly because women often strive to outdo their sisters in ordering scenes "cut out."

Audiences should be allowed to judge for themselves without the aid of the government; censorship means absolutism.

The paintings and statuary at the libraries and art galleries should be censored as well as pictures.

That no local authorities should be allowed to regulate pictures passed by the national board of censorship.

This latter opinion is endorsed by W. R. Webster, principal of the East High School of this city.

Rothapfel's Milwaukee Visit a Home Coming

Luncheon in the Colonial Room of the Hotel Wisconsin—Many Local Picture Exhibitors Present—City Editor of Evening Wisconsin, Toastmaster.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

THE visit of S. L. Rothapfel to Milwaukee November 17 was in the nature of a homecoming, as he first presented moving pictures in the Alhambra theater in that city. The luncheon for the Milwaukee exhibitors was given at the Colonial room of the Hotel Wisconsin and John R. Wolf, city editor of the Evening Wisconsin, was toastmaster.

"Make your house, not the picture, your drawing card," the famous New York exhibitor told his hearers. "The industry depends on the exhibitor. You are the foundation, so it is in your power to tell the producer what you want and when you want it, and it is not for him to tell you what you must take and when you must take it.

"The motion picture business has made wonderful strides, but the exhibitor has fallen behind. Use your heads a little. Be a little different. You all seek to go through one door, when—ye gods!—there are a thousand doors in this business. You all say you want to give the public what it wants. How can you do that when it doesn't know itself what it wants. You must be like a singer and pull the audience with you."

The guests included: Earl Rice, Queen and State Street theaters; Joseph Schwartz, Kosciusko theater; Dan Finberg, Modjeska theater; M. B. Ettenheim, Edward Trinz, Avenue theater; Frank and George Bruemmer, Idle Hour theater; G. E. Braddock, Theatorium; Sam Pylet, Murray and Astor theaters; George M. Pendergast, Saxe Amusement Enterprises; George Fischer, Alhambra theater; John Griffith, North American Film Company; Hugo Heller and Edwin Runge, Arcade theater; John R. Wolf, Evening Wisconsin; Walter Distelhorst, dramatic editor the Milwaukee Sentinel; A. L. Ries, president Vaudette theater; R. Trinz, manager Columbia theater; Samuel Trinz, manager Empire theater; Frank R. Williams, Emil O. Schmidt, C. D. Koehler, Mutual Film Corporation; W. C. Bimme, manage Universal Film Exchange; O. L. Meister, manager Vaudette theater; Frank Cook, Princess theater; J. H. Mergener, manager Mutual Film Corporation; A. B. Cargill, advertising manager, The Milwaukee Sentinel; Otto Preusser, Palace theater, all of Milwaukee; Al De Somers, C. L. Worthington, manager Fox Film Corporation, Chicago; L. Howard, Varsity theater, Madison, Wis.; C. S. Kennedy, proprietor Carlton theater, Black Earth; H. A. Jones, Park and Colonial, Waukesha, Wis.; Kit Frankland, Fred W. Brokkup, Columbus; Otto Koch, Idle Hour theater, Sheboygan, Wis.; E. C. Prinsen, Orpheum theater, Fond du Lac, Wis.; A. L. Rothapfel, New York; Jake J. Dosch, manager New Majestic, Cudahy; Newton E. Levi, Mutual Film Corporation publicity, New York City.

MILWAUKEE EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION INCORPORATES.

Maintaining a strictly neutral attitude with respect to film manufacturers is one of the objects of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' association of Milwaukee, which has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state at Madison. Other aims are to uplift the moral standard of the business in Milwaukee and to promote the business interests of exhibitors.

The incorporators are Henry Trinz, George Fischer, Phillip O. Gross, Paul Langenheinrich, Sr., Otto Anders, Richard Lauffer, Otto Treausser, Sr., B. K. Fischer, Charles H. Phillips, J. H. Filliman and H. D. Graham.

The organization was to be perfected December 3 at a meeting at the Plankington hotel.

THEATER APPOINTS SPECIAL MAN TO RUN FEATURES.

One Wisconsin theater deems its musical program of sufficient importance to the proper production of photoplays that it places this feature in charge of an assistant manager. Jocelyn Marks, who has been advanced to this position by the Butterfly theater in Milwaukee, will see that all organ accompaniments are appropriate.

MILWAUKEE APPRENTICES NOW UNDER UNION CONTROL.

Apprentice operators in Milwaukee will hereafter be under control of the Moving Picture and Projecting Machine Operators' Union, this concession having been recently made. Ninety-two per cent. of the houses have agreements with the union.

BIJOU THEATER, MILWAUKEE, GIVES SHOW FOR CHARITY.

Poor persons in Marinette had better Thanksgiving dinners and the kiddies of the city saw entertaining pictures as the result of the generosity of the Bijou theater. A potato was the only admission required for a Saturday matinee for youngsters. The proceeds were turned over to the Salvation Army.

Edwin Thanhouser's Brother Dies.

Edwin Thanhouser was in Milwaukee to attend the funeral of a brother.

THE VAUDETTE GOES BACK TO 10-CENT MATINEES.

By A. M. Beatty, Atlanta Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Vaudette theater, after two weeks' trial of 20 and 10 cents admission, a raise from their heretofore 5 cent admission, have again dropped to 10 and 5 cents admission between the hours of 10:30 and 6 p. m. From 6 to 10:30 p. m. the price will remain the same 20 and 10 cents. This theater controls the exclusive rights of the Triangle productions, and give as a reason their wish to show these superb pictures to many at the matinee, who cannot afford the 20 and 10 cent advance, and have always been regular patrons of this popular house of amusement.

WANT SPECIAL FILM BUILDING IN ATLANTA.

A movement is being started, especially if the fire ordinance now before council should pass, for the erection of a thoroughly fireproof building, to be occupied by none but film companies, in the western section of the city. The building is to be 60 by 80 by 100, two stories high, and to have every modern convenience. A smaller building is to be erected near for the telephone, telegraph and express offices, and possibly a sub postal station. The building will comfortably house twelve film companies.

Children's Show at the Euclid.

The parent-teacher association of the Moreland avenue public school showed recently at the Euclid theater an interesting series of especially censored pictures for the benefit of the school. The receipts are to be used for the purchase of articles needed by the school for the welfare of the pupils. It was a success from a financial standpoint, as well as an entertainment thoroughly appreciated by the children.

The Vaudette Entertains Old Confederate Soldiers.

Fifty old veterans from the Confederate Soldiers' Home cheered and laughted and cried over "The Coward" at the Vaudette theater Tuesday afternoon; they were the guests of Evins Bros., the managers. These old soldiers were invited to witness this play because it depicted war scenes in the south in the 60's with wonderful fidelity. Several times, when the confederate Stars and Bars waved in victory over hard fought battlefields, the old veterans cut loose with their "rebel yells," much to the surprise of the spectators. Free street cars carried the old men to and from the Home.

Want Masonic Film in Atlanta.

Atlanta contains perhaps more Scottish Rite Masons than any city of its size in the country. During the dedication of the new "House of the Temple" of the Rite in Washington, a thousand foot film showing the dedicatory ceremonies was made by the Pathe company, and is now ready for delivery. The film is considered a very excellent one, and will prove interesting to Masons of either rite. A movement is being started to have the film shown in Atlanta by one of her theaters. If this is done, it will bring crowds of Scottish Rite men from everywhere in Georgia.

Atlanta moving picture patrons have much to be trankful for this Thanksgiving week. The bills at all the theaters are splendid because of the desire of the managers to show their patrons more than the average productions for Thanksgiving. Especially is this true, for the reason there is to be no vampire shows.

Manager W. C. Brandon of the V-L-S-E has returned from a business trip to New York.

INDIANA NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Indiana Trade News Service.

Strand at Shelbyville to Blossom Forth.

THE Strand theater, Shelbyville, Ind., is to have an automatic flash sign with a thousand lights in it. On both ends the varied colored lamps will produce illuminated fountains. It is one of the handsomest signs of the kind ever made for a small city. The piano for the theater is to cost $1,500 and a $5,000 pipe organ has been contracted for. William Meloy, proprietor of the Strand, says that he is buying the best chairs to be had, 850 of them, at near four dollars each. Mr. Meloy also says that he will spend $12,000 in furnishing.

Family theater at Lafayette is celebrating its tenth anniversary.

The Willard theater, Michigan City, after being entirely redecorated and renovated by the owner, Mrs. John Burns, has been re-opened.

Hammond Censors Form Board.

A board of about 25 of the leading citizens of Hammond, Ind., have formed a Board of Censorship, to determine what kinds of motion pictures shall be shown. Their excuse is that too many spicy pictures have been shown.

South Bend, Indiana, an Exhibitor.

Municipal moving pictures proved so successful the first time they were tried at the Kaley school, South Bend, Ind., that they will be made a part of the Kaley civic club work. Three different pictures were offered, the first being "Humpty-Dumpty" in three reels. The second was a one-reel picture of the fight between the Sioux and Pawnee Indians, and the last was a comedy, "The Old Swimming Hole."

No license is required for picture shows of this kind and the school operator is not required to take out a permit. An admission is charged at the door. The attendance the first night was enough to pay all expenses.

The Indiana theater, Marion, Ind., has increased the admission to the lower floor to ten cents. The Grand at Marion is getting ten and twenty cents for feature pictures and vaudeville, and the Mecca is charging ten cents for features. This fact makes the recent announcement by Manager W. E. Steckman of the Indiana welcome news to the other exhibitors. The Indiana has always done a good business, filling to capacity at the expense of the other houses, because of the lower price, and the Indiana was the subject of some plotting to have exchanges give them the go-by, but all that is erased now.

Claims C. Francis Jenkins as Father of Moving Pictures.

C. Francis Jenkins is featured in a story by James B. Morrow, being generally circulated by newspapers in Indiana as the inventor of moving pictures. Jenkins received $5,500 for the first motion picture machine. It showed a dancing girl on a film that was 100 feet long. Jenkins says that he has no regrets, that the price he got was a good one, all things considered, and the money that the promoters have made out of the machine does not excite any envy in his heart. All of which would seem to indicate that Mr. Jenkins is a little different from the average inventor.

Let Four Fort Wayne Men Go.

The four managers of Fort Wayne, Ind., moving picture theaters charged with violating the Indiana child labor laws by employing boys under age of 16 were warned by Judge H. Kerr and permitted to go on indefinite continuances. The arrests were made on affidavits by Nelson H. Kyser, deputy state factory inspector. The men summoned were O. E. Wobsock, Lyric theater; George Kellen, Star theater; Herman C. Heisler, Colonial theater; and J. P. Mallett, Grand theater. All employed boys as ticket takers.

Selected Indiana Notes of Interest.

The Gem theater, Liberty, Ind., formerly operated by Sam Buffler, is being renovated and refurnished and will be reopened by Harry Shriner. On three alternative nights the admission will be ten cents. Pictures will be shown every night in the week. Mr. Shriner was formerly associated with Mr. Buffler at the Union theater.

Manager Steckman of the Indian theater, Marion, Ind., will use two acts of vaudeville and three reels of moving pictures at each performance. The matinee price will be unchanged, but at night he will charge ten cents.

The Jefferson theater at Goshen, Ind., is installing a $5,000 Harmo pipe organ.

The new Arlington theater, Huntingburg, Ind., has been re-opened, with the "Kreutzer Sonata."

Fire, which started in Porter's drug store, next door, caught the Palace theater, owned by James Chandler, Peru, Ind., and both buildings were practically destroyed.

Mrs. Ella Roser, wife of Charles Roser, owner of the Lyric theater, Richmond, is dead. Her death was due to acute indigestion.

Vaudeville and pictures is to be the program of Harold Kelly, proprietor of the Star and the Princess theaters at Montpelier, Ind., at the Star theater. Pictures only will be run at the Princess.

C. C. Lower is trying to buy property at the rear of his Crystal theater at Muncie, Ind., where about three nights a week he can't find room to stow away the crowds, much less seat them.

Cecil Grames, manager of the Royal, Albany, Ind., will remodel his theater in the near future and change the name. He will run a voting contest to decide the name for the house.

Rothapfel's Talk to Indianapolis Exhibitors

OF strictly local application was the peeler," delivered by S. L. Rothapfel to the exhibitors of Indianapolis the night of Saturday, November 20. Of the thirty in attendance, only fourteen were exhibitors.

Mr. Rothapfel told them about Indianapolis. It ranks last, he said, and then he told them why. "You are all trying to rush through the same door," he said, "when there are thousands of doors."

"The theaters were covered with all kinds of posters—one's, three's, sixes. I haven't seen much newspaper advertising. Clean up your theaters. You can change your lighting system into an indirect lighting effect, doing away with the glare of unprotected lights, and the direct lights which detract from the picture on the screen. Cut out the mechanical pianos. It is better not to have any music at all than to have a mechanical piano. If you have two bum musicians and can't afford to hire two good ones, fire both of the bum ones and hire one good one."

Frank J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, presided as toastmaster. C. B. Alves of the Mutual office at Evansville, and an old friend of Mr. Rothapfel; L. Baum of the General Film, Indianapolis, and J. I. Schnitzer, Universal representative, also delivered short addresses.

Among those present were B. C. Kixmiller, Colonial theater, Bickneli, Ind.; L. Baum, Victoria theater and General Film, Indianapolis; J. I. Schnitzer, of the Universal, also the Victoria, Empress and Talhott theaters; Frank J. Rembusch and wife, Alhambra theater, Shelbyville; M. M. Miller, manager, the Mutual Indianapolis office; W. S. Bassett, Mirror Screen Company and Gem theater, Indianapolis; H. H. Koch, Manhattan theater, Indianapolis; C. C. Baumgardner and wife, Bishop theater, Walton, Ind.; W. F. Easley, Princess theater, Rushville; R. B. Grimes, Arc theater, Crawfordsville; H. A. Keine, Keystone theater, Indianapolis; C. O. Winnick, Mutual Film, Indianapolis; W. H. Ingelman, Mutual Film, Indianapolis; B. Van Borssum and son, Jack Van Borssum, Crescent and Savoy theaters, Terre Haute; H. C. Foster and Louis Morrison, Joy theater, Cloverdale; B. T. Demarec, Franklin Opera House, Franklin; Norman M. Dixon, manager, Mutual Film Corporation, Louisville, Ky.; J. H. Conner, manager, "The Girl and the Game" department, Mutual Film, Indianapolis; Samuel Plame, manager, Famous Players Film, Indianapolis; Fred W. Sanders, Sanders theater, Indianapolis; C. B. Alves, Mutual Film, Evansville, and press representatives from the local and trade papers.

ST. LOUIS' RIALTO SOLD.

By A. H. Giebler, St. Louis Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Rialto theater, formerly the Delmar, on Delmar and Kingshighway, was sold last week to Benjamin P. Stromberg, who, after a week spent in a few necessary repairs, will reopen the house under its former name of Delmar. Mrs. O. T. Crawford, who was in charge of the house, was one of the successful women managers of the city. She took the Delmar over when the theater had been suffering from poor patronage and indifferent programs, and made a paying proposition of it, and her husband, O. T. Crawford, who owned controlling interest in the theater, is well pleased with his wife's business ability.

S. SHURMAN VISITS FILM ROW.

S. Shurman, of Moberly, Mo., formerly identified with the local moving picture trade in St. Louis, paid a visit to Film Row last week. Mr. Shurman is proprietor of the Fourth theater at Moberly, and devotes all of his time to the management of the house. "When I opened the Fourth theater," said Mr. Shurman, "I planned to make the house the finest theater in Moberly, and I feel that I have succeeded. The Fourth theater is to Moberly what the Knickerbocker theater is to New York, the Willis Wood to Kansas City, and the New Grand Central and the West End Lyric are to St. Louis." The Fourth theater seats 850, five and ten cents admission is charged, and an all feature program is maintained.

ROTHAPFEL IN ST. LOUIS.

A big crowd of motion picture exhibitors and exchange managers attended the banquet at Lippe's Cafe on Friday, Nov. 19, in honor of S. L. Rothapfel. Fred A. Keller, manager of the Mutual Exchange, was master of ceremonies. Those present at the St. Louis dinner included S. L. Rothapfel, New York; E. Grand Central on the Job Again.

The Grand Central theater, at Sixth and Market streets, which has been closed for a week, undergoing repairs, opened again under the same management as the New Grand Central, at Grand and Lucas avenues, on Sunday, November 21, with the second run of the New Grand Central program. The opening bill was the Fox version of "Carmen," and after this the Central will show the New Grand Central program the week following the exhibition at the latter house. The admission will be ten cents.

Shows Titles in Italian

In San Francisco an Interesting Experiment Is Succeeding at a Big House in City's "Little Italy"—Titles Translated Into Italian and Thrown on Second Screen Please Old People—System to Be Patented.

By T. A. Church, San Francisco Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

AFTER experimenting in a quiet way for two years Ben Michaels, proprietor of the Verdi theater on Broadway, one of the finest of any of the exclusive moving picture houses in an outlying district of San Francisco, has placed in successful operation a system of translating the English title on films into Italian for the benefit of his many patrons of that nationality. The system, for which a patent has been applied, is a simple one, and embodies the use of a second screen placed above the regular one, a special slide projection machine and an operator. As soon as new films are received the translator goes over them and translates the titles into Italian, writing the foreign version on separate slides, which are kept in a special filing device.

When the films are shown the operator watches the screen and sees that the translated title is thrown on the small screen at the proper time. The chief difficulty with this plan has been to secure an operator with a knowledge of both languages and a knack for the business, but this has been overcome. Since the new system was installed there has been a noticeable increase in the number of elderly persons who have attended the Verdi theater. Most of the young generation read English, but a great many of the older ones read Italian only, and the pictures with titles in their mother tongue has a new charm for them. This plan can be worked with other languages and Mr. Michaels is considering the plan of translating some titles into Chinese. This exhibitor is a strong booster for the North Beach district and is working hard to make a success of North Beach Day at the Exposition, to be featured shortly. The new pipe organ for the Verdi theater is now in place and music is being made a special feature of the program.

GORGEOUS PRESENTATION OF "MADAME BUTTERFLY."

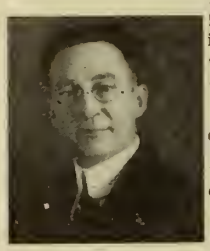
J. L. Partington, manager of the Imperial theater, has surpassed all previous efforts in his artistic presentation of "Madame Butterfly," featuring Mary Pickford, and so enthusiastically has this been received that a second week's run has been found necessary. The entire house received attention from the decorator for this engagement and everywhere was to be noted something characteristic of Japan, from the decorative panels, bamboo work, trailing vines and burning incense in the foyer to the wonderful stage set showing a Japanese tea garden. An enlarged symphony orchestra rendered the full operatic score, while Miss Helen Stratton rendered arias from the opera before the presentation of the picture and a dancer, whose name is not known even to the management of the theater, gave a delightful interpretation of typical Japanese dances. This manner of presenting great feature productions has caused so much favorable comment that Manager Partington is arranging to have special stage sets and singers with all productions where they would be in place.

METRO TO OPEN OWN OFFICES.

The Metro Corporation has completed arrangements for booking its productions direct in this territory, having taken over the franchise formerly held by the Golden Gate exchange. Harry J. Cohen, who arrived here recently for this purpose, has been busy during the past week arranging for this change and has secured splendid quarters at 49-55 Jones street, in the heart of the film exchange district. E. D. Selden, formerly with the World Film in the Middle West, will be the local manager and is now on the ground assisting Mr. Cohen. The latter will be here for about a month and before his return East will make a similar change at Los Angeles.

FRED S. PEACHY, LOCAL MANAGER FOR UNITED.

Fred S. Peachy, who for the last few monhs has been filling the position of district manager for the United Film Service, with headquarters at San Francisco, is one of the most interesting figures in the film exchange business in this territory. Although he has been connected with the business for but about a year and a half he has a fund of information that would be a credit to any one. Before engaging in this line of work he was in the employ of a large public service corporation in the southern part of the State and his knowledge of accounting and business methods has served him in good stead.



F. S. Peachy.

His experience in film exchange work is confined largely to his connections with the Union Film & Supply Co., the Mutual Film Corporation and the firm with which he is now connected. His speciality is getting business and he is rated as one of the best purveyors of film service in the business. His success upon the road is nothing short of marvelous and even in his present position he does the traveling work, finding that it is easier to get competent office help than it is to get good solicitors. Although no new material has come to the local United exchange since he took charge he has placed the local branch on a paying basis and in so doing has won the general admiration of the trade. His pleasing personality is one of the reasons for his success, but this is backed up by a thorough knowledge of business conditions.

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO. TO OPEN EXCHANGE.

Within a short time another new film exchange will be added to the already long list of exchanges in San Francisco. The Picture Playhouse Film company has taken possession of a large store at 100 Golden Gate avenue, corner of Jones street, and will be ready for business within a short time. This exchange will be in charge of E. H. Emmick, formerly of Los Angeles.

Sol Lesser to Visit New York.

Sol L. Lesser, head of the Golden Gate exchange and the All Star is preparing to leave at an early date for New York to look over film offerings and make extensive purchases. He recently purchased rights for this territory to seven Griffith films, including "Home Sweet Home" and the "Battle of the Sexes."

Los Angeles Exchange Man Visits San Francisco.

T. W. Johns, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, was here this week attending to business matters and visiting the Exposition with his family. He told of the strenuous time experienced in the southern city to make possible the showing of "Damaged Goods" and of the tremendous success of that attraction.

Makes First Trip to California.

Robert Miller, of the New Process Electro Corporation and Koko Films, is here for a stay of two or three weeks on a trip of business and pleasure combined, this being his first visit to the Pacific Coast. He is introducing a line of display cartoons in this territory, as well as Koko films, and while here will spend considerable time at the Exposition. He came by way of the Northwest and will make a stay of a few days at Los Angeles on his way home.

Film Exchange Board of Trade Elects New Officer.

When J. R. Crone, the former manager of the Mutual Film, was selected to fill the position of manager of a large producing company at Los Angeles, the office of vice-president of the San Francisco Film Board of Trade was left vacant, but at the regular meeting of the Board of Directors held this week X. K. Stout was selected to fill the unexpired term. The selection of Mr. Stout to fill this position is particularly appropriate as he has succeeded Mr. Crone as manager of the exchange.

Traggardh to Cover Entire State.

O. V. Traggardh, of the Union Film & Supply, is preparing to leave on a business trip which will take him over the entire state. He has the rights to the "Fall of Przemysl," and will book this feature together with others controlled by this firm.

To Open Branch House at Los Angeles.

G. A. Metcalfe, who conducts a large theater supply house here, has left for Los Angeles to establish a branch in that city. This branch is to be in charge of James Slipper and Mr. Metcalfe will select a location while in the southern city.

FORT WORTH NOW OPEN SUNDAY.

By S. A. Harrison, Dallas Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

BY a decision rendered in the district court November 18, Fort Worth, Texas, will again have Sunday attractions. All places of Sunday amusement have been closed by injunction for about a year, and the injunction is practically dissolved by the decision of jury in this case, although Judge B. M. Terrell says a formal motion to dissolve will be necessary. The case was fought on the basis of whether or not Sunday performances would depress real estate values.

A SAN ANTONIO CONSOLIDATION.

By a consolidation at San Antonio, Texas, three of the largest moving picture houses of that place come under one management. The Royal Amusement Company, owners of the Royal theater, and W. J. Lytle, owner of the Empire theater, form the new corporation, and beside the two theaters have secured a ten-year lease on the Princess. The new company will be known as the San Antonio Amusement Co.

The Dixie of Houston Renamed the Globe.

H. C. Northfleet, of Houston, Texas, former manager of the Key theater, has purchased the Dixie, and renamed it the Globe, after giving it a thorough renovation, greatly improving and beautifying the place.

Dallas' Jefferson to Run Pictures.

Commencing November 21, the Jefferson theater, Dallas, Texas, will discontinue musical comedy and will run vaudeville and pictures. The Jefferson is one of the larger houses in this city.

Architect Makes Cartoon Reel.

Harvey L. Page, well-known architect of San Antonio, Texas, has entered the moving picture field with a comedy cartoon reel entitled "Clipinsnip." The first reel is a humorous sketch introducing a hunting scene, and was much praised at its first showing.

A Cartoon Hunt.

MANY SALT LAKE PICTURE MEN GREET ROTHAPFEL.

By H. W. Pickering, Salt Lake City Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE event of greatest importance during the week to motion picture men of the Salt Lake district was the banquet given November 17 at the Newhouse hotel by the local branch of the Mutual to S. L. Rothapfel, of New York, manager of the Strand theater.

Mr. Rothapfel, in a two-hour speech, conveyed his message to the exhibitors of this territory. More than 50 guests attended the banquet, including prominent exchange men, exhibitors, newspaper men and manufacturers' representatives. N. E. Levy, of the New York office of the Mutual, accompanied Mr. Rothapfel. W. P. Moran, manager of the local branch of the Mutual, was host. The guests were as follows:

A. L. Stallings, Provo, Utah; Clifton Peirce, Springville, Utah; J. R. Baster, Jr., Spring City, Utah; Mannie Feldstein, New York; E. H. Goldstein, manager Universal office; Mark Ross, Minneapolis, Minn.; L. D. Peery, Ogden, Utah; Ernest Ryan, Salt Lake; J. E. Ryan, Brigham City, Utah; L. P. Arnold, manager Pathe exchange; Louis Marcus, president and general manager Notable Feature Film Co.; Mrs. Louis Marcus; George E. Carpenter, Notable Feature Film Co.; Mrs. Geo. E. Carpenter; A. J. Conway; D. E. Schwuyer; R. W. Bertelson, manager V-L-S-E exchange; W. J. Morgan, Kamas, Utah; J. Martin Matson; J. R. Kennard, Deseret Evening News; Newton E. Levy, New York; Harry Suinn; Beatrice D. King; M. H. Hanauer, Broadway theater; W. B. Moyle, Herald-Republican; E. C. Schmidt, publicity manager American, Rex and Liberty theaters; Inez Todd King; Mrs. Monroe Hauser; J. Rothneul, Nephi, Utah; V. M. Foote, Nephi, Utah; Charles P. Paulson, New York; S. L. Rothapfel, New York; C. E. Beardsley, American Falls, Idaho; H. A. Simms, American, Rex and Liberty theaters; W. P. Moran, Mutual Film Corporation; C. H. Archibald, Pocatello, Idaho; Robert Saunders, Pathe exchange; Emery G. Epperson, Provo, Utah; E. D. La Gran, Photoplay theater; Mrs. M. B. La Gran; J. C. Lindsay, Eureka, Utah; George C. Cowing, Salt Lake Tribune; James A. A. Stanley, North American Film Corporation.

E. H. GOLDSTEIN TAKES CHARGE OF LOCAL OFFICE.

E. H. Goldstein, assistant to the general sales manager of the Universal Film Company, with headquarters in New York, arrived in Salt Lake a short time ago to take charge of the big branch office of the Universal in this city. Mr. Goldstein succeeded C. A. Clegg, who took charge of the installation of the new office several months ago. H. D. Cassidy, who was local manager, has resigned and will devote his attention to the marketing of features.

Manager Rennie Comes Back Smiling.

Hugh Rennie, manager of the World Film office, returned last week from the meeting of World Film managers in Chicago.

More Censorship Gospel

Portland, Oregon, Censor Board Secretary Addresses Oregon Civic League—Spreads Pro-Censorship Propaganda—A Part of the Censor Board's Plan of Defense—Disinterested Persons Oppose No-Appeal Ordinance.

By Abraham Nelson, Portland Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Oregon Civic League, a Portland organization composed of representative men and women of the city, chose the subject of censorship for discussion at the luncheon at the Multnomah Hotel Nov. 20, when Mrs. E. B. Colwell, secretary of the censor board, spoke in favor of censorship and explained the work of that civic body. The film men were not represented, although A. C. Newill, husband of the chairwoman of the censor board, stated that the motion picture men had been asked to have a representative at the luncheon to present their side of the question.

"The Inside Facts" and "The Real Situation" were the points upon which Mrs. Colwell spoke. A statement that the National Board of Censors was not a proper body to censor for the entire country and that local boards were the only bodies who could meet the local situations, the defense of censorship as being absolutely necessary and a denial of the truth of all the allegations in the newspaper articles attacking the local board composed the body of Mrs. Colwell's address. She did not touch on the constitutional phase of censorship nor its equitable side. She reiterated her statement of some time ago that patrolmen could not be proper censors and that a specially selected board of competent persons was the only body that could properly do the work. She declared that feature films gave the board more concern than any other kind and that Portland, like other cities, had to contend with the unscrupulous exhibitor who sought after risque features to show in his house.

THIRD TIME BROUGHT LUCK.

Rejected twice by Portland's censor board, Metro's "Destiny" was given a third viewing on Nov. 15 and passed, the board ordering numerous eliminations. This picture has been in the Portland territory since August and after the first rejection by the board, P. G. Noble, of the local Metro office, and Harry Cohen, special representative, then in Portland, requested a second viewing, but the picture again failed to pass.

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THEATER AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Al Sather, now manager of the Ideal theater, and former manager of the Crystal, both popular suburban houses, co-operates with the public schools in the neighborhood. Mr. Sather has arranged with the principal of the public school near the Ideal to issue tickets to students averaging 90 per cent. in class grade and deportment for a week. They are good for Wednesday nights only, when an educational program is run. The Portland ordinance requires that children attending theaters after 8 o'clock must be accompanied by parents so that Mr. Sather's plan brings the older people as well as the children to his theater.

ON THE FEATURE QUESTION.

The statement by S. L. Rothapfel during his recent visit to Portland, that the day of big features is passing, occasioned some little discussion among Portland exhibitors and the consensus of opinion seems to be that the Portland public is not quite ready to forego the big features entirely. Their popularity has, however, waned to a point where the exhibitor no longer books pictures on the strength of the names they carry and the press notices that go with them. They see the film first and book it afterwards.

Not over three months ago it was the practice of exhibitors to make a wild rush for big service, to be guided entirely by the advertising and press reports that preceded the picture, and they found, to their sorrow, that very often the opinion of the public was quite different from the opinions originating in the distributors' press bureaus.

C. F. Regan, the progressive manager of the National theater, expressed himself in superlative language on the feature situation in Portland as he is compelled to meet it.

"The Portland public demands features," says Mr. Regan. "And when a theater advertises itself to be the home of a well known brand of photoplays, the public expects to see there each week films that are fairly uniform in quality. But my experience has been that while some distributors claim in their advertising that each successive feature is the most marvellous screen production ever offered, the quality of the pictures vary to such an extent that the audiences are often disappointed and any picture of the brand claiming to have its home in the theater fails to be a drawing card."

METRO DOINGS.

W. A. Crank, one of the biggest men in the selling game in the Northwest, has been engaged by the Portland Metro office as road man.

The new Metro office on Broadway, Portland, has a large show window which Mr. Noble devotes entirely to the display of posters and advertising exploiting the picture shown each successive week in the Portland house showing first run Metro. This is something new in picture advertising in Portland.

NEW MUTUAL MANAGER.

Callers at the Portland Mutual exchange have had the pleasure of shaking hands with G. A. Reed, who came from Seattle Nov. 18 to occupy the position of branch manager in the Portland office. Mr. Reed, while a young man, is not new at the film business. He was employed by the General Film company for several years in Seattle, the J. D. Williams Company, in Australia, and for the past two years has been in the Seattle office of the Mutual. J. S. Woody, who is supervising manager for the Northwest Mutual offices, will make his headquarters in Seattle.

Changes in Roseburg, Oregon.

George Maple, former owner of the Majestic theater, Roseburg, Oregon, passing a few days in Portland, relates that about the time he sold his theater to his partner, Frank Boles, every theater in the town changed hands within six days. Herman Marks sold the Palace, the Golden was closed and the Antlers was leased to G. A. Werner for five years. The Antlers is the largest house in Roseburg, seating 900 people. It will show pictures and vaudeville. Roseburg still maintains its prices at 5 and 10 cents.

While Mr. Maple says he is going to take it easy this winter his friends intimate that he cannot remain idle long and predict that he will take over the management of some progressive house soon.

A. S. Kirkpatrick, road man for Mutual, has returned from Eastern Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana with a lot of new business.

Ban on German Pictures

Canadian and British Authorities Take Notice of Certain Films Being Released from Amsterdam, but Declared to Be German in Form and Spirit—Restriction on Film Stories Made from Books by German Authors.

By W. M. Gladish, Toronto Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

IMPORTANT rulings have just been made by British and Canadian authorities with respect to moving pictures in both England and Canada, according to an announcement just made in Toronto, where the Provincial censors have been advised as to the decisions.

Orders have been issued, it is understood, prohibiting the showing of films released from Amsterdam but very German in subject and general make-up, in any part of the British Empire and the Colonial Governments everywhere have been so notified. According to meager descriptions of some of the film subjects, it seems that the pictures are intended to show that the Germans are kindly disposed toward the Belgian and Polish people now under their jurisdiction and that Belgian women are eager to marry German officers. The captive peoples are also shown, it is declared, enjoying great liberties and with bountiful supplies of food. These features, may or may not, be true, but the British authorities have banned the reels.

Film Stories by German Author.

Another order issued governs the use of any film, the author of which is a German. In the case of a play or novel from the pen of a German writer which is adapted by a film company, it must be shown by sworn statement that the author is not receiving a royalty from the pictures, otherwise the film will be rejected by the censors.

It is not believed that many American-made picture plays are adaptations of German books or dramas and that the order means more to the British and European film industry than to the American producers.

The above orders were issued at London, England, and were sent to Ottawa, the Canadian capital, and thence to the various provincial censor boards.

WINS APPEAL ON "CARMEN."

Ontario Censor Board Bans Lasky Feature, But Is Overruled.

When "Carmen," the Jesse L. Lasky feature, was presented to the Ontario Board of Censors, composed of G. E. Armstrong, R. Wilson and John Burns, it was rejected entirely, but Phil Kauffman, general sales manager of the Famous Players Film Service, Toronto, appealed the decision of the censors, with the result that his appeal was allowed by the higher board, composed of Robert Newman and Charles Matthews. Mr. Kauffman immediately engaged Massey Hall, the largest auditorium in Toronto, with seating accommodation for almost 5,000, for the whole week of Nov. 29 for the exhibition of the picture. Two shows will be given daily and the prices will range from 15 cts. to 50 cts.

"Salvation Nell," the World feature film, was also banned recently by the Ontario Censor Board.

Some objection was raised recently by amateur censors over the showing of so-called objectionable scenes in a number of pictures exhibited in Toronto and the censor board was asked to investigate. It was found that the pictures in question had been passed by the censors for the Province of Quebec and had been accepted by the Ontario examiners without seeing the films on the strength of the Quebec censors' decision. No action was taken in the matter.

ENJOYED THEIR PRIVILEGE.

Mr. William Banks, the theatrical censor of Toronto, recently told an interesting tale about the Methodist Ministerial Association of Toronto which has been so active in the suppression of all films and plays which have not been to their liking. The preachers succeeded in obtaining the reels which had been banned by the Ontario Board of Censors and these were shown in detail at a private performance the audience for which was made up only of "holier than thou" persons. It is said that not one of the association members missed "the treat."

A number of Toronto preachers have also been given the opportunity to see the Johnson-Willard fight pictures and they enjoyed the filmed version of the heavyweight tussle, but to permit the general public to have a glimpse of the views—that is out of the question.

NEW $1,000,000 CORPORATION.

CANADA now has a new million dollar moving picture corporation with the organization of World Features Limited to succeed the Colonial Film Company in Eastern Canada and the World Features Limited in the West. The new concern, whose headquarters are located at 37 Yonge street, Toronto, has obtained the Canadian film rights to all the plays produced by W. A. Brady, J. J. and Lee Shubert, George W. Lederer and others, as picturized by the World Film Corporation, and it will distribute in Canada all the World, Paragon and Equitable releases. Charles Berman, of Toronto, formerly head of the Colonial company, has been made president of the new corporation, while the secretary and general manager is H. B. Wright, who previously directed the affairs of the former World exchange out West. Mr. Wright has already removed from Calgary to Toronto to take up his new duties.

World features are being seen regularly in over a dozen of Toronto's best moving picture theaters and the support of a strong clientele throughout Canada is already enjoyed. World Features Limited buys outright all of the films which are imported from the states and over $300 is paid each week in duty. Invariably two sets of every picture are purchased and these are first released in Montreal and Toronto.

FILM PUBLICITY IN CANADA.

Advertisement Writers Should Bear Present Feeling in Mind.

The publicity issued by a film producing company of California in regard to one of its prominent players has caused some concern in Canada, where the advance notices were distributed, because of the fact that the actor in question was described as an Austrian. The announcement read in part as follows:

"An Austrian by birth, ——— was educated in some of the best schools on the other side. Coming from a professional family which ranked high, it was natural that ——— should go in for the artistic life. Comedy was his forte as a youth and he supported some of the best known players in Vienna, Berlin and Hamburg."

From a Canadian viewpoint this makes very objectionable reading and the company in question is being credited with very little judgment in sending such a notice to Canadian newspapers for publication. The feature in which this actor appears is being shown at one theater in Toronto, but no objection has been raised because no public reference has been made to the man's nationality. But in newspaper and film circles where the publicity has been read, much comment has been heard. Canadians have proven themselves to be very broad-minded in accepting some German or Austrian amusement features, but there is no need, it is declared, to remind the people that the source or origin is from the opposite side. It is pointed out that German characters on the speaking stage and in films are accepted without comment because they are only character representations, but a subject or plot with pro-German tendencies is different. Canadian theatrical critics have frequently asserted that the people are not worrying about the nationality of an actor so long as he sticks to his knitting.

His Majesty's Opens.

"His Majestys," a reconstructed moving picture theater on Yonge street, opposite Temperance street, Toronto, was opened on Monday, November 15, with "The Eternal City" as the feature for 10 and 15 cents. This picture, which was produced by the Famous Players' Film Company, was rejected by the Quebec censors because of the so-called religious question, but the Ontario censors readily accepted the film. During the last three days of the week the program included "The Case of Becky." Souvenir pictures of Blanche Sweet were distributed.

The Paramount in Canada

Details of the Canadian Paramount Pictures Corporation Show Consolidation of Several Exchanges and Theaters in the West.

DETAILS of the organization of the Canadian Paramount Pictures Corporation, Toronto, with a capitalization of $2,500,000, reveal the fact that the Canadian distributors of Paramount, Famous Players, Jesse L. Lasky, Morosco and Pallas pictures are strongly intrenched throughout the Dominion, and they also indicate that Canada is becoming a real factor in the moving picture industry.

According to the announcement regarding the formation of the company by Phil Kauffman, general manager of the Canadian Paramount interests, the corporation was established as a holding company for the consolidation of several exchanges and a number of moving picture theaters in the Canadian West controlled by the Allen syndicate. According to Mr. Kauffman the board of officers has not been definitely selected yet, but it is probable that B. Allen, of Calgary, will be the president. Mr. Allen is now the president of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, of which Mr. Kauffman is sales manager. The latter company has controlled the Canadian distribution of the five makes of films noted above, which include Pallas Pictures, the first release of which "A Gentleman from Indiana," is due in Canada within a very few weeks. The Famous Players Film Service has maintained six branches which are located at Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, making it a concern of coast-to-coast importance.

There are nine theaters, from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast, which are included in the interests controlled by the Canadian Paramount Pictures Corporation. The largest of these is the Allen, at Calgary, with a seating capacity of 1,100. Those behind the new company are looking forward to the securing of a string of theaters in the East and it is understood that several new show buildings will be erected in suitable centers. Kauffman declares that the company is looking into a proposition to build a new large downtown theater in Toronto. He went to New York recently to undertake several matters of important interest to the firm.

NEW GRAND THEATER OPENS AT WALLACE, IDAHO.

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokane Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE new Grand theater, Wallace, Idaho, representing a total outlay of $30,000, including the ground, and having a seating capacity of 700, was opened November 10 and played to two capacity houses.

A reception was held at 3 p. m. on the opening date. Music was furnished by a full orchestra, there was singing by a male quartet and harp and violin selections were by Mrs. J. McAllister and Ralph Bovee.

C. C. Spencer, manager of the house, presented Charles Chaplin in "Shanghaied," and one of the "J. Rufus Wallingford" pictures for the opening, as well as other mixed features.

Buys Pipe Organ to Go With Triangle Films.

In connection with the change to the Triangle service starting Sunday, November 21, new attachments for the Wurlitzer Hope Jones pipe organ at the Liberty theater, Spokane, Wash., costing close to $3,000, arrived from North Tonawanda, N. Y., and are being installed by M. Crockeroft of the factory. Many of these will be used when the Liberty presents its first Triangle program. The orchestra will be discontinued under the new arrangement.

Manager Ralph Ruffner also announces that a second set of doors will be installed at the main entrance to keep out the noise from the street and protect against drafts. The new doors will be of mahogany and plate glass.

Bits of Manager Allender's Showmanship

J. W. Allender, manager of the Lyric theater, has signed for the second run of the two-reel Essanay Charles Chaplin features and the two-reel Keystone comedy features. Mr. Allender reports that he signed for these productions because a number of his patrons has requested them and due to the fact that there is a continued demand for them. "The Diamond From The Sky," with Lottie Pickford in the stellar role, will close its run at the Lyric in four weeks.

Manager Allender also reports that the second run of "The Mating" a Mutual Masterpicture, with Bessie Barriscale in the leading role, was a profitable production of the current week.

With a view of attracting the children to his theater and by this means interesting the parents, Mr. Allender admits children free on Saturdays provided they bring his ad cut from one of the local afternoon papers, which must be signed by one of the parents. He explained the reason for the signature was so the management would know that the parents approved of the children visiting the show.

Spokane Brevities—Changes—Business Notes—Features.

Glenwood Emory has purchased the Mission theater at Cheney and is making extensive improvements. He has contracted for the Mutual Service and Mutual Masterpictures.

The Mutual Exchange has installed a projection room in the new addition and claims that the new office is the most complete in appointment of anything in the Northwest.

Through B. Stubeck, the leading newsboy of Spokane, Dr. H. S. Clemmer invited all the Spokesman-Review newsboys to attend the Clemmer theater to witness the first presentation of the "J. Rufus Wallingford" series of pictures and Blanche Ring in "The Yankee Girl." These pictures drew well.

"The Miracle of Life," with Margarita Fisher in the leading role, made a hit at the Class A theater.

Broader Censorship

British Columbia Is Now Promised a Better and Broader Censorship—Attorney General Bowser Thinks Puritanical Ideas Not Wanted—Some Big Features That Did Not Get By Will Be Seen By Patrons of the Shows.

By E. C. Thomas, Vancouver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

IT may now be definitely announced that for the time being, at least, censorship in British Columbia will be administered with a little more regard for common sense and the rights of those engaged in the moving picture business than has hitherto been the case. Following the passing of "The Spoilers" by Attorney General Bowser, that gentleman indicated to the censor that his fanatical adherence to puritanical ideas was evidently becoming too strong, and directed that productions be judged from a somewhat broader viewpoint.

Following this, "Just Jim," the Universal feature rejected at about the same time as "The Spoilers," was resubmitted to the censor some weeks ago, and was passed, but at the request of Manager James E. Finch of the Vancouver Universal offices announcement of this action was withheld, pending developments.

Many feature productions which would never have been brought into the province under the old standards will now be imported by local exchanges, with apparently a fair chance of being approved for exhibition. It is probably too much to hope that the standards to be adopted will be those in effect in other parts of the civilized world, but any change for the better, however slight, will be welcomed by everyone in the trade.

"Just Jim" will be shown at the Colonial in the near future.

NO MORE "COUNTRY STORES" IN ALBERTA.

At a conference held in Edmonton between Chief Justice Harvey and attorneys representing the attorney general's office and the Hudson Bay company, respectively, a court action was agreed upon which may mean the doom of "country stores" and other methods of distributing prizes by chance, in the province of Alberta. The charges arise out of the offer by the company of an automobile to which ever one of their customers, being the purchaser of one dollar or more's worth of goods, shall be the possessor of a ticket bearing a certain number, each such customer being given a ticket with his purchase.

The Crown contends that this constitutes a violation of the criminal code, and the present prosecution will be a test case. The statute in question renders liable to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, anyone who "makes, prints, advertises or publishes or causes or procures to be made, printed, advertised or published, any proposal or scheme for advertising, lending, giving, selling or in any way disposing of any property by lots, cards, tickets or any mode or chance whatsoever" or "conducts or manages any scheme, contrivance or operation of any kind for the purpose of determining who, or the holder of what lots, tickets, numbers or chances are the winners of any property so proposed to be advanced, loaned, given, sold or disposed of."

Many moving picture men would be glad to see this regulation strictly enforced, as even a large proportion of those who are now giving away prizes are doing so in self-defense, to combat competing houses which are pursuing the same tactics.

UNIVERSAL OFFICE TO MOVE.

Manager James E. Finch of the Universal office in Vancouver, contemplates moving from the present quarters in the Holden building, and last week practically decided to lease a large ground floor room in the center of the city's theater district, and which on inspection was found to be ideally suited to the needs of a film exchange. It is expected that arrangements for the change will be completed this week, and no time will be lost in taking possession. This move will give the Universal the largest exchange quarters in Vancouver, and the only one situated on the ground floor.

PATRIOTIC PICTURES TO THE FORE.

Moving pictures designed to stimulate recruiting will hereafter be shown at intervals in Winnipeg, supplementing the slides in use in the moving picture theaters at the present time. Later, the films will be exhibited in other cities of western Canada.

A private showing of a three-reel picture called "Defenders of the Empire" was given at Pantages theater in Winnipeg on a recent afternoon, and was repeated on the following Tuesday for the benefit of all army officers stationed in the city. This picture is sent out by the British Army Council, and includes scenes of all branches of the service in action.

It was shown at the Pantages the week of November 22.

The Camp Sewell four-reel military picture, taken by Robert Kershaw of the Wonderland, Winnipeg, has just been shown at the Starland and Wonderland theaters, with ten per cent. of the receipts donated to the Red Cross society.

J. R. Muir of the Dominion, Vancouver, showed a reel taken by A. D. Kean, giving scenes connected with the departure for the front of the 47th Battalion, C. E. F. This is the largest body of troops which have gone from British Columbia since the war began. The film was exhibited at the Edison, New Westminster, B. C., following the Dominion engagement.

The Empire at Edmonton, Alberta, showed "The Life of Florence Nightingale" under the auspices of the Edmonton Journal for two days, at 25, 35 and 50 cents, with a special school children's performance Saturday morning. The Fifty-first Battalion Military Band and the Harmony Saxaphone Quartette furnished the music, and the entire net proceeds were donated to the local Red Cross branch.

TO SUE EXCHANGE FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT.

As a result of the booking of the Selig masterpiece, "The Spoilers," at the Rex in Vancouver, Manager Hector Quagliotti of the Colonial, who ran the picture first, has announced his intention of suing Broy & Whitehead, owners of the Canadian rights, for $5,000 damages, for violation of a verbal agreement not to allow the picture to be shown on second run in this city at lower prices than those charged at the Colonial—twenty, thirty and fifty cents. W. P. Dewees of the Rex is to run the picture all next week at twenty-five and fifty cents. It is stated that it was originally intended to charge these prices for the Colonial, and that it was with this schedule in mind that Messrs. Broy and Whitehead agreed not to exhibit the picture for less. These prices are in force this week at the Variety in Victoria, managed by L. J. Quagliotti, a brother of the Colonial manager. Matinee prices at the Rex will be fifteen to twenty-five cents.

"The Goddess" is slowly coming west, and is now billed to open at the Regent theater in Calgary.

It takes a wonderful personality
To play the leading part
The part of a coquette
The part of premiere danseuse
The part of a woman with a marble heart in
"A PRICE FOR FOLLY"
Few actresses could portray this chamelon woman—
Perhaps two—and one of them was chosen.
Her name is EDITH STOREY

And ANTONIO MORENO
Was naturally chosen to play opposite her

Filled with heart throbs
With love
With pathos
With every tremor
That is possible,
The story of
"A PRICE FOR FOLLY"
Is sensational in the extreme.
Jean, a young impulsive Frenchman, loves Dorothea, a cocotte.
Dorothea has no heart
She has the soul of a painted woman.
Rather than have his mother know of her son's disgrace —
Rather than face debt and dishonor
Jean's father murders his own wife—
He murders her out of the bigness of heart—
And Jean is accused of the murder.
Jean is forced into a duel and killed—
But the story does not end here
This in part will give you an idea of George D. Baker's presentation of
"A PRICE FOR FOLLY".

EDISON.

THE MAGISTRATE'S STORY (Dec. 1).—The cast: Bess Howard (Gertrude McCoy); Tom Weldon (Richard Tucker); John Sterrett (Pat O'Mailey); John Sterrett, as an old man (William West).

War has been declared. The North and South are going to fight. Tom Weldon joisn the army of the North and John Sterrett casts his lot with the Confederacy. Both are suitors for the hand of Bess Howard. Time passes and the war is at its height. Tom Weldon's regiment is stationed in Bess' home town. Tom has been doing sentry duty for forty-eight hours without leave. From sheer exhaustion he falls asleep. He is discovered, tried and senteneed to death for neglect of duty. His only hope lies in a pardon from the President. Mounting a steed, Bess speeds on to Lincoln's headquarters. The President grants the pardon and telegraphs a stay of execution to Tom's camp.

The Union wires have been cut and the confederate soldiers are listening in on Union orders. John Sterrett receives the stay of execution as it flashes across the wires. With the wires cut, the message will never reach Tom's camp. Leaping on a horse, John dashes through the Union lines. He reaches Tom's camp, and delivers the message. The execution is stayed until Bess rides in with the pardon, signed by Lincoln. Tom gives John a trinket in token of his gratitude, and in return, John gives him the chevron from his sleeve.

Many years have run their course. Magistrate Weldon is holding court, and an old man is brought before him for stealing a loaf of bread. The prisoner is searched, and among his things, the Magistrate sees a familiar trinket. It awakens memories within him, and he begins to speak slowly. Slowly the years begin to unwind themselves again, and the story is unfolded. "He saved my life once," says the Magistrate, "shall I send him to jail for this?" Court is adjourned. Magistrate Tom Weldon is leading his old chum, John Sterrett, home with him. Hereafter, he shall live with him and the old friend, Mrs. Weldon, whom he knew as Bess. Together, they will provide for him, and he shall know need no more.

THE SUFFERIN BABY (Dec. 4).—The cast: Mr. Sufferin (Bob Walker); Mrs. Sufferin (Mabel Dwight); Mr. Anti (William Wadsworth); Mrs. Anti (Jessie Stevens).

Hubby Sufferin is home minding the Sufferin baby. Wifey Sufferin is out speeching for the Cause. Hubby is washing dishes with one hand and wiping Dodo's little nose with the other. Poor little Dodo He just can't stop bawling, and Hubby Sufferin is living up to his name. Mr. Anti, the lucky dog, has no kids, no worries. He rushes into the Sufferin home in excitement. The County Fair is on. He wants Hubby to go with him. Hubby refuses, but, poor weakling, he cannot resist Anti for long. He puts Dodo in a grip and off they go to the fair.

A fellow cannot have any fun toting a bag around with him, can he? Hubby looks for a place to hide Dodo for a while. Hubby is going to check the bag on the Suffrage booth, but the lady in charge gives him an awful look. Tht look of her's reminds him of Wifey, and Hubby just naturally loses his nerve. He cannot check Dodo there! In the field, Huhby spies an aeropiane. Just the thing! He hides dodo in the machine, and starts out to enjoy the fair with Mr. Anti. But alas! alack! the aeroplane goes up, baby and all. Just then Hubby spies Wifey speeching her head off. That settles poor Hubby.

The aeroplane glides through the clouds, and Hubby runs all over creation trying to follow its course. You know what happens when you run around with your head turned to the skies, don't you? Well, it all happens to Hubby and then some. But, the Lord is merciful and loves His children. Dodo falls out of the aeroplane, right into the arms of Wifey, and the bag falls too—right on the head of Hubby.

MICROSCOPIC POND LIFE (On Same Reel As Foregoing).—Little do we realige how many millions of parasites, too minute to be seen by the naked eye, surround us in life. Some live in the human body, others in the air, and still others in our food. Each thing that goes to make up this world, houses its own particular kind of germ. Microscopic Pond Life is a little study of some of these germs, magnified about ten thousand times. The next time we pass a pond, we'll know just what the germs in it look like, even though we cannot see them.

MARY (Dec. 8).—The cast: Mary (Margaret Prussing); Robert Delevan (Carlton King); Laura (Dorothy Grahame); Mrs. McCarthy (Mrs. Wallace Ersine); two artists (James Harris and Yale Benner); Miss Peabody (Grace Goodall); Mrs. Pettingill (Edith Wright).

Mary, the new boarder at Mrs. McCarthy's boarding house, is unable to obtain employment as a music teacher. In need of funds, she accepts a position as model for Robert Delevan, an artist. As the days pass, love springs up between them. Mary is happy in the thought of the home which Delevan has promised to build for her.

One evening, as she sits in her room, Mary hears the sobs of Laura Lee, the boarder in the next room. Mary consoles her with words of tenderness and Laura tells her the story of a forlorn love. Once betrothed to Robert Delevan, a foolish quarrel parted them, and unless he wrote an apology, she told him, she would consider the engagement broken. Mary remembers seeing an old maid take a letter from a messenger and promise to deliver it to Laura. Realizing that the old maid, prompted by curiosity, has kept the letter, Mary demands it from her. This proves to Laura that Delevan is not really at fault. "Come to the studio tomorrow," says Mary, "I'll do the rest."

Mary determines to sacrifice her own love for Delevan and to unite him once more with Laura. She proceeds to disillusion Delevan. She makes love to all of Delevan's friends as they visit the studio and tries to make apparent that her love for Delevan is merely a sham. During Delevan's absence from the room, a jealous artist attempts to destroy his painting. Mary struggles with him and Laura enters. Delevan then overpowers the artist. "She saved your painting," says Mary, pointing to Laura, and leaves the room as they embrace once more. Thus, this little girl, loving with a pure and simple love, sacrifices this love so that another may not suffer from the pangs which she herself must suffer.

HER INSPIRATION (Special—Three Parts —Dec. 10).—The cast: Molly Claiborne (Grace Williams); Douglas Claiborne (Yale Benner); Jerry Mason (Curtis Cookey); Jackson Laramee (James Harris); Aunt Fanny (Jessie Stevens); Kate (Mabel Dwight); Nell (Rolinda Bainbridge); Randolph Porter (Harry Linson); Mary Porter (Grace Morrissey); Sheriff Barton (Louis B. Foley).

Striving to maintain the dignity of the old Southern home, Molly Claiborne begs her brother, Douglas, to stop dissipating. He persists, however, and steals the income check, her only means of support. Fearing that they have murdered Randolph Porter, whom they have assaulted while drunk, Douglas and his companion in dissipation, Jackson Larabee, escape to the West. They read in the papers of Jerry Mason and the fortunes he has made in Rhylote, Nevada. So they make that town their goal. In the newspaper Molly sees a picture of Jerry Mason and reads his career. He becomes her inspiration, and she feels that Douglas will make good just as he has done. Meanwhile, the mortgage on the home is foreclosed, and the old Claiborne house is sold. Molly must support herself.

In Nevada, Jerry and Jackson Larabee continue their dissipation. Mining for gold means work, and that is not to their liking. Jerry Mason befriends Douglas, and offers to take him prospecting, but Douglas sticks to the old path. He returns to the faro table and the bar. In need of funds, Douglas telegraphs Molly that he has struck it rich and needs money to strike a claim. With a firm faith in her brother, Molly sends him her savings. Misled by Douglas' telegram, Molly believes that he will now be abio to care for her and so, leaves for Rhylote.

Meanwhile, in a drunken brawl, Jackson Larabee kills Douglas using an old pick handle belonging to Jerry Mason to do the deed. Molly arrives in Rhylote, and Jerry, who knows her from a photograph which Douglas carried with him, gives over his cabin to her and her old mammy, Aunt Fanny. In the short period of their acquaintance a love springs up between them and Jerry's kindness to her makes her love grow daily. Jerry has struck it rich again, and goes to San Francisco to have his specimen's assayed. Meanwhile, the fatal pick handle bearing his name has cast suspicion of the murder upon him. To shield himself, Jackson Larabee organizes a lynching party. On his return, Jerry is surrounded, and the party prepares for the lynching. Molly, informed of this, is overwrought by the thought that Jerry is her brother's murderer. But Nell, a barroom maid, the only one who has seen the murder committed, tells her the truth and Molly returns to the scene of the hanging just in time to save Jerry from an unjust fate. Larabee receives his just due, and Molly falls into the arms of Jerry, to be protected by him forever.

THE LONE GAME (Dec.11).—The cast: Grace Preetor (Bessie Learn); Dean Anderson (Robert Walker); Phil Proctor (Wilfred Young).

Grace Proctor, in dire poverty, seeks employment. She is struck by a car and picked up by Dean, who rushes her to the hospital in his machine. She tells him her story and he recognizes her as the sister of his classmate, Phil, who has coached him through college. She tells him of Phil, who, through his efforts to support her and give her a vocal education, has broken down and been attacked by the ravages of tuberculosis. Under the impression that he was suffering from malaria, he neglected his condition until he was no longer able to be about. Dean promises to obtain employment for Grace as soon as she is well again.

Phil goes West. Unable to obtain work, he is compelled to go to a sanitarium. His stay there is short, however, for he has no funds and he wanders about without treatment, while his lungs are slowly eaten away. Dean, who has neglected a cold, is examined by a specialist, who tells him that he has tuberculosis. His wealthy father immediately sends him West, attended by nurses and surrounded by every comfort that money can procure. Under the expert treatment which he received, he gradually recovers.

Grace, who has obtained employment through Dean, is beginning to feel the hereditary curse slowly creeping upon her. Consulting a physician in a hospital clinic, she is told that the West helps only those who can afford to go there under the proper circumstances. She is sent to the Bradley Sanitarium in Waverly, Connecticut, where she is treated without charge.

Time passes and Grace is cured. Her voice has been restored and she sings at the Red Cross Benefit. She meets Dean, who has returned completely cured. He tells her of Phil's death. With no one in the world to care for her, her heart sinks, but Dean gathers her in his arms, and whispers to her the only cheering words that she has ever heard: "I love you."

ANIMATED GROUCH CHASER (Dec. 15).—To make a dainty miss stop right in the act of powdering her face is an achievement. To make her forget the laws of Eve and the shiny spot on the tip of her little nose is still a greater achievement. And, to the Animated Grouch Chaser goes all the credit. The powder puff is lying idle and the little miss is laughing uproariously. Let's see why. Oh, no wonder!

On the first page, the story of the Black's Mysterious Box greets her eye. Henry, the Black, has found the Box. He thinks he has struck rich and takes it home with him. But when Henry tries to open the box—a pair of long, hairy arms emerge and Henry begins to get his. Henry gets his—he gets everybody else's, in fact, and then—the mysterious arms reach out and draw Henry into the box. Henry comes out, of course, but not by his own efforts. He gets a gentle lift, and when he finally comes back to earth, he sets out to leave the box far behind and out of sight forever. On and on he speeds, breaking all the rules of motion, and leaving town after town behind. At last, exhausted, he stops by the wayside to fill his lungs with air. But the mysterious box is not to be outdone. Coming along at a million miles a minute, it strikes Henry and carries him off with it to eternity, forever. Thus endeth the tale of "The Black's Mysterious Box."

All this time, the dainty miss who has been looking at the Animated Grouch Chaser is quite worn from laughing; but it's contagious, so she goes to the next picture. Hicks goes to see the dentist, who makes Hicks see stars. With his saw and hammers, his steam shovels and drills, his chisels and his dynamite, he tries to cure Hicks' toothache. Just at the crucial moment, when he feels his head coming out with his tooth—Hicks wakes up. Gosh, what a nightmare! Will Hicks not go to see a dentist? Certainly, he will not.

THE HISTORY OF A BIG TREE (On Same Reel As Foregoing).—Little do we consider where the things of wood which we use in daily life have their origin. To us, they are merely the work of man, whereas, in reality, like us, they are created by God.

Standing for years in grandeur, the big tree is hewn down and "snaked" through the forest, carried by stream to the mills and then fed to the hand-saw and numerous other machines, where it is made, by man, into articles of daily use. "The History of a Big Tree" leads us through its life from the day the woodmen claimed it until it is carried away in a thousand parts, each different in size and shape.

THE HAND OF THE LAW (Special—Three Parts—Dec. 17).—The cast: Betty Hazelton (Bessie Learn); Dan Chamberlain (Edward Earle); Squire Evans (Bigelow Cooper); Reuben Hazelton (William Wadsworth); Mrs. Hazelton (Nellie Grant); Sally (Jessie Stevens); Hiram Gregory (John Sturgeon); the sheriff (Brad Sutten); the constable (James Harris); Ahner (Ford Fennimore); Ezra (Billie Ruge).

In the presence of the village crowd, Reuben Hazelton, stupefied by drink, threatens Squire Evans and Hiram Gregory that he will "get even." The Squire, whom Reuben accuses of having defrauded him and his grist mill, is determined to marry Betty, Reuben's daughter. Betty, however, has given her heart to Dan Chamberlain, and makes it plain to the Squire that his attentions are obnoxious to her. Dan and the Squire are rival candidates for the office of prosecuting attorney.

Hiram Gregory is the only one who knows the secret of the Squire's former life. Using his knowledge of a murder committed by the Squire many years previous, Hiram is extorting money from him. A short while passes. Gregory has been murdered near the grist mill, and the Squire relates to the sheriff how he saw Reuben, in fulfillment of his threat, kill Gregory. Reuben, in a drunken stupor, is arrested for the murder on the Squire's evidence. Betty and Dan maintain their belief in Reuben's innocence and prepare to work for his defense. Abner, the farm-hand, who has been reading all about Nick Carter, and who has been taking a correspondence course in "detectuffing," is determined to solve the mystery. Boxum Sally, the cook, promises to marry him if he does.

Reuben, recovering from his stupor, finds his mind a blank. Betty and Dan have little grounds to work on for the defense. Election day comes and Dan is elected prosecuting attorney. As such, he must prosecute Reuben for murder. Fearing that the truth will become known and that he will be held for the murder of Gregory, the Squire attempts a ruse by which Reuben can be legally killed. He plans with the sheriff to liberate Reuben from the jail, and then to shoot him as an escaped convict. Betty, however, foils the plot. Then, the great victory for Ahner, special correspondence agent of the "National Correspondence Detective Bureau." He solves the mystery, finds the stocks which are rightfully Reuben's, and proves the Squire's guilt. Fearing Gregory for his knowledge of the old crime, the Squire killed him. Confronted by the evidence, the Squire falls dead from a stroke of apoplexy.

Dan and Betty are brought together in the firm bonds of love. Reuben is restored to his old position and wealth, and Ahner gets Sally.

SANTA CLAUS VS. CUPID (Dec. 18).—The cast: Helen (Grace Morrissey); Jack Norworth (Raymond McKee); Edward Beck (William Casey); Mrs. Bower (Mrs. Wallace Erskine); Mrs. Norworth (Mahel Dwight); Ethel Beck (Gladys Gane); Binks (Guido Colucci); Mrs. Mulligan (Edith Wright).

Home for their Christmas vacation, Jack and Edward, roommates and rivals, learn that Helen is planning a party for her "kiddies" on Christmas Eve. Anxious to hold her regard, Jack orders a dozen orchids. Helen is undecided which of the boys shall act as Santa Claus. She settles on Jack and has half finished a note to him, when Edward is announced. He has intercepted the florist boy and relieved him of Jack's flowers, which he presents to Helen as his own. In return for this attention, Helen asks Edward to be her Santa Claus. Helen and Edward have just set out to get a pack of toys when Jack calls. He decides to wait for Helen and sees the unfinished letter. Overjoyed, he buys a ring for Helen and a Santa costume for himself. Helen, absorbed in her plans, is unresponsive to his protestations of love.

On Christmas Eve, the children are waiting for Santa and Edward is arranging his toys. In the kitchen, the drivers are enjoying the Yuletide bounty. The one discordant note is Binks Mulligan, a poor cabby. He is thinking sadly of the joyless Christmas awaiting his desolate family.

In the meantime, Jack, dressed as Santa, decides to deliver the ring—his Christmas present to Helen. As Edward finishes his Santa make-up, Binks locks him in the closet and slides out of the window with the toy bag. Jack, turning in at the entrance, encounters the would-be burglar, overpowers him, hears his tale of woe, and relents when he learns of Edward's imprisonment. He presents him with several bills and a wish for a Merry Christmas. Jack shoulders the bag, and is mistaken for Edward by Helen. He plays the part of Santa and discloses his identity to the maid with instructions to release Edward. When Helen enters, he slips the ring on her finger, removing his whiskers. Jack whispers something in Helen's ear. The butler enters, supporting Edward, who is somewhat withered. "Allow me to present the future Mrs. Santa Claus," says Jack, "the wedding date is not set, but—send orchids."

ESSANAY.

THE BURGLAR GODFATHER (Dec. 3).—The cast: The Crook (G. M. Anderson); His Pal (Lloyd Bacon); The Business Manager (Lee Willard).

The crook and his pal gain entrance to a home. They rob the man of the house of his personal belongings, then proceed to the upstairs, where they discover his wife, the mother of a newborn babe. The crook's heart is softened, and against the will of his pal, leaves the stolen property on a table. The crook later obtains employment in the factory of the man whose home he entered. He is not recognized until his pal reveals his past life. Instead of discharging the crook, his employer gives him a chance to start life anew, and furthermore asks him to be his child's godfather.

the News (John Lorenz); Velma, his sister (Alton Goodrich); Edna Morris (Marie Francis Bussey).

Edna Morris, the daughter of a banker, is left penniless when her father dies from the shock upon learning that his cashier has decamped with the bank's funds. She secures a position as assistant to Velma Tolliver, editor of the woman's page on the "News," and whose brother is owner and editor of the paper. One night Edna dressed as a boy, hides in a room and overhears the conversation of some political crooks. She is discovered, but manages to escape with her "scoop." Tolliver, the editor, admires her courage and asks her to become his boss for life.

DREAMY DUD IN LOVE (Animated Cartoons by Wallace A. Carlson, Dec. 8).—Dreamy Dud sees his doy "Wag" making love to a cat and is congratulating himself on not being susceptible to the charms of the fair sex, when he spies a little girl making eyes at him. Dreamy Dud is not long in reaching her side and soon is in love with her. He is sitting on a box singing lullabys to her dolls when he is awakened by his father who compliments him on his extremely fine voice.

This reel also contains five hundred feet of scenes taken in the Canadian Rockies.

THE MERRY MODELS (Dec. 9).—The cast: Bloggie (Ben Turpin); His Wife (Margaret Joslin); Mustang Pete (Harry Todd); His Wife (Carrie Turpin).

When the manager of the Brezlah cafe receives a telegram informing him that the marble statues which he ordered were destroyed by fire, he employs Bloggy and Mustang Pete to pose as statues in his cafe. The patrons are deceived and compliment the manager for his taste in the selection of the statuary. All goes well until both the wives of Bloggy and Mustang enter the cafe and recognize their husbands. A riot ensues in which the place is completely wrecked, and the two statues are chased home by the angry wives.

THE ESCAPE OF BRONCHO BILLY (Dec. 10).—The cast: Broncho Billy (G. M. Anderson); His Rival (Rodney Hildebrand); The Ranchman (Lee Willard); His Daughter (Ruth Saville).

Broncho Billy is in love with the rancher's daughter. Her father disapproves of their affair and one day quarrels with Broncho. A few days later the rancher drops dead while at work. Broncho Billy's rival discovers the body and seeing an opportunity to implicate Broncho, shoots the rancher's body. Broncho Billy is accused of the murder and is in jail awaiting his sentence when a child who had seen the act committed, tells who fired the shot and Broncho Billy is given his liberty.

BLIND JUSTICE (Special Three Parts—Dec. 11).—The cast: Jack Langdon (Henry B. Walthall); Elsie Harding (Elizabeth Burbridge); Walter Harding (John Junier); William Harding, the father (Ernest Maupain).

Elsie Harding becomes interested in the outcasts of the slums, and induces her father to take her to the night court. Here among other derelicts, she sees Jack Langdon, and attracted by him, asks her father to give him a position.

Six months later finds Jack making good and greatly interested in Elsie. Their friendship is opposed by her father, so one night they elope. Mr. Harding is indignant, but as weeks pass and Jack proves to be a man of great business ability, he is reconciled. Finally Jack admits that when Mr. Harding found him in the slums he was merely gathering material for a book, and proves to be a well known author.

KALEM.

THE GLORY OF YOUTH (Special—Four Parts—Dec. 13).—The cast: Gay Raydon (Inez Bauer); Hal Crofton (Robert Ellis); Cyrus Cairns (Walter McEwen); Zarth (Nat Sack); Dolores (Agnes Mapes).

Unaware of the fact that Gay loves Hal, the athlete who is helping him regain his strength, Cairns, an elderly invalid, asks the girl to be his wife. Gay is deeply indebted to Dolores, who had taken her from the slums and adopted her. Consequently, when her benefactress virtually orders Gay to wed Cairns, the girl consents. Hal, heartbroken over the turn of events, decides to leave the Cairns home. Cairns pleads with him to stay. Later, Gay openly declares to Hal her intention of leaving with him should he go. Zarth, the millionaire's valet, learns of the hidden love affairs and imparts the information to his master. Mad with rage, Cairns plans to secure revenge. Enticing Gay and Hal into one of the rooms under pretense of having the girl dance for the athlete and himself, Cairns slips from the room while the dance is taking place and locks the door. It is his plan to starve the lovers to death. Zarth is stationed outside the door.

The valet is secretly in love with Gay. As the days pass, the man gloats over the weakened condition of the lovers. In the meantime, Cairns, who has gone to his town house, repents of his deed. After notifying the police, the man slays himself. At the same time, Zarth enters the room in which the lovers are imprisoned and attempts to embrace Gay. Her cries fill Hal with sudden strength. The police enter as Hal and Zarth are engaged in a desperate struggle. The valet is overpowered and placed under arrest.

ALMOST A KING (Dec. 14).—The cast: Bud (Bud Duncan); Pete (Charles Inslee); King Gazabo (Charles Muigro); The Queen (Myrta Sterling); The Prime Minister (Martin Kinney); Count Concertina (Giovani De Rosa); Nicotina (Ethel Teare).

His life threatened by a pair of anarchists, King Gazabo takes refuge in the royal safety room while his Prime Minister searches for a substitute king. Pete is elected to the position. Bud, failing to land the job, falls into the anarchists' hands and is ordered to slay the ruler. Pete finds life one sweet song—especially when his eyes behold the fair Nicotina, the real ruler's favorite tango artiste. Bud, attempting to carry out the anarchists' orders, is captured by the guards and brought before his pal. Delighted to see his little partner once more, Pete promptly appoints Bud assistant king.

But Peter's ire is aroused when he discovers that Nicotina is smitten with the little chap. He is about to pour the vials of his wrath upon Bud's head when King Gazabo, tiring of the discomforts of the safety room, decides to return to the throne. The real king is furious when he learns of Nicotina's fickleness. Forthwith he orders Pete and Bud hurled into the torture chamber where they are to be tickled to death. Just at this time, however, the Queen discovers her hubby's fondness for the dancer. Before poor Gazabo knows what has struck him, he, too, is shot down the torture chute!

TO THE VILE DUST (No. 4 of the "Stingaree" Series—Two Parts—Special—Dec. 15).—The cast: Stingaree (True Boardman); Howie (Paul C. Hurst); Ethel Porter (Marin Sais); Vanheimert (Frank Jonasson).

On the verge of death in the desert, Vanheimert is rescued by Stingaree and Howie. In spite of his partner's objections, Stingaree carries the man to their gunyah. There, Vanheimert gradually regains his strength. As the days pass, Vanheimert, discovering the identity of his reseuers, treacherously plans to betray the bushrangers and thus obtain the reward offered for their capture. Stingaree and Howie become aware of Vanheimert's intention and deliberatly allow the cur to believe his plot is succeeding.

Howie departs. Finding a loaded revolver, Vanheimert seizes it and crawls towards Stingaree, who is apparently sleeping. Pointing the weapon towards his rescuer, the man pulls the trigger. A laugh which issues from Stingaree's lips, informs the cur of the trap he has walked into. He speedily learns that the bullets in his weapon contain no powder. The chance passing of Ethel, Stingaree's former sweetheart, saves Vanheimert from death at the bushranger's hand. Determined that justice shall be meted out to the wretch, Stingaree and Howie take the man back to the spot in the desert where they had found him. Then, spurring their horses, the outlaws leave Vanheimert to his fate.

THE SECRET MESSAGE (Episode No. 8 of The Ventures of Marguerite—Dec. 17).—The cast: Marguerite (Marguerite Courtot); Bob Winters (Bradley Barker); Peter Enright (Richard Purdon); Bolton (H. E. Barrows); Irene (Stella Jenno); Manforth (Freeman Barnes).

Shortly after Marguerite has been presented with a fountain pen loaded with invisible ink, the girl is ensnared by Bolton, who heads a band of crooks. Bolton demands $50,000 as the price of Marguerite's release. Bob Winters learns of the heiress' whereabouts. Again Bolton proves his cunning when he has one of his confederates, Marforth, don police attire and accost Bob. Deceived, Bob tells Marforth the story of the kidnapping and has the man accompany him to the rendezvous.

Confronted by the thieves, Bob is helpless. Bolton orders Marguerite to make out a check on her bank for $50,000. This done, he has Marforth and Irene, another of his accomplices, accompany the heiress to the bank, where the check is to be cashed. Marguerite remembers the pen containing the invisible ink, which rests in her handbag. While apparently endorsing the check, the girl writes a brief message requesting help. This done, she uses the ordinary ink for the purpose of writing the words "Heat this check."

This is done, and as the result, Marguerite is rescued and Bolton's confederates are captured. Back in the rendezvous, the chief of the criminals, discovered that his plot has misfired, attempts to kill Bob, but the timely arrival of the police saves the young man's life.

THE WRONG TRAIN ORDER (Episode No. 58 of the Hazards of Helen Railroad Series—Dec. 18.—The cast: The Operator at Lone Point (Helen Gibson); Savage (Robyn Adair); Macker (Clarence Burton); Torney (Franklin Hall); Jerry (Billie Boy).

Word that his son Jerry has been injured so upsets Torney that he delivers the wrong train orders to the engineer of the freight. Helen, having missed the Limited, accepts the invitation issued by the conductor of the freight and climbs aboard the caboose. Airbrake trouble develops while the train is speeding westward. In their effort to get at the seat of the trouble, both engineer and fireman are hurled to the ground. In the meantime, Torney has discovered his error. 'Phoning ahead, he frantically orders the operator at the Arling station to flag the freight. The runaway dashes past Arling, however, and Helen, seeing the operator vainly signalling, senses something amiss. Unable to operate the brake, the girl climbs to the roof of the train and fights her way forward atop the lurching cars. The Melius drawbridge is raised as the runaway approaches, but the tender, taking in the situation, lowers the structure barely in time to save the freight from plunging into the stream. Crossing the bridge, the runaway bears down upon a freight standing on the track ahead. As Helen climbs out on the pilot, a trackwalker throws open a siding switch, and thus averts a wreck. By this time, Helen has reached the emergency. Applying the air, the girl brings the runaway to a halt.

SPEED KINGS (Dec. 17).—Pokes and Jabbs are golf enthusiasts. While playing one day, Pokes makes a phenomenally long drive and loses the ball. Willie Slim and his sweetheart are out in Willie's flivver; and, while Pokes is in the middle of the road hunting the ball, Willie's car runs him down. Jabbs appears on the scene and demands reparation for Pokes but Willie, having no excess funds and fearing prosecution, squares himself by giving Pokes and Jabbs the auto.

The time they have learning to run the auto is something terrible but at length they do succeed and the auto fever is upon them. Jabbs trades in a flivver for a real car and he and his friend Pokes go for a ride. Trouble overtakes them when they are held up by two auto bandits, robbed of all their money and their car. They apply to a farmer for permission to work for a meal. He thinks they are two bandits who have been prowling about the neighborhood so humors them along until the sheriff comes upon the scene and arrests them.

Meanwhile the bandits have driven the car to a saloon to get a supply of drinks for a long trip. Mrs. Pokes and Mrs. Jabbs pass the saloon and recognize the car. They think their husbands are drinking again so they get in the car to wait. The bandits try to oust them which results in the arrest of the real bandits. Pokes and Jabbs are freed and the picture fades out with a happy reunion.

BIOGRAPH.

A WOMAN WITHOUT SOUL (Special—Two parts—Dec. 7).—The cast: Cora Martin (Vera Sisson); Clifton (Jack Mulhall); Rogers (Robert Nolan); his wife (Helen Bray); Zane Ambrose (G. Raymond Nye).

Cora Martin had ruined one good man when she met the artist, Clifton, and aspired to higher game. The meeting occurred at a dinner—the last her victim ever gave in her honor. When all were seated, he watched the glasses filled and proposed a toast, "To Cora, the woman without a soul!" There was a dreadful scene, at the end of which Cora, left alone with her victim, spoke the words which meant his doom, and then swept out to where Clifton was waiting. Next morning Cora and Clifton read the newspaper account of her victim's frustrated attempt at suicide. The heartless woman shed no tears—she must look her best to ensnare Clifton. When she had him in the toils, and had begun to tire of him, fate sent Mrs. Rogers and her husband to Clifton's studio, where the society leader was to sit for her portrait.

Rogers was dazzled by Cora, who chanced to be there. Mrs. Rogers, seeing her husband beginning to make a fool of himself, cut short the sitting and hurried him away. Then Zane Ambrose came into Cora's life and proved himself a man of different mould from her other victims. Perhaps because it was a new experience, she married him. When he went away on business, she renewed her flirtation with Rogers.

On his way to the railroad station, Ambrose was attacked by thugs and wounded. From the hospital he dispatched a telegram asking Cora to come to him. She laughed as she showed it to Rogers. "It's only a trick to bring me to him!" And she went out with Rogers. Ambrose, discharged from the hospital, came back and found an atmosphere of secrecy in his home. After many vain questions he seized the butler and throttled the truth out of him. Learning where his wife was, he went to the cafe. Rogers was stammering an explanation when Ambrose grappled his throat with hands that meant killing.

Leaving the inanimate form on the table, without a glance at Cora he went home to await the police. But Rogers was not dead. Cora gave a great sob of thankfulness, but when Rogers struggled to his feet he thrust her from him and went out, leaving her to face the future alone.

A POOR RELATION (Special—Three parts) (Dec. 8).—The cast: Noah Vale (Thomas Jefferson); John Faye (Frank Norcross); Dolly Faye (Mildred Manning); Alice Sterrett (Millicent Evans); James Sterrett (M. Faust); Harry Smith (G. White); Eunice Faye (Mrs. Langdon); Patch (E. Haldemand); Rip (Maurice Stewart, Jr.); Scoliops (Edna Foster); strike leader (W. Cameron); O'Haley (Jacques Martin).

James Sterrett, a workman, abandons his wife and their two children. He secures a position as confidential secretary to John Faye, a manufacturer, and in the course of time becomes junior partner of the firm. Inflated with power, Sterrett refuses to deal with the labor union committee, and a strike is threatened. Meanwhile Mrs. Sterrett struggles for existence, and Noah Vale, her neighbor, an inventor, notes her distress and relieves it as far as his limited circumstances will allow. Mrs. Sterrett is taken ill, and Scoliops, a girl waif, friend of the children, summons Vale and assists in having Mrs. Sterrett removed to the hospital. Vale promises to take care of the Sterrett children, and Scoliops volunteers to aid them.

Sterrett admires Dolly Faye, his partner's daughter, but receives no encouragement from Dolly. Mrs. Faye, Dolly's stepmother, encourages Sterrett in his effort to win Dolly. Harry Smith, an office employee, is in love with Dolly, and she returns his affection. Vale reads of the impending strike at Faye & Sterrett's factory and writes to them that he has a labor-saving invention which he would like to submit for their inspection. Accompanied by the Sterrett children, Vale calls at Faye's home. Mrs. Faye is enraged when Dolly admits them, telling Faye sarcastically that Dolly has discovered some "poor relations." Mrs. Sterrett leaves the hospital. Through Scoliops she learns that her children are at Mrs. Faye's house with Vale. Vale, weak from hunger, faints, and Sterrett robs the inventor of his plans. Sterrett tries to make Vale out a fraud, and nearly collapses when he comes face to face with his deserted wife, who has come for her children. He warns her to say nothing and go home—that he will call on her that afternoon.

Sterrett schemes to get Vale out of the way and gain possession of his model by offering to send the inventor abroad on a business mission. Vale accepts Sterrett's offer and receives a sum of money for expenses. Smith is indignant when Dolly tells him that she is accused of stealing Vale's plans, and, suspecting Sterrett, Smith leaves for the factory. Mrs. Sterett sees through her husband's designs and determines to save Vale. On her way to the office she decides to tell Mr. Faye of her appointment with Sterrett. Mrs. Sterrett meets her husband at the office and, recognizing Vale's plans, grabs them and tells Sterrett that she intends returning them to Vale. Sterrett seizes her and Smith comes to the rescue. In a terrific struggle, during which the office is wrecked, Faye arrives, stops the fight and dismisses Sterrett when he learns of his duplicity. Faye gives Vale a check for $10,000 in part payment of his invention. Faye volunteers to care for Mrs. Sterrett and her children, and it is obvious that the love affair of Smith and Dolly will soon reach a happy climax.

THE MASTERFUL HIRELING (Dec. 9).—The cast: Dr. Harvey (Ivan Christy); Larkin (Charles H. Mailes); his daughter (Mary Malatesta).

When the millionaire's car skidded on the mountain road and he was injured, Doctor Harvey, who chanced to be passing, took Larkin home and mended him. Larkin, accustomed to being coddled, became greatly enraged when Harvey neglected him for the poor, and called him a hireling. Harvey forced him to come to the office to pay his bill, then locked the door, told Larkin he must fight, gave him a licking, and dressed his wounds. Larkin offered him a check, but he tore it up. Later, he saved the life of Larkin's daughter when imported specialists failed. Seeking a way to show his gratitude, Larkin learned that Harvey had mortgaged his home to send an afflicted child to Europe, and the canceled mortgage now hangs framed on Harvey's wall.

THE PAINTED LADY (Dec. 10—Biograph Reissue No. 27).—The cast: The elder sister (Blanche Sweet); the younger sister (Madge Kirby); their father (Charles H. Mailes); their mother (Kate Bruce); the stranger (Joseph Graybill); the minister (Wm. J. Butler).

The girl is horrified to discover that her sister uses paint and powder to render herself attractive. She, poor thing, depends upon nature for her attractiveness, and goes without suitors. At last she meets a man who seems to care for her, and is enraptured. Because her father does not approve of him, she meets her lover clandestinely. Learning some of her father's secret, the man enters the house with burglarious intent and is killed by the girl in a struggle for the revolver with which she is armed. When she lifts his mask and sees the dead face she goes mad. Though watched, she contrives to slip away to the rendezvous and hold imaginary conversations with her lover. Because she deems herself pale, she uses a little of her sister's paint and powder. When at last she is discovered, and can see her phantom lover no more, she dies of a broken heart.

THE RUN ON PERCY (No. 5 of "Chronicles of Bloom Center"—Two Parts—Special—Dec. 6).—The cast: Constable Plum (Wm. Hutchison); Postmaster Pash (John Lancaster); Chubby Green (Ralph McComas); Percy (Wm. Scott); Johnny West (Sidney Smith); Printer's Devil (Roy Clark); Selina Tubbs (Martha Mattox); Libby (Anna Dodge); Margaret Tate (Irene Wallace).

Percy Pinkham has invested all his money in the "Bloom Center Bugle" and has no funds left to pay his bills. He cannot even pay his colored washerwoman, who proceeds to beat up Percy and his news printer's "devil." Percy writes his uncle asking for a loan. The old man comes to investigate his nephew's conduct and finds him playing poker. He then writes Percy a note saying that Percy must marry some Bloom Center girl within twenty-four hours; that if Percy takes this action he will be given a farm, but that if he does not marry within that time he will be disinherited. Johnny West, correspondent for the County Seat newspaper, embodies Percy's uncle's proposition in a newspaper story and all the girls with matrimonial inclinations make a run on Percy.

Percy asks Margaret Tate, his sweetheart, to marry him at once. She agrees, but a moment later her mother enters with a newspaper containing the story of Percy's order to marry, and Margaret, thinking Percy is mercenary, refuses to wed. Percy dodges the crowd, sneaks home and writes a letter to his uncle saying that in justice to the girl he loves he cannot marry within twenty-four hours. Then he goes to Margaret and tells her that he has sacrificed his inheritance for her. She realizes that he really loves her. A letter is then delivered to Percy written by his uncle, in which the uncle states that the previous letter was only a plot to make Percy realize the seriousness of life and the value of a good wife.

ORDERS (Dec. 7).—The cast: Tom Daly (Thomas Santschi); His Wife (Edith Johnson; His Baby (Jean Fraser); Morris (Harry Lonsdale).

Tom Daly, a traffic officer, faces his duty despite the fact that his little child is critically ill at home. It is believed that the child is dying and word is sent to Daly, but a fire breaks out, and Daly is ordered to stop all traffic on the corner. A physician rushing to save Daly's child is refused passage for his automobile by the traffic officer, and the automobile of Morris, owner of the burning building, is also held up by Daly, according to orders.

Later, while Officer Daly is at the bedside of his stricken child, he is summoned to police headquarters, is told that there is such a thing as adhering too closely to orders and is asked to send in his resignation. He knows Morris is the cause of his misfortune. Then it is that others tell Morris and the chief of police that Daly also stopped the automobile carrying the doctor en route to save his child's life. The story of Daly's close attention to duty touches the heart of the police chief and of Morris, and Daly is promoted. The baby recovers its health and all ends happily.

THE BABY AND THE LEOPARD (Jungle Zoo Subject—Dec. 11).—The cast: Ella Herman (Edith Johnson); Fred Herman (Lafayette McKee); Baby Helen (Jean Frazer); Carl Snyder (George Larkin).

Fred Herman, a farmer in Africa, with his wife and baby, lives in happiness. Carl Snyder, an animal trapper, stops at the Herman home. He sees some of Mrs. Herman's paintings and tells her that her talent is too great to be hidden in the wilderness. He asks her to come to the city with him where her artistic talents will have greater scope, and she agrees.

On the night of the elopement, Snyder fearing Herman's wrath releases a wild leopard and lays a trail of meat to the room in which Herman and the baby are sleeping. Herman awakens, misses his wife and starts a search for her. During his absence, the leopard steals toward the baby.

Snyder tries to kiss Herman's wife and she repulses him. Herman comes upon them as they struggle. As he is about to kill Snyder they all perceive the baby's peril. Herman rushes to his home and shoots the beast while Snyder takes advantage of this action to make his escape. Believing that his wife has learned her lesson, Herman forgives her.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

DO YOU KNOW? that 90% of all the brass frames used in the moving picture houses throughout the country are "NEWMANS?"

WHY?
Because we steadily have refused to cheapen or lower the quality of our goods, even though others have sought to undermine our prestige by underselling with cheapened products. That is one of the reasons why nine out of every ten frames sold bear the name "NEWMAN."
Insist on that name and save money.
Our new catalog will be sent to you for the asking—get one quick.

A SCANDAL IN HICKVILLE (Dec. 1).—The cast: Ben Harkins (George Stanley); Mrs. Harkins (Anne Schaeffer); Eben Dunn (Otto Lederer); Cy Denton (Alfred Vosburgh); The Sheriff (William Duncan); Lizzie (Marguerite Reid); Doctor (Carleton Weatherby).

Ben Harkins manages to escape the sharp eyes of his wife and sneak away to meet Eben Dunn, the village loafer, for a fishing excursion. Cy Denton, who has been forcibly ejected from the Sheriff's home for courting his daughter, Lizzie, bumps into him, causing him to drop the big fish-knife he is carrying. Cy picks it up and runs wildly after Ben. One of the village gossips sees this, puts two and four together and makes eight, and tells a blood-curdling story to the other scandal-mongers of how Cy had chased Ben with a big knife; each one adds a little to it, until finally all the women march in a body to the Harkins home and with one accord announce, "Mrs. Harkins, Cy Denton has murdered your husband!"

This gentle breaking of news causes Mrs. Harkins to keel over in a dead faint, then the women hunt up the sheriff, and in a very short time poor Cy is locked up on a charge of murder. Then the discovery of the "body" follows, and the doctor pronounces Ben Harkins is intoxicated, not dead. Everybody is mad, and while Mrs. Harkins drags her husband home by the ear, the sheriff returns to the jail, only to find that his prisoner has escaped and eloped with his daughter.

THE CONQUEST OF CONSTANTIA (Dec. 2).—The cast: Constantia Calthorpe (Flora Finch); Bridget (Kate Price); Mrs. Melleville (Rose Tapley); Teddy (Dick Leslie, Jr.); Nora (Pauline Taylor).

An old maid of very prim and precise habits, Constantia Calthrope, lives in a little semi-detached cottage with her housekeeper, Mrs. Carter and maid, Nora, also Sultan, the cat. The vacant cottage next door is taken by Grace Melleville, a young widow with her little boy, Teddy. Like most children, Teudy is boisterous, full of spirits and likes noise, all of which greatly annoys Constantia.

Teddy takes a great fancy to Sultan, but can make no headway with the cat's mistress, who coldly ignores him. Several days later, Sultan is stolen by a couple of boys and Teddy follows them. Both households are soon in an uproar, and Constantia accuses Teddy of having stolen her cat. Teddy manages to rescue the cat but gets lost in the woods. He is found, becomes ill, and Constantia, on learning how he had rescued her pet, is completely won over.

THE HOME CURE (Dec. 3).—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Henry Souser had one failing—a strong friendship for booze, and Mrs. Souser determines to use desperate measures to cure him. From a newspaper item she gets the idea of pretending that she herself, has become addicted to the use of liquor, and proceeds to carry out her plan by greeting her husband on his return from the office, with the pretension of being slightly under the influence of liquor. Henry thinks his wife is crazy at first when she greets him affectionately, instead of upbraiding him for having had too many highballs before reaching home, but when he smells her breath, it instantly sobers and frightens him.

Next morning Jane pretends a terrible headache and her husband very seriously demands to know how long this has been going on, but she denies all knowledge of events of the previous evening. He is greatly worried and Jane carries her idea still further by half emptying the decanter on the sideboard and pretending to have drunk it all, while at the same time brazenly drinks liquor from her "medicine" bottle. Rendered nearly frantic by her "deceptions" Henry sees his doctor-friend who advises him to destroy every drop of liquor in the house, and after pleading with his wife in a most touching manner, he goes down cellar and breaks every bottle he can find. Then she tells him, and he smilingly acknowledges she has won—he is cured.

CAL MARVIN'S WIFE (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Dec. 4).—The cast: Dolly Leslie (Mary Anderson); Mrs. Marvin (Anne Schaefer); Cal Marvin (William Duncan); Joe McDonald (Otto Lederer); Harry Hale (Carleton Weatherby); Orchestra Leader (George Kunkel).

Cal Marvin's mother has never met Dolly, his wife, of whom she has heard a great deal, but from Joe, Cal's foreman and friend, she learns the whole story. On a trip to town, Cal and Joe witness a show given by a traveling theatrical troupe, and Cal is at once impressed with Dolly, a pretty chorus girl. He meets her and despite his friend's protests, pays ardent court to Dolly. Joe has overheard Dolly in conversation with another member of her troupe, Harry Hale, an unprincipled fellow, and believes Cal is going to make a big mistake. But his friend will not listen, and Dolly leaves the troupe to marry Cal. For awhile they are happy, but after the death of their baby, Dolly becomes despondent. Joe, who knows the child is not Cal's, is silent.

Shortly afterward, the theatrical troupe returns to that town and Harry among them. He finds his old fascination is still effective with her, and the rascal finally prevails upon her to elope with him. Joe has overheard their plans, and feeling that it is best, allows them to go, but Cal misses his wife and after a search finds her. Then in an intensely dramatic scene, he learns the whole truth, and that the baby he so mourns was Harry's. Cal's anger is aroused to its fullest height and he attacks Harry. Dolly backs away from the struggling men in horror and falls over the edge of a high cliff, but a short distance down, she strikes a tree growing out of the side of the cliff and remains tangled in its branches. Cal hears her cry and rushes to her rescue, while Harry, making good his escape, is thrown from his horse and killed. Dolly, from her fall, is crippled, but so great is Cal's love, that he forgives her and takes her to his heart as does his mother, when Joe has concluded his story.

HER LAST FLIRTATION (Dec. 6).—The cast: Jim Carson (Alfred Vosburgh); Florence (Myrtle Gonzalez); The Sheriff (George Kunkel); Bill (Carleton Weatherby); Minister (Otto Lederer).

Florence, the sheriff's niece, arrives on a visit to his ranch, and meets Jim, the Sheriff's friend, and the young rancher is much impressed by the wise young lady from the effete East. She is the heroine of many heart conquests, and a great flirt, so Jim falls an easy victim to her wiles. The sheriff sees how things are going and warns her not to trifle with Jim, but she laughs at him. The young rancher proposes, and is shyly accepted.

Jim buys her a ring, but she urges him to keep their engagement a secret, and he somewhat reluctantly agrees. A few days later she quietly starts back for the east leaving a cruelly enlightening note for Jim. Furiously springing on his horse, he catches up with Florence, takes her by force to the minister's and marries her with the words: "You may treat men that way where you come from, but you can't do it here." She is very angry, but love conquers and Jim wins out.

The Sum of Experience

CONNECTED with the Department of Justice of the United States Government is a man who has dug deeply into the Moving Picture Business of this country in his official capacity. Talking casually about his work to the Editor of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, he said regarding that publication:

> "In the course of my investigation of the moving picture business, I visited the exhibitors in more than four hundred cities, large and small, in every part of the United States, and I can say from knowledge and without hesitation or qualification, that every exhibitor whom I called upon had a copy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD within easy reach upon his office desk. From observation and testimony I know that exhibitors consult it constantly in the conduct of their theatres. I also know that it is the one source of information upon which they depend, while other publications, house organs and advertising pamphlets, go by a quick route to the waste basket."

What does this statement reveal?

THERE can be but one verdict: Dependableness—a certainty that is born of the knowledge that the information printed in the pages of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the best that Experience can gather and is, therefore, Reliable.

IT is true that the editorial staff of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD—reviewers and news gatherers—have had a longer experience in their peculiar duties than have the writers of any other publication devoted to the moving picture trade. Their names are known wherever moving pictures are shown. Their opinions are regarded as the best that can be obtained because they have stood the test—because they have Experience.

THE SUM OF THAT EXPERIENCE is discovered in the wide—almost world-wide—use of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD as the Business Guide of the Moving Picture Exhibitor.

Note—Advertisers who are interested may obtain the name and address of the man who made the statement quoted above should they desire to get his opinion first hand.

Bates (Edward Elkas); Mary Bates (Bernice Berner); Bobby Sharp (Leo Delancy).

Hysterical with grief at her husband's intrigue with Ann Bogart, an opera singer and neighbor, Marion Stuart attempts to drown herself, but is rescued by Tim and Mary Bates, the aged caretakers of the Bogart estate. They take her to their cabin nearby and an hour later Marion dies in giving birth to a daughter. Ann, on learning of this, forces the old couple to keep the birth a secret, in order that she and her son, Reginald (the singer is a widow), may eventually inherit Graham Stuart's fortune. Marion's body is found and buried and Graham becomes a recluse, but after a short time a letter from Ann reaches him. The slender cord of resolve is broken and he is soon at her feet once more. Together, they launch forth on a professional musical career, are successful, marry and go to Europe to live.

Seventeen years later, Graham, Ann and Reginald, now a neurotic young spendthrift, return to America. Reginald meets Lois, Marion's daughter, whom everyone supposes to be the daughter of Tim and Mary, and attempts to force his attentions upon her. Reginald goes from bad to worse, forging checks and gambles wildly, finally killing and robbing Graham, allowing old Tim to be accused of the crime. But Bobbie Sharp, a young newspaper reporter, discovers several clues which put him on the right track; also proving Lois to be the missing daughter of Marion Stuart. Reginald is cornered and in an intensely dramatic scene, forced to confess the murder. Ann is then confronted with similar evidence, and while fatally ill, confesses the whole truth before she dies. Lois is reinstated in her rightful position as Graham's heiress, Bobby marries her and the old caretakers, Tim and Mary, are made comfortable for the rest of their lives.

SONNY JIM'S FIRST LOVE AFFAIR (Dec. 8).—The cast: Sonny Jim (Bobby Connelly); Daddy Jim (Tefft Johnson); Mother Dear (Mabel Kelly); Aunt Julia (Edwina Robbins); Mr. Elder (Jay Dwiggins); Ruth (Helen Connelly); Eddy (Johnny Cahill).

With the wide-awakeness of most normal youngsters, Sonny Jim soon notices the growing love affair between his Aunt Julia and Mr. Elder, daddy's bachelor friend, and he makes an awful break by shouting right out at dinner that "Mr. Elder is making love to Auntie!" However, he understands how it is himself, when he falls a victim to the charms of four-year-old Ruth. He also learns that the course of true love is anything but smooth when he drops and breaks Ruth's doll. In a burst of tears, she tells him she will never, never speak to him again.

Sonny is terribly depressed, especially when his deadliest rival, Eddy, usurps him in Ruth's affections. He talks it over very gravely with Mr. Elder, who tries to help him, but it does no good, Ruth passes them both with nose in air. Just in his darkest hour, Mother Dear comes to the rescue by buying a beautiful new doll, which Sonny presents to Ruth, after which everything is bright and happy again.

SAM'S SWEETHEART (Dec. 9).—The cast: Babs (Carolyn Birch); Sam Howard (Andres Randolf); Mrs. Ravell-Farnsworth (Rose Tapley); Lord Merton (Templer Saxe); Elizabeth, Sam's sister (Mary Maurice).

While living with Sam, her guardian, Bab's father dies, leaving her an orphan. Sam, who is a well-to-do farmer, is in love with his ward, but feeling he is too old for her, keeps silent. Bab's aunt in the city, Mrs. Ravell-Farnsworth, plans with Lord Merton, an unscrupulous society idler, to take advantage of the fact that Bab will inherit her grandfather's comfortable fortune. In return she expects Merton to aid her in attaining her social aspirations. She then sends for Bab to come on to the city and stay for a lengthy visit to "acquire a style of living and manner becoming a lady." Sam parts with the girl with a saddened heart and broods over her absence. Auntie aids Lord Merton in his suit for Bab's hand, and she, not knowing the man's character, consents to become his wife. She writes Sam of her coming marriage and he suffers keenly. When all preparations are made, Bab, the night before her wedding, overhears the lord demand additional settlements, under threat of breaking off the match. Stunned, she slips away unnoticed, and goes straight back to Sam. She finds him gazing into the fire and dreaming of her. After a joyful reunion, Sam's ward becomes his sweetheart and affianced wife.

ROONEY'S SAD CASE (Dec. 10).—The cast: Rooney (Sidney Drew); Mrs. Rooney (Mrs. Sidney Drew); Wealthy Mr. Downey (Harry Fisher); Kitty, his daughter (Florence Natol); The Jew (Billy Bletcher).

On receiving his regular Saturday envelope, Rooney discovers in it a pretty blue slip containing the notification that his services are no longer required. With dreary visions of Mrs. Rooney ordering him out of the house and telling him to stay out until he gets a job, poor Rooney dares not go home. From a newspaper headline he decides to adopt the "lost memory" plan, particularly, when, on reading down the column, he finds the party referred to completely forgot his past and married a beautiful heiress. Renting a flashy suit from a second-hand clothing store run by a little Jew, he takes his stand near the park driveway and when a beautiful heiress comes by, plans to place a big rock on his head and yell for help.

After letting several Fords go by, a big car draws near and Rooney does his little stunt with the result that the wealthy gentleman in the car brings him home and when the doctor pronounces Rooney's mind a blank, leaves him to the tender nursing of his soft-voiced daughter, Kitty. Rooney's eyes are mercifully bandaged, so he can't see Kitty's awful face and imagines her beautiful. But a charming romance is interrupted by the entrance of his wife. When Rooney sees Kitty's face, he nearly faints, and regains his memory in a hurry. Mrs. Rooney takes him home without ceremony and Rooney's pipe dream is shattered.

HUGHEY OF THE CIRCUS (Special—Two Parts—Dec. 11).—The cast: Hughey (Hughey Mack); Flora Powell (Flora Finch); Flo Powell (Nitra Frazer); Tom (Donald MacBride); Lady Kate (Anna Brody); Circus Manager (Harry Fisher).

Flirtatious Hughey, while strolling up the village street while the circus is in town, wanders into a crowd, and starts a flirtation with a heavily-veiled lady, who responds in kind, but when she raises her veil, he sees it is the circus Bearded Lady. With a yell, he dashes through the crowd, promising himself never to flirt again, but a pretty young thing passing makes him forget his resolutions immediately. When he accosts her, she indignantly tears up his card, gives him a withering look and marches into the house. Hughey asks a grocer boy who lives there and is told "Miss Powell." Hughey makes note of the address and name and determines to call on the charming maiden.

As it happens, however, Florence, the girl in question, is simply visiting her aunt, Flora Powell, there, and happens to have a beau of her own. Consequently, when Hughey sends a big bunch of flowers, with his card and a note, the young people give them to the other "Miss Powell," the maiden aunt. Flora is delighted and promises to keep the tryst suggested in Hughey's note. She meets him in the park and Hughey gets another shock when Flora lifts her veil. Flo and Tom, her beau, who have been watching nearby, have a great laugh as Hughey hurriedly beats it. But Flora has taken the affair seriously and Tom walks into Hughey's apartment with two pistols and in melodramatic style, orders the frightened Hughey to follow him. Hughey does so without hesitation and on arrival at Flora's home, the Justice of the Peace is sent for, but Hughey manages to escape from his captor, and an exciting chase follows which winds up in the circus. There Hughey is caught trying to pass himself off as Fatima, the Fat Lady, and, given his choice between marrying Kate, the Bearded Lady, and Flora, he chooses the latter.

THE AWAKENING OF PATSY (Little Stories of Real Life. Second Incident, Dec. 8).—The cast: Patsy McQuade (Peggy Cordray); Mickey Donlin (Alva Blake); Vincent Castleman (Raymond Russell); Molly Peters (Sis Mathews).

"Say, goils, pipe the roses," shouted a stage hand. "Patsy at last has fallen for a 'Johnny'." Patsy McQuade, the heartless one of the chorus had fallen for Vincent Castleman, one of the idle rich, who, in spite of her doubts, had convinced her that he was on the square. Mickey Donlin, electrician, her old sweetheart, was brokenbearted.

Came there a day when, as the girls called for Patsy on their way to the nightly grind, she broke the news: no more show for her; she was to be married that very night, and after congratulating her the girls hurried away to tell Mickey. Later that evening Castleman called for her and told of the dandy apartment he had just furnished for her. But at Patsy's question, "When are we to be married?" Castleman showed his true colors by answering. "Who said anything about marriage?" Then Patsy drove him from the room.

Mickey, hrooding over it sll, is discharged for carelessness, and on coming home hears, hetween sobs, Patsy's story. Mickey then takes matters into his own hands, snd, with the help of Molly, secures a marriage license and justice of the peace and forces Castleman to come with them to Patsy's apartments. Arriving there, he tells Patsy that Castleman has changed his mind and wants to marry her and has made all the arrangements. Patsy then declares that she, too, had changed her mind and that she wouldn't marry him on a bet. After the stage manager heard the story he gave Mickey his old joh back; but—Patsy is husily engaged taking care of a little flat on Avenue A.

SIN ON THE SABBATH (Two-part, Dec. 8).—The cast: The Chief Sinner (Billie Ritchie); The Girl (Louise Orth); Her Father (Gene Rogers); Her Mother (Alice Howell); The Boy (Reggie Morris).

Billie liked the girl, hut her father didn't feel the same way ahout him, and he had to leave hastily when he was making a call. He went back to his job as a soda clerk in the down-town drug store. It was Sunday morning and several of the old regulars came for their eye-openers. Meantime Reggie thought he would make a hit with his girl's pa, and took Popper down to the drug store. Popper and Billie, however, got far more friendly than he had calculated, and he and Bill got to drinking something out of a bottle in the back room.

Reggie put a poison label on the bottle and Popper and Bill thought they were poisoned. The error was discovered, however, and Bill and Popper and some other old scouts went in the hack room and got busier than ever. Reg now called the cops and they made a raid, but when they hroke in the back room they found nothing hut a church organ and the old scouts in a song service. Anyway, Popper got a scare and let liquor alone for some time.

LIZZIES SHATTERED DREAMS (Dec. 12).—The cast: The Country Girl (Alice Howell).

Lizzie was a country girl and the work imposed upon her by her cruel stepfather palled on her. She longed for the city life, and when two strangers from the big town came along she proved an easy victim. In addition to falling in love with one of them she stole her father's savings and eloped with them. This aroused father's ire. He let out a yell that was heard over the entire community, and gathered all his farm hands around him and went in pursuit of the gang. Lizzie, with her new-found friends, had to take refuge in an old abandoned house, where a hot battle ensued. The hattle was a draw, as everyone was hadly banged up.

GOLD SEAL.

IDOLS OF CLAY (Three-parts, Dec. 7).—The cast: Lonesome Man (Robert Leonard); Little Girl Next Door (Ella Hall); Uncle Joe (Marc Robbins).

Ella is the youngest of three sisters, and, being at the mischievous age of twelve, spends her time playing tricks on her sister's heaux. It is a source of considerable worry to Ella that the man next door always seems so lonesome. She accordingly takes it upon herself to call. They soon become good friends, and he tells why he is always so lonesome. The woman he made an idol of deserted him and his friends proved faithless in his hour of need.

One day he gives her a box of small idols and tells her that if she will sleep with them beneath her pillow, whatever she dreams will come true. Delighted, she tries it the first night, and about all she dreams of is the lonesome man next door. She tries to solve the question by mathematics and figures that she is twelve and he is twenty-four, therefore there is twelve years difference in their ages, and that when she is twenty he will be thirty-two.

A short time later, Bob, the lonely man, is arrested for his crooked partner's defalcations and is sentenced to ten years at hard labor. It is a sad blow to Ella when she hears that he must leave her. Ella is sent to boarding school. She becomes the favorite of her school-mates.

Ten years pass. Ella is now a young lady, snd returns home to find all the family out visiting except the old housekeeper. Bob has served his sentence and also returns home to be welcomed with open arms by the old butler, Uncle Joe. Ella wanders up to her room and opens the drawer where she had placed the pieces of the idol which she broke years before. Picking them out, she wanders to the window and absently looks out. She sees Bob come out on his porch, followed by the faithful old servant. She determines to take the broken idol to him.

There is a happy meeting between the old friends and Ella hands Bob the pieces of idol, stating that her idols, too, have been broken, and Bob tells her that with her assistance he is sure the two of them can mend it. The picture fades out on a happy scene between the two, with every indication that a marriage will take place in the not far distant future.

BISON.

THE LION'S WARD (Three parts, Dec. 11).—The cast: John Kronje (O. E. Wilson); Carl Kruger (Paul Bourgeois); Mina (Betty Schade); Frau Kronje (Lulu Warrenton).

Paul Kronje, a Boer, gathers wild animals for zoos. He has a daughter whom Carl Kruger loves. Kruger works for Kronje. Kronje gives his daughter Mina a young lion which she raises. Muji, an Arah collector of animals comes to Kronje's house and also falls in love with Mina. She repulses him, however. Muji lesrns from a hlack that a Vodoo meeting is to be held. He changes placcs with the Vodoo priest and tells the hlacks that they must have a white maiden to sacrifice.

Meanwhile, Kronje and Kruger go for a hunt. Mina is left at home with her mother and an old black or two and Mina's pet lion. Mina attempts to escape on horseback when Muji leads the blacks against the Kronje farm and burn it. She is followed by Muji. The lion escapes and flees to the jungle. Kronje and Kruger start home with a rich haul. Mina eludes Muji and takes refuge in an abandoned sback. Here she is attacked by lions and other African animals. Muji comes on with the other blacks and after her rescue, gives her the choice of marrying him or being given to the Vodoo.

Meanwhile, Kronje and Kruger return home and find it in ashes. Mina refuses to marry Muji and is fastened to the interior of a shack. That night a big lion jumps through the window of the shack and goes to the helpless girl. Kruger and his party are beating the jungles for Mina. The village is celehrating its dance. Mina suddenly recognizes her pet lion and embraces him. Kruger hears the shouting and rides to the village. Muji and the rest come to get Mina. The lion guards her. Before they can get guns to kill him, Carl and his party arrive. Muji is killed by Mina's lion and Kruger and Mina are happily married.

Moving Picture Supply Dealers: Notice

We are making the necessary arrangements to construct a moving picture mechanism and complete machine in which there will be embodied all the up-to-date features and a few improvements in addition. A substantial, strong, large, well built, flickerless and noiseless machine, the cost not exceeding $175.00 or $200.00 with motor and attachments. A liberal discount will be given to dealers with no restrictions, or strings attached to their handling them.

THE STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.
In the GAME for 16 years.

The friends notify the police and a detective is put on tho trail. The ventriloquist practices with a female dummy and the landlady becomes jealous and tells him to go. She looks through the keyhole and finds her lover beating a supposed woman, whom he knocks out. A drunk with a push cart meanwhile falls into a can of red paint which a man has used on the fire boxes. In staggering on down the street he leans a red hand against the white walls.

The landlady, hearing cries of murder, looks through the keyhole and sees murder and rushes for the police. The drunk leaves a blood red hand on her porch. The detectives trails the crimson hands. The ventriloquist decides to leave, and tips over a bottle of red ink. The landlady returns, and finds the bloody hand. The detective arrives with the police and they descend upon the room of the ventriloquist. He has mounted his trunk on the drunk's cart; sees the crowd coming and runs. The drunk, thinking he has stolen the cart, gives chase, and they finally overtake the ventriloquist. The drunk breaks open the trunk and the landlady falls into the arms of the ventriloquist as the drunk embraces the female dummy.

NESTOR.

THEIR QUIET HONEYMOON (Dec. 6).—The cast: Eddie (Eddie Lyons); Bettie (Bettie Compson); Lee (Lee Moran); Jane (Jane Waller).

Eddie and Lee are the star members of the Bachelors' Club. Wednesday night is the usual calling night among the members of the club and Eddie and Lee are generally the only members left on Wednesday night. Eddie accuses Lee of staying in because he hasn't a girl. Lee gets sore and makes a bet with his friend that the first one to marry will pay the other $500. Eddie agrees. Wednesday night Eddie begins to slip. Having been apart from the fair sex for some time, Eddie "makes hay while the sun shines," and he and the girl decide on a quick marriage. Lee, too, has been scouting about and finally finding "the only girl in the world," decides it would be safest to marry her then and there. The arrangements are made for the next day.

The next day Lee has a bunch of flowers for his bride, and, being met by Eddie, tells bim they are for a sick friend. Each of the boys gets married, unknown to the other and slips off to what they think is a quiet hotel. Arriving in their rooms Eddie tells his wife of the bet and tells her if she will help him keep the secret, he will split the bet with her. Lee, in his rooms nearby, tells bis wife about the bet and how, if his friend would find him, it would cost him $500. The two boys leave their wives to go after their baggage and meet in the bar-room. They naturally make excuses. The two bellboys who had shown the newlyweds to their rooms are standing nearby and hear Eddie and Lee tell each other they are still single. The bellboys get suspicious and decide to watch the two.

As Eddie returns to his rooms he meets Jane in the hall looking for her hubby and as they are old friends he goes in her room to chat. One of the bellboys sees this. Lee, returning, meets Betty in the hall and they prove to be old friends. Fearful of being seen by Eddie he goes into Betty's room. The other bellboy sees this and hurries to tell the bouse detective. The detective call the police and, accompanied by the bellboys, determine to raid the rooms.

Eddie hears the knock on the door and takes refuge on the fire escape. Lee, hearing the confusion, thinks it is Eddie and also goes to the fire escape. The two friends meet and in order to keep out of trouble, go to the right rooms. When the detectives come in the newlyweds are highly indignant and it takes a lot of apologies on the officers' part before the matter is fixed up. Eddie and bis wife then go to Lee's room and declare that as the race was a tie, the bet will be called off.

KEEPING IN DARK (Dec. 10).—The cast: The Girl (Billie Rhodes); Her Father (Harry Rattenbury); The Boy (Ray Gallagher); His Mother (Stella Adams).

The worst lovers in tbe world are tbe old ones. Harry and Stella, both middle-aged, are married. Harry has a grown daughter away at school but he does not tell his wife. He writes his daughter and tells her of the fatal step he has taken and begs her to keep the secret. Stella has not played fair, for she has a son in college and has also kept the matter a secret. She writes the boy, telling how happy she is and begging him to help her deceive her husband.

Harry and his wife both receive letters from daughter and son telling of their arrival. Harry persuades the maid to go on a vacation with pay intending to put his daughter in the maid's place, while Stella persuades the butler to take a much needed rest, intending to have her son fill the vacancy. Harry meets his daughter and after much persuasion she takes the place. Stella has a hard time persuading ber son to act as butler, but when he gets a good look at the maid he agrees hurriedly.

The new help find each other's company congenial and finally get to the point of exchanging kisses. Stella happens in the kitchen during one of these friendly exchanges and upbraids her son for flirting with a common maid. The girl leaves and the mother is talking motherly to her son with one arm about his shoulders when Harry walks in.

He gets suspicious of the butler and later on again comes upon the supposed butler kissing the maid. He chases him out, and while the daughter insists on quitting her position, Harry kisses her and begs ber to stay a little while longer. Stella happens in at this time and there is more excitement. Harry refuses an explanation and wife seeks her son for comfort. Harry stumbles upon the two in each other's arms and swears he will kill the butler. The girl comes in and pleads for her friend and the deception of the newlyweds is found out. The two old people agree that everything had better be left alone and the son and daughter are given the place of honor in the house. Thereafter the old folks have competition in the spooning business.

THE KINGDOM OF NOSEY LAND (Three-Parts—Nov. 28).—The cast: The Dwarf (Johnnie Cooke); His Father (Seymour Hastings); King Nosey III (C. Norman Hammond); The Princess (Elsie Albert).

In the Kingdom of Nosey Land a large nose is the sign of high birth. At the time our story opens there is no heir to the throne in sight and the hunchback dwarf covets the vacant place to which he seems entitled by the tremendous size of his nose. In fact, the dwarf's chances seem so good tbat he and his father step into the throne room and try on the crown. While they are talking things over the king and his men come into the castle and take the crown from the dwarf. The king angrily tells him that his hopes are vain, as there will be an heir to the throne in a short time, word having been received from Storkland that a child is on the way by stork courier. But when the infant arrives the king is angry as the child has a very small nose. The king knows that his subjects will never accept the child as their ruler and his consellors suggest the substitution of a child with a nose of proper length. Another baby is procured by the nurses and put in place of the queen's child, who is thrown into the woods by a royal servant. A lion witnesses this, goes to where the baby is lying and sniffs at it. The king of the animal world is joined by the tigers and other animals and in their dumb council they decide to take the little outcast princess and raise her as their queen.

Sixteen years later we find the little princess the accepted Queen of the Jungle. The King and Queen of Nosey Land have both died meanwhile and the false princess with the big nose now reigns in her stead. Back in the woods the lion brings Elsie, the princess, all the food she wants. She rescues the witch who had come into the forest to pick herbs for her deadly concoctions. The lion tells the witch how Elsie was deprived of her throne, and she promises to do all she can to get Elsie in her rightful position in Nosey Land.

Meanwhile, to fulfill an ancient propbecy, Prince Charming journeys to Nosey Land to wed the princess. The lion and the tiger see the prince and his courtiers coming and rush back to tell Elsie. The prince and bis men go into the woods to take a drink at the magical spring and while there are seen by Elsie, who at once falls in love with the prince because he has a small nose like her own. The prince also falls in love with her.

Back in the palace of Nosey Land the dwarf and his father continue to plot against the throne. The dwarf makes love to the princess, but she scorns him. When Prince Charming arrives the courtiers believe be is an imposter, as his nose is not large. The dwarf attacks him, but the lion scares him away.

Elsie finds the prince lying in a faint on the ground and revives him. While Elsie runs off to get a shellful of water for the prince the witch tells him that Elsie is the real princess.

Meanwhile the dwarf continues to propose marriage to the false princess. The witch and all the animals of the forest leave the jungle and come into the city, where they frighten the population. The witch denounces the false princess and tells her to get off the throne. The dwarf then tries to step up into her place, shouting that he is the real king, but the lion chases him off through the city. The dwarf takes refuge in the witch's cave, but the lion goes in after him and a few minutes later comes out licking his chops. The prince then leads Elsie to the throne, proclaims her the lawful heir and they all live happily ever after.

THE POWER OF FASCINATION (Dec. 10).—The cast: Juanita (Cleo Madison); Rafael (Jack Holt); Gray (Thomas Chatterton); Concha (Carrie Fowler); Pablo (Jack Francis); Brooks (Jack Wells).

Juanita, a Spanish girl, lives on a ranch with a couple of old servants. The place is run down and she is distressed at her inability to make anything off it. So pressing is her need that she has to consider marriage with Rafael, a prosperous Mexican landowner, whom she really dislikes, but who is much in love with her. Just as she is about to accept him, Gray, a young American surveyor, offers her $1,000 for a right of way across her land. To her this is fortune and she hails it is freedom from Rafael's attentions. Rafael's anger is increased by the fact that Juanita and Gray fall in love with each other.

Rafael comes upon Gray making love to Juanita. He turns Gray's horse loose, steals up unseen by the lovers and stabs Gray in the back. In his anger he is about to kill Juanita also but she, determined not to die and leave Gray unavenged, uses all her powers of fascination and succeeds in making Rafael think that she really loved him all the time. Meanwhile, Brooks, an associate of Gray's on the surveying party, has discovered Gray's riderless horse and comes to the ranch seeking him. Just as Juanita, in her desperation, is kissing Rafael over Gray's body, Brooks knocks at the gate. Rafael suspects a trap and hastily covers Gray's body with a rug, seizes Juanita and presses his knife against her, warning her that if she makes a sign he will kill her. Brooks appears and is surprised to see the two on such intimate terms, but Rafael tells him that they are engaged when Brooks asks for Gray and Rafael tells him that Gray has not been there. Brooks, however, sees Gray's hat on the table. Juanita manages to "telegraph" a look to him, and Brooks, seeing wine on the table, proposes a health to her future happiness, and Raphael, to avoid suspicion, is forced to drink, but never relinquishes his hold upon Juanita. As she is about to drink she throws the contents of her glass in Rafael's face and wrenches herself free. Brooks has Rafael covered and Juanita, throwing herself upon Gray's body from which she has torn the concealing rug, finds that he is still alive.

JUROR NUMBER SEVEN (Two Parts—Dec. 12).—The cast: Jim Hunter (Ben Wilson); William Ralston (Joseph W. Girard); Fred Watson (Frank Benton); Edith, his wife (Dorothy Philips).

William Ralston, a rich unscrupulous contractor, has in his employ a young foreman by the name of Watson, whose wife, Edith, is a beautiful woman. For years Ralston has been given to wrecking homes, but his advances to Watson's wife have all been repulsed. Fearing that her husband might lose his position, Edith has told him nothing about the advances made to her by Ralston. Reassured by her silence in this respect, Ralston takes advantage of her husband's absence on business and with the help of Ned Murray, a political boss, frames up a criminal charge of stealing the firm's money against the husband, so as to railroad him to prison. This would enable him to win over the wife at his leisure.

Watson is arrested and Murray is told by Ralston to fix the jury, so as to make sure of a conviction. Owing to the watchfulness of the "Reformers," none of Murray's trusted "heelers" will take a chance of tampering with the jury. Murray, at his wit's end, picks up a derelict, Jim Hunter, who, in spite of his appearance, strikes him as the man to carry out the dastardly scheme. Hunter agrees to do the dirty work for a sum of money. The day of Watson's trial arrives. The derelict is drawn on the jury, thanks to the betrayal of public trust by the clerk of the court, who is Murray's henchman. Hunter is told to convict Watson, and to influence the jury. He is number "7" of the jury. The government's case against Watson is so strong as to leave no doubts in the minds of the spectators as to the final verdict. Juror number "7" is listless all through the trial until Ralston is called to the stand. In Ralston he recognizes the wrecker of his former home—the betrayer of his wife. His mind is made up. The excitement makes him tremble like a leaf. Murray, who is sitting among the spectators, attributes it all to lack of "dope" and manages by the aid of a court attendant—another henchman—to get a package to Juror No. 7, who recognizes it as "dope."

The jury is charged by the court. When they enter the jury room, Hunter, unobserved, takes the "dope" from the package. The jurors' minds are made up to convict the prisoner. The dope brings temporary strength to the derelict. He rises from his seat and asks the jurors to listen to him before they vote. They consent and in a faltering voice he narrates to them his story. The narration of the story saps his strength. He falls exhausted in the chair. The derelict, for a final appeal, staggers to his feet and implores his fellow jurymen to remember his wrecked life and save this innocent man from prison. Each of the jurors votes "not guilty." The jurymen file back into the courtroom.

The judge asks for their verdict. The foreman answers "not guilty." Watson and his faithful wife embrace. The foreman demands the court to arrest Ralston and Murray. Great excitement ensues. The derelict's head drops on his breast. The foreman, fearing the worst, lifts up his head and discovers that juror number "7" is dead.

SLIM, FAT OR MEDIUM? (Dec. 7).—Slim Hoover (Victor Potel); Betty Boniface (Lillian Hamilton); Sallie Sloppus (Jane Bernoudy); Charley Cupid (Ed. Sedgwick); Harry Hazard (Ted Duncan); John Boniface (George Barrell).

Slim Hoover, Charley Cupid and Harry Hazard are all suitors for the hand of Betty Boniface. John Boniface, Betty's father, favors the attentions of Slim Hoover, Slim being the town undertaker and the only one of Betty's admirers possessing visible means of support.

Betty shows her favors on Harry Hazard, but both Slim Hoover and Charley Cupid press their suits, Charley Cupid resorting to trickery in his efforts to "queer" Slim, who, he thinks, is his most dangerous rival. While Slim and Charley are scheming for each other's downfall, Harry Hazard and Betty elope. Slim receives an additional jolt when Sally Sloppus gives him the "toss over."

THE LITTLE LADY ACROSS THE WAY (Two Parts—Dec. 10).—Jane (Jane Gail); John (Matt Moore); Aunt (Hattie Delano); Percy (Maurice Summers).

Jane's aunt is very anxious to have her niece assume her proper place in society, but Jane, although eighteen years old, remains a young tomboy and takes little interest in anything but athletics. To the house next door comes John Meadows. He is grave and not at all desirous of making the acquaintance of his neighbors. One day Jane is wrathfully rebuked for taking a short cut across the ground of John Meadows, and this starts a feud between them. Jane does not realize that the "Old Bachelor," as she calls him, is not old at all and that the reason for his bitterness against women is because he has been thrown down by a woman in the city, whom he loved very much.

In the city the woman who refused John tires of her husband and sends a pleading note to John, begging him to come to her. His first impulse is to destroy the letter and pay no attention to it, for he knows just how wrong it would be he to answer her call. But love gets the best of him and he makes up his mind to go to town. He has barely time to catch the train. On his way to the station his machine meets with an accident and the chauffeur can do nothing with it. Jane, attired in riding breeches with a Panama hat pulled down to her eyes, comes tearing by driving her new car.

John looks up hastily and says, "Say, boy, will you take me to the depot? I've got to catch the six o'clock train."

Jane nods her head and John gets in. She has seen her chance to get even and makes up her mind that he will not get the six o'clock train. She takes the wrong road deliberately and lands John away out in the woods. Then she stops the car and pretends that she is lost. Just then a gust of wind blows off her Panama hat and John finds himself facing the girl next door. She tells John that she tries to get even, and as she is about to board her car, John kisses her, saying, "I guess I need to get even a little myself."

She pushes him off the board and drives away. He picks up her hat and slowly hits the trail for home. When he arrives home he finds a telegram from the woman in town begging him not to come, as her husband's jealousy has been aroused and he has threatened to kill John on sight. John goes over to call on Jane that night, but she will not see him. However, he leaves her hat. Jane goes to her

"THE DANGER SIGNAL."

Edison-Kleine. Produced by Kleine.
Five Parts. Released December 1.
Cast:

Danny Canavan.....Arthur Hoops
Dennis Canavan, his father.....Arthur Hoops
Beatrice Newnes.....Ruby Hoffman
Rodman Cadbury.....John Davidson
"Boss" Havens.....Frank Belcher
Roscoe Newnes.....Tom Walsh
Henry Cadbury.....Billy Sherwood
Amy Carroll.....Delia Connor

"The Danger Signal" opens with something which remains in the memory—a splash of red in a black-and-white picture. After that come scenes where there is no startling color, nothing but plain, honest acting and picture making, which stand out just as boldly in the mind. The Kleine company seems to have nerved itself for a supreme effort in this particular picture. Every slightest trick of acting and production that can add power to the showing of a strong story is used; there are no momentary lapses, no petty carelessnesses, no shirkings of difficult work. It is rarely a picture is produced of which we can honestly say: "This is extraordinary among the pictures of to-day," but of this feature we say it with all the emphasis at our command.

Danny Canavan is the principal figure, and the roles both of him and his father, Dennis, are played by Arthur Hoops.

Canavan the younger is a coward, lazy and without backbone. It is by the merest chance that he is aroused from this state. Working on subway construction, he is given a red flag and the authority to stop traffic, and from the moment he first tastes authority he is a changed man. Opportunities arise for him to show his mettle. Rapidly, by sheer force of character, he rises to be a power in politics. Nothing can stand against the force of his will. By willing it he marries a poor stenographer, in whom he happens to be interested, into a family of the Four Hundred. Everything he desires falls to him, and finally he marries a society lady with whom he falls in love. After marriage his self-made crudities of manner make her despise him, but again, with his invincible character, Canavan wins her back.

That, as nearly as it can be given in a synopsis, is the plot of "The Danger Signal," if a plot it can be called. A more exact description of the picture version would be that it is a study; a study of fascinating kind. The story needed the pen of a Rupert Hughes to tell it in the "Saturday Evening Post." One leaves with a feeling that the man responsible for its excellence as a film must be rather remarkable in his profession, too.

To the actors, of course, must belong much of the honor for those finer touches—the subtleties of effect which have, unnoticed in themselves, more power than many of the broader strokes. Arthur Hoops plays magnificently throughout; so does Ruby Hoffman in the opposite lead. Their work and that, indeed, of the whole cast does more than stereoscopic photography could effect. It does more than make the figures on the screen stand out. It makes them live.

The artist of the camera came through an ordeal of difficult straight work, and still more difficult double exposure, very creditably; the direction is practically faultless.

One idea which is worked out with conspicuous success can be commended to the notice of other directors—the elimination by means of a black drop, of everything save the bare essentials, in flash backs and vision scenes. It is difficult to estimate how much extra force was added by this method to scenes which had an important part in the development of climax in this play.

New effects were sought even in the titles. Everything was used to one single end; and—the effect is gained.

We recommend this picture as a strong feature for any class of show. To very few films can such a recommendation be given; but this, as we have said, is an extraordinary picture.

swimming pool in an abbreviated bathing suit. John comes upon her there, and, sitting himself on the bank, he wildly applauds her swimming feats. She sees him there and begs him to go away. He refuses. Finally he gathers her clothes into his arm and starts off. She swims over to the bank and calls to him, commanding him to put her apparel where it was. He sits down again and makes a bargain with her. "If you will see me tonight when I call, I will leave your things here, but if you won't——" he pretends to start off with the clothes again.

In desperation Jane gives in and off he goes. That night he calls and finds that Jane has another admirer. He gets rid of Percy, who is no favorite of Jane's, by locking him in the garage. John and Jane have a mutual understanding and become friends. Sometime later, while both are fishing, they pledge their troth.

THE SACRIFICE OF JONATHAN GRAY—(Three Parts—Dec. 9).— The cast: Jonathan Gray (Murdock MacQuarrie); Helen Gray (Edna Payne); Mrs. Gray (Yona Landowska); Mr. Dillon (Mr. Noswokski); Mrs. Dillon (Mrs. Whistler); Tom Wesley (Fred Aldis); Dan (Arthur Moon).

Jonathan Gray, who operates a shoe store in a suburban town, lives happily with his wife and three-year-old child. His wife, however, has a strong desire for city life, and her longing becomes so intense that when a former suitor calls upon her and pleads his love for her, she easily agrees to elope with him. After writing a note to her husband, the wife takes the baby and leaves it with her former lover. Jonathan, returning home with happy thoughts of an evening with baby, whom he loves dearly, finds the note and is crushed. He finally sells his store and goes to the city to forget his grief.

In the meantime, Mrs. Gray, her lover and baby arrive in the city and secure lodgings in a cheap house. Later Mrs. Gray discovers that her lover is a drunkard and drug fiend, and when he attempts to strike the baby she packs their few belongings and leaves. Wandering about she finally rests on a park bench and absently watches a taxicab drive up to a handsome house and a couple alight. Unable to care for her baby she leaves it on the porch of the house, the only identifying mark being a locket around the child's neck. The young couple find the child and adopt it.

Mrs. Gray secures work in a lunch stand. Jonathan wanders around and becoming hungry seeks the lunch counter. There is a scene when husband and wife meet and he angrily demands the whereabouts of the child. She shows him where the child is living and tells of the tender care it is receiving. Jonathan hesitates to reveal his identity, but in order to be near his child secures a place in a shop near by as a cobbler. Thus he watches over the girl's childhood. His wife and her lover leave and are never heard of again.

Helen's childhood passes. She is now a young woman loved by all and principally by Tom Wesley, a handsome, worthy young man. One day they declare their love and while confessing are discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Dillon, Helen's foster parents, who tell the couple what little they know of Helen's early life. Tom refuses to let this stand in the way and accordingly preparations begin for the wedding. Old Jonathan still is in the shoe store. One day Mrs. Dillon sends for some shoes and there being no one else handy old Jonathan is sent with the packages. The ordeal of facing his own child is too much for the old man and he sinks in a chair, overcome. He is tenderly ministered to by Helen and Tom. Jonathan is outside the house the night of the wedding and gives Tom a small bouquet, requesting him to give it to the girl. Tom thanks him and Helen wears the old man's offering in her corsage on her honeymoon.

Several years pass. Helen, Tom and their baby girl are out in their auto. Tom and his wife leave the car for a moment and the baby, sitting alone in the car, decides to have the shoe of her doll fixed. She wanders out unseen and makes her way to a cobbler's shop nearby. Old Jonathan is busily engaged when a childish voice interrupts him and he looks to find the image of his baby girl talking to him. He fixes the shoe and the two are engaged in happy talk when Tom and Helen rush in after a wild search. Jonathan has offered the baby the old rag doll belonging to his girl, which he keeps with him all the time and she disdainfully casts aside the French doll for the other. When the mother sees the child with the rag doll vague memories stir within her and the old man tells her he is her father. Helen is overjoyed to find her own father at last and old Jonathan is induced to spend his declining years with them.

MINA COMEDIES
Even the Hardened Critic Laughs!
"It made this reviewer bawl right out with laughter."—M. P. World of November 20th, 1915.

Egypt, dictates a letter to his secretary reading as follows:

"M. Stromboff, Petrov, Morovia.

"Dear Sir:—Plans perfected. Uprising takes place day after tomorrow. Deluding them with the old cry of 'Egypt for the Egyptians.' The Princess Constantine, whose father was killed in the last rebellion against the English, and her betrothed, Prince Aziz, of the Royal household, have been a great help to us. As the English Army of Occupation number but 5,100 men all told, with a skillful efficient soldier to lead Egypt's armies, we may be sure of victory.

"That man is in Cairo now and I will see him immediately. Wire in cipher authority to arrange for dual control with Slavonian Ambassador in case the revolution is a success.

"Vizma."

The Princess Constantine joins Prince Aziz, and they drive off in the royal carriage. Terence, the next day is sitting in the garden when the Princess and Prince Aziz leave their carriage. Terence is wondering who the Princess is when Prince Vladislaus and a friend pass by. Something in Terence's appearance prompts the Prince to stop and make his acquaintance. The Prince hands Terence his card and makes a proposal to him. Terence listens quietly while the Prince unfolds his plan and then rejects it indignantly. Half an hour later the Princess Constantine, the Prince and Vladislaus are sitting at a table drinking to the success of their plans. Vladislaus regrets having made his proposal to Terence and declares that O'Rourke, if he cannot be won to their cause, must be done away with. Princess Constantine then asserts that inside of two hours she will have O'Rourke in her power. The Princess then orders her carriage and leaves for the little garden where she flirted with Terence. She finds him there in evening dress, and, as he approaches her, she tells him hurriedly:

"If you would help me, follow the messenger I shall send to you."

Terence, a bit doubtful, goes to his apartments and slips his automatic miniature revolver into a pocket of his opera cloak. Later Terence is approached by the Princess's messenger. He follows the evil-looking native through the dark streets and up a narrow stairs into the dismal old palace formerly the harem of Egyptian kings. Terence is ushered into a magnificent room. A moment later the Princess enters and sits down on a divan. Overcome with passion, Terence then seizes her in his arms and kisses her.

Meanwhile, the Prince and Vladislaus are discussing matters in the dining room of the palace. The other conspirators against England are drinking and smoking while the Princess Constantine is attempting to weave her spell upon Terence. Suddenly Terence regains his composure and says:

"No; not even for your beauty will I see the streets run red with English blood!"

And then, with his eloquent Irish tongue, Terence draws a picture in fiery language of the result of a rebellion in Egypt, finally drawing tears to the eyes of the Princess. As he is about to leave the Princess takes him by the arm and ushers him into the dining room where the Prince and Vladislaus await her report. The Princess tells Vladislaus that Jack has agreed to join them. Terence sits down with the conspirators but feels that he is being drawn into a trap, and, slowly drawing his revolver, puts it against the Prince's side, intending to make his escape. A moment later Vladislaus asks for a toast to the conspiracy. Terence seeing that his bluff has been called, covers the conspirators with his revolver. The prince attempts to kill him, but Terence shoots him down.

The Princess sees Terence's danger and goes to his aid. In escaping, Terence is wounded and staggers into an alcove. The Princess draws the curtains behind him and when Vlandislaus asks her is she has seen O'Rourke she says she has not, looks behind the curtains and says he is not there. Vladislaus attempts to see for himself, and the Princess draws a long thin dagger and fatally stabs him. British soldiers outside the palace assist Terence to headquarters, where he tells them of his adventure and of the plot of the Egyptian conspirators.

Next day Terence leaves Egypt. On the way home, he reads that the Egyptian conspiracy has been nipped in the bud as the result of prompt action on the part of Lord Cromer, military governor of Egypt. Finished reading he leans back in his chair and a vision of Vera, his sweetheart, appears above him. Back in the palace the Princess Constantine dreams of Terence and looks forward to the time when his recovery from his wound will permit him to return to Egypt and to her.

WHEN A QUEEN LOVED O'ROURKE (Second Adventure of "The New Adventures of Terence O'Rourke"—Two Parts—Nov. 29).—The cast: Warren Kerrigan, Mr. Holland, Mr. Grasby, Maude George, Harry Carter, Lois Wilson and Eddie Polo.

O'Rourke and his valet, Danny, are stranded in a hotel in Bombay, India. Their funds are very low and the landlord has hinted several times that he would like a settlement. In this predicament O'Rourke thinks of a former friend, Tim Hanrahan, who is under obligations to him and remembers that the latest news from Hanrahan stated that he was interested in gold mining somewhere in India. O'Rourke wires his friend for aid, and he receives a reply to come forward. In order to raise transportation fees, O'Rourke "hocks" Danny and the former's possessions.

Near the home of his friend O'Rourke stumbles across Hicks, former foreman in Hanrahan's mine, and he tells him that things are at their worst. While they are talking Hicks is killed by one of the natives. The King of Scondia is a firm friend of the Hanrahans and the next in line of succession is his brother, Prince Rahamin Lai. The King's wife is a very ambitious woman, and is in love with the Prince. The Prince, however, finds much to desire in Hanrahan's sister, Molly, and for this reason the Queen determines to rid the kingdom of both Hanrahan and his sister. She succeeds in getting Hanrahan thrown into prison. O'Rourke arrives and Molly tells him of the danger which threatens her brother. O'Rourke determines to get word to the authorities and, despite the fact that all telegraphic messages must first be shown to the Queen, he manages to send his wire.

O'Rourke then calls upon the King to ask for his assistance and while there hears a servant telling of Molly's abduction. The Queen sees the gallant adventurer and falls in love with him. She determines to win O'Rourke for herself and sends a messenger commanding him to appear before her. The King tells O'Rourke he is powerless, but, being pressed by the latter, gives him permission to act and presents him with a royal horse as a sign of his authority. O'Rourke is then taken before the Queen. The Queen shows her love for him, but he tells her he can give her no definite answer until his friends are rescued. The Queen then releases the mine owner and his sister. The Prince has been instrumental in the abduction of Molly. He sees the Queen and O'Rourke set out for the dungeon. Calling a body of his followers, he hides in ambush with them. When the Queen sees the affectionate meeting between O'Rourke and Molly, she becomes jealous.

O'Rourke's message has been received by the English garrison and a rescue party is sent out post haste. Just as O'Rourke and his party leave the vicinity of the dungeon where Molly and Hanrahan had been imprisoned, the Prince and his followers attack them. There is a fight and the brave Englishmen are about to be overcome when the timely arrival of the soldiers swings things in their favor. The Prince is killed and the Queen begs O'Rourke to accompany her far away, but O'Rourke tells her that what she asks is impossible. Hanrahan is once more restored to his former holdings and O'Rourke bids him adieu, but not until the former has handsomely rewarded O'Rourke. Danny has bewailed his fate, when the arrival of his lord and master once more cheers him up. He is released from bondage and is told of the exciting adventures his beloved master has just gone through, and also of Molly, who, with a tear in her eye, bade him God speed and good luck.

THE ADVENTURES OF TERENCE O'ROURKE (No. 3, "The Road to Paradise"—Two Parts—Dec. 6).—The cast: Terence O'Rourke (J. Warren Kerrigan); Beatrix (Lois Wilson); Princess Karen (Maude George); Duke Victor (Harry Carter); Captain De Bressac (J. Morley); Chambret (Bertra Grossby); Danny (William Holland).

O'Rourke, who is sketching on the borders of Grandlieu, gets a message by carrier pigeon from Beatrix, who tells of her forthcoming marriage to the Duke Victor, and asks him to help her. With his valet, Danny, he starts for the capitol. In the meantime the Duke has been making love to Beatrix and tells her that he believes she is still in love with the adventurer. The ministers come on and tell them that the date for their wedding will be announced that afternoon before the populace in the chamber of state. Captain de Bressac comes to the Duke and tells him that O'Rourke is to arrive at the inn. Together they go to the inn and meet Karen, an Indian Princess, who is in search of the Pool of Flame, a jewel stolen from a temple. It is plain that the Duke is well acquainted with her, for she shows him the message.

He tells her that he believes it is in the possession of O'Rourke and outlines a plan to get it. She agrees to the plan. O'Rourke arrives at the inn and meets Chambret, an old friend. He leaves the latter in the inn office and goes upstairs to his room to change his clothes to get ready for his visit to the Princess. As he is on the stairs Karen purposely stumbles into his arms, thus making his acquaintance. O'Rourke, with Danny, enters his room to change. In the meantime Chambret is kidnapped on De Bressac's orders and is placed in an outbuilding. When O'Rourke returns De Bressac tells him that he is to conduct him to the Princess. O'Rourke leaves with him. He is taken to the Duke's castle.

In the meantime Beatrix has despaired of his coming and is ready in her robes to go to the chamber of state with the Duke, to have the marriage date set. The Duke tells her that if she will come with him he will convince her for all time that O'Rourke is unworthy of her and is at the very moment in the company of the Indian Princess, his mistress. She consents and they go to the Duke's castle.

O'Rourke is shown into the room and finds Karen waiting. She throws herself into his arms. At that moment the Duke raises a panel in the wall and Beatrix sees the affair and believes the Duke's tale. The panel drops before O'Rourke can interfere. He and De Bressac draw their swords and fight back into the secret passage. In the meantime Danny, who is following around a pretty chambermaid, finds Chambret in the shed and at once they start for the castle, commandeering an auto that Danny drives. Back at the fight De Bressac tries to kill O'Rourke, but the latter, by accident, springs the trap and De Bressac falls and is killed. O'Rourke sees his body on the rocks below. He hurries out and finds Beatrix and the Duke just leaving. He pleads with her, but she refuses to forgive him. At this moment Chambret comes on and confronts the Duke. He explains to Beatrix and drops on his knees to ask her to take O'Rourke back. She is convinced and tells him to come, that she will go where the ministers are waiting. She takes him to the chamber and starts to introduce him, but he stops her and tells her not yet—not until he has made himself her equal in every way will he consent to their marriage.

This closes the story.

STANLEY IN DARKEST AFRICA (Seventh and Concluding Episode of the Stanley in Africa Series—Two Parts—Dec. 9).—The cast: Henry M. Stanley (Roy Watson); Capt. Batty (Herr Batty); Jack Wilson (Edward Roberts); Tietze (Court Tietze); Andrea (Chas. Gay); Ada, Jack's sweetheart (Mona Darkfeather); Nina, her companion (Marie Manley); Old Hag, her guide (Anna DeLisle).

Having conqured the Bungangetas and destroyed their village, Stanley and his party move onward to find Ada, who has been kidnapped by Andrea and taken through the jungle to reach Andrea's home. Jack, Ada's sweetheart, becomes impatient at the slow progress, and hurries ahead. In the jungle a tiger separates Andrea and Ada. She takes refuge in the hollow of a giant tree trunk where she finds some lion cubs. As she fondles them the lioness approaches and plunges at Ada, who drops prone to the ground. Her presence of mind has saved her for the animal, mystified, stands over her for a moment and then returns to her cubs. Ada silently rolls into a creek running close by.

Ada unsuspectingly walks into the camp of the Babusosses, a band of crocodile worshippers, while they are making the religious sacrifice of throwing their girl-babies to the crocodiles. She denounces the ceremony and as the headman tosses an infant form into the water, Ada swims after and rescues it. A giant monster of the deep makes its way toward Ada but Jack, who has just arrived on the scene, takes in the situation at a glance, and swimming to her aid brings her to the shore unharmed. The incident is witnessed from the distance by Andrea who, realizing in it an opportunity to gain possession of Ada, explains to the headman that the act is a desecration to the Babusosses idol, and incites them to punish the malefactors. Andrea holds a peculiar authority over the Babusosses. At his command they tie Jack to a stake and send for a witch-doctor to marry Andrea and Ada.

Preparations for the ceremony are well underway when native scouts report the approach of Stanley. The antive force is divided into sections to meet the invaders. A pitched battle follows, Stanley's party is compelled to retreat and Stanley is captured. Ada and Jack escape, however. Not to be thwarted Andrea, now the spokesman for the victors, sends word to Ada that he will release Stanley if she will surrender herself to him, reminding her that Stanley has done so much to help her that she should not deny him. He adds unless she consents he will kill Stanley.

The party is at its wits end at this news. Proceeding further in order to be out of the range of the Babusosses and to formulate plans for regaining Stanley, they meet Livingston. The forces of the two parties united, an attack is made upon Andrea with the result that the Babusosses are overwhelmingly defeated, Stanley and Livingston meet, Ada and Jack are united, and all the expedition turned into success.

Triumphant Triangle Progress

Comparisons, says the prophet, are odious—and they are so far as we are concerned, for, very frankly, we do not believe comparisons are possible where Triangle Quality is concerned.

While consistency may be jewel-like, Triangle Plays are more than consistent, for they are constantly improving in quality. For verification of this statement we are privileged to refer you to newspapers and exhibitors all over the country. We've been busy for some weeks now printing these comments.

By this time everybody with a mind alert to what is going on knows that Triangle Plays are drawing $2 through box office windows. Many people know that their local theatres are offering them at a less price, but still a little above the average—and they are glad to pay the difference because of high quality. If there still exists curiosity as to how this can be, a glance across on the other page will give you the other fellow's viewpoint. If he wasn't satisfied it's logical to suppose that he'd be squealing instead of cheering.

More Triangle Endorsement

A constant stream of messages from satisfied exhibitors all over the country continues. The following from Louisville is interesting:

"We opened the Walnut Theatre today to big business in spite of all-day rain. Mary Pickford as our opposition did practically nothing. Our patrons say Triangle Pictures are the greatest Louisville has ever seen. Their success here is undoubtedly assured."

BROADWAY AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISE

Expressions such as this are the best proof of the Quality of Triangle Plays. Exhibitors throughout the country are quick to realize the high quality of TRIANGLE PRODUCTIONS.

THE ARAB'S VENGEANCE (Two Parts—Dec. 16).—The cast: Captain Vincent (Roy Watsou); Lieutenant Dagwell (John Oaker); Mr. Calvin (Thos. Morrissey); Carol Calvin (Margaret Gibson); David, an Arabian (Dave Allau); Another Arabian (B. Singh).

Captain Vincent is in command of an out-post in Arabia. Mr. Calvin, a naturalist, on his way to the interior, to collect fauna, or flora, presents a letter of introduction, as he wishes to leave his daughter who accompanies him, at this post, and to await letters of importance. While there are soldiers in the post, the servants are natives. Carol is oppressed by their silent ways, and ever present watchfulness, but the young captain assures her that she will become used to it in time. As the days pass, the young people become more interested in each other. One day one of the servants steals a razor from the Captain who orders him whipped and in revenge the native conspires to kidnap Carol and sell her as a slave to a traveling band of Arabs.

The letters arriving, the naturalist escorted by the Captain, starts for the Interior. This pleases the Arab as he will now be able to carry out his plans. He sends one of his tribe to the interior to get an elephant that he may get the girl through the jungle. Carol in spite of warning, leaves the post and the Arab follows her and lifting her to a horse, rides away with her. The other native aids him. Lieutenant Dagwell, learning of the abduction, hastens in search of her father and the Captain to tell them of the girl's fate. In the meantime, the wandering tribe refuses to send back the elephant to their leader as they are terrorized by a man-eating lion in the neighborhood. When the Arab gets the girl to the hut appointed as the meeting place, he does not find the elephant. He is afraid to lose time, so leaving the girl pinioned in the hut, he starts away to find the elephant. He is caugbt by the lion and killed. A night of borror follows, in which the hunting party struggle through the jungle hoping to find the girl, while she, a prey to terror, is menaced by the animals who try to get in the hut. Just at daybreak the bunters come upon the hut, and the shot of the Captain kills the lion, who has at last broken the door and is springing within. So all ends happily.

FALSTAFF.

CHECKING CHARLIE'S CHILD (Dec. 2).—The cast: Dick (George Marlo); Dot, his wife (Isolde Illian); Baby (Kenneth Clarendon, Jr.); Porter (Glen Jones).

Charlie was devoted to his child, but his employer had no use for a howling baby at the office. Charlie's wife bad gone to a whist, and had nowhere else to leave the infant, so he was up a tree. At last he gave the baby to the office boy, and told him to check him at a nearby department store. That night the office boy lost his check. The attendant refused to accommodate him with a baby, so the office boy swiped a lusty youngster and ran back to Charlie. Charlie was in such a hurry that he didn't notice that he had somebody's else baby. Next he was arrested for kidnapping.

Charlie's wife was summoned to bail him out. The phone rang, and an officer announced that a chap in the store round the corner wanted to speak with Charlie's wife. Taking up the receiver, she was overcome to bear her baby say "Goo! Goo!" Mrs. Charlie headed a rescue party to the telephone booth, where the infant was found cooing merrily. The enthusiastic young mother kept insisting that "it was too cute for anything in baby to have called her up." But the office boy next morning had a more scientific explanation. It seemed he had found the check in his hat, and had been in the act of phoning the father at the police station when Mr. Charlie's voice over the wire had frightened him away. So he bad left the baby to do the talking.

CLARENCE CHEATS AT CROQUET (Dec. 9).—The cast: Clarence (Alfred Hickey); Alicia Barbara Gilroy); Peter, the Pitcher (Charlie Emerson); Wicked Wicket Keeper (Riley Chamberlain); His Aged Grandmother (Frances Keyes).

Clarence, the idol of his native village, is the star of the Croquet Club. He bears himself creditably until the return of Peter, the Pitcher, formerly a member of the National Baseball League. Peter, to please Alicia, the President of the Croquet Club, tries to take an interest in croquet. He arousess the animosity of Clarence. Blows follow, but the pitcher wins. Clarence withdraws, limping with pain. The wicked wicket keeper of the club fans the fuel. He induces Clarence to challenge his rival to a croquet match.

When it becomes evident to Clarence that the ex-pitcher is going to win, he yields to temptation, and cheats. The wicket keeper catches him in the act, and that night, summons him to his home, where he demands a large sum of money. The aged grandmotber of the wicket keeper lies ill. Alicia, coming with broth for the old lady, overhears the conspirators. Bursting open the door, she fearlessly denounces them. The wicket keeper makes her a prisoner. But the grandmother, rising to the emergency, summons the pitcher, who discharges the keeper, and makes Alicia bis bride. Clarence still wanders through the streets of his native town, a creature shunned and despised.

MINNIE, THE MEAN MANICURIST (Dec. 6).—The cast: Minnie (Louise Emerald Bates); Suffragette Leader (Frances Keyes); Barbers (Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham).

It is generally believed that barbers always talk to their customers, but once there was a shop where the two partners chiefly talked to each other. In many ways this is worse than conversing with customers, for the danger to the innocent patron is greater. Both barbers agreed on most subjects, and one upon which they were very decided, was that women should not be allowed to vote. They discussed it at great length one day, and were so unpleasant to a woman worker for the cause that it aroused the ire of a customer. He told the woman that if she could prevent the talkative barbers from voting against the suffrage amendment he would gladly contribute $500 to "The Cause."

The woman worker did not see how it was possible to win the money, but one of her colleagues, a bright young girl, named Minnie, had a plan and tried it out. The barbers wanted a manicure girl, so Minnie, applied and got the job. Within a short time the two barbers had fallen in love with her, and became bitterly jealous of each other. Despite their admiration, Minnie could not win them over to "The Cause," and they even sneered when they witnessed the great parade of the women of New York.

The manicurist fanned the jealously of her suitors, until finally they came to blows.

The barbers were arrested, and Fate so arranged things that they were brought before the judge who had offered the reward on the day before election. One barber pleaded for clemency because "I was the man who shaved you," and the judge added ten days to his sentence. The barbers spent Election Day and several later days and weary nights behind the bars, while Minnie, the mean manicurist, claimed and collected the $500 offer that the judge had made.

A SHOTGUN ROMANCE (Dec. 3).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Father, Jefferson Osborne); Daughter Grace (Belle Bennett); I. M. Short (George George); Minister (Bob Kenyon); First Tough (Louis FitzRoy); Second Tough (Arthur Munns); First Hunter (Joe Van Meter); Second Hunter (Harry Jackson); Butler (Gordon McGregor).

Jerry and Grace are in love but the latter's father frowns upon this match, preferring I. M. Short for a son-in-law. Grace protests strongly. Jerry writes his sweetheart a note planning an elopement but before reaching its destination it is discovered by the butler and given to the father. Grace is locked in her room and a plan of action is formulated to prevent the elopement. The elopement fails but with results not anticipated by the father.

Next morning Grace sends a note to Jerry and plans means for escape. In a very amusing manner she eludes her father and meets Jerry at the appointed place. Here unknown to the lovers two toughs spy them and hide behind them. While Jerry is preparing for a little osculatory exercise and Grace has her eyes closed in anticipation each tough steals a kiss, Grace opening her eyes sees the toughs and she and Jerry run off in a panic.

In the meanwhile the father, discovering the disappearance of his daughter, starts out after the runaway couple accompanied by Mr. Short who has come to ask for Grace's hand. While the toughs are congratulating themselves on their experience the father and Mr. Short appear. The latter are held up, forced to exchange garments and are started on their way by a couple of shots from the toughs' revolvers. These shots attract the attention of nearby hunters. The tramps plan to escape suspicion and one of them falls to the ground pretending to be hurt. When the hunters come up the other tramp informs them that his comrade has been shot by the fleeing parties and the hunters immediately give chase.

Meantime Jerry and Grace are enjoying themselves at a picnic with a great crowd of friends when into their midst rush the father and Short pursued by the hunters. One of the hunters accidently drops his gun and Jerry immediately seizes it firing it off permiscuously. Alarmed by the havoc he has wrought, Jerry rushes out to the road and here sees the tramps. Realizing the situation he marches the toughs to the picnic grounds at the point of the gun. There the father and Short are rehabilitated in their proper garments, the toughs are taken into custody and Jerry and Grace receive the parental blessing.

THE BUZZARD'S SHADOW (American—Five Parts—Dec. 9).—The cast: Sergeant Barnes (Harold Lockwood); Alice Corbett (May Allison); Dr. Deschamps (William Stowell); Unitah, the Half-Breed (Harry Von Meter); Arreep, the Squaw (Alice Ann Rooney); Colonel Sears (Dick LaReno); Mrs. Sears (Betty Hart); Barbara Corbett (Virginia Fordyce).

Sergeant Barnes is scout and special messenger at a U. S. army post on the edge of the great American desert. Alice Corbett, a young widow, and her infant, Barbara, find difficulty in making ends meet. Between Sergeant Barnes and the young widow a warm friendship is formed, a friendship which soon develops into love. It is the birthday of Col. Sears and an army ball is planned in his honor. Sergeant Barnes discovers the Colonel's wife in loving tete-a-tete with Dr. Deschamps. A day or two later, when the Sergeant is scouting the foothills for "strays" he encounters Deschamps and the Colonel's wife riding together in a wooded path. The Sergeant incurs the enmity of Deschamps when he asserts that the latter must band in his resignation to Col. Sears or be exposed. Another enemy is made in the person of Unitah, whom the Sergeant knocks down when he discovers the half-breed maltreating a horse.

Col. Sears entrusts Sergeant Barnes with a message to be carried to another post across the desert. Deschamps plots the downfall of the young Sergeant. Taking a phial of deadly poison from his medicine kit, the post physician proceeds to saturate some lumps of sugar, which Sergeant Barnes is taking along for his horse, with the poison fluid. Unitah follows the Sergeant when he starts. While the Sergeant sleeps the half-breed empties his canteen and replaces the water with sand. In the morning Barnes' horse dies. Barnes proceeds afoot, then discovers the deadly trick that Unitah has played. The young Sergeant is alone, on foot, and without water in the middle of the desert. He sees a strange symbol—a symbol, of death—for it is the shadow of a buzzard. In a stupor the young Sergeant staggers on. He falls, his reason flees, but he has managed to reach the railroad tracks. A train passes. The Sergeant is seen. Friendly hands lift him aboard and he is plied with water. Across the desert the soldier recovers and finally his memory, which was shattered, returns and he recalls everything.

Meanwhile, at the army post, hope that Barnes still lives has been given up. Col. Sears has sent out a searching party and the squad bas returned bearing the clothes that young Barnes had worn. Alice is inconsolable, while Deschamps and the half-breed are highly satisfied. Then comes a message from the dead. Young Barnes still lives and he is returning. Terror-stricken, Descbamps plans to flee. He leaves the post as does the half-breed. Returning, Barnes encounters both his enemies. A fight ensues. They are two against one, and the young Sergeant is on the point of defeat when the soldiers at the post chance upon the struggling trio. A bullet lays the half-breed low. No hullets, however, ends the life of Deschamps. He is roughly handled and taken back to the post where, without ceremony, he is thrown into the guard-house, to be dealt with in the way the army treats a traitor. Barnes reports to his Colonel, who commends the lad for bis bravery. The young Sergeant and Alice are reunited.

AMERICAN.

THE WATER CARRIER OF SAN JUAN (Two Parts—Dec. 6).—The cast: Juanita (Winifred Greenwood); Romela (Edward Coxen); Pedro (George Field).

Juanita and Romela are sweethearts. Romela is growing rich as the proprietor of a fishing industry. Romela's boats are off the hanks and the daily catch of his men is ever growing in volume. Pedro, an itinerant musician, comes upon the scene and by his grace and his musical attainments he captivates the heart of Juanita.

Romela is forced to leave on a journey. When he returns his sweetheart has fled with the musician. Romela vows revenge and starts in pursuit of the couple. He comes upon Pedro and a pistol duel follows. Romela is shot and severely wounded and left on the plain. Three days later he is discovered, blind and half dead. Tenderly he is taken to his home. He loses his fortune and because of his infirmity is compelled to pass the remainder of his days eking out a precarious living as a water carrier.

Years pass. Pedro the musician has taken Juanita from mining camp to mining camp. At first the girlish charm of Juanita had won the miners, but as the years advance and her grace grew less, the popularity of the girl is fast waning. Her beauty gone, Pedro tires of her. She is left to cast for herself. She goes home and begs forgiveness. At length Pedro encounters Romela. The blind man senses the presence of the man he has sworn to kill and with a vengeance, the aged water carrier carries out his oath. His knife reaches Pedro's heart, and Romela is avenged. The slayer is imprisoned, but the fading days of his life are happy for he has fulfilled his solemn oath and made way with the man who had ruined his life. Juanita, forgiven, does her best to lighten the woes of the old prisoner's declining years.

A BROKEN CLOUD (Dec. 10).—The cast: Nellie Armstrong (Vivian Rich); Jo Bradley (Alfred Vosburgh); Col. Armstrong (Perry Banks); Robert Joffrey (Roy Stewart); Clara Bain (Lizette Thorne).

Jo Bradley, a young author, is in love with Nellie Armstrong, daughter of Col. Armstrong, who is affected with heart disease. The Colonel desires Nellie to marry Robert Joffrey, an unprincipled lawyer, but Nellie loves Jo. Joffrey conspires with his friend Clara, a woman of shady reputation, to ensnare Nellie in a plot in which he plans to rescue her from a threatened scandal on condition that she marry him.

Clara inveigles Nellie to her room on pretense of illness, slips a locket into Nellie's pocket and then accuses her of theft, threatening to call the police. Jo, however, comes to her rescue and takes her home. The Colonel is grateful to Jo for his act and finally concludes tbat he is the fellow for Nellie to marry. Seized with an attack of heart failure, he hastily writes a note: "Marry Jo. It is my dying wish." Then he dies. Joffrey comes in, discovers the note and changes it to read "Marry Joffrey." Nellie finds the note and decides to accede to her father's wish and marry Joffrey. Jo suspects trickery and on looking at the blotter on the Colonel's table finds proof of Joffrey's perfidy. He confronts the lawyer; a fight follows and Jo forces him to confess.

NOVELTY.

A JANITOR'S JOYFUL JOB (Dec. 6).

"Fatty," the janitor, and Count Melville de Rose both are in love with Melinda Rousseau, who lives with her aunt in Apartment 23. Melinda favors "Fatty," but Auntie butts in, inexpressibly shocked to see her niece sitting on the knee of "only a janitor." The Count gives tango lessons wbich shake the walls, and cause the hat-rack repeatedly to fall over upon the janitor. At last he drives it in place with a long spike which penetrates the partition and enters the small of Melville's back. The Count goes into spasms, and his rival is called to his rescue. Early the next morning one of the tenants, much the worse for a night out, is carried upstairs and thrust into his apartment by "Fatty." The inebriated gentleman wanders into the bathroom and hangs his hat on the lighted gas jet. In less than an hour the smell of smoke warns the terrified dwellers. Melinda wakes, tries to flee, but falls back in a faint upon the bed. "Fatty" carries her, upside down, out of the burning house. They are attacked in the hall by the jealous count, but make their escape. Alone at last, Melinda rewards her hero.

RELIANCE.

THE STAB (Two Parts—Dec. 5).—The cast: Ruth (Irene Hunt); Alice (Mabel Wiles); Pauline (Margie Wilson; George Landon (William Hinckley); Charles Clarke (George Beranger); Stone, a theatrical manager (Charles Gill).

George Landon marries the wrong woman. Ruth, his wife, craves a good time. At last her husband suggests that she go to visit Pauline, an old chum of hers. Ruth entrusts their child to Alice, a neighbor. Pauline is an actress. Ruth seems to fit perfectly into her friend's environment. Charles Clarke, a rich young good-for-nothing, falls in love with Ruth. Meanwhile Alice is making a success as substitute mother to Baby Aline. Landon's business taking him to the city where Pauline lives, he sends Ruth word to be ready to go back with him. Ruth is angry. Landon reaches Pauline's apartment to find a gay party in progress.

In the meantime Ruth has warned Clarke not to dare come near the house, and he, thinking she has jilted him, had taken many drinks. Ruth leads her husband aside into a little den. Both admire an antique dagger upon the wall. Five minutes later Landon is found, the dagger, blood-stained, in bis hand, and Ruth lying lifeless over the divan. The hushand is arrested. Pauline, who had mysteriously fainted a few minutes previous to the discovery of the tragedy, appears at court during Landon's trial. She proclaims Landon innocent. On taking up her small mirror she had seen in the reflection of a large mirror behind her, repeated in her vanity-case, the entire tragedy. Landon and Ruth stood talking in the den. Ruth made an impetuous reply, and her husband went outside on the balcony. At that instant the intoxicated Clarke entered, seized the antique dagger, stabbed Ruth, and escaped. Pauline's testimony saves Landon. He goes home to his child, and to Alice. Little Aline's substitute mother consoles the heart-broken man.

THE FRIENDS OF THE SEA (Two Parts—Nov. 28).—The cast: Monroe Salisbury, Alfred Paget, Mlle. Fovieri, Mr. Moody, Mr. Mack and Mr. Harley.

Two friends, August and Manuel, both are in love with Jeanne Cavoure, daughter of the most prosperous fisherman in Sea Cove. August learns that Manuel is going to marry Jeanne. On the day set for the wedding August disappears, leaving word that he has gone to Brenton's Reef, and shall not return until he hears that his friend is happily settled with his bride. Manuel realizes that August has gone away to heal a broken heart. He postpones the wedding until his friend, months later, ventures back to port. August again meets Jeanne. He finds that she is still unmarried. By this time tbe girl has discovered that it is August, not Manuel, who she really loves, Manuel makes the supreme sacrifice. And the lovers are happy.

THANHOUSER.

THE CRIMSON SABRE (Two Parts—Nov 30).—The cast: The Girl (Isolde Lillian); Her Sweetheart (George Marlo); His Rival (Robert Whittier); Detective (Hector Dion); Chief of Police (Dave Keleher).

Winston Holmes is decoyed to the home of Gerald Lafitte, his unsuccessful rival in love, by a promise that the latter will put him in touch with a proposition which will mean big money. Lafitte, meanwbile, robs his own safe, and sends for a detective. When Holmes arrives he finds that the "proposition" is: "Give up Hilda Brown, or go to jail." For a despairing moment the young man sinks his face in his hands. He is roused by a cry of horror. In the doorway stands tbe detective and Lafitte's valet. On the couch, his head cloven in twain, lies his enemy, a sabre, crimson with blood, at his side. A few minutes before Holmes had been absentmindedly admiring the strange weapon as it hung on the wall above the couch. He is arrested for the murder.

Rhodes, the detective, is not convinced even by apparently inclusive evidence. He finds in Lafitte's study the money and jewels cleverly removed by the dead man from his own safe, also a photograph of a beautiful girl with a theatrical signature across the corner. The detective visits a theatrical agency where he learns that the original of the picture had been Lafitte's sweetheart. Rhoades studies the mechanism by which the sabre had been so attached to the wall that it could be swung out over the head of an unconscious victim and dropped with fatal effect. A photograph of the missing actor forms another link. Rhoades proves to the detective force that Lafitte's valet is nono other than the father of the descrted actress, whose death he at last has avenged in the murder of her betrayer.. Winston Holmes is acquitted, and he and Hilda marry.

THE HOUSE PARTY AT CARSON MANOR—(Dec. 5).—The cast: Pritchard Moore (Morris Foster); Pauline, his sweetheart, (Marie Newton); Detective Oliver (Morgan Jones); Cousin Blondine (Ethel Jewett).

Pritchard Moore gives a house party at bis estate, Carson Manor. On the second day a gardener employed on the grounds is found dead. Detective Oliver is summoned. He substantiates Moore's suspicion that his hired man has been murdered. Tho detective in disguise mingles with the guests. His attention is drawn to Blondine Elliott, Pritchard's cousin. She identifies him immediately as an officer, taking pains to let Oliver know it. Several days later a tennis match is arranged by Miss Elliott, between their host, Pauline Coombs, his fiancee, Oliver and herself.

The detective sees Miss Elliott deliberately deflect a ball, which falls into a bush filled with brambles. Pritchard springs forward to recover the ball, but a warning cry from Oliver brings him to a standstill. "Who would have benefited by your death?" demands the detective. Moore hesitates, then replies, "My cousin, Miss Elliott." "That hush," says Oliver, "is covered with a deadly acid. One scratch from the poisoned brambles would have been fatal." Aides of Oliver's now bring forward a Hindu prisoner, at sight of whom Blondine Elliott turns ghastly pale. "My assistants and I have witnessed your secret meetings with this man," continues the detective coolly. "I have lost!" cries the woman. "Life is a gamble, and I am willing to pay the penalty." She presses to her mouth a strange ring upon her fore-finger and sinks back unconscious.

RIALTO.

THE SECRET AGENT (Three Parts—Dec. 15).—The cast: Wilbur Clark (Robert T. Haines); Alicia Carlton (Cathleen Butler); Mrs. Vanderlind (Flavia Arcaro); James Tawney (Henry W. Pemberton); J. P. Hayden (Charles W. Travis); Harold French (Albert Macklin); Clark's assistant (Sidney Mason); Alicia's maid (Miss Davis); Mrs. Vanderlind's maid (Marie Vaughn); Jeweler's clerk (James Davis); Jeweler (S. Wilstie).

Mrs. Vanderlind, a wealthy American widow residing in Paris, bought some unusually fine diamonds for a necklace. News of this reached the Paris hranch of the American secret service through the regular channels, the sale being reported by the jeweler. Meanwhile Wilbur Clark, a secret service agent, had met Alicia Carlton, Mrs. Vanderlind's nicce, when he saved her from a panicky horse and had felt himself attracted to the beautiful girl.

James Tawney, a crook whose gentlemanly appearance serves to give him entree to the best circles, had made Mrs. Vanderlind's acquaintance through Harold French, a society man, and had designs on the diamonds. So when Mrs. Vanderlind announced to her jeweler, in the presence of Tawney, that she intended to send the diamonds to America by her niece, Alicia Carlton, it was natural that the westbound vessel should bear Alicia, Tawncy and Wilbur Clark.

Tawney had seen Mrs. Vanderlind concealing the diamonds in a peculiar smelling-salts hottle, which Alicia often wore on a neck chain. Clark and his assistant, when entering Alicia's stateroom to search it in her absence, surprised Tawney there. But Tawney produced secret service credentials and warned Clark not to interfere in the case. Clark, however, sent a wireless message to Washington, D. C., asking if Tawncy's secret service credentials were genuine. Meanwhile Clark hated himself for pursuing the girl he loved. But, believing her a lawbreaker, he saw no other course open to him. That night he resolved to open the question with her about its contents.

When Alicia professed ignorance of the hottle's contents, Clark felt irritated. For his reply he opened the bottle. It was empty. "Your diamonds! You've been robbed, and I know who did it!" cried Clark who suspected Tawney.

Alicia's peal of laughter interrupted him. "Why the stones I am carrying to America are imitations," she said, "from which a design for a necklace will he made. Then when auntie arrives the real stones can he slipped in their settings." When word arrived that Tawney's credentials were false, Clark and Alicia were so happy in their love for each other that they only smiled when he learned that the man who had brought them together had escaped by tug.

BEAUTY.

PRETENSES (Dec. 7).—The cast: Steve (John Sheehan); Mike Guffy (John Steppling); Mary Guffy (Carol Holloway); Mrs. Guffy (Sylvia Ashton).

It is Saturday afternoon—a half holiday—in the big city. Stovo, a bank policeman, is strolling in the park, where he meets a young lady whose namo he discovers to be Mary Guffy. Stevo tells Mary he is an officer in the bank. Mary tells Steve her father is a big engineer. The two become fast friends. Romance buds then bloom, and the two are about to be married.

Then the horrid truth leaks out. Steve is an officer in the bank—a bluecoat officer with a star—while Mary's father is none other than Mike Guffy, the 220-pound engineer, in charge of the steam roller. Romance begun under false pretenses is given an added impetus when the truth becomes known and the two are wedded and take up their abode under the Guffy roof.

All social restraint under which all parties had been laboring, owing to false pretenses, is cast aside, and it becomes a case of love in shirt sleeves in a cottage. The even tenor of the Guffy way is resumed and the son-in-law has no difficulty in making himself one of the family.

NOBODY'S HOME (Dec. 11).—The cast: Dick (Frank Borzage); Mabel (Neva Gerber); Dick's father (William Carroll); Dick's mother (Mollie Shafer); Mabel's mother (Lucille Ward); Mabel's father (Rae Berger); the agent (Dick Rosson).

Father objects to Mabel's love affair with Dick, but mother is in sympathy with the pair. Dick receives a letter from his father, telling him that when he is married and settled down father will start him in business. The letter also states that father will arrive for a visit next day. Dick proposes marriage to Mabel and insists on a wedding before his father arrives. The two elope and are married. In order to put up a prosperous appearance, Dick rents a house from a real estate agent. The lease is drawn up—for one day. Dick wires his father that he is married. The old man arrives in town intent on buying a home for his son and his bride. He makes an engagement with a real estate agent to look at a house that day.

In the meantime, Mabel's mother has brought Mabel's father around to her way of thinking, and the two conclude to show their love for their daughter by buying a house for the young folks. They make an appointment with the agent to look at a house that day. Then things come to a climax. Mabel's father and mother and Dick's parents set out to look at the house. It is the very structure in which Mabel and Dick are living on their one-day lease. For a time the fathers and mothers glare at each other. Mabel and Dick artfully negotiate peace, and both fathers conclude that Dick is so prosperous that neither must buy a home for the boy. It then becomes a question of "Nobody's Home." Dick's prosperity is feigned and the desire of the young folks to appear in financial ease has cheated them out of the gift of a home. All ends happily, however, when parental bank rolls are pooled and the ease and comfort of the young folks are assured.

CLIPPER.

CURLY (Three parts—Dec. 11).—The cast: Curly (Lottie Pickford); Arthur Brewster (William Russell); Isahel Morrisey (Charlotte Burton); Roland Morrisey (George Periolat); Tim McGraw (George Clancey); Mrs. McCarty (Eugenie Forde); Flo Murray (Lizette Thorne); Mrs. Brewster (Marie Van Tassal).

Arthur Brewster, a wealthy young man, is a worker in the slums. He has founded the Good Hope Mission when he comes upon Curly, a girl whose womanhood is budding in the mire of evil surroundings. He rescues the girl from the vileness of Mrs. McCarty, a drunken old woman with whom she lives. Curly becomes his devoted friend and repays the kindness he has shown her when she saves him from a murderous attack of a couple of thugs.

Brewster gives Curly work at the Mission and under his influence a new life is opened up for the girl. Roland and Isabel Morrisey have squandered their patrimony and have become social pirates, living by their wits. To recoup their fortune, which will enable them to continue the high social life which they have lived, Isahel sets her cap for Brewster and succeeds in becoming the young man's betrothed. Meanwhile, Roland desperately in need of money, has decided to convert some securities which he long has held for the unknown heir of Captain Harley Peters. Isahel notes with jealousy Curly's adoration for Brewster and she and her brother concoct a plot. The evil plan works out and Curly is accused of the theft of some rings belonging to Miss Morrisey. Things indeed look black for the girl, until the watchful eye of old Tim McGraw comes to her aid. He discovers circumstances which prove Curly's innocence. Then Mrs. McGraw is taken fatall· ill. On her deathbed she confesses that Curly is the rightful heiress to Capt. Peters' fortune. Peters had left the girl years ago in her care and had been lost at sea.

Brewster and Curly go to Morrisey's office. Roland and his sister are apprehended before they can flee with the Peters' securities. Brewster removes the solitaire from Isabel's hand and the diamond circlet is placed by him on the finger of Curly, the girl he has grown to love.

CASINO.

CURING CISSY (Dec. 12).—The cast: Cissy (Cissy Fitzgerald); Willie Waffles (Charles Craig); Oswald Boomer ("Budd" Ross); Cissy's father(Phin Nares).

Cissy was an athletic girl, athletic to such a degree that she annoyed her father by her sporty tendencies and caused Willie Waffles, who adored her, to pine away to a shadow while contemplating the hopelessness of his suit. But Dad resolved to cure her. Dad noticed Oswald Boomer, whom the decline of drama had left high and dry, as the latter was being ejected from a cafe. He asked Oswald to pose as the leader of the "Back to Nature" cult. A little of the axle grease of commerce sufficed to win Oswald over.

So Oswald, Cissy, Willie and Cissy's father donned primitive clothes and took up their abode in a tent. The first night they found the beds of pine boughs hard, and they were annoyed by various noises. Cissy's father went out to take a shot at some dogs barking nearby, but succeeded in killing a cow, as he learned when the farmer showed up to collect damages. The farmer became quite threatening, but the day was saved when Willie Waffles plucked up his courage and thrashed the farmer. Then it was found that Oswald had been caught in a noose trap which he had set for bear the night before. With her idol shattered and Willie elevated in her eyes by his brave conduct, Cissy fell upon the neck of her faithful sweetheart.

MARY'S LAMB (Gold Rooster—Five Parts—Nov. 19).—Leander Lamb, entomologist and matrimonial martyr, hunts the savage butterfly. He is flirtatiously inclined, but does not know "how." Leander's one solace is the "widow next door," her daily plunge in the old swimming hole interesting him unduly. This leads to a chase with Mary Miranda Lamb, his lawful wedded wife, in the role of chaser. In his effort to outdistance her, he lands in an institution for the mentally depressed, where the foes of depression wish to disfigure his none too beautiful skull.

He escapes, and falls into the clutches of the beautiful "widow next door," who, to aid her friend, Allen Townsend in marrying Phyllis Atwood, Leander's niece, wishes to compromise him. The widow, posing as "Charity giving away her clothes," starts Leander on a "butterfly" chase which is interrupted by the arrival of Mary. Leander arrayed in a night-gown, candlestick in hand, proceeds to give the most realistic "sleepy walker's escapade" that Mary ever witnessed.

A note from the widow, which Leander had forgotten on the dresser, proves the somnambulist's undoing. He evens up matters with Mary, when his old college chum, Blackwell, relates a most disgraceful story of Mary's maiden days. He sentences her to the "wrongdoers' rest"—the stocks, the fate he had often met for too ardent "butterfly" chasing. Mary in the stocks is more manageable, and matters are straightened for the best interests of all.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF J. RUFUS WALLINGFORD, "A Transaction in Summer Boarders" (Episode No. 8—Two Parts—Nov. 22).—The newly-rich and simpering Mr. Charles Algernon Swivel is fussful and flirty and a conspirator. He is a member of a clique of criminal financiers who have caused the ruin and death of the father of Violet and Fanny Warden, who, in turn, are being aided by J. Rufus Wallingford and Blackie Daw in their endeavor to regain a part of the stolen fortune.

Again Wallingford invests five thousand dollars—value received, the "Pine Lake Hotel." Aged, dilapidated, God-forsaken Pine Lake, with its oily swamp and an over-abundance of the infernal pest, mosquitoes. This was the luclous lemon into which Wallingford wanted Algernon to bite. Bite he did—Forty thousand dollars' worth.

How the Prancing Pink Pretties, a stranded theatrical troupe, with Miss Tottie Vorhies, later Mrs. Charles Algernon Swivel, as star, gave the "Pine Lake" an air of something it wasn't, and how "Onion" Jones developed smallpox, cholera and leprosy at the one time in order that Pine Lake might be rid of its undesirable guests, is a very laughable bit of comedy.

A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT Three-Part—Balboa—Nov. 22).—The cast: Ruth Nolan (Edith Reeves); Mrs. Nolan (Ruth Lackaye); Richard Folsom (William Lampe); Clara Conrad (Joyce Moore); Sidney Bowen (Thos. Allen Rector).

Ruth Nolan, employed in a broker's office, is the sole support of her aged mother. Resenting her employer's advances she is discharged. In an exhausted condition, brought on by bodily privation, she is found by Richard Folsom, director of the Star Moving Picture Company. Folsom, impressed by her beauty, offers her a position.

Sidney Bowen, Folsom's leading man, has saved his life, and Folsom in his gratitude offers Bowen anything he may possess at any time Bowen may want it. They make a gentleman's agreement to this effect and put it in writing. Little does either of them realize, when this gentleman's agreement is made, how it is to influence the greatest passion of their lives, when it shall stand a menacing spectre between Ruth Nolan and Folsom.

GREAT WHILE IT LASTED (Phunphilms—Nov. 22).—Byron Beanskin and Hugo Snubb, on the brink of despair, are threatened to put one foot over when they receive a laundry and rent bill for $20.02. Hugo Snubb having broken his last nickel for lolly-pops, they ache for eats. When lo!—glad tidings—Byron is rich; someone has died that he might live.

With a new shroud, plenty of money, and a "vally" in the person of Hugo Snubb, and with cards printed to announce his importanee, thusly: "Byron Beanskin. Worth $20,000,000.36," he sallies forth to flock with the queens and beeomes a social lion. At a garden party, a would-be pretender to Beanskin's social position, slits his trousers, forcing him to hie to a near-by body of water, where he must stand until a barrel is procured that he might proceed to home—and had news. He isn't an heir, and as he finds out from the treatment accorded him by his landlady, none of the glory of riches attaches to him.

NEAL OF THE NAVY (Panama—Two Parts—Nov. 25—"White Gods).—Through the treachery of Hernandez, the adventurer who is trying to steal her inheritance, Lost Isle, Annette Ilington and her party have been shipwrecked close to a cannibal island to which they row in safety. Neal returns to the vessel, the superstructure and wireless room being only partly submerged, and sends out a call for help. In the meantime, Hernandez and his brute man servant, have landed on another part of the island, and securing the aid of the cannibals, who see in the Brute a god risen from the sea, and respecting Hernandez for his influence over him, capture Annette and Mrs. Hardin, killing the surviving members of the crew.

How Neal again proves a deciding factor at a moment when things look blackest for Annette, Mrs. Hardin and the brute-man can best be told in the picture.

THE SULTAN'S PARADISE (Picturesque Turkey—Globe—Nov. 22).—If there be one city in the world whose site combines in absolute perfection, beauty, and utility, it is beyond a doubt Constantinople, well named the Sultan's Paradise. Just as the Bosphorus divides two continents, so does the Golden Horn separate Constantinople into two great sections, the Turkish (Stamboul) and the European (Galata and Pera). The general view of this capital of the Sultan is one of the most remarkable and beautiful that this world can offer. One looks upon a marvelous perspective of picturesque houses, marble mosques and palaces, besides numerous graceful minarets which cut their outlines into the clear sky, like columns of polished ivory.

AN INTIMATE STUDY OF BIRDS, NO. 11 (Pathe—On Same Reel as Foregoing).—These studies of our feathered friends are always welcome. The intimate peeps into the everyday life of these wonderful creatures is productive of much that is surprising and beautiful, leaving as vivid a picture in the mind as could be gotten through personal observation. The studies are complete, showing all the phases of bird life. How the nest is made, the eggs and their undescribable and peculiar markings, the young breaking through the shell, their course in flying, how they are taught to seek their food; all these remarkable pictures taken at close range.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF J. RUFUS WILLINGFORD ("Detective Blackie"—Episode No. 9—Two Parts—Dec. 6).—The confidence men assume the roles of detectives and try their hand at relieving the town of Spanglerville, which was mixed up in the death and ruination of the father of the Warden girls, from some of the contents of the exchequer. This little town harbors one Henry Closby, a man of mystery, who has patented a clay image called the "Lost Dog," the royalties on which net him a handsome sum every year.

On arriving at the only hostlery in town, they register as "Mr. Scotland Yard" and "Mr. S. Holmes." They tell the inn-keeper that they are on the trail of a mysterious man, and learn of Closby. The latter aids them in their efforts to hoodwink the town. With the judicious use of the "sneakograph" and "sleuthophone," they give the rubes an exhibition of the latest devices for the detection of crime. So interested are the townspeople in the exhibition that they buy another "invention" of this Closby for the sum of $60,000, just enough to cover the sum stolen from old man Warden.

RAGTIME SNAP SHOTS (Phunphilms—Nov. 29).—Lucas and Larkin, his running mate, after looking for a job for some time, finally land one in a photographer's shop and immediately start to take possession of the place. They rule supreme in their own inimitable way until a be-spectacled college graduate arrives to have his diploma, and incidentally himself, photographed. He looks rather harmless with his bone-rimmed goggles, but when Lucas and Larkin attempt to take his feet off the table where he has placed them for safekeeping, he shows them a few new ones in the manly art of self-defense. Then Harry Hardguy makes his appearance. He looks more dangerous than the college boy, and makes outlaw the rule that looks are deceiving. He literally cleans out the place, and the last we see of Lucas and Larkin is when they are both making a bee-line for the street and safety.

NEAL OF THE NAVY, NO. 14 (Panama Films—"The Great Goal"—Two Parts—Last Episode—Dec. 2).—This installment tells the story of how Hernandez and Inez, having escaped from the cannibal island, reach their goal—Lost Island. They find that a crew of pirates has lived on the island for several years and have worked the rich cinnabar mines, waiting for a time when they would be rescued. The battleship with the Ilington party on board steams slowly toward Lost Island and on the way down the Brute recovers his senses, and proves to be Annette's father.

The pirates have amassed a vast amount of quicksilver and this they offer to Hernandez in exchange for Inez. He is about to agree to this when he sights Annette, her party having landed, walking about the island, determines to offer her instead. He captures her and is about to hand her over to the pirate chief, when her appearance causes the rest of the band to mutiny. The Ilington party hears the noise of her strife and rushes to the rescue. Ilington pursues Hernandez to the edge of a cliff, where the latter plunges over—to his death.

Thus with the greatest enemy removed, the Ilingtons and Hardins enjoy the fortune derived from the mines, and Inez, wishing to make reparation for her part of the conspiracy, enters a convent. This wonderful serial closes with Annette and Neal having come to a perfect understanding as to how they intend to spend the remaining years of their lives.

THE HOUSE OF FEAR (Gold Rooster—Five Parts—Dec. 3).—Ashton-Kirk is a young man of high social position and great wealth; he is a deep student and learned in the lore of ancient tablets and forgotten books. His keen mind delights in those mysteries which have proven too shadowy for the police. He finds a joy in the hunt; there is a thrill in matching his intelligence against the craft of the criminal.

His interest in the mystery of the house of fear—Cramp's house—was awakened by Pendleton, who, as a guest of Cramp, communicated to Kirk, his friend, the strange sense of mystery and fear surrounding Cramp's house. In Cramp's household lives Grace, his sister; Miss Hohenlo, his aunt; and Kretz, his servant. Kirk learns through his agent in Mexico that Cramp's father was an expert engraver in Mexico years before, and his astute mind connects this fact with the number of Mexicans in the vicinity. He also learns that, in a time of financial stress, Cramp's father forged some currency plates for one Alva, an unscrupulous Mexican, but at the last moment failed to deliver them. At the time of Kirk's visit, the plates rested securely under a great stone in the cellar of Cramp's house, and the presence of the prowling, murderous Mexicans, headed by Alva, was explained by this. The perplexing question, however, was how these intriguers managed to gain nightly entrance to the cellar in their search for the plates. It takes Ashton-Kirk to resolve the queer markings on the string of a package sent to Miss Hohenlo into the message "tonight." That night, Kirk and his aides wait in the cellar as the unsuspecting Miss Hohenlo lets in her confederates. There is a big scene in which Alva and his men are overpowered, and it is learned that Miss Hohenlo is Alva's wife. Thus does Ashton-Kirk solve the mystery of The House of Fear.

HOT HEADS AND COLD FEET (Starlight—Dec. 4).—Heinie and Louie, suffering the pangs of hunger, take to chicken-stealing to relieve said pangs. Getting a couple of fat birds, they go to the edge of a neighboring lake to pluck them, but a mysterious hand rising out of the water disconcerts them. They flee, but the hand greets them wherever they go and finally, getting all their courage together, they grab the card held in the hand. This directs them to go to a certain address, death being the penalty should they fail. They go and there find a queen of a band of rogues, who directs them to kill a rival. They leave on this errand, but when they arrive at the home of their quarry, they find her to be a much more formidable person than they had imagined her to be. She pulls a gun on them and they take to their heels. When they return to the queen, she orders them to get the third degree of those who fail to carry out her royal command, and they are pitched without ceremony into the tank reserved for such emergencies.

THE LILY AND THE ROSE (Fine Arts—Dec. 12).—The cast: Lillian Gish, Lovola O'Connor, Cora Drew, Wilfred Lucas, Mary Alden, Elmer Clifton, Rozsika Dolly, William Hinckley.

Mary Randolph lives with her two aunts in an old Colonial house in the suburbs of a Southern city. There is a young author next door who is in love with her, but who has never got up his courage sufficiently to tell her about it. Mary meets Jack Van Norman, a wealthy bachelor and former football hero. She marries him. For some time they live happy together. Then he becomes infatuated with a stage dancer. His wife will hardly believe the truth when it is told her. She takes dancing lessons and at a party gives an exhibition, but Jack is unmoved. She reproaches him when he wants to leave early by himself. He gives her a short answer.

Jack takes the dancer to the seashore and they have a happy life for a while. Then Jack is called away and the fickle dancer turns to another admirer to pass the time. Jack is furious and leaves her. She promises to do better, but again he finds her with another man. He determines to leave her for good, but becomes so despondent over the thought that he shoots himself. The dancer finds him dead and carefully goes away leaving no trace. Mary hears of the tragedy and is sustained in her grief by the sympathy of her friend next door. She finally forgives her dead husband. The author gains recognition after a long struggle. He dedicates his great book to her and gets permission to dedicate all his future works to her.

THE GREAT VACUUM ROBBERY (Dec. 12—Keystone).—The cast: Charles Murray, Slim Summerville, dime novel detectives; Ed Kennedy, Louise Fazenda, crooks; Harry Booker, landlord; Dixie Chene, his daughter; Whalen Trask, cashier in bank.

Louise Fazenda and Ed Kennedy rob a bank by means of a vacuum cleaner. They operate through the rooms of Charles Murray and Slim Summerville, a pair of dime novel detectives living over the bank. The robbers chloroform the would-be detectives and gain entrance to the cashier's room by means of a ventilator shaft. By means of the hose quantities of paper money are shot up to the detectives' rooms and gathered together in a grip. The cashier has been fooled by Kennedy, who posed as a plumber to get entrance to the money room and then hit the official on the head. A bank policeman gives the alarm, but the robbers escape.

Police are summoned and in their researches find the robbery was pulled off through the ventilator and by means of the dime novel men's rooms. The amateurs, however, are gone in disguise to the hotel rooms where the robbers have fled. Murray is disguised as a woman and Summerville contents himself with false whiskers. Murray enters into Kennedy's rooms and gets the robber's loot by an exchange of grips. Kennedy finds a grip containing woman's apparel and fights with Louise. Then he finds Kennedy carrying his grip and takes it away by force. Summerville calls the police. They chase the robbers over the roof. It gives away under their feet and they fall through three stories. Cashier Trask is in his glory and knocks 'em cold with an axe and exits with his coin.

ALOHA OE (Kay-Bee—Dec. 12).—Cast: Willard Mack, Enid Markey, Margaret Thompson, Frank Borzage, J. Frank Burke and J. Barney Sperry.

David Harmon, a brilliant but dissipated lawyer, wins a verdict for a client in a big criminal case. He disappears and his fiancee, Doris Keith, gets two of his old friends to find the missing man. He is discovered in an insensible condition in a cheap waterfront lodging house. For his own good his friends ship him on a voyage across the Pacific Ocean. The ship is driven ashore. Harmon is rescued and becomes a derelict. He fights with the natives and is driven away. He rescues the daughter of a chieftain, who had been tied to a post and left to be destroyed by hot lava flowing from a nearby crater. The natives thought by the sacrifice of the maiden that they would prevent their own destruction by the eruption of the mountain. He takes the girl as his bride and lives idyllically with her until he is seized with dissatisfaction and the wanderlust.

He steals away and regains the city where he had been a shining legal light. Disgusted at seeing the girl he had been betrothed to married to his best friend, he goes on a spree with his companions on the ship. Suddenly he remembers his clean happy life with Alohoa Oe. He goes back to the islands. Again he finds the girl tied to the post. This time she is expecting his coming. The villagers see him rescue the girl, who has a little child, his own son, in her arms. They hail him as a god and there is great rejoicing as he is reunited with his bride.

BODY AND SOUL (Frohman—Nov. —).—Florence Rockwell, Kenneth Hunter, Robert Whitworth, Jack Sherrill, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Frazier Coulter, George Irving.

Claire Martin, niece of the wealthy Mrs. Taylor, suffers from loss of memory. Under the effect of this, Claire acts as an entirely different person. She wanders through the woods seeking shelter and food, and finally reaches a cabin temporarily occupied by a New York sportsman, who is fishing and hunting in the woods. For a week, Claire accepts the shelter from this sportsman whose love grows with each day's stay. Finally a strange rider passing the cabin asks for a drink, and Claire in her innocence shows her admiration for the new man, making him finally accept the temptation of her eyes to kiss her. At this moment Houghton, the sportsman, returns and bursts into the cabin. He drives out the stranger and then takes a knife and marks the woman so that she will always remember that her love must be for him alone.

Houghton returns to New York. While walking down Fifth avenue he sees in a photographer's show case a picture which closely resembles the girl he thinks he lived with in the woods. He finds out who she is and decides to visit Great Neck and see if it is the same girl. Returning to his boat, Houghton looks at some pictures which he had taken of the girl and decides it must be she. He returns to the grounds of Mrs. Taylor's home and meeting Claire declares she is the woman who was with him at the cabin. Pushing back the dress from her shoulders, he points to the scar. She begs him to tell her what he knows about the scar, and he thinking she is bluffing, tells her to come to the houseboat and he will tell her.

There Houghton proves that she must have been with him at the cabin and when he demands that she love him now as she did then and attempts to take her, she picks up a knife from the table and kills him. Kent, who has been over to the Yacht Club to a committee meeting, sees this when returning to his launch. He rushes to the boat and carries the fainting body of Claire home, gets her to her room and calls the doctor to see if he can help her. The doctor declares that the girl is guiltless of the crime, having gone back to her old personality, and they decide to make the case appear as one of suicide.

When Kent is returning to the boat the following morning he finds there some pictures of her and her scarf, but when he himself is charged with the murder by the man who heard the quarrel, he is made to believe that Claire is innocent by Kent and the doctor, who point out to him the terrible weakness of circumstantial evidence. After Charlie goes, the doctor tells Kent that Claire needs care and attention and must be protected, and Kent in his great love takes her to his heart.

THE SINS OF SOCIETY (Brady—Nov. 29).—The cast: Captain Dorian March (Robert Warwick); Noel Ferrers (Alec B. Francis); Robert Morris (Ralph Delmore); Henry Hogg (Royal Byron); Parker, detective (George Ingleton); Jim Baines (Robert B. Mantell, Jr.); Colonel Gretton (Harry Weir); Marion Beaumont (Dorothy Fairchild); Gwendolin Beaumont (Frances Nelson); Madame D'Orville (Lila Hayward Chester); Mary (Mildred Havens).

Marion Beaumont and her younger sister, Gwendolin, are orphans, inheriting from their father a mortgaged estate, gambling instincts and a social position to uphold. Through gambling and card debts they become deeply involved. Marion gets into the hands of Noel Ferrers, who, under the pretense of helping her, is gradually drawing her into a web of serious trouble, so that he can compel her younger sister, Gwen, to become his wife. Ferrers persuades Marion, in a fit of desperation, to show a magnificent tiara of precious stones lent to her by Madame D'Orville, to Morris, a society pawnbroker.

The clever strategy suggested by Ferrers to raise money on the tiara, is to change the box containing the jewel for one which only holds a paper weight. With the money obtained on this, Ferrers tells her her fortune is certain by backing his horse for a race the next day. The horse loses, as Ferrers intends, and Marion is distracted. One night Morris sees Madame D'Orville wearing the tiara which is supposed to be locked in his safe. As the tiara is far too uncommon to be duplicated, Morris sends for Marion and insists upon having the box, supposed to contain the tiara, opened before his attorney the next day. To prevent Morris finding out her deception, Marion drugs and robs him of the fraudulent box. Captain Dorian March, an officer of the United States Army and sweetheart of Gwen's, comes to her rescue. While the police are pursuing Marion, Dorian, although he has no knowledge of what it contains, takes the box and the suspicion with him. After eluding the police by jumping into the river, Dorian enlists as a private soldier in a Canadian regiment. The troopship on which he leaves for the front is torpedoed and sinks with all on board.

Gwen is being forced into a marriage with Ferrers, who threatens to expose her sister. She believes Dorian is drowned. The situation is saved by Dorian, who is rescued by a tramp steamer and returns in the nick of time. Also Madame D'Orville learns the true state of affairs, she returns her tiara to the pawnbroker as if from a repentant crook. She is aided in this by a faithful friend of Dorian's and sweetheart of her own, called Hogg, who, in Marion's name, redeems the tiara from Morris. Ferrers' attempt to force Gwen into immediate marriage, to save Marion from the police, is frustrated by Dorian's arrival and the coming of the detective, who tells of the restoration of the tiara to Morris. Dorian is cleared. Marion's honor is saved and Gwen and Dorian are united.

THE GRAY MASK (Shubert—Dec. 13).—The cast: Jim Garth (Edwin Arden); Nora (Barbara Tennant).

The Hennion gang of crooks having killed Joe Kridel, a police inspector, and, fearing discovery, accept the aid of Simmons, who wears a gray mask that covers wounds caused by an explosion. Jim Garth, another inspector, is placed on the trail of the gang of which he becomes a member. Nora, the daughter of Garth's inspector, is beloved by Garth. She appears to be one of the gang. Although Jim loves her deeply, she is cold to him. She has sworn to avenge the murder of Kridel, and believes the murderer to be one of the gang.

The Hennions attempt to steal a valuable explosive and penetrate to a steel room in which the chemical is placed. Nora learns the name of Kridel's murderer. When the gang has gathered in the steel room, Garth reveals himself and calls in the aid of the police.

The gang is arrested; the murderer secured, and out of gratitude, Nora accepts Jim Garth as her lover.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY (Chapter 29—"A Deal With Destiny"—Two Parts—Nov. 15).—Blair and Vivian are happy because Arthur Stanley is dead in the person of "John Powell," and Blair and Vivian prosper in their wickedness. They have achieved all. Blair has the Stanley earldom in England and Vivian has, or is to have, the diamond from the sky. Clad in the robes of peer and peeress, they are to attend the Coronation of a King.

But happier than these, are Esther and Arthur. Living with the gypsies, happy in each other's love, for love the world and wealth and ambition is forgotten! And yet fate beckons to them. Blair is struck down and despoiled of the diamond and stayed and defeated in the hour of his wicked triumph. Who got the diamond? What will happen next? How will it all come out? are the questions a thrilled and enthralled audience will ask in every theater where this chapter of the Diamond from the Sky is shown.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY, Chapter 30, "The American Earl" (Two Parts—Nov. 22).—In this, the last chapter, the diamond "fans" will learn who was the real heir after all, and why; and what great influence on the fortunes of the lovers, the eccentric lawyer Smythe and his strange fondness for his deer head trophy, had on the romantic destinies of the hero and heroine. They will see how and why Quabba became King of the Gypsies—and how and why, after all the harm it did and woe it brought—that the diamond from the sky, in the rightful possession of a rightful Stanley, was indeed a true "charm against harm." Everybody will be anxious to see who rightfully gained the Stanley Earldom and who is to rightfully hold the diamond from the sky. All these things and many more are interestingly and convincingly shown in the last chapter of the Diamond from the sky. All ends happily for Esther and Arthur, who rose from his dead self to higher things, worthy at least of the devotion of Esther's constant heart. All ends happily—and yet somewhere in the world Blair and Vivian, desiring the diamond from the sky, lurk, waiting to strike—

Who will make the suggestion for a sequel, the suggestion in 1,000 words or less, that will gain the prize of $10,000.

NOT GUILTY (Triumph—Five Parts—Nov. 29).—The cast: Cyril Scott, Catherine Proctor, Ada Boshell, Mark Ellison and Chas. Hutchison.

Ed Andrews, a young shipping clerk, is in love with Dora Birch, and has as rival Tom Matthews, but wins the girl, much to his mother's satisfaction. A raise in salary hastens their marriage and two years later their baby arrives. Andrews, celebrating the event, goes to the corner bar with George Gardner, his chum, and, after several drinks, Gardner gets into a fight with Jim Matthews, Tom's brother, knocking him down with a blow, Matthew's head striking the pavement, causing his death. George runs away, and Ed bends over Matthews, trying to raise him. The crowd threatens him and he starts to run, but is soon caught. In the morning he is fined for disorderly conduct, and is near freedom when word comes that Matthews is dead, and he is held for murder.

Tom is a ward detective, and four months after the arrest, swears that Jim was killed while resisting highway robbery. Ed is sentenced to death, and the shock kills his wife, his mother taking the child and rearing her. She pleads with the Governor, and in view of the evidence he commutes Ed's sentence to imprisonment for life. His mother tells him of his wife's death, and, with his nerve crushed, he begins his prison life.

Nineteen years later his daughter falls in love with Paul Matthews, son of the man who had sworn away his life. Ed's mother continues her efforts in his behalf, and Gardner, dying in a distant city, tells the truth about the assault. Ed is pardoned and meets his daughter for the

There are Better Pictures than

"The Other Girl"

Many produced before and, surely, better ones to come in the future.

At best, The Other Girl falls short of the future Raver-Thomas standard even though its attractive features make it commercially a worthy offering.

True, it holds out no sensational inducements—"The Other Girl" is modest but the great dramatist, Augustus Thomas, wrote the play for laughing purposes and produced a novelty enjoyed by thousands.

The boundless limitations of the picture have added tenfold to its former appeal and now "The Other Girl" quietly enters the arena.

A YELLOW STREAK (Columbia—Five parts—Dec. 6).—The cast: Lionel Barrymore, Irene Howley, Dorothy Gwynne, J. H. Goldsworthy, Niles Welch, R. A. Bresee, William Cowper, William Davidson, Martin J. Faust, John J. Donough.

"Barry" Dale, the atom, a Wall Street broker, is financially ruined by his perfidious and faithless wife, and her companion, Richard Marvin, another broker, who has posed as Dale's best friend. Disheartened and depressed, Dale goes to his apartment expecting comfort and solace from his wife. Instead he finds her there in the embraces of Marvin. They laugh at him, and Marvin, the stronger of the two men, literally throws Dale out of his own home. He gives him a pistol and tells him the whole affair can best be settled, to every one's satisfaction, if Dale will kill himself.

Dale walks aimlessly through the streets with this end in view. Long after midnight he finds himself on the Brooklyn Bridge, where he observes a girl about to leap into the river. A shout from Dale causes her to turn back and flee. They are mere silhouettes in the dim light, and do not see each other's faces. The girl, another atom in the swirl of human life, is Mary Austin, a child of the tenements, who had planned suicide to escape marrying "Jack" Rader, a gambler, to satisfy a debt her father owed to Rader. After the incident on the bridge "Barry" indifferently wanders to a railroad station and buys a ticket west, as far as his money will carry him. In the far west "Barry" brings up in a little mining town. There he falls in with an outlaw, who is being sought by a sheriff's posse. A few days later, in a lonely mountain trail, the posse closes in on the outlaw. He directs "Barry" to safety, but is killed by the sheriff. A sky-pilot, who had joined them a few hours before, is likewise killed by the posse's bullets. "Barry" hurries them both, and decides to impersonate first one and then the other.

Tom Austin, Mary's brother, is addicted to drink, and Mary succeeds in inducing his employers in New York to send him west. Subsequently, arrangements are made for Mary and her father to join Tom in the west. Disguised as the outlaw, "Barry" holds up the coach that Mary and her father are riding in. Struck by the girl's beauty, and her plea not to rob them, "Barry" grants the request for a kiss. Afterward, as the sky-pilot, "Barry" and Mary become well acquainted in the mining town, where she and her father have taken over a small hotel. "Jack" Rader, the gambler, turns up and compromises Tom Austin in a hold-up. He offers to clear him if Mary will consent to marry him. Mary tells the sky-pilot of her predicament. "Barry," disguised as the outlaw, saves Tom and shoots the gambler in a pistol battle. When the sheriff's posse arrives he is disguised as the minister.

With renewed strength and ample funds, "Barry" returns to New York and seeks out Marvin and his wife. He throws Marvin into the street and returns the revolver to him, with the same advice he received a year before. Back west Mary waits for the sky-pilot's return, standing every night on a little bridge that spans a mountain stream. She is about to despair of his return, when she hears his voice. She turns and sees the same silhouette she saw on the Brooklyn Bridge, and for the first time both know they met that night.

THE HOUSE OF TEARS (5 parts—Dec. 13).—The cast: Mrs. Alice Collingwood and Gail Collingwood, her daughter (Emily Stevens); Robert W. Collingwood (Henry Bergman); Henry Thoms (co-respondent, alias Edward North (Walter Hitchcock); Anna Gail's nurse (Madge Tyrone); John, a butler in the Collingwood home (George Brennan).

In The House of Tears, there lived Robert Collingwood, his wife, Alice Collingwood, and their baby girl, Gail. In the courts Robert has been granted a decree of divorce and the custody of little Gail, upon evidence that Mrs. Collingwood has been found in a compromising situation with Henry Thorne, and her subsequent admissions. Once free, Mrs. Collingwood openly accepts the attention of Thorne, and they soon marry and go west to live. Thorne takes up the life of a prospector in a mining community, and his consistent failure proves a source of discouragement to him and unhappiness to the woman. Collingwood, his mind upset by domestic troubles, loses his fortune in Wall street manipulation, and becomes a raving maniac. He drives his employees out of the office, and then goes to his home intending to kill his little daughter. In a chase up a staircase, he falls and is killed. An annuity he had settled on the baby when she was born, and which has been saved from the financial wreck, is the means of her education.

Fifteen years later Thorne, who has been plodding along in the west, meeting with little success, wins $15,000 at faro in a desperate plunge one night. He has become tired of the woman he won by intrigue and his sudden prosperity turns his head. He arranges to go back to Wall street to flirt with fortune, and he tells his wife he will not take her along, but will leave enough money for her to live on. She is horrified at the prospects of his desertion, and at the point of a revolver, demands his money. In a struggle which ensues, she is seriously wounded. Thorne leaves, believing his wife dead by the shot from her own hand.

Back in Wall street, Thorne electrifies other operators by his phenomenal rise to affluence, and he becomes the elegant man of wealth he aspired to be. Gail Collingwood, who has now grown to womanhood, is known under the name of Alice Gail, and employed as a reporter on the Evening News. She is sent to interview Thorne, who is now known as "Edward North." They become very friendly and their acquaintance soon ripens into love. In due time their betrothal is announced. Out in the mining town Thorne's wife has recovered, and she resolves to come back to the scenes of her youth. She is seeking Thorne in the great city, when Gail, who is riding in an automobile loaned her by her fiancee, runs down her mother, a poor, ill-clad, wandering woman. The mother is slightly injured, and she recognizes her daughter. They plan to make "North" face his past. Gail sends word for "North" to come to her home, as she is in trouble. When he arrives he is brought face to face with his wife, whom he believed to be dead. "North" becomes frenzied from fear, as he thinks the sad faced woman is an apparition, and he flees from the house. The apparition continues to haunt him, and in a half-crazed mood he drives his automobile blindly through the streets, ending by running off a bridge when he is hurled to death.

Mother and daughter, re-united, then seek a happier existence.

THE PARSON SLIPS A COG (Atla—Rel. Wk. of Nov. 22).—Rev. I. O. You and two of the female congregation of his church have been attending a convention in a certain town, at the conclusion of which they start for home on the boat. On the same boat is a female vaudeville company which is accompanied by a few college boys bent on a good time. The parson becomes interested in the youngsters, much to the astonishment and indignation of the two Deaconesses. The parson sneaks away from the women and goes to the upper deck of the boat, where the youngsters are dancing and having the time of their lives.

Upon his approach the girls get him mixed in the festivities, and he, being missed by the women of his party, is immediately sought by them, but is hidden by the girls until the women get out of the way. The boat stops at Ocean Grove for two hours and everybody goes ashore for recreation. The parson gets into the merry company again, but is soon missed and the women find him on a bench in the grove with one of the girls and sneak him on board the boat. After he has been knocked over by swings, merry-go-rounds, etc., the parson is about all in when the boat reaches its destination. The college boys bid goodby to the girls, as they are going back on the boat's return trip. The parson is seen at home, swearing "Never Again."

THE ALSTER CASE (Essanay)—5 Parts—Dec. 6).—The cast: Bryant Washburn, John H. Cossar, Ruth Stonehouse, Anne Leigh, Louise Crolius, Betty Scott, Arthur W. Bates, Roderick LaRoque.

Miss Cornelia Alster, a wealthy spinster, secretly makes George Swan, a poor lawyer's clerk, executor of her estate. That night, she goes to a theatre and returns home unexpectedly, discovers her two wards, Beatrice and Linda, in, what she thinks, is an affair with two men.

As a matter of fact, Linda is fighting Keith, the butler, who is using some knowledge of her to force her to give him money. Beatrice is entertaining her sweetheart, Allen Longstreet, a young inventor.

Miss Alster waits in her room, determined to see who the men are. The next day she is found murdered. Trask, a noted detective, is put on the trail. He runs down five clues, the last leading to the criminal. It is a baffling story and an unexpected denouement. The criminal is in the cast. Which one do you think committed the crime?

CIRCLE FILM CORPORATION.

THOU SHALT NOT KILL (Five-parts, Dec. 13.—The cast: Rose Coghlan, Chas. Coghlan and others.

Judge Meredith, of Lexington, Kentucky, has two sons, Harry and Douglas, Harry, the younger, being a Civil Engineer, and Douglas, the elder, an Attorney-at-law.

At the opening of the story, Judge Meredith returns home in the evening, after having sentenced to death James Wilmot, who has been found guilty. Shortly afterwards, Harry, the younger son, goes to the mountains of Kentucky on his first job, to survey a branch railroad. He falls in love with a mountain girl and is secretly married to her. He continues his habit of drinking, which causes much friction with Zeke, the father of the girl. A tramp visits the mountains and is arrested for trespassing upon the neighborhood. Out of revenge, he sets fire to the neighbor's place. Meantime, the little mountain girl wife has written to Judge Meredith that his son is drinking and not attending to his work, which causes the Judge to send his son, Douglas, to the mountain to correct the younger brother.

Harry has an altercation with his wife's father in the presence of the Sheriff and Deputy, and threatens to "get even," with his father-in-law. At this time, the Sheriff appoints Zeke, and his son Jack, deputies to assist him in tracking and arresting the tramp for his crime. A little later, Harry Meredith returns to the cabin in hopes of seeing his young wife and sets his shot gun, which was presented him by his brother. Harry bears his father-in-law approaching and conceals himself. Zeke coming upon the tramp attempts to arrest him and is fatally shot. The tramp escapes through the under-brush. Harry goes to the assistance of his father-in-law who dies in his arms. In this position, his own shot-gun still hot from the discharge of its load, Harry is found by the Sheriff, and is taken into custody on the charge of murder. The young wife also witnesses the incriminating scene, and suffers the agonies of torment between her love for her reckless young husband and her duty as a Kentucky mountain girl to avenge her father's death.

Meantime, Harry's mother, while attending a social function, has a premonition that her boy is in danger, and goes to the mountains to see him. She learns that he is accused of murder and telegraphs her husband, the Judge, to come at once. That same night the Judge has read in the newspaper that the man, James Wilmont, has been found to be absolutely innocent by the death-bed confession of the real murderer and immediately upon the head of this he receives his wife's telegram that his own son is accused of murder. He leaves at once to join her. Harry Meredith is tried and convicted upon circumstantial evidence, which apparently leaves no room for doubt that he committed the crime, is sentenced to death and is executed. The tramp having been crushed between freight cars, sends for the Priest, on the night of the day of the execution, confesses the crime, thus proving Harry Meredith innocent.

A MIRROROID SCREEN

Because Mirroroid is not an experiment, but a demonstration of actual facts—results are certain. Mirroroid has been on the market for over seven years. A constant leader, a universal and accepted standard, by which perfect projection is judged.

Out of a total of eleven metalized screens in Atlantic City, N. J., nine are Mirroroids. You can readily see why we sold over 9,000 screens in seven years—from Nov. 1st to Nov. 26, 1915, we made, sold and shipped 162 Mirroroid Screens. This is an acknowledgment of Quality and Efficiency—the keynotes of Mirroroid superiority.

OUR NEW 1916 MIRROROID SCREEN

The Screen with the Black Back—now ready for shipment—is a revelation, an improvement of over 50 per cent. over our previous White Back product.

Why not drop us a postal? Let us send you our large Free Samples. Test same any way you desire. Let us show you why a Mirroroid is the only metalized screen on earth that will eliminate that fade away—that hazy, out-of-focus effect and eye-strain on a close up or angle view so peculiar to other screens.

Mirroroid is made in two finishes—A, Medium; B, Rough Matte—three Tints—Silver White, Pale Gold and Silver Flesh. Sold the world over at 36 1/9 cents a square foot, $3.25 a square yard.

NOTE—Shipments made one hour after order is received.

Are You Represented in South America?

Two gentlemen thoroughly familiar with the film business will leave for South America about January 1st. They intend to locate permanently and devote their entire time to the film business.

They desire to communicate immediately with reputable film manufacturers, machine and accessory companies seeking representation in this country.

They are financially able to handle any proposition. They will either represent or purchase rights for South America.

Kindly communicate or arrange for a personal interview either in New York or Chicago, at once.

Akron Has Prettiest and Most Modern Photo-Play Theatre In United States

In the opening of The Strand Theatre, Akron claims to have one of the prettiest and most modern photo-play theatres in the United States.

The Strand is called the "Theatre Beautiful." It's all of that and more too. This splendid amusement house, the pride of the best and most prosperous city in Ohio, is the last word in the art of motion picture architecture.

The Strand in all its appointments, was built with an eye strictly to the comfort and convenience of its patrons. In planning the theatre "safety first" was the predominating idea. With ample exits provided for, the architect started in along lines of beauty and convenience, he

Easy Money for Theatres

Extra Profits You Are Not Now Getting

$360.45 the First Month from Butter-Kist Corn Popper

You have the ideal crowd to buy—you should be getting the profits. Scores of motion picture theatres are now reaping a year-'round harvest of spot-cash sales from BUTTER-KIST Pop-Corn in addition to regular paid admissions.

Profits $25 to $60 weekly. One theatre took in $360.45 the first month. Smallest theatres selling $4 to $5 worth of BUTTER-KIST in the evenings alone. Remember that every dollar you take in is seventy cents profit.

BUTTER-KIST Corn Popper

This famous money-maker requires only 26 in. x 32 in. of space. You have plenty of room for it in lobby, foyer or down near stage.

Runs itself and turns out 1 bag in 48 seconds—$3.75 per hour!

Pops and butters automatically—each morsel evenly. No watching, no work, no stock to carry, no muss. Just take in the money!

Superbly built of plate glass, with mahogany, oak or white enamel cabinet, metal parts of polished aluminum and nickel.

Everybody Wants It!

"Everybody's" asking for famous BUTTER-KIST—the big, fluffy, white flakes—crisp, crackling and clean—evenly buttered and piping hot—untouched by hands. The finest flavory, savory treat that ever tantalized a mortal's palate—with a coaxing fragrance that makes people hungry for BUTTER-KIST. Its delicious flavor brings people back to your theatre. Records show big increase in attendance.

Pay From Your Sales

A small payment down brings you the BUTTER-KIST Corn Popper with all privileges included. Then it pays for itself in short order. Let us show you.

"The Little Gold Mine" FREE

Handsome new book, "The Little Gold Mine," gives facts, figures, proof of profits and photographs. Sent FREE. Write for it at once—you lose $4 to $16 in sales every day you delay.

Advantages of Wotton Rexolux to rectify alternating current at line voltage into direct current at arc voltage, are known by up-to-date operators.

Its vertical construction reduces vibration and noise to a minimum. Its armature stands on end and is supported on ball bearings. The ball bearings greatly reduce the friction load which in part accounts for the high efficiency of Rexolux.

Its vertical construction allows of its installation in the operating room, a space only 15 inches square being required. Line loss is consequently reduced to a minimum, cost of installation is low, the machine is directly under the eye of the operator, and the operator is enabled to vary his amperage at will.

Please and Be Pleased

Your patrons are pleased to purchase buttered popcorn, that tender, crispy, large-grained, toothsome kind, that's popped in a Kingery, and the leaving with you of nickels and dimes will be a secondary consideration. To you 3c. of every nickel taken in is clear profit.

Can you afford to pass up a chance to add at this rate to your receipts, or are you content to count the empty sacks you find in your house, each of which represents a 3c. profit that really belonged to you?

This announcement is directed to owners who are looking to the future, the far-sighted managers; those who put the business on the high plane it is today, and whom we will be pleased to fully inform concerning the possibilities—profits afforded by buttered popcorn.

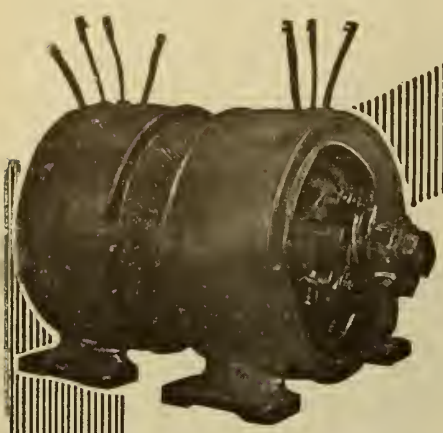
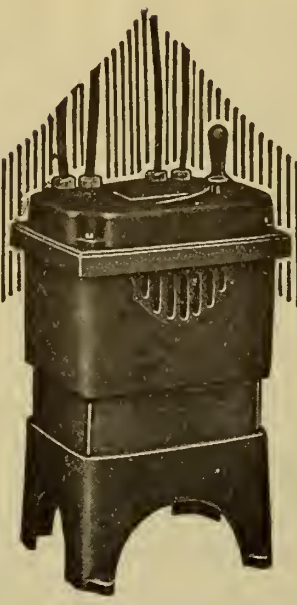
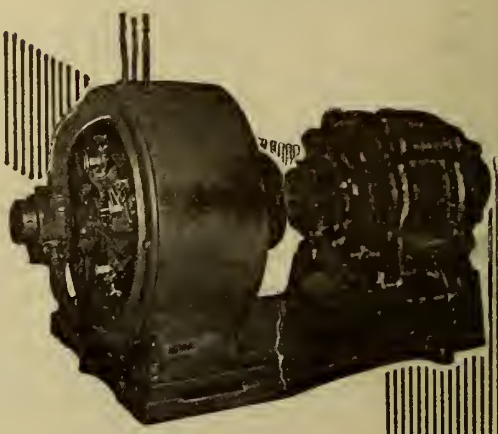
BETTER LIGHT LESS CURRENT



The DC Compensarc lowers the voltage of a direct current supply to that required at the lamp without needless waste.



The AC Compensarc cuts ⅔ from your lighting bill if you use alternating current.



The AC to DC Compensarc will transform alternating into direct current and reduce the voltage at the same time without needless waste.

No matter what current you have---Alternating or Direct---or what voltage or frequency, one of the will enable you to secure a light that will give those clear, bright pictures that everybody now demands.

What's the use of paying extra money for special screens, projecting machines, and first run films and then spoil the whole result with poor light? With the Fort Wayne Compensarcs you can get any kind of light you want regardless of the kind or quality of your current supply.

The Compensarcs will give you

STEADY LIGHT. No flickering, no sputtering, even when changing intensities or from one machine to another.

WHITE LIGHT. No yellow streaks, no ghosts.

BRIGHT LIGHT. Three times the light with two-thirds the current.

They are safe, efficient, easy to operate, fool proof and reliable.

Compensarcs are so commonly found in motion picture theatres that many people now call all current saving and transforming devices by that name.

The Misleading Lady Bares the Naked, Savage Soul of Man

Edna Mayo

We are savages under the skin.

Scratch the veneer of civilization and you bare the naked soul of man.

This is the theme of "THE MISLEADING LADY"—the story of primitive passions, of cave man methods introduced into modern society.

A girl, blinded by ambition for the stage, leads a man to bare his love for her before jesting friends, to prove her dramatic ability.

The victim is stung to the quick, but he is not the man to brook so cruel and heartless a jest.

His has been the large, free life of the open, life lived in the raw.

He kidnaps the girl, takes her to a mountain lodge, chains her to the floor.

He domineers over her, browbeats her.

She hates him, but is awed by his overpowering mastery.

His reckless daring, his brute force win her admiration, but pride will not let her yield.

One day, goaded by his deliberate taunts, she fells him with a blow.

The woman instinct is aroused.

The mothering love for the helpless comes to play.

The man child is hers to care for.

And a great love is born.

HENRY B. WALTHALL and EDNA MAYO make this photoplay one of fascinating intensity.

Adapted by H. S. Sheldon from the stage success of Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey. Directed by A. Berthelet.

One Hundred Dollars Quick For a Name

THE UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY desires to secure immediately, the very best name for a new brand of feature film plays, these plays to be the very finest of their kind ever filmed, and to the person who sends in the most appropriate name on or before MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th, the UNIVERSAL will PAY ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($100) IN SPOT CASH. The UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY will release this new brand of features under the brand name that is chosen from the names sent in.

SHOULD MORE THAN ONE PERSON SEND IN THE EXACT SAME NAME CHOSEN BY THE UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO. EACH PERSON WILL RECEIVE $100.

In sending in your name suggestion for this new brand, bear in mind these several important points: first: this new brand will be of a class and character which will be adequately described as distinctive moving picture achievements. The name MUST BE SHORT and names composed of a single syllable will be given preference over names containing more than the one syllable. The name must lend itself to several things, i. e., the adaptability in trade mark designing—to psychological advertising possibilities and most of all, IT MUST BE SIMPLE AND EASILY PRONOUNCED so as to be EASILY REMEMBERED.

The name must carry a certain punch to it—must personify CLASS AND QUALITY in its very highest form and must have something about it that will clearly distinguish this new brand from the ordinary brand names. The title, after it has been chosen by the officials of the UNIVERSAL, will be announced in all the leading moving picture trade-papers, together with the name of the person who suggested it. You may send in one name or a hundred names. The number of names you suggest makes no difference—but, KEEP IN MIND, WHAT IS WANTED, from the above description. Your suggestions for brand names MUST REACH THIS OFFICE NO LATER THAN MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th.

Paramount Pictures

bring a large clientele to your theatre.

PARAMOUNT SERVICE helps you to increase the patronage and to keep the public pleased.

This is because PARAMOUNT has been thought out step by step—first the best program obtainable, then an abundant variety of advertising for the exhibitor's use, backed up by a national advertising campaign.

All of this has been done with the one purpose of enabling the exhibitor to give a consistently high class performance and to draw the better class of patrons to his theatre—a large per cent. of whom have not yet begun to attend motion picture shows.

Every successful business in the world has been established by systematic, persistent, upbuilding work. That is the way the PARAMOUNT exhibitor is building his business.

You can do the same thing.

THE LITTLE GIRL IN THE BIG MOON

She sat all alone in the big moon and she was very, very lonely.
Her mother had forbidden her to see the only playmate she had.
She looked at the blinking lights of the far away city where her mother promised her some day she would find wealth and position.
But her heart was sad, for it was cold in the moon and she longed for the warmth of love.
Then the rich man her mother was seeking asked her to come and play.
She didn't know he wouldn't play fair, but her playmate did. He was watching and when the rich man hurt her so that she cried out with pain, he came and drove him away.
Then he whispered:
"I love you."
And she was very happy at last.
This beautiful story of a girl's love, so nearly wrecked by a vampire of society, is found in Essanay's five act photoplay —

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

The New Stupendous Railroad Film Novel

featuring

Helen Holmes

The Fearless Film Star

Here you have the biggest, the most stupendous profit-pulling production, that ever has been presented.

"The Girl and The Game" tops them all and stands supreme — the pinnacle of motion picture achievement. Fifteen amazing two-act chapters—one chapter released each week beginning Dec. 27th. Drive home this point: "The Girl and The Game" means fifteen consecutive weeks of crowded houses—fifteen consecutive weeks of big box-office success.

Thrill After Thrill at Lightning Speed

Each chapter of this huge production is fairly alive with thrills—the big, red-blood thrills and the dare-devil action for which fearless Helen Holmes is famous. No man on earth is so capable of directing a thrill production as J. P. McGowan, who directs "The Girl and The Game." No living author is so capable of writing thrills as Frank H. Spearman, the great railroad author who wrote "The Girl and The Game." Each chapter is a distinct production—a distinct triumph in itself. The chapters are bound together by a strong skein of romance, love and suspense which carries over from chapter one to the last scene of chapter fifteen.

George T. Pardy, in the Morning Telegraph, says:

"'Barbara Frietchie' is a tender romance of considerable power, permeated with the glamor of olden-time courtesy and pretty sentiment. A better role for the enhancement of the charms of little Mary Miles Minter, who plays the heroine, could not have been selected. Her piquant, girlish beauty is seen to the best advantage and she stands revealed as an actress of no small ability. * * * The piece is well-directed throughout, the skirmishing between the troops and the spectacular views of the marching soldiers being faultlessly handled. Accuracy of detail is manifested in the picture, and the photography leaves nothing to be desired. 'Barbara Frietchie' is a notable addition to the Metro programme and promises to record a well-deserved success."

Facts and Comments

FROM data furnished to us by our friends and readers and from our own personal knowledge, there appears to be about half a dozen cities in the United States in which the exhibitors are strongly organized. In these cities they enjoy to the fullest the immense benefits of organization. In the rest of the country conditions are simply deplorable. Never was the need of an exhibitors' organization greater than today. The influence of the exhibitors upon the industry ought to be about a hundred times greater than it is. We believe that a powerful exhibitors' organization is absolutely needed, not alone for the exhibitors, but for the benefit of the industry as a whole. Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.

OH, THE vagaries of censorship. Now Dallas, Texas, steps into the ring with a wonderful censorship ordinance allowing the censoring of pictures on their "general reputation." How simple are the statesmen of Dallas and how thorough their methods. The mail used to bring us a lot of news about freak censorship, but lately there has been a little improvement. On no great question has public sentiment veered around to sound sense as it has on the problem of official and legalized censorship. We have a profound faith in the essential common sense of our great democracy. Censorship is always galvanized into life by reformers working for uplift and incidental personal profit; it has no genuine life and it will never again have a place in a country which trusts itself to the power of public opinion.

EVERY day we receive sample programs from exhibitors who have practically demonstrated the value of a well-printed and well-edited program. The value of such a program was often pointed out and emphasized in our department, "Advertising for Exhibitors," and it is gratifying to know that the department is so carefully and profitably read by the exhibitors. One thing is well worth bearing in mind: The more originality there is in your program the better. The "stock-program" with your own announcement in the middle may be all right enough, but it is not an ideal arrangement. In these days of close competition it is entirely possible that the detail of the best program may win out.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will publish a Spanish edition, the first issue of which will be ready for mailing on the twentieth of this month. This Spanish edition will be published once a month. The final forms will close on the 15th day of each month preceding the date of publication. All advertising copy should be in the New York office on the tenth of the month to allow for proper translation.

The primary object in issuing the Spanish edition of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is to facilitate in every possible way our business relations with the sister republics of South America. The film and supply men of this country are interested in the vast field which is opening for them in South America. To make this field more accessible, to promote a better understanding between the peoples of the two great continents of our hemisphere, will be the guiding motives of our Spanish publication. We earnestly invite the co-operation of all film men who are interested in the great South American market. A complete summary of the purposes and the departments of our Spanish edition will appear in our next issue.

WE surely do not want to mention any names, but on behalf of the readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD we want to urge producers not to give us any pictures in which some woman star of a past generation is made to take the part of a young heroine or ingenue. The motion picture camera is pitiless and abhors misrepresentation. To see a woman long past the heyday of her youth and beauty go through a process of passionate courtship is, to say the very least, painful to the audience. No reputation can outlive time—not on the living stage for a certainty. No art can replace the charm and fire of youth, and to see an old lady simpering or cavorting about the stage or screen will tempt the gentler sex to pity and the stronger sex to profanity.

Soul Drama*

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

A LITTLE moving-picture show itself is the human brain. The sensitive film is that part of it constantly receiving and developing impressions from without. When these impressions become fixed in our dark room, the cranial laboratory, they are canned and put away for future use. They can be taken out of the storehouses of memory and projected before the mind when needed, and on very short notice. We can even run two shows at the same time by recalling two different lines of events and thus put them in what might be called juxtaposition. This helps us in making comparisons and contrasts, so that we arrive at conclusions from past experience.

We are really at a little private exhibition of this kind when we do our THINKING. The experiences we have passed through are not there, only the impressions made by those experiences, and we review them in a critical sort of a way, even to the sensations we have felt under certain circumstances. We often review these educational releases, and we have acquired the habit of studying them carefully in order to use them to some individual or general advantage.

There is nothing particularly unselfish about our employing all that we know for common benefit. We have long ago found that we must cooperate to exist under favorable conditions. We cannot very well do without one another. To preserve the unit, we must preserve the community. Most of us have enough intelligence to know this, and that is why we insist on our rights and feel a contempt for the man who wants to take all the benefits without assuming a just share of mutual responsibility. Therein lies the secret of SOCIAL INSTINCT.

We feel that we have lost something contained in the sum of common benefit and we suffer because we are deprived of what we crave, or what we consider our due, and this pain starts a disturbance within us, often a secret one, which we recognize as one kind of emotion, usually manifested by a greater or less degree of excitement. Another kind of emotion is that which looks forward with pleasurable anticipation, the hope which may sustain us in our darkest hours. We can actually enjoy imaginary gratifications, hence the well-known saying that anticipation is usually better than realization.

Out of these emotions, quite as well as from animal instincts, grow the powerful desires which may sway our lives at times, even cause us to break the social compact. The half-blind desire to attain an ideal love, the absorbing desire to accumulate wealth and power, these constitute tremendous forces within the individual, forces which may desperately conflict with the social and moral part of our natures, battling throughout the whole course of life against reason, sympathy and affection. This is the soul drama, none the less intense that it is hidden.

One great drama of the soul, if not the greatest, is that of a strong general, a conqueror of men, unable to conquer himself, Othello. A man of lofty pride and high sentiments, he is hated by Iago because of his unconscious assumption of superiority, and led on by "trifles light as air" to a state of emotional weakness where those trifles become "confirmations strong as holy writ." He becomes racked with doubt, distraught with jealousy, maddened with passion, over a handkerchief, raging like an imbecile against all the world, a caricature of himself when "his occupation's gone."

Another great soul drama, possibly the most profound ever written, is that of the incomparable Hamlet. Probably more has been written about the man who deemed it wise to "know thyself" than of any other fictional character, maybe because many brilliant men feel like Coleridge —"I have a smack of Hamlet myself, if I may say so." It is claimed that Shakespeare depicted himself in this wondrous soul revelation. He depicted a man much like the rest of us in one seldom-confessed respect—we are creatures of two opposing wills struggling for mastery.

There is in the commonplace hero of fiction an almost constant exercise of the will on the side of higher sentiments as against the lower impulse or desire. In real life the impulse which prevails is not always the best one, and from obedience to the prevailing desire we fall into errors of judgment and conduct. Knowing the right course to pursue, why do we ever do wrong? From a comprehensive viewpoint it looks very much as though habits judiciously formed in youth prompt us to do right spontaneously, without any effort of that doubtful force known as "will," for it is easy to become the slave of a habit.

Othello's criminal act was not that of a great mind, but of a mind so weak that it permitted another to completely misdirect it. Yielding constantly to the promptings of Iago and to his own base suspicions, a mad desire to kill acquired dominence of his soul. Hence the criminal action of murdering an innocent and loving wife can only be regarded as the expression of a protracted course of criminal thought. A man is held responsible for such acts by society, though he may have temporarily lost the power of self-control, because he is a dangerous weakling unable to resist his worst impulses.

The character of Hamlet is a nobler one because of, rather than in spite of, its vacillation. Nursing a deep sense of injury, with a father's murder to avenge, he falters because he recognizes a Higher Will than his own as the source of power he can exert. His clear measurement of himself stirs within him a loftier measure of his Creator. A sweet moral purity within him, combined with a strong sense of eternal justice, brings about a terrible soul struggle, now one desire, now another, prevailing in his mind. The ideas he derives from reflection, however, gradually yield to his passion for revenge until he becomes the sport of intellectual vagaries and the ultimate slave of a murderous impulse.

It will appear that the soul drama, while confined to an individual field, is very largely a matter of external influence. Each of us has a volitional power, it is true, but it may be turned into bad channels quite as well as to good account. A great deal depends upon the direction in which it is employed. We may be inclined to benevolence; we may be aware of a conscience; we may respond nobly to the suggestions of affection; yet our attention may be so habitually fixed on the gratification of selfish propensities, such as making money, that our powers of mind may be used only for hypocrisy and dissimulation.

In depicting the human soul, it might as well be assumed at the outset that there is an abuse as well as use for its gifts and acquirements. It will not do to assume that our propensities and passions are evil in themselves, but only so in misdirection and excessive gratification. Strong emotions may easily give force to a character of high ideals.

*Copyright, 1915, Louis Reeves Harrison.

At It Again

By W. Stephen Bush.

A PROFESSIONAL reformer, who no doubt is yearning to see his name mentioned here, is circularizing the press of the country on the question of federal censorship. Our friend needs something like a profitable agitation to keep him going and to advertise himself.

In his latest effusion our reformer, whose name we will once more carefully avoid mentioning, points to an alleged utterance or rather to a series of alleged utterances attributed to a prominent and reputable film producer. This producer had contemplated with some indignation what he believed to be the success of "risque" pictures. Hence, in his house organ, he remonstrated with the exhibitors who read his paper. He intimated rather strongly that the majority (60 per cent., to be exact) of the exhibitors whom he had reached favored "risque" pictures.

To do justice to the situation let us consider two things: In the first place, our producer spoke rhetorically rather than accurately when he stated that "he had asked the exhibitors of America" about their preferences. The circulation of his house organ does not reach all "the exhibitors of America." A majority of his readers do not by any manner of means constitute a majority of the exhibitors of America. Our reforming friend in Washington (name omitted purposely) of course never stopped to consider this fact, and, as we know him, he would have been quite capable of suppressing the fact even if he knew it. If a majority of the readers of The Moving Picture World had voted in favor of other than clean pictures the result might well have given cause for serious alarm. Happily, we have overwhelming evidence right here in this office that the vast majority of motion picture exhibitors want none but clean pictures and that the vast majority of producers want to make none but clean pictures. No small measure of the pervasive influence of The Moving Picture World and no small measure of the general confidence it enjoys are due to its championship of clean pictures. The columns of The Moving Picture World reflect the life, the standards and the ethics of the industry, and this applies to the advertising sections no less than to the editorial portion.

The producer who, in this trenchant and rather reckless way, berated the exhibitor who was blinded by the temporary success of a competitor showing "risque" pictures has been one of the pioneers in the industry. He has achieved an enviable success in every branch of the industry and he has an enviable reputation as a friend of clean pictures. Indeed, he has lately gone on record as saying that he would sooner earn his daily bread as a lowly whitewing than as a maker of immoral pictures. Did our reforming friend in Washington know all this? He either did or he did not. If he did, he should have judged the producer's words in the light of his reputation and in the light of his past performances. If he did not: he was ignorant of that which he should have known. In either event he should have been fair and honest.

The producer has since the publication of the article in the house organ received a large number of letters which have convinced him that the majority of his readers want clean pictures. I saw some of these letters myself and found them to be but an echo of the hundreds that are on file in the office of The Moving Picture World. Mr. Laemmle says his purpose was to wake up the readers of his house organ, and there is not the slightest reason to doubt his sincerity.

The whole affair shows how important a part the publicity department is in a big film corporation. The enemies of the picture are constantly on the alert and we should not put any weapons in their hand. Vigorous and unconventional advertising is all right, but let us cut the recklessness out.

Prosecute the Panders

By W. Stephen Bush.

WE HAVE heard of an organized effort within the ranks of the industry to prosecute to the full limit of the law every man or group of men who try to use the screen for immoral purposes. We earnestly hope that something will come of this effort. It is needed. This does not mean that the motion picture producers need looking after by the police. The fact is that all but a most insignificant number are far above reproach and are turning out pictures which are entirely free from moral objections.

The trouble lies in this: No matter how insignificant the number of these producers, they cannot be considered negligible. Their power of evil is great and must be taken seriously. We do not believe that censorship is the right remedy. It is unfair and unreasonable to inflict disgrace, hardship and monetary loss upon the great body of reputable producers because there are two or three men without conscience and without regard for law following the same business. The publishers have some disreputable men in their ranks, so have other professions. These elements are, of course, constantly being weeded out.

The objectionable and unscrupulous producers who do not hesitate to pollute the screen and corrupt the minds of the young can be weeded out in only one way: The law now on the statute books must be invoked to prosecute them. The Moving Picture World has recently refused an advertisement of a "feature" the producers and promoters of which openly and brazenly advertise it as an appeal to indecency. We cannot soil the pages of this paper with anything like a description of this production. Suffice it to say that the style of advertising used in connection with the picture plainly indicates its revolting and offensive character. It is altogether likely that the advertisement if brought to the attention of the proper authorities would bring about prompt action.

The decent producers ought to combine at once and start a criminal prosecution of the offensive feature. The men who were convicted of maintaining an indecent show on Broadway because they showed a so-called "white-slave" film are in about the same class as the promoters of this film of filth. The entire industry is attacked by such shameless productions. The industry as such must defend itself against such attacks. Without loss of time the decent elements in the motion picture field ought to get in touch with the authorities for the suppression of these immoral films. It is not only necessary to suppress such films and have the law confiscate them; it is equally necessary to prosecute the men who were connected with producing, distributing, advertising or exhibiting them.

It seems to us that the newspaper, and especially the trade paper, which advertises such filth is equally guilty with the producers, and a prosecution ought to include the publications which for a few dollars are willing to prostitute their columns for the benefit of the panders.

The prosecution and conviction of the promoters and advertisers of films which are evidently intended to appeal to indecency would do more to stop the evil than a thousand sermons and editorials. It is the duty of the decent elements in the ranks of the industry to take action and to make a drastic example of the panders who would not care a rap if they ruined the industry provided they succeeded in getting away with a little dirty money.

Horsley's Animal Features

The Ambitious Producer Tells of His Jungle on the Coast—What Animals Can Do Before the Camera—Denial of Foolish Rumors.

By W. Stephen Bush.

ESSENTIALLY a mobilizer—that's what I would call David Horsley. What other name is more suitable for a man who is in perpetual transit between the Atlantic Coast and the Pacific Coast, who is oscillating in contented energy between two such antipodal centers as Bayonne, N. J., and Los Angeles, Cal. David mobilizes himself and then reaches everybody who is within an orbit of ten miles. As a transmitter of working waves David is 'way up in G.

David Horsley.

Mr. Horsley has written his share of moving picture history; he has had his share of adventure and experience; he is right in among the vanguard of the progressives today, and he is chock full of human interest all the time. Horsley, therefore, is a very tempting target for the interviewer. At the Astor the other day David talked most entertainingly of his acting animals, his talented bears, his refined jaguars, his mimicking elephants, his unsophisticated kangaroos, his plaintive but intelligent pumas, and above all things of his performing lions and their patient and daring trainers.

The School in the Jungle.

"The old plant here in Bayonne is running itself pretty well, but the new venture out on the coast, like all new ventures with a little ambition in them, requires constant care and intimate supervision. Why, even now question comes to me after question by way of telegrams from Los Angeles. You know I have five acres right in the heart of Los Angeles and my jungle is located there. Now, about my jungle. It's a wonderful thing. For one thing I am able to keep the animals within the proper focus any time I want them. The jungle is divided into six sections with the eye of the camera in the center. The jungle, of course, provides the proper background for each animal scene and no picture you know requires more of a real and correct atmosphere than an animal picture. Of course I am now speaking of the animal scene in a drama. The jungle was built after a design of my own and includes a moat among other things. This moat keeps the animals handy and provides a protection for the players in case of emergency. Oh, yes, it has proved its practical value. A short time ago Frank Montgomery temporarily forgot the warning signs that are posted up about the jungle and found himself face to face with our most ferocious leopard. Mr. Montgomery assured us after the meeting that he had none but the kindliest feelings toward the leopard, but unfortunately the leopard took a very suspicious view of Frank and without waiting for further developments Frank jumped into the moat. We soon answered his cry for help and rescued him. The incident gave rise to a lot of foolish and exaggerated rumors. People began to say that I was feeding my animals on actors. Please deny these rumors and make the denial as strong as you want to."

What Animals Will Do if Cleverly Trained.

"It will probably please and interest the readers of The Moving Picture World to know that we have developed a set of animals who work wonderfully before the camera. You understand, of course, that not every wild animal makes a good picture actor. There are in every group of lions or bears or jaguars or elephants certain individuals who show an unusual degree of intelligence. These we select and put through a collegiate course and many of them earn their degree I assure you. Take our elephants, for example. They are canny beasts. They will feign being shot in the right fore leg or in the left hind leg or any other portion of their huge anatomy and then limp off with every visible sign of intense suffering. They will charge a man and bear him to the ground, and hearing a shot will stagger, and after a few more shots topple over and play dead. They will pretend killing a man, either with their legs or their trunks or their tusks, and then they will appear to crush the villain in a manner to make the gallery howl with delight, and all the time the supposed victim is as safe as if he were in bed Nor are the elephants alone in this display of animal sagacity. Take our leopards and jaguars for another example. We have two or three now that will stand crouching on the branch of a tree and wait for a horse and rider to get near enough and then spring upon them in such a way that no one will ever believe it's only acting. In this same school we have trained bears to do tricks before the camera that I thought utterly impossible. They will hug and crush a man slowly, and with an appearance of the most intense and terrifying realism. Then they will strike a man dead and walk around him smelling and sniffing, finally dragging the man off to their lair. They will receive a cut with a big hunting knife, just as if it were real, and slowly release their hold on the dead man and turn with savage fury upon their new enemy. Highest, however, in the line of intelligence, I think, we must class the lions. I saw the rehearsal of a scene which I will not likely forget in a hurry. A trainer taking part in a big animal feature is attacked first by one lion and then by two others. He has just succeeded in putting the first animal hors de combat when he is attacked by two other lions and a blood-curdling struggle takes place. I could not believe that it was other than real; the huge cats went for the man first from one side and then from another and one of them actually got his jaws upon the head and shoulders of the trainer. The beasts looked so angry and acted with such fearful fury that I could hardly trust my eyes when a short while afterwards I saw them on the most cordial terms with the man whom they had all but devoured before. Bonavita is my principal lion-trainer, but he has many capable assistants who have been with him for some time. We have reached the acme of realism in campfire scenes where we show the lions prowling around the tents and making off with their prey. I could tell you a most entertaining story about one of our polar bears, who actually disarms a man who attacks him and then breaks in pieces the gun taken from the man. The same bear will allow the hunter to choke a gun down his mouth and then he will give an imitation of a bear gradually losing his strength through the painful process of suffocation.

Comedians Are Not Lacking.

"Yes, we have our comedians, too. Take our cinnamon bear. He is a natural born comedian and fun-maker. I could not begin to describe all the laughable tricks he can do. Whether he understands the purposes of the scenario of which he is part I am not prepared to say, but it almost seems as if he did. Aside from the comedy with animal features we will release some comedies which I believe will mark a new departure in laugh-producing. In our George Ovey comedies the comic star will be the only burlesque character, the rest of the people will all appear normal and ordinary. I think that will really heighten the comedy effect and make the cleverness and the oddities of the comedian stand out in bolder relief. The result, I hope, will be more fun and more laughs. One thing, too, we have learned in comedy producing. It does not pay to get sympathy for anybody in a comedy. The moment you touch the chord of sympathy the source of laughter dries up and you don't need more than a mere drop of sympathy to produce this laughter-killing effect."

Capt. Jack Bonavita.

MISS NESBIT HONORED.

Miriam Nesbitt, Edison star, was tendered a dinner Sunday night by Mary Rider, who has written a number of Edison successes, and Kate Jordan. It was a sort of welcome home dinner as Miss Nesbitt but shortly returned from the West after a prolonged stay. Other guests were Hamilton Revel, Fuller Mellish of the Vitagraph, Russell Smith of the Equitable scenario department, and John Rumsey, well known play broker.

Massachusetts Ball a Record Breaker

Sale of Seats for Successful Third Annual Function of Bay State Exhibitors Stops Ten Hours Before Opening of Doors—Many Film Stars Attend—New York Manufacturers Well Represented—Governor Walsh of Massachusetts Leads Grand March with Clara Kimball Young, and Gets Ovation

THE third annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts was held in the Arena in Boston on the evening of Wednesday, December 1. In the preliminary interest aroused, in attendance, in enthusiasm and in financial as well as social success, it reached high water mark of exhibitors functions. Sharing the honors with as well as extending them to the screen stars was the Governor of the old Bay State, David I. Walsh, who came early, and with his staff remained to the close of the post-terpsichorean banquet in Horticultural Hall. And that hour was at least 4 A. M. The Governor hardly could have received more attention had the whole affair been arranged in his honor. Mayor Curley and a large number of Boston's official representatives also were present.

Nine thousand persons filled the great auditorium. Many of these were from out of town. From Brockton, over thirty miles out, came 250. Lynn, to the north, sent 500. The wide interest was due largely to the popularity contest for the selection of the leaders of the grand march. Altogether it was a great night for the film men and picture public of New England. Incidentally it was an unusual occasion for several score New Yorkers—manufacturers and players—who made the journey on Wednesday, most of them returning the day following. Among the former of these and their representatives were Ad Kessel, Jr., Carl Laemmle, making his first visit to the Hub; William Wright, J. C. Graham, Richard A. Rowland, Lewis J. Selznick, Arthur H. Spiegel, Joe Engel, Samuel Spedon, Arthur James, Harry Reichenbach, James Slevin, L. J. Rubinstein, J. C. Martin, Allen Crossland, Louis Levin, Fred Swett, H. Grossman, and Edward Farrell, formerly of Boston, but just named as district manager of the General Film for the South.

Of popular players there was the largest delegation that ever left New York for a function in a distant city. The very numbers constituted a tribute to the standing of the Massachusetts league among the New York manufacturers. Presented to the enthusiastic picturegoers who crowded the great amphitheater were Clara Kimball Young of the World Film; Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Mary Miles Minter, Valli Valli, Edmund Breese, Grace Valentine, Peggy Hopkins and Jeannette Horton, of Metro; Edwin August, of George Kleine; King Baggot, Ben Wilson, Paul Panzer, Dorothy Phillips and Violet Mersereau of the Universal; Earle Williams, Wally Van, Edith Storey and Mrs. Storey, Virginia Pearson, Grace Cure, Mary Maurice and Hughie Mack of the Vitagraph; Cissy Fitzgerald, Hal Forde, and the Mutual Traveler, Gaumont; Marc MacDermott, Mabel Trunnelle, Edward Earle, and Viola Dana of the Edison; Christine Mayo of the United Film Service; Marguerite Courtot and Mrs. Courtot of the Kalem; Gail Kane of the Equitable; Harris Gordon, Ethyle Cooke, Flo La Badie, Mignon Anderson, Gladys Hulette, Louise Emerald Bates and Morris Foster, of Thanhouser. In Mr. Kessel's party were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Willat, Mrs. Ferdinand Singhi, Rose La Harte, Harry Palmer, Phil. Klein, May Kenney and Ada Bachrach.

The majority of the New Yorkers went out on the 1 o'clock train under the guidance of Captain Charles E. Kimball of the Hanover Film Company. At Providence a reception committee of six, consisting of President E. H. Horstmann, Glover Ware, George Balsdon, A. E. Lord, Frank Vine and Sam Moscow, met the travelers.

There was much "visiting" back and forth during a trip without special feature until an attempt was made to get from the train to the automobiles the committee had provided. The crowds had been permitted to enter upon the platform. So densely massed were the welcoming "fans" that progress became not only difficult but dangerous. Many of the party had trouble in getting down from the cars. The jam on the platform was mild in comparison with the near riot that ensued when the members of the party tried to board the machines in the somewhat narrow driveway in the station. Groups were separated. One woman in the throng was run down but not seriously hurt. Another fainted and was carried by King Baggot and Ben Wilson through the throng to the waiting room. Many of the women members of the contingent had narrow escapes. All were finally got into the cars, many minus their baggage, but all suitcases eventually reached headquarters.

It was close to 10 o'clock before the visitors arrived at the Arena. The Metro delegation, which had left New York on a morning train, had had an elaborate dinner at one large table in the hotel at 7 o'clock. New England's largest auditorium was filled early. There had been no seats on sale after 10 o'clock in the morning. The crowd was impatient to see the players and in spite of the efforts of the committee to stimulate the dancing spirit the waiting thousands would have little of it. There was a burst of applause when "Mother" Mary Maurice of the Vitagraph company was escorted to the elevated platform, the first of the players to receive the greetings of the assemblage. All the others followed in turn. Two powerful lamps and reflectors furnished light for the taking of motion pictures by the Dadmun Company.

The Governor of Massachusetts, David I. Walsh, arrived at the hall before 11 o'clock and was given an ovation. The popular executive had attended two functions before coming to the ball of the picture men. Shortly after midnight he departed for a half hour to keep his fourth engagement of the evening, but returned to lead the grand march. Among the players to be introduced to the Governor was King Baggot. There has been in circulation in Boston a fairly well authenticated story that the governor, as he was presented to the pupils of a certain school, heard this colloquy:

Teacher—Now who will tell me who this gentleman is?
Little Boy—King Baggot.

There was a mutual "sizing up" between the Executive and the player. Each appeared to be satisfied. Later in the evening when the two again met the governor jokingly remarked they should work together in a production and enact a supposedly dual role.

The selection of the leaders of the grand march was the result of a spirited contest of six weeks. The committee left the matter in the hands of the readers of the Boston American. Over two million votes were turned in. They came from all over New England. For the honor of walking with the governor, Clara Kimball Young received 378,933 votes. Mary Pickford had more than a quarter of a million. The other players chosen were Francis X. Bushman, Christine Mayo, Theda Bara, Anita Stewart, Mary Miles Minter, Earle Williams, King Baggot, William Farnum and Crane Wilbur. In the majority of instances the efforts of the accelerators seemed to be centered on the women rather than on the men.

After the floor had been cleared the march proceeded. As the different players passed around the hall they were the recipients of applause from their admirers. Dadmun took pictures of the evolutions. At the conclusion of the march there was a contest conducted by the Thanhouser company, the winner to be given a tryout at the New Rochelle studio. Singularly enough the girl who was later declared the winner was "spotted" by J. A. Eslow, the manager of the Universal exchange. He had never before seen the young woman, but he was impelled to remark to the Thanhouser publicity man: "Here, Rubinstein, you're overlooking a big bet. Get that girl up in front." The choice of the committee, who will be known on the screen—if she reaches it—as Doris Gray, looks like a winner. Although very youthful, she has poise and intelligence as well as good looks.

The success of the ball was due to the skillful work of Samuel Grant, chairman of the committee of arrangements, who was aided by President E. H. Horstmann, and R. W. Drown, secretary, and G. M. Clark, treasurer, of the executive committee. The police detail was the largest for an indoor affair of which there is any record at police headquarters. At and around the Arena there were more than fifty patrolmen and officers.

On the executive and reception committee were H. L. Asher, George Balsdon, W. V. H. Barhydt, S. Bernfield, L. M. Boas, W. H. Bradley, N. N. Brooks, J. C. Butner, J. J. Cahill, H. F. Campbell, V. J. Cohee, L. Dadmun, E. R. Daniels, W. E. Dowling, J. A. Eslow, E. J Farrell, John Gartland, H. A. Gilman, E. R. Gregory, E. W. Helley, H. Hirsch, F. J. Howard, R. M. Kane, Colonel Kincaide, A. E. Lord, J. Lourie, P. F. Lydon, M. J. Lydon, A. H. Mailey, R. D. Marson, Louis Mayer, E. H. McCloskey, E. L. McEvoy, Sam Moscow, F. B. Murphy, J. F. Patton, George Ramsdell, J. W. Raymond, Herman Rifkin, W. E. Spragg, T. Spry, H. G. Segal, H. A. Sivovlos, F. H. Vine, Glover Ware, A. F. Washburn and H. I. Wasserman.

The women's reception committee were Mrs. F. L. P. Brackett, Miss M. H. Brazier, Mrs. A. R. Carroll, Mrs. R. W. Drown, Mrs. J. A. Eslow, Mrs. E. H. Horstmann, Mrs. F. J. Howard, Mrs. A. E. Lord, Mrs. F. B. Murphy and Mrs. E. M. Young.

The trade was represented in the boxes by the Paramount, who occupied four; Union Features (two), Universal (four), Picture Playhouse (two), Photoplay, Eastern Feature Film (two), Pathe (two), Metro (four), Phoenix, Kriterion, Mutual (four), Triangle (four), Kalem, Hearst-Vitagraph News, Nicholas Power (two), Precision (two), Kleine-Edison (two), General Film (four), V-L-S-E (six), United (four), Fox (four), World (four), Mirror (two), American Seating Company, Dadmun, Wurlitzer, Movie Operators' Local 182, and the Boston American (six).

The Banquet.

Two hundred and fifty covers were laid in Horticultural Hall for the entertainment of the guests of the Massachusetts exhibitors. The guest of honor was Governor Walsh, and by his side was Clara Kimball Young, who with the chief executive had led the grand march. During the course of the speaking, a goodly part of which contained complimentary reference to the governor, President Kessel of the New York Motion Picture Corporation casually remarked that next year he expected to be accompanied by a delegation of players, as his firm was bringing east six or eight companies, which would include Roscoe Arbuckle and Mabel Normand, as well as Charlie Chaplin, "who will be with us soon," said Mr. Kessel.

Mr. Selznick aroused interest when he alluded to the close of the term of Governor Walsh. "I don't know what the governor's salary is," he said, "but I will be very glad to double the amount if he will come with us as a leading man." The governor's companion in the march caused a hearty laugh as she naively remarked to the executive: "You know I'd just like to have you for a leading man."

President Horstmann introduced Frank J. Howard as toastmaster. Among those who responded to Mr. Howard's calls were the governor, Clara Kimball Young, Mr. Eslow, Ad. Kessel, Carl Laemmle, Paul Panzer, Christine Mayo, L. J. Rubinstein, King Baggot, C. A. Willat, Earle Williams, Sam Spedon, Mr. Selznick, George Blaisdell, Edwin August, Rose Dugan, Fred Gunning, John Casey, ex-Senator Garland, Marc MacDermott, Samuel Grant and J. C. Graham. Marion Howard Brazier for the Film Club invited the visitors to attend a breakfast that had been arranged in their honor. When a standing toast had been given to the governor he jumped to his feet and responded:

"I want to propose a toast to the largest and greatest business in the world—a toast to the business that does more for the pleasure and happiness of all the people than does any other—the moving picture business [applause]; a toast to the moving picture exhibitors of Boston and Massachusetts, who tonight have given us the best and largest ball we have ever had in Massachusetts."

Three cheers for the governor followed.

New Edison Release Programs

Beginning December 20, One-Reel Subjects Will Be Dropped—Only One Three-Reel on General Film Program.

UNDER the new reorganization plan of the General Film Company, the weekly Edison program will be the release of one three-reel feature put through the regular service of that company, Manager Leonard W. McChesney has just announced. This is contrary to the recently made announcement of the General Film Company which stated that Edison would release a one-reeler on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week and a three-reeler on Friday. Edison's regular program, until this change, was the release of a one-reeler on Wednesday and Saturday, and a three-reel on Friday. The latest and permanent program will release a three-reeler on Friday each week.

Manager McChesney feels that the elimination of the one-reel will allow more time and concentration of effort on a three-reel feature which will, as a result, reflect the best in that length of feature.

This change dates from the week of December 20, and the first release under this plan will be "Blade o' Grass" on Friday, December 24, featuring Leonie Flugrath and Pat O'Malley. Next will be "The Matchmakers," on Friday, the 31st, featuring Sally Crute and William Wadsworth.

In addition the Edison studios will continue to release two five-reelers each month, put through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service. In this service Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott will once again be seen playing together in "The Catspaw," by William Hamilton Osborne, on Wednesday, January 12; Viola Dana and Edward Earle, a new combination, in "The Innocence of Ruth," on Wednesday, January 26; Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness in "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong," on Wednesday, February 19.

Manager McChesney welcomes the new order of things and is enthusiastic about what the open market will do for film betterment and the elimination of the unworthy picture.

Mae Marsh at Work

"Birth of a Nation" Star Will Shortly Present Her First Triangle Picture.

THERE have been more inquiries as to the date of Mae Marsh's first Triangle picture than those for any other star, with the exception of W. S. Hart, Billie Burke, Lillian Gish and DeWolf Hopper, thereby indicating that Miss Marsh is one of the first most popular Triangle players. When she was East about six weeks ago she looked badly and her friends feared she could not play during the early part of the season.

Mae Marsh.

Encouraging news has arrived from the Pacific Coast that Miss Marsh has quite recovered from her indisposition. Consequently she is now hard at work on her first Triangle play, "Hoodoo Ann." Robert Harron is in the leading male role, and others in the cast include Mildred Harris, Pearl Elmore, Lyola O'Connor, Charles Lee, Wilbur Higby, William H. Brown and Elmo Lincoln. The title role is that of a little orphan asylum girl who is adopted into a wealthy family and becomes a sort of modern Cindereila, winning the affections of Jimmy Vance, the son and heir. Granville Warwick is the author of the extremely interesting scenario, and Lloyd Ingraham is making the picture under the supervision of D. W. Griffith. "Hoodoo Ann" will probably be presented at the Knickerbocker theater during the holidays, with release to the country late in January.

PREMIER SCENARIO DEPARTMENT.

C. Edgar Burton has been placed in charge of the scenario department of the Premier program. All scripts, books, plays, etc., must pass his careful scrutiny before receiving consideration.

Mr. Burton brings to this work several years of literary experience, some of it in newspaper and some of it in magazine work, and the last two years have been more closely identified with the motion picture industry.

Premier Program will produce only stories by famous authors and picturizations of novels or famous plays, no original scripts being available at the present time. It is possible that at some future date this policy may be varied, but for the present stories are being selected only from well known works, and only such stories are picturized as are crowded with action, have deep dramatic interest, pictorial beauty and are especially suitable for picturization.

CASTING EFFICIENCY.

Modern business efficiency is beginning to take root in the motion picture industry and Premier program following the lines of greatest efficiency have selected John W. Mitchell, the theatrical agent, to carefully tabulate all valuable data with regard to types suitable for use in motion pictures.

LEVY PREMIER'S PUBLICITY MAN.

Premier program publicity department is under the direction of E. A. Levy, whose previous connection with Favorite Players Film Co., Excelsior Film Co., has introduced him to motion picture circles in the past.

The "Black Crook" Ready

Kalem's Production of Famous Extravaganza a General Film Release on January 10.

"THE BLACK CROOK," famed for two generations, will be given to the followers of motion pictures on January 10. Kalem announced early this week that the finishing touches had been put to its spectacular adaptation of the extravaganza and that the early date in the New Year has been chosen for its release. "The Black Crook," therefore, will mark the first release by Kalem on the new plan for General Film features.

Scene from "The Black Crook" (Kalem).

Many weeks have been spent on "The Black Crook" since the director and players took the last scene, in pruning it to five reels, at which length it will be released. The story, of course, is told in the footage required, but care has been taken that only the pick of the spectacular scenes and ballet features was retained for use. The best technical men procurable have been at work on the tinting and toning, which so greatly enhance the spectacle features. Hand coloring was even called into play, for Kalem was determined to leave no stone unturned to assure "The Black Crook" a screen production worthy of its memorable stage career.

The cast of the production was largely recruited from the stage, a careful selection of types being sought. It includes one player, E. P. Sullivan, who has played over five hundred times in the stage production of "The Black Crook." On the screen he is seen in his familiar role of Hertzog, the Black Crook, and those who have been given an advance look at the picture are enthusiastic over his work. Charles De Forrest is seen as Greppo, the Black Crook's drudge, and Count Wolfenstein, the villain, is played by Henry Hallem. Pretty Gladys Coburn contributes some of her most charming work to the leading female role, that of Amina, while her lover is played in true courtly style by Roland Bottomley, a Broadway favorite who has already secured considerable of a screen following in Kalem productions. Frank Leonard and Helen Lindroth are others in the strong support, while Mae Thompson, the well known dancer, is Stalacta, the fairy queen. Close to two hundred prominent dancers and many solo artists were secured for the production and special numbers suitable to screen reproduction were arranged.

It will be a surprise to many to learn that "The Black Crook" has a really dramatic story interwoven with the spectacular features. In the stage production the story was cut and slashed to make room for the musical features, but with the unlimited possibilities of the motion picture it has been possible in Kalem's production to combine the strength of the story with the beauty of the spectacle. The screen adaptation was prepared by Phil Lang, who spent many months collecting from various old sources the real story of "The Black Crook" so that the screen is able to boast of telling the story for the first time. As originally written "The Black Crook" was a tragedy, and Manager Wheatley, owner of the rights, hesitated before offering it to a fickle public. Messrs. Jarrot and Palmer, names well remembered in stage history, had just imported a number of famous Parisian ballet dancers and when fire destroyed Whitney's Opera House, their theater, they found themselves with a number of costly contracts and no way of securing a profitable return. It was then decided to introduce the ballet and musical features into "The Black Crook," and the production opened at Niblo's Garden, startling New York audiences with a new form of entertainment which Leslie's Weekly of that time characterized as a "gay gift from naughty Paris." The initial production ran over four hundred times and frequent revivals have brought its record of performances over the two thousand mark.

The Black Crook, also known as Hertzog, is a character who, because of wrongs committed on him, makes a compact with Satan by which he agrees to win over to perdition one human soul each year, or himself pay the penalty. Amina, the pretty ward of Count Wolfenstein, refuses to accede to the latter's proposal of marriage, so the feudal baron conspires so that Rudolph, her lover, is first banished from his domains and later, when he dares to return, cast into a dungeon. Hertzog, in search of a soul, and with but twenty-four hours in which to make good his compact, turns his crafty eyes on Rudolph and Amina, who are in despair. How Hertzog is frustrated, Rudolph and Amina united, and the Black Crook himself consigned to the care of Satan and his imps, is told in spectacular fashion in the Kalem production. It is promised that many of the double exposures and other camera artifices will furnish photoplay fans with a surprise.

"How Molly Made Good" in Washington

WASHINGTON is to see "How Molly Made Good," the novel feature film of the Kulee Features, Inc. The picture is invading diplomatic circles this week and is finding many admirers in the National Capitol. There are many theater lovers in Washington, and "How Molly Made Good" offers exceptional attraction, inasmuch as the cast includes twelve of America's theatrical favorites, each one of these a tremendous drawing card in his own right.

Miss Marguerite Gale makes her initial debut as a screen star in this interesting feature film. But although she is a newcomer to the field of moving pictures. Miss Gale is already a "distinguished personage" in the National Capitol, where she began her public career in January of last year. This occasion was the start-off made by the young girl on a cross-country motor tour made in the dead of winter. The point of departure for the expedition was the old Willard House in Washington, the Exposition grounds at San Francisco was the finish. Needless to say the occasion was as dramatic, if not more so, than any stage debut could ever be.

Marguerite Gale.

There was plenty of audience to watch Miss Gale's departure. No lesser personage than Vice-President Marshall started the little explorist off with a gracious speech and a large American flag to honor the occasion. The Chamber of Commerce also turned out to pay Miss Gale tribute and presented her with a floral horse-shoe nine feet high. So Miss Gale is by no means a newcomer to Washington, where she already has many friends and admirers. "How Molly Made Good" is winning her many more "followers" each day, for Washington is most enthusiastic over the little screen star, and is once again turning out most generously to pay tribute to Miss Marguerite Gale.

THE SPECIFIC AUTHORSHIP.

In recent issues of several publications was published a resume of the career of George Brackett Seitz, scenario editor of the Pathe organization, in which an error of omission was made. In specifying that Mr. Seitz "wrote" "The Perils of Pauline," and "The Exploits of Elaine," it was meant that he wrote the working scenarios, a number of the story synopses having been written by Charles W. Goddard. The stories written from these scenarios were published by the Star Syndicate, a William R. Hearst organization, and were the work of Arthur B. Reeve.

Coming World Film Productions

Kitty Gordon, Famous Beauty, to Be Seen in "As in a Looking-Glass." Other Stars of Note.

THE coming releases of the World Film Corporation are the most ambitious ever attempted by this producing firm, to be released on the regular program.

In the coming productions, the beautiful Kitty Gordon, who makes her initial appearance on the screen, and has been placed under a long term contract by Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, first production will be "As in a Looking-Glass," Robert Warwick in "The Ambition of Mark Truitt," Holbrook Blinn in "McTeague of San Francisco," Catherine Calvert in "The Heart of a Thief," Alice Brady in "The Rack" and George Beban in "The Genius."

A story based on "As in a Looking-Glass," one of the best-known novels of recent years and which became so popular in London that when it was dramatized, it was played at two different theaters simultaneously, was written by F. C. Phillips, and is considered the best vehicle procurable for the charming and talented Kitty Gordon. Miss Gordon, who is now appearing in "A World of Pleasure" at the Winter Garden, has been spending her spare moments at the World Film studio familiarizing herself with the work, under the tutorage of Frank Crane, who will direct Miss Gordon in "As in a Looking-Glass," has been rehearsing the production which will be most pretentious. Mr. Selznick feels confident that in the engagement of Miss Gordon, he has a star that will jump into immediate prominence and favoritism.

Another book of great prominence which is now working for a moving picture is "The Ambition of Mark Truitt." There are few people who don't remember the thrilling story of how poor Mark Truitt plodded his way from poverty to a position of wealth, power and respect.

Robert Warwick, who plays the title role, has been spending the past few weeks in a steel mill with his company. In order to obtain permission to take the pictures it was necessary to promise the utmost secrecy. To do so, Director Oscar Eagle and his company had to be at the mills every morning at seven and stay until six, so that they would not arouse the fear of the mill workers that they were conspirators from another country.

The famous Death Valley Jim Scott has volunteered to act as guide to Holbrook Blinn, Fania Marinoff and company during their travels through this interesting country while they are working on the story of "McTeague of San Francisco," by Frank Norris, author of "The Pit," who is the creator of "McTeague," and has told of his many adventures in the Saturday Evening Post, has granted permission to the World Film Corporation to picturize this story, providing the scenes were taken in the real Death Valley, and not "faked." He also stipulated that Holbrook Blinn play the title role. Barry O'Neill, the director of the picture, is most enthusiastic and feels that he will be able to look upon this picture as his masterpiece.

Miss Catherine Calvert, who in private life is the wife of the late Paul Armstrong, author of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and "The Deep Purple," the screen versions of which were produced by the World Film Corporation, has been signed up to play the stellar part in the screen version of "The Heart of a Thief," another work of Mr. Armstrong's which was written especially to fit Miss Calvert's personality. Miss Calvert is well known on the speaking stage as one of the younger emotional actresses, and great things are expected from her in the very near future.

Alice Brady, who needs no introduction to moving picture fans, is completing "The Rack" under the directorship of Emile Chautard. The scenes in "The Rack" are most realistic and Miss Brady has taken the advantage of the opportunity to bring forth the wonderful acting ability which she possesses.

George Beban, who made his initial appearance in pictures in "An Alien," and perhaps scored the biggest success of any performer upon their first introduction on the screen, is again hard at work on another intensely interesting story, the title of which has not been selected. Mr. Beban and his company, under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, have just returned from Alabama where they enjoyed life on a ranch while taking the scenes for his new production. Mr. Beban is also the author of the scenario, and in conjunction with M. Tourneur selected the type pictured in his mind's eye for each character.

Looking over recent captures of the World Film of both stars and scenarios, Mr. Selznick feels confident that the exhibitors playing these pictures will be proud that they play World Film features as well as financially enhanced.

Assistant General Manager Goff

Former Coast Division Head Given Second Big Promotion by the V-L-S-E.

AN important change was made in the executive staff of the V-L-S-E. this week when General Manager Walter W. Irwin announced the appointment of A. W. Goff for the past three months in charge of the Coast Division of this organization, as the assistant general manager of the company. Mr. Goff is now on his way east, and will assume his new duties on Monday, December 13.

His elevation to the direction of the V-L-S-E. sales force, which comprises the principal function of the position of assistant general manager of the V-L-S-E.—is the recognition of the splendid work which Mr. Goff has done for the Big Four in the West, and of his noteworthy capacity to secure unusual results. It is the second appreciation of his capacity made within six months, Mr. Goff having been transferred from Cleveland where he was branch manager for the V-L-S-E. to San Francisco as coast division manager last July. In both Cleveland and along the coast, Mr. Goff made an enviable reputation for both himself and his company.

A. W. Goff.

Mr. Goff holds with General Manager Irwin, who is responsible for the emphasis which the V-L-S-E. gives to the "open booking" policy, that there has never been a feature—a strong feature — exhibited long enough to give everybody interested an opportunity to see it. He has won hundreds of theater managers to this viewpoint. The appointment of Mr. Goff as assistant general manager will simply be another evidence of the sincerity of V-L-S-E.'s square deal policy to its employees and the exhibitors. This policy is one which combines the division of profits and the encouragement of every member of the force, to work for promotion to the highest positions in the organization. Mr. Goff has always found time to help his assistants grow. Two of them are now occupying positions as branch managers with the V-L-S-E.

In the appointment it is understood also that General Manager Irwin desires more time for creative work, and therefore sought a lieutenant upon whom he might depend to take care of the great deal of executive detail in connection with the V-L-S-E. service to the exhibitor through its various branch offices.

Universal Complies With Postal Regulations

In the issue of the Moving Picture World dated Dec. 4 was published an advertisement in behalf of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to the effect that it would pay $100 for the best name for a new brand of film which it was about to release.

When the issue of the World containing this advertisement was offered at the postoffice in New York for transmission through the mail exception was taken to the wording on the ground that the advertisement in question did not comply with the postal laws governing such matters. It was stipulated that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company should repeat the advertisement with such amendment as would bring its offer to pay $100 for a brand name into conformity with the law.

Accordingly, on page 1939 of this issue the aforesaid advertisement is repeated with the added paragraph which states that, "Should more than one person send in the exact same name chosen by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, each person will receive $100."

Cartoonist Bray With Paramount

Inventor of Animated Motion Picture Drawing Talks of Promising Future—Prominent Artists in His Studio.

By Lynde Denig.

THAT animated cartoons have come to stay as an important factor in motion picture entertainment is a recognized fact. During the past few years, in one form or another, they have been given a place on most of the larger programs, and artists of repute in the magazine and newspaper field have been attracted by the new opportunities. If it is true that the advancements made in the production of photoplays have been due to the combined efforts of a great number of producers, each, in turn, contributing a valuable innovation, it is equally true that the animated cartoon, as an artistically and commercially feasible form of screen entertainment owes its existence to one man—J. R. Bray, formerly with Pathe, and now allied with the Paramount Corporation.

John R. Bray.

Mr. Bray had won his spurs as a cartoonist long before he dreamed of giving his figures animation and causing them to move across the screen. At the time he was drawing the "Teddy Bear" series for Judge, motion pictures were giving evidence of becoming the national amusement, and Mr. Bray conceived the idea of adapting his art to the new form. If people enjoyed humorous drawings without action, how much more would they enjoy humorous drawings combined with action. He promptly began to experiment; he learned all the technicalities of photography; he spent considerable time at the Bronx Zoo studying the movements of animals that his drawings might be natural, and as the result of six years expended in perfecting a process he devised a workable method of making an animated cartoon. Since 1912 his "Heeza Liar" and "Police Dog" series have brought laughter and applause in countless theaters. Thus far, at least, his productions have been inimitable.

In speaking of his contract with Paramount calling for a thousand feet of comedy every week beginning in January, also a cartoon to be issued in the news weekly, he said that he selected Paramount as a distributing channel because it offered the largest outlet in the highest class theaters. "I have always aimed," he declared, "to produce humorous subjects that would be appreciated by intelligent audiences, just the type of audiences being reached by the program with which I am allied."

Mr. Bray showed gratification in speaking of the organization he is directing in the Bray Studios, Inc., an organization of artists and distinctly for the benefit of artists gifted with the peculiar form of imagination and talent needed in this work. With C. Allan Gilbert as an associate, he soon will be ready to introduce a style of drawing that is heralded as revolutionary; and, apart from this, he is looking forward to big results from the staff of artists now under his direction.

"I find that most people have an entirely mistaken notion about the qualifications demanded in making animated cartoons," Mr. Bray continued. "They think the chief requisite is patience in tracing hundreds of drawings, when in reality one must possess imagination combined with an exact knowledge of motion. During the past few weeks I have tried out more than a dozen men who have been successful as cartoonists or illustrators, and the majority of them have been all at sea when it came to putting action into a picture. Take such a simple thing as a cat jumping from a table. We all have a vague idea of how the cat appears, of the position of the legs and the tail; but when it comes to giving the idea exact expression on paper we find how hazy our knowledge of motion really is. In preparing an animated cartoon an artist must depend largely upon his imagination, for, of course, there cannot be a model for each movement." Mr. Bray said that the five well-known artists now associated with him in the studio have revealed an exceptional aptitude for this difficult work. They are L. M. Glackens, C. T. Anderson, Earl Herd, Paul Terry and Leighton Budd.

Referring to suits brought for the protection of the process used in the making and photographing of the pictures, Mr. Bray said that there was danger of his motive in instituting the litigation being misconstrued. He said that he never had any wish to exert a monopoly by driving other artists out of the business. Quite the reverse; he has done all that he could in fighting the battle of the artist by insisting that he receive a just payment for his work. Mr. Bray feels that two dollars a foot for negative is not too much in consideration of the time, expert knowledge and labor expended.

"From the first," he continued, "I have tried to uphold the dignity of the animated cartoon and in doing this I have naturally opposed the circulation of poor work that would give the public and exhibitors a wrong impression of the type of picture in which I was interested. Some of the film released was so entirely without merit that it harmed the business prospects of all artists engaged in making cartoon drawings."

Since his first subjects were issued by Pathe, Mr. Bray has brought about many improvements in the process of preparing the pictures and treating the film. The white background originally used was found to be unsatisfactory because it became badly scratched after a few weeks' wear. Amber and sepia tints were used with better results; but now a method has been perfected whereby the film may be thoroughly toned. This innovation probably will be used to good purpose in the pictures being made by Mr. Bray and Mr. Gilbert. The "Silhouette Fantasies," as they are called, promise a brand new sensation for photoplay patrons and it may not be very long before exhibitors are offered a five-reel photoplay drawn by Mr. Bray and his associates.

Ralph Kellard With Pathe

RALPH KELLARD, who has been signed by Donald Mackenzie for his Pathe Gold Rooster play, "The Precious Packet," is one of those rarely found individuals, a native of New York City. He was educated in the city schools, and then studied law just long enough to convince him that law was a profession better adapted for others than himself.

Ralph Kellard.

He had always been fond of the stage, and being told that his fine personality, easy manner and dramatic instinct would put him a long way on the road to success looked for a chance to break into the profession. He got one—in "The Eternal City"—and played twenty-six weeks in one-night stands in the south. The fact that he survived this endurance test and stuck to the stage in itself proved a certain fitness for the work.

His first appearance on Broadway was with David Warfield in "The Music Master" at the Bijou theater, and he remained with that company through the next season, forty-five weeks in all. Then followed a succession of good engagements: Two seasons with "The Warrens of Virginia" under Belasco; one summer season in stock in Washington, D. C., with Charlotte Walker; leading man with Virginia Harned in "The Land of Hope"; leading man with "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" during the New York season; three seasons in the Ralph Kellard Stock Company in Syracuse, N. Y.

It may be seen from this that Mr. Kellard, though a young man, has had plenty of theatrical experience, and of a most valuable kind, too. With Mr. Kellard's youth, good looks, and talent, in conjunction with like qualities in Lois Meredith, his co-star, Producer Mackenzie expects to make a Gold Rooster play well worth while.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Maryland "Get Together" Meeting

Exhibitors Hold Big Convention at Baltimore—President Herrington Present.

THE annual "get together" stag party of the Exhibitors' League of Maryland, participated in by the motion picture exhibitors and film exchangemen of Baltimore, with guests from Philadelphia and Washington, was held at the Raleigh Hotel, in Baltimore, on the evening of November 30. This was the first big meeting of the fall season and was quite largely attended.

The keynote of the meeting was "get together." It was pointed out by the various speakers that proper co-operation was lacking among the members and that some action should be taken to more closely cement the bonds of both personal and business friendship that the organization may be enabled to bring about some very much needed reforms.

The principal speaker of the evening was Frederick J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. He discussed with those present the three important topics of the day—censorship, Sunday opening, and organization. One very good point brought out by him as to the futility of censorship was his reference made to a possible film depicting the exhibitions contained in any of the art museums of the country. Such a film, regardless of its educational value, he declared, if shown in any motion picture theater, would be condemned in its entirety by censors, despite the fact that it is urged upon the people of the country to visit such museums.

According to Mr. Herrington's way of thinking, there is no such thing as censorship, he holding that censorship means final. The act of censors in the different states is not final as the defendant exhibitor can bring action in a court of law with the equal probability of having such decision reversed. He declared that the question soon would be "who will censor the censors."

The power of the motion picture is far greater than the much-heralded "power of the press," in his opinion, but all abuses are allowed to stand uncorrected because of the fact that the exhibitors do not organize properly, and unorganized do not hustle and keep hustling to eradicate abuses. He dwelt on the lack of co-operation among the exhibitors, showing how they allow petty quarrels and differences to influence them to the end that there is marked disorganization among them. He compared the exhibitors with the operators, for the latter, in contrast, pretty generally know what they want, make known their wants, stick together, and get what they want.

Motion pictures have been declared to be of great educational value, but according to the national president they teach and educate everybody but the motion picture exhibitor himself.

There has been more or less talk in Baltimore as to the desirability of Sunday opening for the motion picture theaters. It is believed that this could be accomplished in the city itself, but throughout the country there is a strong religious feeling against it. Mr. Herrington declared that the exhibitors were far better off without this privilege, comparing Baltimore with other cities in this respect. He took one city in Pennsylvania as an example, stating that before Sunday opening was secured there were but seven houses; seven weeks later there were seventeen. Other prospective film men got the fever and the number quickly increased to twenty-four, while at the present time the city is favored with thirty-one motion picture houses, with the result that the profit has been taken out of the business. Wherever there is Sunday opening, the receipts from the Saturday and Monday business is invariably small. With the theaters open but six days a week, the business is more generally distributed throughout that period and Sunday opening does not entail a box office loss.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Herrington stated that the exhibitor who paid his bills was also paying indirectly for those who slighted their commercial obligations, and he urged that the exchangemen co-operate in the effort to eradicate this evil.

Mr. Herrington was assured by a number of exchangemen speaking on the subject of "bad debts" that they were doing everything in their power to discourage such a practice. This has been one of the problems that they have had to face for some time and would like to see cured.

Frank B. Spurrier, of Washington, D. C., manager of the local branch of the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay exchange, explained the formation of the National Exchangemen's Association at the National Capital. He declared that this was primarily for the benefit of the business as a whole, as its entire membership was desirous of working in co-operation with the exhibitors, feeling that in this way their own interests would be furthered. He also urged the admission of the exchange managers as members of the league. It was advanced that this would be a violation of the constitution of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, but speaking for that organization President Herrington said that there was nothing to prevent their admission to the league as honorary members. He declared that the exchangemen must help Baltimore to organize, for without their aid the exhibitors themselves can do little.

There was more or less discussion on the subject of Sunday opening by succeeding speakers. Edward Price, of the Mutual Film Corporation, stated that he believed a measure providing for this could be gotten through the City Council and eventually through the legislature. Others declared that to do so would merely create a stronger feeling in favor of a general censorship, an issue it is their desire to evade, if possible. Frank Durkee, who is connected with several houses in Baltimore, declared himself opposed to any such action, not on religious grounds, he said, but on physical grounds—he wants one holiday a week. It seemed to be the opinion of many that in the long run with Sunday opening the exhibitor does not gain anything and merely succeeds in making himself work one more day a week than is necessary, and invites additional competition by the fact that he is apparently so busy.

Bernard Debkin drew comparisons between houses in Baltimore and those similarly located in the neighboring city of Washington, showing that the former, when of the same size and class, were doing equally as well as the latter.

It was brought out at the meeting that all of the exhibitors of Baltimore are in accord as opposed to censorship, with the exception of one gentleman, who was absent from the meeting and who, it is said, has already gone so far as to prepare a measure providing for the censorship of motion picture films in Maryland to be presented to the proper authorities in the near future. This gentleman is said to have expressed himself as favoring censorship as he contemplated being the censor.

Representatives of the Baltimore Star and of the Baltimore American told the exhibitors of how their papers were working with the exhibitors by giving the proper sort of a Sunday motion picture supplement, and assuring them that they would lend their co-operation to the betterment of the business.

The closing remarks of Mr. Herrington were particularly applicable to the existing situation, for he said: "What the moving picture exhibitors of the country need is men at the helm who are not afraid to speak, that the exhibitors may be able to fully realize the benefits of the flourishing industry. We are not afraid of prosecution but we cannot stand persecution."

Interesting talks were also given by S. J. Mayer, of the World Film Corporation, and Carl F. Senning, of the Fox Film Corporation, both of Washington, who told of the activities of the exhibitors and exchangemen in this territory. Both of these gentlemen assured their audience that it was the desire of all of the exchange managers to do their part towards placing the film business on the highest plane, and prophesied that with proper organization and co-operation among both interests this would soon be realized.

T. H. Bohannon presided during the evening.

The balance of the evening was given over to the entertainment and to the excellent luncheon that had been prepared for them. J. Howard Bennett, vice-president, acted as toastmaster. Among the hits of the evening were the musical numbers rendered by Messrs. Durkee and Herrington, with Frank B. Spurrier presiding at the piano; the impersonations of James Hartlove, and the stories as told by John Cunningham and Jake Shaab.

The meeting was not called to order until long after the streets of Baltimore had been deserted by the theatergoers, but then adjournment was not taken until an equally long time had elapsed after the milkmen had completed their runs and had stabled their wagons. It was a great night, so good that the exhibitors have planned another meeting for this week, to be held at the Wizard theater, when the plans for the reorganization of the league in Maryland can be completed.

There were more than forty exhibitors and exchangemen present, among these being President Frederick J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Frank B. Spurrier, president of the National Exchangemen's League; Alan Bachrach, Carl F. Senning, S. J. Mayer and George W. Smiley, all of Washington, D. C.; W. H. McVelle and Emory Tipman, of Philadelphia, Pa.; and President T. H. Bohannon, Harry Loewy, Harry Reddish, J. Howard Bennett, Guy Wonders, Louis Benesch, Jake Shaab, Mr. Wonders, Sr., Mr. Eberhardt, Thomas Goldberg, Joseph Brody, Arthur Price, Mr. Cluster, J. F. Everhart, James Hartlove, Edward Rossiter, John Cunningham, Edward Price, Mr. Hall, Mr. Henderson, Mr. Rosenaur, Frank Durkee, Nat Keen, and many others.

National Executive Committee Meeting

It Will Be Held at LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, Wednesday, January 5, 1916—State League Officers and Members Invited.

NUMEROUS requests having been made of President Fred J. Herrington for information regarding the time and place of holding the semi-annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

I am directed by him to make a call for a two-days session of the above mentioned meeting, to take place on Wednesday and Thursday, January 5 and 6, 1916, at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, Ill. First session to convene 10.30 o'clock, Wednesday, January 5th.

Several matters of vital importance to the organization are to be considered at this meeting, including the selection of the city at which the national convention shall be held in July, 1916.

Requests and liberal offers have been presented to the league by the following cities for the convention to date: Detroit, Mich.; Chicago, Ill.; Pittsburgh, Pa., and New York City.

In addition to the members of the executive committee, an invitation is cordially extended to all vice-presidents and State presidents of the League, and other exhibiting members of the league that may be at liberty to, and desirous of attending this meeting, will be cordially welcomed.

Prospects are that a good representative meeting will be had. President Herrington had very satisfactory results from his efforts in organizing a number of State branches since holding the office of national president, conferred on him July, 1915. Several States have already declared their intention of sending a representation to Chicago, January 5, 1916.

Any State league or member of the league wishing information pertaining to this meeting, or in any way relating to the league, will be courteously tendered, on applying to the national headquarters, 238 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Respectfully submitted,
JAMES DELVES, National Secretary.

KLEINE-EDISON BROCHURE.

The press department of the Kleine-Edison Feature Service has prepared an attractive and useful brochure to assist exhibitors in advertising "The Destroying Angel," a five-part picture featuring Mabel Trunnelle and Marc MacDermott. In addition to the conventional synopsis there are many short squibs in suitable form for use in newspapers, also pages showing a varied assortment of cuts available for publicity purposes. This interesting lay-out is printed on good paper.

RAMO FILMS QUITS.

C. Lang Cobb, manager of sales and publicity for the Ramo Films, Inc., announces that the company with which he has been connected for the past three years, had decided to go out of business. Mr. Cobb has resigned, but will continue with the company until its final dissolution Jan. 1, 1916.

Edison Doing War Play

Players Get Reception at Phoenixville, Pa., When Some Big Scenes are Staged.

DIRECTOR BURTON GEORGE, Edison, has returned from Phoenixville, Pa., where he spent a week, with a large company, staging the battle scenes for a pretentious three-reeler, "Celeste of the Ambulance Corps," in which Leonie Flugrath and Pat O'Malley are to be featured. The story is a war drama dramatically proving that, when really called upon by duty, the women of today are every bit as full of self-sacrifice as were the pioneer women. The scenes are laid in the Spanish-American war.

The whole town of Phoenixville turned out, making the stay a gala occasion for the players, with balls, theater parties and luncheons. Director George has secured the use of Battery C, State artillery, for the war scenes, also having the use of their big guns and full war paraphernalia. In addition, a large number of men were engaged locally and a number of spirited scenes were secured. So absorbed became the citizens that a number of the society women insisted upon taking part. They were accordingly made Red Cross nurses in the play.

A near fatality added to the excitement when it came to blowing up of an ammunition wagon, required by the action. Director George, for safety sake, had engaged an explosive expert who "planted" the wagon. But, during a delay, an excitement-loving youngster crept up and unnoticed placed a stick of dynamite in the wagon. The resultant explosion threw many to the ground and knocked a soldier out of a tree nearby, shaking him up badly. Pat O'Malley had his arm grazed by a heavy part of the wagon which was blown to bits.

The Edison company appeared before a crowded house at one of the local theaters. Director George addressed the audience. Other principals were Charles Sutton, Julian Reed, Joe Bingham and Harry Linson.

EDISON MAKES "THE CRUCIFIXION OF PHILLIP STRONG."

Edison last week commenced work on a feature intended for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service called "The Crucifixion of Phillip Strong," which advance reports say will prove the most remarkable feature ever made by Edison. In many ways the story is a problem play dealing with the modern church-man and his work. It has been adapted from the novel by the Rev. Charles M. Shelden, author of "In His Steps," "His Brother's Keeper" and "Born to Save."

Phillip Strong, a rising young pastor in a fashionable church, surrounded by luxury and lionized by a wealthy congregation, is suddenly made to realize that his life work is a failure. He determines to renounce his rich parish and take up a real work in the slums. In this he meets with strong objections from his beautiful, luxury-loving wife who refuses to share his lot.

"The Crucifixion of Phillip Strong," aside from its religious phases, has much of life on the East Side in its relation to the rich to give it distinction among its kind of stories. Undaunted by threats of personal harm, his former rich friends gone, his daughter dead and wife opposing him, Phillip Strong fights the battle until death claims him. The political rings of the East Side and the saloons and haunts of vice owned by his former wealthy parishioners are vividly pictured.

FAMOUS PLAYERS CHANGES DECEMBER SCHEDULE.

After the first showing of the completed adaptation of Denman Thompson's great rural classic, "The Old Homestead," it has been decided by the Famous Players Film Company to advance the release date of the feature on the a Paramount Program from December 30 to December 23. As the picture is so full of the spirit of Christmas and as the play is associated in the minds of everyone with the holiday season, it has been thought advisable to so advance the release date that the picture will be on the screen during the entire holiday period.

The changing of this date has necessitated the re-arrangement of the other December releases already scheduled. "The Red Widow," originally listed for the date now assigned to "The Old Homestead," will be held over to a future date to be announced later. Mary Pickford in "The Foundling" will be issued on December 27, the date originally scheduled for its release, and John Barrymore in "Nearly a King" will take the place of "The Old Homestead" on December 30.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE.

For and Against Art in Moving Pictures.

IN AN address to the Friars Club, in New York City, in October last, William A. Brady "let his imagination frame unknown events in wild, fantastic shapes of hideous ruin. For the drama he foretold the knell, the shroud, the mattock and the grave, the deep, damp vault, the darkness and the worm; and he said that the 'movies' would fling the stone to lay the giant low." The words within quotation marks are those of Percy Hammond, dramatic critic of the Chicago Tribune, taken from an article written by him in reference to the Brady speech.

In that speech Mr. Brady said in part:

I believe that the advance of motion pictures means the death of the drama. They merely represent a rehashing of every old situation that the theater has already produced. Pictures will kill the drama, because the men who write and produce for the theater will say: "What is the use? If I write something dignified nobody will go to see it."

And then a motion picture man comes along and offers him possibly $10,000 to write a scenario—a scenario that he can perhaps write in a few hours. Of course, it is not the author who suffers, nor is it the manager who suffers—but the country suffers.

Anent this diatribe, Mr. Hammond's article contained the following paragraphs:

Mr. Brady's lament, of course, regards the drama as a waning art, not as a waning business. Bless his sorrowing soul, the drama is as safe in the hands of the moving picture authors as it is in those of most of the men who are writing for the articulate theater today. Certainly there can be plays without the unhuman ululations of the average actor uttering the speech of the mediocrities of the stage of the present time. Mr. Brady should know that it is not the movies that have killed the drama (as an art), but the authors, the actors, and the stage directors who have made of every theater a shambles of literature and histrionism.

It is not the drama that the "movies" have killed but the near-drama. Much of Mr. Brady's output as a producer has been of this shoddy class—such things as "Mothers," "Sinners," "The Whip," "Life," etc. Mr. Mantle, my neighbor, wrote that the "movies" were responsible for the utter failure of the last Brady-Drury Lane monstrosity, "Stolen Orders," but he reports that "The New York Idea," a fine example of American satirical comedy, prospers. Perhaps the "movies" have not killed this pseudo-drama, but in transferring it to another form they have removed much of its stigmata—the bad lines, the bad delivery of them, and the bad scenery with which it was environed. The day of bunk trees, bunk flowers, bunk grass, and bunk persons which Mr. Brady was wont to provide so lavishly in his pieces is past. But let him find a good play by Augustus Thomas or Langdon Mitchell or Edward Sheldon and permit Mrs. Brady to produce it without interference from him, and he will discover that his inurning of the drama in the sepulcher of his post-prandial pessimism was premature.

And the closing paragraph contained the sentences:

As it is you will see in moving pictures the best acting to be seen in Chicago. Already may we consign to the cannery that entr'acte platitude, heard so frequently in the Auditorium bar, that "the only good acting is in grand opera." There is good acting in the "movies" too.

Richard Henry Little, dramatic critic of the Chicago Herald, in a recent article made the assertion that "there is more art in a bronze guinea pig than in the best moving picture play ever made," and seems to take a delight in belittling the picture play. I write "seems" advisedly, for he shows an interest in picture plays when he writes: "The 'movies' are departing from the delightful little love stories they used to tell in their plays and are now preaching on all manner of subjects, many of them taboo. The stage is no longer a Mme. Tussard's chamber of horrors, but the movies are. Many 'movie' productions lately are nothing but horror piled on horror."

But on the question of art in the moving picture I shall confront Mr. Little with an authority who will at least command his interest, if he will not cause him to change the opinion already quoted.

In the December number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, Hugo Munsterberg, professor of psychology, and director of the Psychological Laboratory, Harvard University, has a remarkable article under the title, "Why We Go to the 'Movies'." There Professor Munsterberg shows that moving picture plays are not only not "a substitute for the drama, but a form of expression entirely foreign to the real stage, and their emotional effects in some ways quite different from those which we derive from the theater."

"But can we really say that the film brings us art in the higher sense of the word?" he asks. "Was it not for quite a while the fashion among those who love art to look down upon the tricks of the film and to despise them as inartistic? Those who could afford to visit the true theater felt it as below their level to indulge in such a cheap substitute which lacked the glory of the stage with spoken words. But that time lies far behind us. Even the most artistic public has learned to enjoy a high-class photoplay."

And Professor Munsterberg confesses that he was one of the snobbish latecomers and a passionate lover of the theater, who felt it as undignified for a Harvard professor to attend a moving picture show as to attend a vaudeville performance or go to a museum of wax figures or to a phonograph concert. Finally he came under the spell of moving pictures. But to quote his article:

Why did this change come? Was it because the more and more improved technique brought the imitation of the theater nearer and nearer to the impressions of the real stage and thus made the substitute almost as good as the original? Not at all. The real reason was just the opposite. The more the photoplays developed, the more it was felt that it was not their task simply to be an inexpensive imitation of the theater, but that they should bring us an entirely new form of art. As long as the old belief prevailed that the moving picture performances were to give us the same art which the drama gave, their deficiencies were evident. But if they have an original task, if they offer an art of their own, different from that of the theater, as the art of the painter is different from that of the sculptor, then it is clear that the one is not to be measured by the other. Who dares to say that the marble bust is a failure because it cannot show us the colors which give charm to the portrait painting? On the contrary, we destroy the beauty of the marble statue as soon as we paint the cheeks of a Venus.

It is never the purpose of an art simply to imitate nature. The painting would not be better if the painted flowers gave us fragrance. It is the very essence of art to give us something which appeals to us with the claims of reality and yet which is entirely different from real nature and real life and is set off from them by its artistic means. For this reason we put the statue on a pedestal and the painting into a frame and the dramatic play on a stage. We do not want them to be taken as parts of the real world, and the highest art of all, music, speaks a language which has not even similarity to the happenings of the world.

If the aim of every art were simply to come as near as possible to reality, the photoplay would stand endlessly far behind the performances of real actors on the stage. But when it is recognized that each art is a particular way of suggesting life and of awaking interest, without giving life or nature themselves, the moving pictures come to their own. They offer an entirely new approach to beauty. They give an art which must develop in paths quite separate from those of the stage. It will reach the greater height the more it learns to free itself from the shackles of the theater and to live up to its own forms.

It is only natural that it began with a mere imitation of the theater, just as the automobiles were at first simple horse-carriages moved by machinery. Any new principle finds its own form slowly. The photoplay of today is already as different from those theater imitations as a racing automobile is different from a buggy. As soon as the two forms of art are recognized as belonging to two entirely different spheres, they do not disturb each other. Even the most ideal moving picture can never in the least give that particular artistic pleasure which a dramatic theater performance offers. But, on the other hand, even the best drama on the stage will not replace the photoplay as soon as this has reached its ideal perfection.

True Meaning of the Photoplay.

What is the true meaning of the "movies"? What are their special ways of showing us the world? In the beginning, the public enjoyed simply the surprising tricks of a technique which showed actual movement in a photograph. But this purely technical interest has long since faded away. What remains, then, as the lasting source of enjoyment? The color is lacking and so is the depth of the stage; above all, the tone of the voice is absent. Yet we do not miss the color, the depth, or the words. We are fully under the spell of this silent world, and the Edison scheme of connecting the camera with the graphophone, and so to add spoken words to the moving pictures, was not successful for very good reasons. It really interfered with the chance of the moving pictures to develop their original nature. They sank back to the level of a mere mechanical imitation of the theater. . . .

The graphophone brings music into every cottage, but no one can claim that the musical disks have brought us a new art. Their rendering of orchestra or opera is nothing but a mechanical repetition of the free musical art and does not add anything to the symphony or the song.

With the photoplay it is entirely different. It shows us far more than any stage can show, or rather, it shows us something fundamentally different. The first step away from the theater was soon made. The moving picture allows a rapidity in the change of scenes which no stage-manager could imitate. At first, these possibilities were used only for humorous effects. . . .

This slap-stick humor has not disappeared, but the rapid change of scenes has meanwhile been put into the service of much higher aims. The true development of an artistic plot has been brought to possibilities which the real drama does not know by allowing the eye to follow the hero and heroine continuously from place to place. Now he leaves his room, now we see him passing along the street, now he enters the house of his beloved, now he is led into the parlor, now she is hurrying to the library of her father, now they all go to the garden. New stage-settings are ever sliding into one another; the limitations of space are overcome. It is as if the laws of nature were overwhelmed and, through this liberation from space, a freedom gained which gives new wings to the artistic imagination.

This perfect independence from the narrow ties of space-reality gives to the photoplay a new life-chance which alone would secure to it the right of a new form of art.

But, with the quick change of background, the photo-artist also gained the power of a rapidity of motion which leaves actual men behind. And from here it was only a step to the performance of actions which could not be carried out in nature at all. This, too, was made serviceable at first to a rather rough humor. . . .

For the camera, magical wonders are not difficult, but no theater could ever try to match them. Rich artistic effects are secured, and while on the stage every fairy-tale is clumsy and hardly able to create an illusion, in the film we really see the man transformed into a beast and the flower into a girl.

The Close-Up.

But while, through this power to break down the barriers of space and to make the impossible actions possible, new fascinating effects could be reached, the whole still remained in the outer framework of the stage, inasmuch as everything was the presentation of an action in its successive stages. The photoplay showed a performance, however rapid or impossible, as it would go on in the outer world. An entirely new perspective was opened when the managers of the film-play introduced the "close-up" and similar new methods. The close-up is indeed most characteristic of the emancipation of the moving pictures. . . .

But while everyone is familiar with the method, too few are aware that here indeed we have crossed a great esthetic line of demarcation and have turned to a form of expression which is entirely foreign to the real stage. Even the most wonderful creations, the great historical plays, where thousands fill the battlefields, or the most fantastic caprices, where fairies fly over the stage, could be performed in a theater. But this close-up leaves all stagecraft behind. The stage can give us only changes in the outer world; but if we suddenly neglect everything in the room and look only at the hand which carries the dagger, the change is not one outside, but inside our mind. It is a turning of our attention. We withdraw our attention from all which is unimportant and concentrate it on that one point on which the action is focused.

The photoplay is an art in which not only the outer events but our own inner actions become effective. Our own attention is projected into the life around us. . . .

Novel Methods of Presentation.

The photoplay can overcome the limits of time just as easily as those of space. In many of the newer plays, an unusual fascination is secured by interrupting the picture of the present events with quickly passing images of earlier scenes. It is as if a quick remembrance were flitting through our mind.

Two passengers are sitting in the smoking-room of a ship; we see them talking about their adventurous life-experiences. The one makes the gesture of speaking; in the next instant we see him climbing the glacier, and then crossing the jungle and shooting tigers, and then fighting in the Boer War, and then strolling through Paris; but every few seconds we return to the smoking-room and keep thus the background of the story before us. Yet our mind does not only combine memories; our thought wanders from one event to another which runs parallel. Here is a dancing-hall in which a man and a girl are flirting; the girl's mother sits at home in a modest attic room and waits for her anxiously; the man's wife is unhappy in her luxurious parlor. Now the three scenes are interwoven: the dancing-hall is seen for ten seconds, then the attic scene for five seconds, the parlor scene for five seconds, then the dancing-hall again, and so on. They chase one another like the tones of an orchestra.

The order of the pictures on the screen is no longer the order of the events in nature, but rather that of our own mental play. Here lies the reason why this new art has such peculiar interest for the psychologist. It is the only visual art in which the whole richness of our inner life, our perceptions, our memory, and our imagination, our expectation and our attention can be made living in the outer impressions themselves. As long as the photo-artist made no use of these possibilities, his play lagged far behind that of the real theater. But since he has conquered these new methods of mental interpretation, he has created an art which is a worthy rival of the drama, entirely independent from and in not a few respects superior to the theater.

As soon as the original character of the photoplay is understood, it can easily be grasped that we are only at the beginning of a great esthetic movement. The technical development of the photo-stage and of the camera will go on, and yet that is entirely secondary to the much more essential progress of the new art toward its highest fulfilment. The producer of photoplays must free himself more and more from the idea with which he started—to imitate the stage—and must more and more win for the new art its own rights. . . .

What we must expect from the photoplay of the future is that the pictures reveal to us our own imaginative play as music can do with its magic tones.

From an artistic point of view, it is entirely wrong to fancy that such imaginative molding of the world must be confined to fairy-tales because it does not correspond to the reality of the world. As long as we can argue from such a point of view, we have not reached real art. Even the most realistic art always gives us something different from reality. As long as the artistic means harmonizes with our inner view of an experience, it is welcome in the world of art. Even the most rapturous flights of the imagination projected on the screen may have as much inner truth as any melodramatic story. The photo-artist needs only the courage to make the spectator feel that he is truly in a temple of art.

How the Film Expresses Emotion.

But even memory, attention, and imagination do not tell the whole story of our inner mind. The core of man lies in his feelings and emotions. As soon as the photoplay moves along its own way, the expression of feelings and emotions will come to the foreground. Of course the producer would say that he shows love and hate and fear and delight and envy and disgust and hope and enthusiasm all in his reels. Certainly he shows them, but simply with the methods of the ordinary stage. The angry man clenches his fist and the frightened man shows outer signs of terror. We see the gestures and the actions; and yet how inferior is all that to the emotional words which the dramatist can put into the mouth of his persons on the stage! What Romeo and Juliet have to express is, after all, better said by Shakespeare's words than by any mere gestures of tenderness. As long as the photoplay works only with the methods of the theater, we must regret that we are deprived of the words.

But what a different perspective is opened if we think of the unlimited means with which the film may express feeling and sentiment through means of its own. We saw that, in the close-up, the camera can do what in our mind our attention is doing; the camera goes nearer to the object and thus concentrates everything on one point. In our feelings and emotions, the mind takes a sort of stand toward the surroundings. Again, the camera must be made to imitate such a mental action. In the excited mind, the smooth flow of impressions is interrupted. Let the camera break the flow of the pictures. Give us a thought-effect which the musician calls "staccato." We can produce it in the film by omitting certain pictures so that the action seems to jump from one stage to another. Or let the pictures vibrate. We can do this by quickly reversing the order of the pictures which follow one another with the rapidity of sixteen photograms to the second. After pictures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, we give once more 6, 5, 4, turn then from 4 to picture 9, go back from 9 to 6, then from 6 to 12, and the effect will bet that a thrilling, vibrating motion goes through the surroundings. Or let the camera turn the straight lines into curves, or the rhythm slow down like a musical adagio, or become rapid like an allegro or presto. In every case effects are produced in which changes of inner excitement seem to take hold of the surrounding world.

Imitating Mental Action.

The violinist may play one piece after another and we may see in the film the sentiments of those various pieces through the melodious movements around him. His own face may remain unchanged, but everything about him may enter into the mood of tones and chords. It is in the spirit of the theater to express horror by the wild gestures of the body. It would be in the spirit of the photoplay to make the world around the terrified person change in a horrifying, ghastly way. The camera can do that, and the spectator would come deeply under the spell of the emotion to be expressed. It becomes his emotion, just as in the close-up it is his attention which is forced on the single detail. If man is hypnotized in the scene, the change of his feelings can only clumsily be shown in his face, but his surroundings may take uncanny forms until a kind of hypnotic spell lies over the whole audience. . . .

The photoplay of the future, if it is really to rise to further heights, will thus become more than any other art the domain of the psychologist who analyzes the working of the mind. We have seen in recent years how the work of the modern psychologist has become influential and helpful in many different spheres of practical life. Education and medicine, commerce and industry, law and social reform have been greatly aided by the contact with the psychologist, who has put the results of his psychological laboratory into the service of daily life. In the film-world, the only scientist who has been consulted in the past has been the physicist, who prepared the technical devices for the work of the camera. The time seems ripe for his scientific brother, the psychologist, to enter the field and to lead the photoplay to those wonders which its progress has begun to suggest since the leaders dared to leave the paths of mere theatrical performance. The more psychology enters into the sphere of the moving pictures, the more they will be worthy of an independent place in the world of true art and become really a means of cultural education to young and old. The presentations of the film will never supersede those of the theater any more than sculpture can supersede painting or lyrics can supersede music, but they will bring us the noble fulfilment of an artistic desire which none of the other arts can bring.

This is truly the art of the future.

Chicago Film Brevities.

H. H. Hicks has been appointed district manager of the General Film Company by President J. A. Berst for the western territory. This territory extends west from Denver, and includes that city, Salt Lake City, Butte City, Spokane and all Pacific coast territory. Mr. Hicks was branch manager for the General Film Company at Phoenix, Ariz., until that office was closed. He was then transferred to Los Angeles, where he was installed as branch manager by F. C. Aiken, special representative. That was in March, 1914. His record there was such that in July, 1915, he was given supervision of the branch offices in Portland, Seattle and Spokane. Mr. Hicks is a young man, full of ambition and energy. He is progressive in his ideas and policies, and has always shown the greatest consideration for exhibitors in his territory, individually. Mr. Hicks passed through Chicago Saturday, November 27, and made a brief stay to greet some of his old friends. He then proceeded to San Francisco, where he will make his headquarters.

Edward C. Jensen has been appointed Chicago branch manager for the World Film Corporation, having succeeded J. L. Klasky. W. W. Drum, middle western division manager of the company since August last, reports that business is satisfactory in his territory.

A message has been received at the Chicago offices of the Selig Polyscope Company advising that Misses Ruth Harsley and Maud Bridson had arrived safely at the Selig Jungle-Zoo on Monday, November 29, after a walk across the continent. The two young ladies left the Selig offices at Chicago on March 18. They tell of many novel experiences during their travels, and state that they were treated royally all along the line as representatives of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. After spending the winter in southern California, they expect to return via automobile to Chicago in the spring.

The editor of the photoplay page of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer, one of the most influential newspapers of the middle west, recently wrote an unsolicited letter to the Selig Poly-scope Company commending "Paste-pot and Shears," the weekly publication issued by that company. "Your publication is just the thing for the practical newspaper man. The news is attractively written, the make-up well conceived, and the character of the copy is such that any newspaper editor is glad to use it. It may interest you to know that I have sent copies of your publication to other companies, who issue clip sheets, to show them just what a clip sheet should be." The Cleveland Plain-Dealer publishes two pages of moving picture news and gossip every Sunday, and also conducts a daily moving picture department. The Selig Company has on file many other testimonials from newspaper editors commending the value and attractiveness of the Selig press sheet. Selig's "Paste-pot and Shears" is arranged in the form of a miniature newspaper. It consists of four pages, and is so made up that all material can be clipped without injuring other stories that may make an appeal. All articles are reasonably brief and the original "filler," comprising the editorial column, is more widely used, perhaps, than any other publicity idea in the country today. Not only the newspapers, but magazines and exhibitors' house organs find the Selig "philosophical fillers" of great value, as is proven by the exchanges. William Lord Wright, Selig's publicity manager, is responsible for the creation and success of "Paste-pot and Shears."

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, returned to Chicago from New York on Friday, December 3, and is hard at work in the fine new offices at the plant in North Edgewater, which were taken possession of by the staff a short time ago. Mr. Hutchinson is much pleased with the new addition to the plant and with the increased facilities which it has provided.

A picture of no small interest to Chicagoans and the people of the middle west will be that of Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium. Mr. Whitlock and his wife are shown in the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 96, released December 2, on their arrival in New York City from Europe. Brand Whitlock lived for many years in Chicago, where he was employed as a reporter on Chicago newspapers. Later he became private secretary to the late Governor Altgeld, at Springfield, Ill. Later he moved to Toledo, where he practised law and became Mayor of Toledo. Mr. Whitlock, while Mayor of Toledo, was a staunch friend of moving picture exhibitors.

"The Raven," Essanay's fine six-reel feature, drew well at the Ziegfeld all last week. The management reported splendid business. The daily press of Chicago, without exception, praised the production and Henry Walthall's work, especially, in his impersonation of Edgar Alan Poe.

A special exhibition of "The Crimson Wing," Hobart Chatfield-Taylor's recent photoplay, by Essanay, was given at the Saddle and Cycle Club on Saturday, December 4. The customary dinner and informal dance were other features of the evening.

Through the courtesy of E. C. Divine, president of the Strand Theater Company, a special children's matinee will be given at the New Strand theater Saturday morning, December 18, in aid of the Chicago Examiner's Christmas Fund. It will be strictly a children's affair. In addition to a special picture program, carefully selected by Mr. Divine for the occasion, the music will be specially appropriate. There will be Christmas carols and dance numbers known to children the world over. There will be also box parties of children, just as their elders have at the regular daily presentations, and the little hosts and hostesses will entertain their guests in child fashion.

About three weeks ago the Evanston City Council decided that three women censors should view the films shown in that city, at a cost of $2 a day for each censor. The city fathers ruled that a tax of 30 cents per reel should be charged to meet this outlay. At a recent meeting of the council it was found that a deficit of $78 was shown for the first two weeks. The city collector, on being questioned, explained that moving picture operators were paid $2 every time they ran off a "show" for the censors. This expense had not been arranged for, hence the deficit. The theater owners refused to pay the bill, and so the City Council made an appropriation to cover the amount. One of the results of the Evanston censor board's activities has been the postponement, indefinitely, of the Sunday night moving picture programs at the First Congregational Church. The Rev. William T. McElveen, pastor, and Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCullough, a member, were strong advocates of the censor board. When the church was notified, however, that its pictures must be censored at 30 cents a reel, interest in the picture programs grew cold.

Watterson R. Rothacker, general manager of the Industrial Moving Picture Company, left on a business trip to the Pacific coast Saturday night, December 4. He will be gone about two weeks, and will spend most of the time in San Francisco and Los Angeles. He will return to Chicago on or about December 21.

H. L. Wallick, one of the owners of the Republic Co-operative Film Company, of this city, returned Saturday, December 4, from a three days' business trip through Iowa. Mr. Wallick reported fair business conditions in the territory covered.

"The Warring Millions," at the Olympic last week, was taken off before the week closed. Kitty Kelly, of the Tribune, wrote of the pictures that the gentleman who compiled them made a mistake in nomenclature, as the "millions" are but sparsely represented by "less than a few hundreds," and that the "warring" except for a short flashing of a stirring storming of Ivangorod is mainly a matter of preparation for the "devastating, destructive doom" about which so much had been written and so little seen.

After all the pother about graft in connection with "The Birth of a Nation," which attracted the attention of many thousands in the city at the time, the week ending Saturday, December 4, was entirely free from it. The newspapers had not a line about the scandal and nobody talks about it any more. It is hoped, however, that the men responsible for clouding Chicago's fair name and fame will, in due time, suffer the just consequences.

William Farnum, Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and Oscar Apfel, director of the photoplays in which Mr. Farnum will shortly begin work at the Los Angeles studio, stopped over in Chicago for a few hours on Thursday, December 2, on their way to the coast. Mr. Farnum, during his brief stay, was guest of honor at a luncheon given in the Hotel Sherman by C. L. Worthington, district manager of the Fox Company in the middle west. Quite a number of prominent Chicago exhibitors and members of the press were present. Mr. Farnum, Mr. Sheehan, Mr. Apfel, William Seelye and Aaron A. Jones made brief addresses. Before leaving, Mr. Farnum was called on by William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, and, needless to say, "The Spoilers" and its fame was duly toasted.

LINCOLN WITH LUBIN.

With the completion of the five-reel feature for V-L-S-E, Inc., release early in January, "The Wonderful Wager," the Ford flivver comedy in which Raymond Hitchcock, Marion Sunshine and Jack Henderson appear in the leading roles, Rene Plaisetty, of the Lubin staff of directors, has begun work on his second production under the Lubin banner. The story is one written by Daniel Carson Goodman especially as a co-starring vehicle for June Daye, the popular Lubin star, and E. K. Lincoln, the former Vitagraph star and head of the Lincoln players, who has just joined the Lubin Company and makes his first appearance as a Lubin player in this four-reel feature, "Revenge."

Little more than one year and a half ago, Mr. Lincoln severed his connection with the Vitagraph Company to begin pictures with his own company, the Photo-Play Production Company. His first release with that corporation was "The Littlest Rebel," in which he starred and which was produced under the direction of Edgar Lewis, who is also now on the Lubin forces. Later Mr. Lincoln at his studio in the Berkshires produced many more features under the direction of Jack Pratt, who is also now directing for Lubin, all of which releases have gone to further promote him as a leader among photo-players.

TOM QUILL IS A NEW YORK VISITOR.

Tom Quill, head of the moving picture poster department of the Goes Lithographing Co., of Chicago, arrived in New York Monday morning, December 6. He will be at the Astor Hotel for about a week, and will be pleased to give details regarding the Goes poster product to those interested.

FOR PERMANENT ABOLITION OF CENSORS.

Los Angeles Exhibitors, Council and Business Men in Favor of Casting Out the Needless Board of Censors.

AT A MEETING called by J. A. Quinn and other exhibitors of this city last Monday evening, a large number of manufacturers, exchangemen and theater owners discussed the idea of presenting to the council a petition to permanently do away with the local board of censors. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and showed that the proposition to abolish the board was highly in favor. A committee composed of prominent men was named who are to meet and prepare an argument for their cause to be submitted to the City Council.

The meeting was held in the banquet room of a downtown confectioncry store and lasted from six-thirty until after ten. After the dinner, the meeting was called to order by Manager T. W. Johns of the local Mutual exchange. Dr. Sam. Atkinson was introduced. He acted as chairman for the evening. It was decided that the following-named men should act on the committee to see the mayor and council: Thomas Dickson, Fred Kley, S. S. Hutchinson, Henry McRae, Lee Dougherty, F. E. Woods, D. Whiting, J. A. Quinn, T. W. Johns, E. H. Allen and Sam Atkinson, chairman. The committee will meet on Wednesday evening to further discuss the matter.

In his talk Mr. Atkinson stated that there were about 122 theaters here, and that at least 50 per cent. of them would be able to enter strongly into an advertising campaign to put before the people the proposition of doing away with the censors. Slides, posters, etc., will be used.

As a lever to work out the action through the council, it was suggested that everyone interested submit to the committee the names of their personal bankers so that they could be interviewed and be urged to sign the petition which goes to the council, thus bringing much weight to bear on the matter. It is imperative that the city officials be enlightened as to the magnitude of the great industry and its people.

After six weeks of hard work on the part of Mr. Quinn and other interested men, the outlook for a speedy and effective campaign is highly encouraging, and with the proper co-operation of the film mcn here the fate of the board of censors ought to be about as bright as that of the turkeys which figured so prominently in the big fowl war of November 25 last.

NEW CHIEF FOR UNIVERSAL CITY.

H. O. Davis, Director General of San Diego Exposition, Appointed Second Vice-President of Universal Film Manufacturing Company and General Manager of Universal City—Henry McRae to Take Producing Company to the Orient.

The appointment of H. O. Davis, director general of the San Diego Exposition, to be chief executive of the Pacific coast studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company exploded like a bombshell this week in Los Angeles filmdom. It certainly was a great surprise to the trade in general and kept so secret that only a very few on the inside might have had an inkling of what was going to happen.

The official announcement came to Henry McRae, director general at Universal City, on Tuesday this week in the form of a letter from President Carl Laemmle, stating the appointment of H. O. Davis, the exposition manager of the San Diego Fair, and that Mr. Davis will have complete charge of the west coast plant and complete control of the productions. Mr. McRae, according to the official letter, will be sent to the Orient with a large producing company. Mr. Davis arrived at Universal City Wednesday morning and took immediate charge.

There have been rumors of late that there has been trouble at Universal City because of divided authority. Mr. McRae in an interview denied these reports. "President Laemmle told me in his letter that he had decided that I was entitled to the vacation and rest for which I have frequently asked," said Mr. McRae. "It has long been my desire to take a producing company to the Orient, and President Laemmle informed me that I could carry out my wish. I will take the trip as soon as I can get together the company I want."

HARRY LEONHARDT AND WORLD MAN ON TOUR.

The general western representative of the Fox Film Corporation and the younger member of the Moving Picture World's western office spent the week-end in San Diego among the producers and exhibitors, accompanied by R. E. Barron, also of the Fox office. To forestall your thinking that it was a "soft" outing for us, read the following: The poor typist was sleeping peacefully at 7:30 when Leonhardt called up and said, "Come on if you want to drive to San Diego with us; we're leaving at nine o'clock." In fifteen minutes we were leaving the bungalow and during the next forty-five seconds were on board of a suburban bound for the city. We left at nine and drove all afternoon. In the evening Mr. Leonhardt signed up Manager Hicks of the Twin theaters, the Plaza and Cabrillo, for Fox pictures. The writing end of the party trailed him and visited the exhibitors. With seven hours' sleep behind us, and a roll and some coffee to last us, we completed the visit to the southern exposition city's showmen, and when the bells murmured eight we were puffing easily out of town on the 135-mile journey to the Hub. After three hours of barking along the newly-opened coast highway, we had put behind us 102 miles, the average being 34 miles an hour, which is a pretty good average for hills, city, and grade work.

Mr. Leonhardt is so enthusiastic over the 1916 pictures that he is confident of features being shown for as much as $5, and that is going some, he says, but the pictures will be going better. And if any one does not think he is enthusiastic over the new million-dollar Fox pictures that Herbert Brenon is now producing out in Jamaica, the doubter better go and see Harry Leonhardt, for he certainly believes in the coming big picture.

We found that R. E. Hicks, of the Twin theaters, had been doing some good work since we saw him last. He had just completed a deal whereby he became sole owner of the two best houses in San Diego, proving that the show business is no bad business. Mr. Hicks has faith in San Diego and is sure to make good with his two houses, one of which is changing from a program to the Fox features, and the other runs the General.

Mr. Bush, manager of the Broadway and Superba, reports business as very satisfactory with Paramount in one and Triangle in the other.

QUINN RUNS THEATER ALL NIGHT.

Los Angeles has an all-night show. Quinn's Superba is the theater and "Damaged Goods" is the show. Finding that his regular seven shows daily were unable to accommodate all the people who wanted to see the picture, J. A. Quinn, the wideawake Los Angeles exhibitor, first tried the experiment of running special midnight matinees. This took so well that Mr. Quinn decided to run all night on Saturdays. Six extra shows were therefore given, the first at 11 P. M. and the others at 1 A. M., 3 A. M., 5 A. M., 7 A. M. and 9 A. M., making a total of thirteen shows in the twenty-four hours. Last Saturday approximately twelve thousand persons were admitted and all seats sold for the three o'clock in the morning show. The five o'clock attendance was lighter. This is the first all-night show in the west and, according to the writer's knowledge, the only first-class moving picture theater in the United States running a twenty-four-hour show.

DOINGS OF THE ROLIN FILM COMPANY.

Gilbert Pratt, Otto Friese and Blanche White have recently joined the Rolin Film Company, all having taken part in the seventeenth of the "Lonesome Luke Phunphilms" series, which is now completed. Saturday, last week, was a strenuous day at the Rolin studios, and two of the players had to be sent to the hospital as the result of rough and tumble comedy stunts.

The Rolin Film Company is planning to build an additional stage, about 60 by 75 feet, to take care of the large sets being used for the Phunphilms pictures. All the members of the company were treated to an excellent dinner to celebrate the miraculous escape of A. C. De Lang, Rolin superintendent of rolling stock, when he turned turtle in Manager Whitney's big racing car. Manager Whitney has since sold the car and everybody is breathing freely again.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY HAS NOW MOVED TO HOLLYWOOD.

The western studios of the Vitagraph Company have now been removed to the eleven-acre site purchased by the company in Hollywood. The new location is on Prospect avenue and Talmadge street, and the new telephone number is Hollywood 2. Only two of the buildings remain at Santa Monica—the dark-room, and the negative department. These will remain there for a couple of months, during which time a modern laboratory and film room will be constructed at Hollywood. The present office quarters are only temporary, but the plans for the new ones look very promising. In addition to the production of Blue Ribbon features, the new studio will be devoted to the making of three-reel Broadway Star Features, with occasional comedies of one and two reels.

JEWEL PICTURE THEATER OPENS.

The Jewel Picture theater was opened on December 4. It is located at 502 East Fifth street, and Henry Silverman, formerly manager of the Superba, is the proprietor and manager. The house has been remodeled and a new front put in. Admission will be 10 cents, and the Chicago Tribune war pictures are booked for the opening show.

THOMAS H. INCE TO STAGE BIG INDIAN PICTURE.

Producer Thomas H. Ince is making preparations for the staging of an elaborate Indian drama. Sixty-five full-blooded Indians were brought to Inceville last week by W. A. Brooks and fifty more of the redskins arrived this week. The Indians, who are mostly of the Sioux tribe, are occupying a complete village of tepees at Inceville. They are splendid specimens of their race and range in age from two months to ninety-two years, the youngest being a lusty-voiced papoose and the oldest a well perserved old chieftain.

Negotiations are under way for even more of the bronzed warriors, and W. A. Brooks has been instructed to comb the country for all available redskins. It is expected that within a few weeks Producer Ince will have at his disposal several hundred Indians to appear in the first of the Triangle-Kay-Bee Indian series. C. Gardner Sullivan, the well-known photoplaywright, is now at work on the scenario, and the property rooms at Inceville are daily being stored with all kinds of Indian "props."

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

The Gamut Club is making preparations for an entertainment on Christmas night of the members of the acting profession who are in the current productions at Los Angeles theaters during the holiday week. To raise funds a public entertainment will be given on December 8, in which many members of the Los Angeles photoplay colony will take part. The chief event will be a travesty on motion picture making called "The Making of a Movie" in which several film stars will be featured. A Gamut Club dinner will be given Wednesday this week when further details are to be discussed.

What it is believed will be the first midwinter poinsettia fete in the United States will be held at Hollywood December 9, 10 and 11. In addition to the interest attached to its novelty, the festival will have a deep historical significance. It is to be held on the grounds of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, on which stands the grove of ancient trees from which Hollywood takes its name. It was in the shade of this grove that Father Junipero Serra celebrated the first mass in this part of California. During the service he blessed the trees, which thereupon became known as the "Holy Wood." Later the community which grew around the trees was named "Hollywood."

A feature of the festival will be an exhibition of a large collection of Father Junipero's relics, collected from all parts of California.

Amusement features will be supplied by the motion picture companies of Hollywood.

A special Christmas fund for the children whom Santa Claus often forgets—the children of the poor—is being started at the Hollywood studios of the Kalem Company. It is planned to select a family in need of necessities and Christmas cheer and for the entire company to play Santa Claus Christmas Eve.

Keep your eye on Ince! Thomas H. Ince, the brainy producer who is turning out Triangle plays for the big program, is losing his command of Inceville and Incity, the two large picture plants near here. At the time of going to press the latest film story in the evening papers was one like this:

> An event of future importance in the motion picture world occurred here this week when a new heir—a boy—arrived at the Hollywood home of Thomas H. Ince, general manager of Inceville. Mrs. Ince was reported today as doing nicely.

Sid. Grauman, manager of the Empress theater in San Francisco, was a visitor in the city this week. He reports that the Exposition City's police are on his trail for having blocked traffic while people stampeded for tickets and entrance to the show to see Fox features run in connection with the regular show. Harry Leonhardt, general western representative of the Fox film firm, need not write. We know it now.

Tom Ince and Some of His Indians.

That attention is given to every detail in filming the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "God's Country and the Woman," is illustrated by the following little incident. A member of another company also working in the Bear Valley challenged Nell Shipman as to the blanket coat she was wearing, wondering why she had not secured a genuine Hudson Bay blanket coat.

Nell Shipman in Her Hudson Bay Company's Blanket Coat.

Miss Shipman merely smiled and opened up the label, showing the would-be critic the three bars and a half trademark of the Hudson Bay Company. An interesting feature in this Vitagraph production is Mr. Sturgeon's wonderful collection of sledge dogs. There is the Siberian wolf-dog team which has won the Alaska Derby for the last six years, led by the famous Kolma, the malamute of prodigious strength and endurance. Then there are Captain Smith's full bred wolves and several dogs belonging to the company. Several close-ups of these dogs in the snow make some pictures interesting for nature students.

Frank Downing, a moving picture actor with some company the name of which we do not know, suffered injuries this week when he was in an explosion in Griffith Park, near Universal City. Fate seemed to have a double starred bunch of bad luck for him that day, for while the ambulance sped along to the hospital it crashed into a car on a corner and demolished it, also wrecking itself and further injuring the unfortunate player.

Miss Isabell D'Armond, who is known throughout the east as a vaudeville player, arrived in this city this week from a tour of the far east, having landed in San Francisco early in the week. She will enter the picture game here, or else return to New York. She was in England at the time of the war's outbreak and traveled east instead of west, landing in Australia, where she played the board stage, but it will be the shadow stage for her from now on.

The presence of mind of a Venice, Cal., policeman, combined with the common sense of a number of men and women who aided his efforts, saved what might have been a fatal theater stampede when a fuse blew out in the gallery of the Neptune theater. The fuse was for a ventilating fan, and the semi-darkness, with only the lights of the exits showing, and the sizzling, flaring fuse added to the terror of men, women and children, and for a time it seemed that nothing could prevent a panic that would get beyond control. Some hair-brained man in the audience yelled at the top of his voice "Fire!" causing the panic to start. But, fortunately, the officer was in the lobby and rushed in, quieting the near-mob.

When Neva Gerbar left Santa Barbara on the completion of her engagement with the American Film Manufacturing Company, her automobile was literally loaded down with beautiful flowers. All the players were sorry to see her go and wished her good luck.

Don Meany, formerly manager of productions for the Quality Picture Corporation in New York, where he went with the company a few weeks ago, has returned to Los Angeles. Mr. Meany made a friendly call this week at the World office and stated that his return was caused principally on account of his wife who has been ill and by physicians advised a milder climate than the east. Don Meany, previous to his connection with the Quality Picture Corporation, enjoyed a similar position with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and was for two years publicity manager for the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company in Chicago.

The moving picture men have not been satisfied with invading the papers for legitimate space, but here is Ince grabbing publicity through the columns of the dailies, headed "Along the Waterfront." The following is from the Los Angeles Examiner of recent date, and the meaning is known to those who have viewed the screen dramas.

SAN PEDRO, LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Nov. 24.—A "king's frigate" with full armanent will engage a low, rakish pirate craft off the Government breakwater here the latter part of the week. The pirates will board the king's ship front, yard arms of their craft and engage in hand to hand fights on the deck of the frigate, while grappling hooks and lines will hold the two vessels together. While all this is being done moving picture cameras will operate, taking in all of the scenes. The preparations for the fight have been going on here for several weeks.

The barkentine Fremont owned by a moving picture company and which has been stationed here for several years, will be the pirate ship and the bark Alden Besse, recently purchased by another picture company, will be the "king's frigate."

The vessels will proceed outside the breakwater under their own sail, each having been equipped with new rigging, and there in the sight of the shore and in the slght of passing passenger steamers an old-time naval battle will be staged.

We should hear more about this from Kenneth O'Hara of Incity.

Another paper, now accustomed to the slang of the producers, comes out with a heading like this, with a neat little story as follows:

TOO MUCH ACTION.

Ready! Camera!

Miss Constance Talmadge, 16, movie actress, rushed to the arms of her sweetheart. As she did so a blank cartridge in one of the revolvers she wore at a belt was discharged. The wad struck the right ankle of the young woman, inflicting a flesh wound. She was treated at the receiving hospital and then sent to her home, 6665 Franklin avenue.

Miss Myrtle Gonzalez, who is being featured in her own company with the Universal, has requested that we put a stop to the rumors that have been flying around that she was married last week. We know positively that she is not. Her charming little sister was wedded, and some one put the film star in a story and the papers copied it—and there you are. The film star, Myrtle, is not wedded, but her sister is. So there!

Director General Henry McRae of Universal City is indeed a busy mortal. The other day we stopped in to say hello and be informed of great things. The genial head of the Laemmle forces was busy at a tray of victuals and had just dismissed some orderly on business, when we poked our head in at the door of the highest sanctum sanctorum in the world. While talking to him he transacted much business, including the ordering of the fifty palms to decorate the Laemmle highway, advise a lovelorn young actress not to marry, administer his signature to three letters and a voucher, give orders to the hospital to deliver Hobart Henley, plus his fractured ankle and a pair of plaster casts to the stage for a retake, tell a director where to find a wandering trestle to burn for a railroad story, inform a competitive producing company where they could trail a coyote to be used as a wolf in a northern story, fix up damages with a farmer whose steer was killed when a bunch of cattle was used in a round-up scene, and answer the telephone five times, besides telling me all the news of the day and wishing me a happy Thanksgiving backed up with a Havana panatella, and then getting up and answering a call out the window to a girl who said "I want to see you." He said, "What's samatter with your eyes, can't you see me now?" But she argued that she wanted to talk to him and he replied that he could hear every word she said. Such is the life of the boss. And yet he always wears one of those sapolio-proof grins!

Manager Markowitz of the local Universal exchange is tearing up the place and giving it a thorough remodeling and overhauling. He has found that business is so good that the present quarters were too small and as the plant is in a good location it would be impossible to move, so he has condensed the spaces and built a long addition to the balcony, which will allow of about twice as much work.

Reports have been circulated here that the Biograph Company, which only arrived here a few weeks ago, were going to close their Los Angeles studios and send their players back east. Manager Lee Dougherty, when interviewed by a World representative, stated that the report that had been printed in one of the daily papers was not correct. Two companies, Mr. Dougherty said, had been let out on account of the reduced output and given their transportation back to New York, but no closing of the studios was contemplated.

Five Universal players had a narrow escape Wednesday, last week, when the car in which they were riding overturned at the corner of Garey avenue and Lordsburg road, hurling them from the machine, which itself turned completely over and faced backward.

The accident occurred shortly after five o'clock. Fortunately there was neither top nor windshield on the car, so that the men were all thrown clear of the wreck, and were not pinned under the machine. A considerable amount of household articles, combs, brushes, etc., were carried with them, probably having been used in the "staging" of one of the big film productions which the Universal Film Company are preparing.

One of the men was at first thought badly injured and was rushed to Pomona in search of the Pomona Valley Hospital. The attending physician discovered that his wounds were slight, and the injured man was soon on his way to Los Angeles.

Fischer, a well-known exhibitor and at one time proprietor of the American and College theaters of this city, filed this week a suit in Superior Court against Irving R. Augur and E. M. That local schools are highly interested in visual education is shown by the recent efforts of County Superintendent Keppel who is trying to secure some of the educational films which will be cast off by the Exposition in San Francisco after the closing of the fair. Mr. Keppel says: "These films will be of inconceivable value for some of our work and it would seem advisable that some effort be made to secure some, if not all of them." As a result Supervisor Woodley is investigating the matter while on a trip to the north. And some one said that "moving pictures were only for amusement and not education."

Among the midnighters at Quinn's all evening and early morning shows was Roscoe Arbuckle and party who drifted in at the time the milkman was harnessing up, to witness the 3 o'clock show of "Damaged Goods." One might have thought there were twenty dollar bills given free with each admission, to see the crowd.

The Princess theater of Azusa, Cal., has been sold to Josephine Peacher and W. W. Sandy of San Jacinto. Mutual program and Paramount features will be continued. Messrs. Hickman and McDonald, the former proprietors, are looking for another location.

RETURN OF WHEELER FILM REQUESTED.

Mrs. DeWitt C. Wheeler, widow of the well known slide manufacturer and photographer who died recently, is anxious to locate the last picture made by her husband, "The Sculptor," a two-reel production. Mr. Wheeler was negotiating for the sale of the film on the day before his death, and at the present time it is supposed to be in the vaults of some New York concern. This picture is legally the property of Mrs. Wheeler, and any information leading to its recovery will be greatly appreciated. Communications may be addressed to Mrs. Wheeler, care Moving Picture World.

MUTUAL CAMERAMAN WITH FORD PARTY.

So important does Pell Mitchell, editor of the Mutual Weekly, regard the Ford Peace Expedition that he is sending his assistant, Lawrence Darmour, to act as cameraman for his motographic weekly. Mr. Darmour has been relieved from duty at the home office, Flushing, N. Y., indefinitely, and detailed to stay with the Ford party as long as it is engaged in its efforts to "get the men out of the trenches by Christmas," even if that slogan means Christmas, 1918.

CINEMA CAMERA CLUB TO HOLD BALL.

The Cinema Camera Club, the official organization in the East of the cameramen, will hold a ball at the Palm Garden, Fifty-eighth street, near Lexington avenue, on the evening of Saturday, December 18. The committee of arrangements is Phil Rosen, Walter Scott, A. L. Ausbacher, Arthur Edeson and George Lane. The grand march will be headed by Anita Stewart and a male star. As was done at the convention ball in San Francisco and at the big affair in Boston on December 1, motion pictures will be taken of the march. These, it is said, will be released by the weeklies. Many novel and special features have been arranged for the entertainment of the guests and visiting players.

The sum resulting from the profits of the ball will be devoted to procuring a new clubhouse. The tickets are $2, which will admit a couple and include wardrobe accommodations. Boxes have been taken by the leading manufacturing companies. Advance sales of tickets indicate a most successful affair.

PICTURE PLAYERS' INSURANCE.

Myles McCarthy, who has been specially engaged by the Eagle Manufacturing and Producing Company, for his odd delineation of peculiar characters, has discovered the one responsible insurance company willing to insure moving picture players. Most concerns refuse a risk of this kind, owing to the many casualties in the routine of a motion picture actor's day. Myles is not out after anyone's money and will acquaint those who are interested with the name of the company willing to incorporate a disability contract in the regular policy. The firm he has discovered will arrange for a life and old age income as well. A letter to McCarthy will be cheerfully answered if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. The company has a record of thirty-three years' stability and is guaranteed by the new insurance law. It has business written up to and including September of this year amounting to $145,000,000.

FLORENCE LAWRENCE TO RETURN TO THE SCREEN.

After an absence from the screen of over a year Florence Lawrence is at last making preparations to return to the profession that claims her as one of its first and one of its best. Nothing definite is yet known as to her plans. We understand, however, that several offers are pending.

There is much to be gained by the manufacturer as well as the public by the return of a favorite star, especially at a time when the moving picture is making such rapid strides, and the quality of work demanded by an intelligent public requires that only the best of talent be supplied to them.

NEW PLAY BY CHARLES K. HARRIS.

Charles K. Harris has written a very timely new photoplay, which is being directed by Perry N. Vekroff and will soon be ready for release, entitled "Should a Baby Die?" In the cast are practically all of those who appeared in "For Sale, a Baby," including Arthur Donaldson, Conia Masselle, Florence Hackett, Gazelle Marche, Camille Dahlberg and Jack Johnson. The part of the baby is taken by "Baby Christine," an infant in one of the hospitals. Mr. Harris contends that "Love" can save the life of a child and mend its broken body, and his new picture tells the story of a child who is thus saved.

KLEINE MAKES CHANNING POLLOCK STORY.

"Our Lady of Laughter" is the odd title of a story by Channing Pollock, now in work at the Kleine studios in the Bronx. It is a story of theatrical life on Broadway and will feature Arthur Hoops and Alma Hanlon. This popular twain will be supported by Frank Belcher, Herbert Hayes and others. The Pollock story is considered one of the scenario finds of the season and in the opinion of those engaged in its making will provide more thrills and sensations than is usually found in two ordinary five-reel features. "Our Lady of Laughter" will be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

GERTRUDE ROBINSON JOINS GAUMONT.

A deal that may well be characterized as of stellar importance has just been concluded whereby Miss Gertrude Robinson goes to Jacksonville, Fla., to augment the Gaumont forces wintering in that city. Miss Robinson will appear in Rialto Star Features, being allotted a line of parts similar to those for which she is so favorably known throughout America.

Among the Picture Theaters

News and Views of Photoplay Houses Everywhere

CRESCENT THEATER, NEW YORK CITY.

Mangan Takes Five Year Lease on Big Bronx Photoplay House—Mails Program to 4,000 Patrons—Weekly Advertising Bill $150—Seats 1,800.

THE Crescent theater, situated on Boston Road between 167th and 168th streets, in the Borough of the Bronx, New York City, is now being operated by Francis A. Mangan, who has taken a five year lease on the structure. The Crescent theater is a little over a year old, being opened on September 1, 1914, as a legitimate playhouse. It is the property of John M. Haffen, son of Lewis M. Haffen, who was for several years president of the borough of the Bronx.

At this house, the speaking drama was not productive of favorable results, and the theater was closed a few months later. It was subsequently opened as a moving picture theater but was poorly conducted. The Photoplay Theaters Company, an organization operating a number of motion picture theaters, observed that it was a beautiful house and in a location in which a steady patronage could be developed if properly managed and negotiated for the structure. On June 1 of this year that company opened the Crescent as a high class motion picture theater, and Mr. Mangan, who was at that time manager of the Cumberland theater, a Brooklyn house operated by the Photoplay company, was installed as manager. A few weeks later the house was being operated on a profitable basis, and Mr. Mangan was promoted to the position of general manager of the Photoplay Theaters Company, which position he held until he consummated the deal for the leasing of the Crescent for himself.

The Crescent is one of the biggest and most beautiful picture theaters in the Bronx. Its dimensions are 120 by 170 feet. The front is faced with marble. There is a red and green tile roof which slopes toward the front and which is in perfect harmony with the general exterior color scheme. A beautiful glass canopy extends across the sidewalk in front of the entrance. This is profusely illuminated with a large number of incandescent lights and by two artistic electroliers which are immediately outside of the lobby doors. A big electric sign done in different colored lights and bearing the name of the theater extends from the roof to the top of the canopy.

As with other parts of the house the lobby is at all times spotlessly clean. The color scheme here is gold, light brown and cream, and is in conformity with the general interior artistic effect. Marble tile is the material used for the floor of the lobby, and there is a gentle slope to it. It is nearly forty feet in length and about twenty-five feet wide. Marble wainscoting extends for a height of five feet. The frames containing the posters and photographic scenes of current and future attractions in the lobby have been arranged with an artistic eye. They are not all bundled near the entrance, but have been placed at equal distances between one another. These frames have a two-inch brass moulding, are glass covered, and are cleaned and polished each day. The lobby is illuminated with six handsome electroliers, each containing six Tungsten lights. The box office is in the left-hand side and is marked off by a brass railing.

Six wide bronze-colored doors lead into the auditorium. There is a foyer twenty-two feet wide and this is covered with thick red carpet which is also the flooring used for the aisles, stairways, balcony and boxes. The foyer is lighted with eight electroliers of the type and style used in the lobby, and these are kept burning during all shows. A marble wall four feet in height surmounted with brass poles, from which are hung red plush draperies, divide the seating arrangement from the foyer. Potted plants are placed in convenient positions throughout the interior, and add to the coziness of the house. The auditorium is 107 feet wide, and five wide aisles divide the seating plan. A wide marble stairway at each end of the foyer leads to the balcony. Here is located the operating room which is up-to-date in every way. It is built of absolutely fireproof material, and conforms with the fire laws. Two Simplex machines of the latest model are used. The throw is 108 feet, and the projection is excellent at all times. The house seats 1,800.

Mr. Mangan told a representative of the Moving Picture World when he called at the Crescent the other evening that he is trying to make the house the society theater of the Bronx. That he is carrying out this assertion literally is borne out by the way the theater is being conducted.

The comforts and conveniences of the patrons of the Crescent have been carefully considered by Mr. Mangan. He has set aside the entire balcony for smoking, and has a beautiful parlor for women with big reclining chairs. A maid is always in constant attendance. In the foyer there is a drinking fountain with sanitary cups, and a public telephone stands behind the box office.

Artistic Stage Setting of Crescent Theater, Bronx, New York City.

The width of the stage and the height of the proscenium gave Mr. Mangan ample room to work out the beautiful and artistic stage setting which he himself designed. The view presented is a graceful interior scene with windows on each side of the screen looking out upon distant hills, rivers, walks and trees. In front of this sits the orchestra which is inclosed in an artistic parapet. A fountain, a number of plants and handsome draperies in red and gold add to the embellishment of the scene. The floor of the stage is laid with stained blocks of hard wood to resemble marble and the effect of the entire setting is most pleasing. A gold fibre screen is the projection surface. The stage is forty-four feet wide and the proscenium opening is 30 feet high. Both male and female ushers are employed. They are polite, accommodating, and always neatly dressed.

The ventilation system of the Crescent is so perfect that if one were to sit in the auditorium all day he would not experience that depressing and drowsy feeling caused by foul air. Every few minutes the air is completely changed. Everything that adds to the comfort of the patrons is brought into use. In the summer time when all the exit doors are open, Mr. Mangan has a spray of water falling from a number of the exits leading into the spacious alleyway at each side of the structure. This method not only has a cooling effect but actually clarifies are air as it passes through the spray and into the auditorium.

Capacious Foyer of Crescent Theater, Bronx, New York City.

The Crescent is brought to the attention of Bronxites by big painted advertisements on billboards, by twenty-four-sheet posters, and by advertisements in the local papers. During the first week that Mr. Mangan had the house in his possession he spent something like $300 in advertising, and now the weekly expenditure for this item never falls below $150. The theater has a mailing list of nearly four thousand names, and to each one a weekly program is mailed. Exhibitor Mangan says that he has received many commendatory letters and remarks from patrons on this method of bringing to their attention the Crescent's program for the week. One excellent advantage of this system is that the patron does not have to go out of his home or out of his way in order to learn what pictures are to be shown; all that information is brought right to his door by the aid of Uncle Sam's mail service.

Here is the scheme by which Mr. Mangan works up his mail list. From the city directory is taken a thousand or two names of persons living in the vicinity of the theater, and to each one of them is mailed a pass for admission, with the stipulation that if the recipient is interested in receiving a program of the Crescent each week that he state his wish in either "yes" or "no" in the specified place on the pass and present it at the door of the theater with his name and address written plainly thereon. By this method Mr. Mangan is able to determine the number of persons who are interested in his shows. The World man was told that this system is proving quite effective, and that it is repeated with a different set of names at intervals of a couple of months.

A fine evening's entertainment can always be obtained at the Crescent. No special program is used, but the pick of all releases. Recently a program composed of all colored pictures was given. This bill was made up of subjects of dramatic, comedy, scenic and scientific classification. This innovation at the Crescent was well received, and many of the patrons asked that a similar program be given again. Another feature of the theater's bill is the musical program. A large part of the credit for this is due to the leader of the orchestra, Henry J. Clausen, who views each picture on the screen forming the day's show before the selections are picked. He then has a rehearsal, and the result is that there is harmony between the action on the screen and the music. The overtures are also worthy of praise. These are usually selected from classic pieces and run from five to eight minutes. While the overture is being played, the house and stage are fully lighted, but as the orchestra is nearing the end of the piece the lights are gradually turned off, excepting those which are always burning. The heavy velvet curtain covering the screen is then raised and the picture projected. Rounds of applause mark the appreciation of the audience at the end of each overture. There are no signs of impatience while the selection is being played, for the patrons of the Crescent are lovers of good music.

Several of the photoplayers have appeared on the stage of the Crescent, and the throngs that have sought admission on each of these occasions assumed the proportion of multitudes. Among those who have appeared are Francis X. Bushman, Mary Miles Minter and Anita King. It was necessary for Mr. Mangan to stop the sale of tickets when these popular photoplayers were present. It is the intention of the manager to present from time to time a popular moving picture actor or actress.

The staff of the Crescent consists of thirty-four employees. This picture house charges an admission of 10 and 15 cents, and 5 cents for children. Boxes sell at 15 cents. These are the prices for both evening and matinee shows. Augustus P. Ireland is the assistant manager. The Crescent is a photoplay house of which the inhabitants of the Bronx may justly be proud.

NEW EDISONIA THEATER, JOHNSON CITY, TENN.

After undergoing a thorough overhauling and extensive remodeling, the New Edisonia has been opened in Johnson City, Tenn., and George Keys, its owner, is being congratulated on the very attractive appearance that it now makes. New chairs have been installed and a new hardwood floor laid. The interior decorations are quiet and refined, and show skill in their selection. Two new projection machines will insure a proper showing of the films. The lighting arrangement and the special electrical features are excellent, and were accomplished under the direction of Mr. Keys, who has had considerable experience in that kind of work. The New Edisonia has a seating capacity of about 350.

New Edisonia Theater, Johnson City, Tenn.

In announcing the opening of the house, Mr. Keys stated that "The New Edisonia as a purveyor of amusements will establish a new record in Johnson City with a refined high-class entertainment embracing the newest and most recent releases of Universal products, including the Broadway Star features."

Mr. Keys is also the proprietor of the Majestic theater, operated under the management of Ben Pflaum, who has been with him for a number of years and is one of the most popular men in the section. This house has a much larger seating capacity and runs road shows with occasional motion picture feature exhibitions. In other words, with its larger seating capacity it is better able to care for the "bigger stuff." Both houses enjoy an excellent patronage.

RIDOUT REMODELING STAR THEATER.

L. M. Ridout, manager of the Star theater, Denison, Tex., is having that house renovated and enlarged. He has taken the property east of the photoplay house on which to build the addition. According to the present plans, the building to be occupied by the enlarged theater will be 120 by 50 feet, and of this space all but a small tract on either side of the theater front will be used for the showhouse. The ceiling will be 30 feet high, and the auditorium will accommodate 600 persons. There are to be four aisles and a foyer 6 feet wide. The front of the building is to be of white enamel brick with all doors finished in brass. The house will be ventilated by twelve big ventilators in the ceiling. The Star is to be the name of the new photoplay theater.

STRAND THEATER, DETROIT, MICH.

Kunsky Adds Another Photoplay House to His Growing Chain of Picture Palaces—Song Birds in Wicker Cages a Novel Feature.

THE Strand theater, situated at Fourteenth and Grand River avenues, Detroit, Mich., is the largest and latest of John H. Kunsky's magnificent chain of theaters. This theater is located in the heart of the most thickly populated part of the city, on one of the principal business streets, and at a prominent transfer point. No expense was spared to make the house as attractive, as cosy and as comfortable as possible. The exterior of the building was laid up with face brick and trimmed with terra cotta, and over the entrance a beautiful marquise projects, forming ample protection for patrons. The lobby is designed on the French order and with its numerous mirrors and poster effects make a beautiful sight.

Perhaps the most charming section of this photoplay house is the wide spacious foyer that one enters upon leaving the lobby. The foyer with stairways leading off from it to the balconies, is tastily furnished with beautiful wicker furniture, and the lighting effect, which is very soft, is obtained with wicker lamps artistically arranged. One of the novel features, which are perhaps used in no other theater, are the charming song birds which Mr. Kunsky has situated among the palms in beautiful wicker cages. These birds seem quite at home and seem to try to assist the orchestra. The effect is charming, and is just one of the little touches that make the Strand theater different.

The theater proper is one of the most beautiful in the West. The pergola and garden effect, used carry out the same cosy atmosphere that pervades in the foyer. Artificial flowers and foliage are strewn about the lattice work, and numerous bunches of foliage hold incandescent light, giving this room a very pleasing effect. All of the lighting fixtures in the theater are made of wicker and lined with cretonne. The side walls of the auditorium are decorated in the form of a landscape, which tends to make the theater look much larger than it really is. This work is done in strict accordance with the arbor effect used so that the whole theater gives one the impression of being a great outdoor garden.

The stage setting, which was designed and built in Mr. Kunsky's own studio, is made out to represent a beautiful Japanese garden with its dainty brooks and lakes and the beautiful color effects that only a Japanese garden possesses. The picture sheet is cleverly arranged in this setting, and the lighting effects that are used are artistic and novel. Howard Pierce, who designed and had charge of the construction of this setting, deserves credit for the beautiful and unique effect obtained. The theater was decorated by Goldberg & Jaggin. C. H. Crane, who has designed and superintended the construction of all of Mr. Kunsky's theaters, besides many others, was the architect.

Arthur C. Hoganson is manager of the Strand. He has been associated with Mr. Kunsky for a number of years, having previously managed the Garden theater.

The Strand makes the eighth theater for John H. Kunsky, the other seven being the Washington, Liberty, Alhambra, Garden, Royal, Columbia and Empress.

Pictures are changed every day at the Strand and the prices run from 10 to 25 cents. Three performances are given daily, one in the afternoon and two in the evening. Only the best features are shown.

The Strand has met with big success since it was opened in September. It seems that the people in that particular section of Detroit have been "hungry" for a high-class motion picture theater. At least that is the impression one would get judging from the crowds that are in evidence at every show. As in all other Kunsky theaters, the policy of giving service to the patron is of first consideration at the Strand. Manager Hoganson will go to any reasonable bounds to please and satisfy his patrons. He is ever watchful of details as he believes the big things take care of themselves more readily than the smaller ones.

The Strand is a corporation, the capital stock being $50,000, all common stock. Mr. Kunsky has the majority of the stock, the balance being held by people who live in the district where the theater is located. The Strand is at the intersection of three car lines, and taps the main arteries of the rapidly developing northwestern section of Detroit. The stock sold was done for a purpose — not because Mr. Kunsky needed outside money, but because he felt that the Strand would do better with financial boosters, as every person living in the neighborhood who had his money invested would naturally prefer going to the Strand than any other theatre. The Strand has a seating capacity of 1,400. The seating plan is divided by four wide longitudinal aisles which are covered with thick carpet, thereby deadening the sound of footfalls. The Strand is indeed a valuable asset to the motion picture industry.

Frank Belcher With George Kleine

OF THE many stage and film stars appearing in recent George Kleine productions, none has attracted more favorable comment from critics and fans, through sheer and absolute merit, than Frank Belcher. This genial, heavy set gentleman has been seen in "The Green Cloak" and "The Sentimental Lady," supporting Irene Fenwick in both subjects, and also in "The Danger Signal." His screen ability and vigorous magnetic portrayal of the roles assigned him in both features won him a permanent place in the Kleine organization.

Frank Belcher.

Frank Belcher is a San Francisco product. He received his education in the public schools there and at Oakland, and counts among his schoolmates many of the prominent, solid citizens of the California metropolis. Mr. Belcher is still loyal to 'Frisco, being a member of Stanford Parlor No. 76 of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

His experience has been as varied as it is interesting. He was an expert accountant in San Francisco, being connected with the California Insurance Company, one of the largest banking institutions on the Pacific Coast, before yielding to the temptations of the footlights. He gave up his commercial career and took a "flyer" into theatricals, joining Tony Pastor's troupe and afterwards Hallen and Hart.

It was about this time that Belcher realized the wonderful possibilities of his rich bass voice. He went to Italy and spent several years cultivating it among the best-known masters of the day. He then joined the Carl Rosa Opera Company, touring the continent.

Returning to the United States, Belcher associated himself with Henry Savage's Castle Square Opera Company, where he sang the chief bass roles in all their big productions. Later he was at different times associated with Jefferson de Angelis, De Wolf Hopper and Lillian Blauvelt. About this time he became a member of Richard Carle's "Mary's Lamb" company. He then joined Henry B. Harris' "Skylark," where he was a decided hit. Later he accepted an offer with "The Chocolate Soldier," touring the west. At the conclusion of this engagement Belcher entered the picture field, appearing in George Kleine's "The Green Cloak."

He will be seen in various roles in a number of forthcoming Kleine features, among which are "The Law of Blood" and "Wild Oats," recently completed.

Charles Chaplin in South Africa—Essanay Comedies Break up the Dutchman's Gravity.

IN less than a month, Charles Chaplin has come to be known throughout the land, even the Dutch South Africans laugh over all his antics, and as Edwin Adeler of the Carlton theater, Johannesburg, puts it:

Awful the case of the Rev. Van Nickerk,
Thought he entered a Dutch Reformed Free Kirk,
Found it was the Carlton and laughed himself sore.
Let us sing hymn number seventy-four.

In Keystone comedies Chaplin was enoyable, but in the Essanay productions he was and is superb, and his antics brought smiles to the toughest grouch in the audience. What has popularized him so greatly is the publicity campaign through the medium of the popular weeklies published in England, namely "Pluck," "Answers," and "The People." The first named is well read by the juveniles, and naturally, as photogravures are given away, Chaplin soon became well known.

African Films Productions, Ltd.

Although the above company does not start operations until December next, when Mr. Lorimer Johnston, the American producer, will have settled down to South African conditions, it is by no means idle.

Mr. Albrecht, head cinematographer, is in Swaziland at present, and will afterwards travel through Zululand, Pondoland and Basutoland. Later on, the impenetrable forests of Knysna, and the Addo bush will be included in the scheme. As the Films Trust puts it: "It is unnecessary to point out that such enterprise is full of danger, but the intrepid cameraman like love, who laughs at locksmiths, scorns such a notion. Mr. Albrecht came to the African Films Trust from Pathe Freres of Paris, and he is in his present position simply because of excellent workmanship as witness "The Mine Industry" film, also he always is one of the fellows who keeps smiling, and keeps sweet.

Productions Recently Shown and Comments Thereon.

Vitagraph's "O'Garry of the Royal Mounted," a masterful portrayal of the R. N. W. M. P.'s scenery and settings splendidly superb.

"The Win(k)some Widow," a merry three-part comedy.

Lubin's "The Only Way Out," great.

"The Love of Women," an enthralling social spectacle.

American Film Companies "Heart of Gold," a splendid dramatic subject.

"She Never Knew," a pathetic life portrayal by Vivian Rich.

Kalem's further adventures of Helen Holmes, "The Leap from the Water Tower," "The Red Signal," all to use a slang term very "hot stuff."

Universal's "The Lost Ledge," 101 Bison subject, look well in the Transvaal and was repeatedly applauded in Johannesburg halls.

"Almost a Scandal," L-KO comedy. Well, to call it a comedy scarcely describes the laughs in it. I should say one to every inch of film.

Many others have also been shown and were all good; some could be classed as fair only. I wonder when South Africa will have the pleasure of viewing the big productions, like "The Birth of a Nation," "On the Night Stage," "The Williamson Submarine Pictures," and so on. Of course, some exhibitors in South Africa will say "no call for such subjects in South Africa." I say, and I'm convinced so do 98 per cent. of picture fans, that they'll be appreciated thoroughly, and that what the conservative exhibitor of this country says is all ——, there, I almost said a bad word, well, lets put it this way—tommy rot! The business world is rotten, but people must be amused and so the bioscopes are still doing fairly well, but a lot remains to be seen as yet.

Robert T. Haines With Gaumont

THE Gaumont policy of having a new star in every production has borne its latest fruit in the signing of Robert T. Haines to appear in a multiple-reel Rialto Star Feature. Mr. Haines is now at the Gaumont winter quarters, Jacksonville, Fla., where he is working under the direction of William F. Haddock. To provide him with a suitable vehicle, Gaumont has received a remarkably strong scenario from the well-known novelist, Arthur Stringer. It is called "The Secret Agent." This will be released on the Mutual program December 15.

Robert T. Haines.

Robert T. Haines is ideal in a part requiring both diplomatic finesse and courageous activity. He has been before the public for twenty-five years, the greater part of that time as a star. He made his professional debut in 1891 with Robert Downing in Washington. For the three years following he was with Thomas W. Keane, receiving a thorough training in the classics from this eminent tragedian. When James O'Neil revived "The Count of Monte Cristo," Mr. Haines had a prominent part in the cast.

Then came the first American production of "Madame Sans Gene." After this Mr. Haines had an important part in "The Cherry Pickers." From 1898 to 1900 the star of this important Gaumont production was at the head of stock companies in Syracuse and Baltimore.

The following season he was leading man with Viola Allen in "The Palace of the King." Then he played the leads with Miss Minnie Maddern Fiske for two seasons, including the memorable run at the Manhattan theater, New York City.

In the Rialto Star Feature upon which Mr. Haines is now at work he appears as an officer employed upon a delicate mission for the secret service of our government. A number of exciting scenes take place on shipboard.

MOROSCO STUDIOS CONTINUE TO EXPAND.

Shortly after completing the new additions to the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company plant in Los Angeles, this progressive Paramount producer indicates a continuance of its policy of expansion and improvement. The most recent development along this line is the purchase of a large bungalow property adjoining the studio proper. The grounds of the property allow for a waiting room for "extras" awaiting their scenes, and the extension of scene docks.

It is planned to house the scenario department, technical staff and art director in the newly acquired bungalow, making room available for other needs in the offices vacated by these. The additional property adds to the appearance of Mr. Morosco's up-to-date plant which has become known as "the model studio of the Pacific Coast"

CHANGE IN TRIANGLE RELEASES.

On account of the United States Government's using "A Submarine Pirate" to aid naval recruiting, the release of that film by the Triangle will be delayed for a short period. To fill the gap in the releases of December 19, the Triangle offers what is literally the greatest all star comedy ever produced. This is not press agent's exaggeration, but cold fact. This latest Keystone, "Fatty and the Broadway Stars" shows the stars playing themselves: William Collier, Mack Sennett, Weber and Fields, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson, Bert Clark, Ford Sterling, Polly Moran, Mae Busch and others. It was a novel idea of Mr. Sennett's to present these distinguished winter guests of Keystone Studio in their own proper persons in this travesty of motion picture studio life. It is predicted that it will prove one of the most popular Keystones ever presented.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

WHAT is the matter with Ohio? This question is being asked by the motion picture exhibitors of the other states who cannot understand why it should be the only state in the Union in which the exhibitors are unable to get together and stand together for their own welfare. It was one of the first states to favor the organization of exhibitors and it is surprising that it was not able to successfully carry out the policy. Despite the appeals of their friends on the outside these exhibitors seem unable to stifle personal jealousies and ambitions and combine for the common cause. Factional strife seems to have gained such a foothold that the Ohio exhibitors are more divided now than they have been at any time since the first efforts were made to organize them under one banner. This is not in accord with the history of Ohio. Next to New York she has sent more Presidents to the White House than any other state in the Union. Five of her sons went there, and they were all native sons. New York has been represented at the White House six times, but in only three cases have the Presidents been natives of the state, so that Ohio is the more entitled to the oft' conferred honor of "mother of Presidents." This honor was gained by the people of that state burying personal and political differences for the support of her native sons and if the same spirit that prevailed in such campaigns inspired the exhibitors of that state today they would have a united and powerful organization working for their own benefit and the good of the motion picture business as a whole. Instead of this the strife that exists there has extended to a point that has caused one faction to appeal for a separate organization—that one body be known as the northern and the other as the southern. It is deplorable that such a sentiment should exist. While it is quite true that nothing will more quickly wreck any organization than well defined dissension in its ranks, it is doubtful that the interests of all the exhibitors of the state can be better cared for under a dual control. It would seem in the face of past records that Ohio has a sufficient number of intelligent, loyal and unselfish exhibitors in both factions who should be able to institute a campaign for the establishment of one strong and useful organization and it is hoped they will lose no time in doing so. If this is not done, under the old axiom "United we stand and divided we fall" the exhibitors will continue undermining ther own interests and the common enemy will progress with its campaign of imposition and injustice under a united banner.

It cannot be expected that the motion picture people located remote from the seat of dissension are acquainted with the points at issue, or the merits claimed by the respective factions, so that any discussion of local issues could not be attempted by them Such an attempt might be very properly construed as impertinence, so that whatever comment may be made by the outside exhibitors and others must be directed towards the advancement of the business throughout the country This is what the people outside of Ohio are doing. They do not wish to uphold or condemn the methods and policies of either faction of exhibitors of that state, but urge them to not allow local differences to prejudice the national welfare of the motion picture interests. We hear of no such appeals in the ranks of the enemy. On the contrary we find them at all times united and active. Reports of their activity are received every day. In Washington all the so-called reform organizations are a unit in the preparation of measures to be presented at the next session of Congress for the establishment of national censorship and they have in co-operation with them an organization known as the Anti-Defamation League of America whose aim is to prohibit the portrayal of certain parts and characters which might offend sensitive people. If the work of this organization succeeds through censorship it will be next to impossible to produce any comedies upon the screen, yet no effort is made to cut out similar scenes and characters from the regular stage productions. The organization having this movement in hand is composed of Hebrews. If their demands are complied with there will be nothing to stop the Irish, English, Germans, Swedes and other nationalities from preventing the projection of motion picture which some unduly sensitive people might feel reflect upon them. There is no place of amusement in the country where the characters of the various nationalities are more exaggerated than in the burlesque houses and no attempt is made to censor them. A moment's thought makes the situation clear. Since the last session of Congress the censorship conspirators, whose sole aim is to cripple the motion picture business, have been casting about for co-operation from other quarters for the next battle in Washington and by insidious tactics in which they are supremely adept they are trying to instill in their campaign a racial prejudice. This is in keeping with all their movements. It is a national sequence of the past campaigns conducted by the crafty Rev. Crafts, who is the head of the International Reform Bureau and the chief lobbyist for censorship at Washington.

Each day we see the tentacles of the censorship octopus reaching out to grasp some straw of excuse for attack upon the motion pictures and find use made of it regardless of reason, justice, or honesty of purpose. At Quincy, Ill., we find another sample of censorship reasoning. The chief censor there says the board is to be "broad-minded and liberal" and that it will use suggestive guidance rather than coercion. The board starts out with the announcement that it will bar "prize fights, and all that tend to offend public opinion," including football games, which it holds are more brutal than prize fights. Can you beat it? All the colleges of the country encourage the sport and the attendances at the game have recently run up to forty thousand and more. The newspapers are at liberty to publish detailed reports of the games, giving each play and furnishing several photographs of them. The players are heralded as heroes. The pictorial papers and magazines are flooded with the same line of reports, and yet some reformers would prohibit a few scenes of the sport on the screen. There would be absolutely no value to such a prohibition if it were enforced. Objection to it is made solely on the ground of principle and common sense. Football pictures are the merest incident to screen portrayals. At best they are only a flash of the game and in no way form a material asset for the producers. Lengthy reproductions of them would be too monotonous. They are almost wholly produced by the makers of topical subjects. From a monetary standpoint such pictures entail a loss to the producers. The money spent in securing them is never realized from sales, or rentals, and the sole purpose in producing such pictures is to satisfy a public demand and be up with the times. But if the purpose of such a regulation should be to exclude football scenes incidental to story pictures it is a safe bet that the efforts of any censor board in that direction will be as ineffectual as it would be silly. The suggestion of such a regulation is in keeping with the mental capacity of most official censors. A weak effort in an attempt to justify their existence.

Boston is out again with a cry for the picture people to stand together and fight pernicious local regulations. This time the protest is made against the Fire Commission. One complaint made is that a representative of that office is endeavoring to force all the exchange managers in the city to use a certain make of can in which to keep the films. No surprise would be caused if the complaint should be sustained. It would not be the first time that officials having the regulation of the motion picture business in hand undertook such methods for the collection of graft. It is one of the strongest systems the grafters can make use of because it enables them to make the manufacturers of the articles their collectors under a most plausible guise of preserving the safety of life and property. If all the graft collected by officials who favored and enforced the use of certain receptacles for films, the booths used for projecting purposes, attachments for projecting machines, wiring, and hundreds of other incidentals could be summed up the figures would amaze even many of the so-called reformers. The exhibitors of Boston and all other cities should band together at all times to stop such systems of robbery. They prevailed to a deplorable extent in New York until some of the exhibitors with backbone exposed the grafters. By making the stand these exhibitors not only saved themselves but protected the weaklings who allowed themselves to be squeezed. Exposure is the only means by which the devices of the grafters can be thwarted.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Writing to Bill.

PROBABLY many department regulars remember our letters to Bill. The real Bill got out of the show game and back into the editorial end a long time ago and the Bill letters stopped. But now and then we have sent a Bill letter to some one, and have been glad to do so. Here is a Bill whose problem is probably bigger than the others. At any rate we believe that it will appeal to so many of the readers of the department, that we are going to give him the advice in the department. As a premise, he sends in a lot of stuff and a letter. He is a small town hustler who wants to get into a big town where he can hustle to better effect. He is a Canadian in a town "90 per cent. English," as opposed to the French-English town of Quebec. Most of the men who are able have volunteered for the army. Others who cannot go are loath to spend. His partner has gone. There is opposition. He is doing better than hold his end up, but he cannot raise it very far in a town of less than four thousand population. He tells and shows what he has done, from coaxing the girls to come unchaperoned to getting out a weekly and getting it out at a net cost of $2 a week (it cost $20 to print) by getting outside advertising when the local paper men said he could get no advertising. So here goes:

Dear Bill,

I have read your letter with a lot of interest, not only because it is well written, but because it tells of things you're doing and shows some things you've left undone. It interests, as well, because you represent a more numerous type than you realize. You have made good—against odds—in a small town. Now you want to come to a city of half a million and make the hustle show. I don't blame you. You are bigger than a 4,000, but why the half million? I know right now a 60,000 man who is waiting to lick New York. Up to date he has not squared off. When he was still with the other town he told me how he was going to wake up the big city, and the alarm clock was the same dollaranaff affair he was using. At least three of his ideas would have landed him in jail with no press work and the others would not even have made a police record.

Now let's look at it through my eyes. They are pretty good eyes, even yet, though they have been used a bit. Perhaps they are the better for use, for that matter.

In the first place, I tell you, with joyous enthusiasm, that you are better than a 4,000 man. But I don't know about the half million. There are two things about you I don't like. One is the way you write on both sides of the paper, when you write and worse still you don't go straight down and back. You have page 5 on the back of page one and page eight on the back of four and then you change your scheme and back nine with ten. You are not orderly. You do not plan far enough ahead—and you have to plan in a half million town. I started reading the first thing you know I was at fault and then I had to stop for ten minutes to see how in Hades you had the thing mapped out. You can't write a letter or run a house or do anything else that way. Either do one thing or another but not several. The schemes you send in are ingenious, but your letter suggests that you have not yet had the business training that will permit you to get the same ideas over in a larger place. In the same way you send a little less than eight ounces of samples in a white envelope that was a wreck when it got here. This, too, suggests a lack of thoroughness and business experience. It's a little thing, but these are what count.

You have indicated a number of clever schemes. They have made good with you in the 4,000 town. They would be just as good in the 1,800 town, but I don't know that you can get 500,000 schemes that will be put through right. First you must learn to do the small things well.

This is not written in a spirit of carping criticism, but with a desire to be most positively helpful, and I am pointing out these little things simply because they suggest to me that you are not yet ready to get to handgrips with the big places.

Go it a bit slowly. You are bigger than your town, but I do not know that you are city big yet, though there is no reason why you should not reach that point.

Look at Ralph Ruffner. The first I heard of him was when he was in Vancouver, Wash., which is, I take it, a smaller place than the B. C. town of the same name, though you can find it on the map. Then he was bigger than his job and a season pass he sent in for the 300 house in that town was so good that I stuck it on the wall just because I liked to look at it. Then he came down into the Rockies and now he and Ray Bagley are running their own house in a real town and standing them on their heads outside of the house and on their feet back of the rail inside. It can be done, but it must be done slowly and by degrees, like a small boy growing into his daddy's cast off pants.

By all means cut loose. I think you are ripe. I think that you are doing well enough to warrant an advance, but get into a 5,000 before you seek to multiply that by ten, and when you get in, get busy fitting yourself for the bigger town. I take it from your letter that you started in a 800 town and came over to 4,000. It is not altogether easy to make it from your letter. Work up to 10,000 but work. And remember that the bigger the place, the harder they are to get.

I would like to tell you, right off the bat, that you should be here in New York today, but I'm not going to. You've got to start slowly and work carefully and cautiously. You can lick a man if he is smaller than you and not clever, but the bigger they come, the harder they are to lick, and it is a good plan not to go too heavy at the start. Move into a town of a larger size and grow up to that and then tackle a bigger proposition. Always grow up, but right now you seem to be in the position of the man who was licked while he still had the best of it, because you laid down to opposition. That is always the thing not to do. I think you are justified in looking for a bigger place, but don't look for one too big.

Some Lobby.

Just take a look at this picture of the lobby of the Marion theater, Marion, Ohio. Wouldn't it make you think that there must be a regular theater beyond those doors at the far end? Wouldn't it make you think that you were going to see a real show and wouldn't it send you into the house in the most receptive frame of mind? Those pictures cost more than lithographs, but they last longer and they give an air of elegance that makes for the better class of trade. Not every house can have so deep and spacious a lobby, but any house can suggest it is a theater and not a store "fit up."

The management also sends in a four page folder with the program on the back page. This is almost too retiring for it carries just three titles and three dates in twelve point italic. These should have been set in a better display; not necessarily a larger size, but a seemingly larger size. It is almost too modest. The greater space is given to the house talk. It is well worded and will do the house more permanent good than a splurge on the program for a week, but there was room for a little more insistence on coming attractions.

Send Direct.

We take this from Tom North's V. L. S. E. Pals, the organ of the Seattle Exchange. We could get it quicker if the exhibitors would send in direct, and it will reach more readers. It is reprinted from a letter from Jay A. Haas, of the Orpheum, Butte:

> I have a bear framed up for "A Texas Steer" and will send same next Wednesday. I have a cow going around the street with the following ad—"THIS IS NO BULL—See HOYT'S 'A TEXAS STEER' AT THE ORPHEUM THEATER—TODAY"—also have a large suffed Texas steer head for front of lobby, how does it look? Also have on sidewalk painted as follows: a big arrowhead pointing into lobby and the words "Steer" this way for "A Texas Steer."

Finds Blotters Best.

F. P. Hale, of the Bijou, Dunn, N. C., writes that the best business he has had was brought through the use of blotters, but we are inclined to think it was not the blotters as such, but the wording and the general effect that counted for most. The blotters are envelope size surfaced, printed with a really good half tone and carrying a well worded invitation to attend a specified performance. The pull would have been as strong without the blotter feature, though this may have helped. In the same envelope went slips of white paper carrying a stock cut and an advertisement of a special. This is in glaring contrast to the other, being set in straight Roman, all machine work. It would have paid to have spent a little more for hand composition and the use of display type. An advertisement has two aspects, the physical and the mental. No matter how clever the wording of the text, it must be set attractively if it is to be read and this slip is anything but attractive.

This is a point wherein so many fail. They do not make the stuff look right and this is the first step toward getting an argument read. It must be attractive; eye-pleasing, if it is to catch the attention. Even with display types much depends upon the choice of face, and it will pay the exhibitor to take more time over the job and insist that the printer do his best and not his worst.

Mr. Hale writes that he has copies of Edmund Reid's pioneer daily film paper and contemplates following the Reid example. We should like to see some of the early issues. This is a form of advertising that is without an equal in a small town if rightly done.

Anniversing.

The Lehigh-Orpheum theater, South Bethlehem, Pa., has been celebrating its second anniversary with an unusually nice program. Beyond a page of greeting, it does not seem to have raised much of a noise, other than to get some features, but the bill is printed in deep blue on light blue stock. This stock is too good for the half tones employed. If you cannot get half tones to suit your stock, get a cheaper stock to suit the half tones. Good paper and coarse screen cuts merely look bad. The house is putting in Triangle stuff, which is going some, but we believe that this is one of the munitions plant towns and they all have money.

Scandal Note.

Just the other day one of the house organ men who loves to roast the patrons for trying to pack lantern slides with the film, sent out some photographs, and in a plain paper envelope that got all crushed in the mail. We won't say who it was, but if your exchange kicks at you ask how they send out their own photos. That will hit at least three that we know of. The only thing for photographs is some sort of a photomailer.

Nifty Covers.

When talk gets around to covers, it would seem that the palm should go to the Calhoun, Minneapolis. They use a very dull cream enamel paper printed in photo brown with the cut of some star. The half tone used is so fine a screen that it uggests a lithographed effect, unless you put it under the light. The effect is elegant and we think that many programs must be saved for the covers and always there is the name of the house so placed that it is not intrusive and yet cannot be cut off without spoiling the proportions of the picture. This is used to cover sixteen papers of house organ. In a recent issue they announced "Damaged Goods" and had two pages of opinion from local authorities as to the value of the picture.

One thing they overlook is the continuation line. When an article is carried from the front to the back part of the program, the continuation should carry a line; in this case

Three rings
And a Goat

Unless this is done the make-up looks unfinished.

Another Paper.

A. W. Walker, advertising manager of the Orpheum, Aberdeen, S. D., sends in a copy of the 1-1 Orpheum Herald. He writes that he has had newspaper experience but would appreciate suggestions. After that we would like to tell him a lot of things, but about the best we can do is to suggest that his front page heading is too large, making that page topheavy. It makes a promising start and we think when Editor Walker gets into the swing he is going to have a lot of good clip stuff for the rest of us, so will he please nail our name on the sub list and threaten to fire the office boy if he forgets.

Mr. Walker gives his sheet a knowing air because he knows how to make up. This is where so many editors fail. They use ten point type to save money, then they lead that out to save more and the first they know they get something that is the very reverse of inviting. Use six to eight point, standard column width and make it up like a real paper even if you do have to write more copy, and write at least some of the copy to give it a local tinge. Have a pen on your desk along with the shears and the pastepot. Mr. Walker does, which is why his first issue is good.

He might use a little more general local talk, though he has some gossip of the Elks in the first issue and comment on the Mystic Shrine in the second. We wonder if he knows how to hold on to a rope. The second issue is much better than the first, which is the way it should be.

Another New One.

Movieland is the title of a new house organ for the Hulsey theaters, Dallas, Houston, Galveston and Waco, Tex. It is announced that it will be on sale at the news stands at five cents a copy, but we think this a mistake, for it is a house program and not a magazine, and the man who buys a copy is apt to resent the sting, but there is also a coupon for which the paper will be sent free. The initial issue is well gotten up, but does not carry enough original matter. It does not sound intimate, in spite of an effort toward that end, and so it does not interest those other than persons intensely interested in pictures. The better plan is to frame the proportion of house and film talk to arouse this interest as well as sustain it. Get more stuff that makes for interest in pictures generally and not merely for the program for the week. The issue is thirty-two pages and much could be done in that space.

A Neal Float.

O. C. Hauber, of the AmuseU, Pine Bluff, Ark., sends in a photograph of a float he used for Neal of the Navy. It is built on a Ford car and is 28 feet long, constructed of bunting, lumber, stove pipes and tar paper. Four kiddies "manned" the ship. In many ways this is better than the Pathe float at the photoplayer's field day at Brighton Beach, minus the chorus ladies who formed that happy crew. Not only did the local paper give the display a mention, but it received a paragraph in the daily bulletin of the local Chamber of Commerce and, best of all, it brought in the coin. The details may be studied from the cut and if you get it too late for Neal, remember that there will be other battleship pictures. The navy wants to gain recruits and has always been quick to recognize the value of motion pictures as a popularity medium.

Mr. Hauber, who used to be an operator, adds:

> I have for eight years been a reader of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. I have noticed your recent advertisement saying that one trade paper read is worth a dozen glanced through. That is my idea.

It should be the idea of everyone. Get the best and study that. Then run through the rest if you have time, but master the one that gives you the fullest information.

Starting Well.

The newly formed Idaho Amusement Co., Boise, Idaho, comes out with a sixteen-page and cover magazine, pages 8½ by 12. It is well edited and well printed, a publication that will make friends for a company that can get out that sort of organ. They might credit some of their lifted stuff, but this is a detail, the main point being they offer a magazine that looks like one and not like the experiment of some amateur printer. There is plenty of advertising, but they should throw out a back page advertisement of an oculist that has for an attractor line

DO THE PICTURES HURT YOUR EYES?

No matter what the advertiser pays, it will not pay the house to permit the erroneous impression to get out that pictures do hurt the eyesight. If eye faults are accentuated while looking at pictures, then the victim needs the service of an oculist, but we have spent day after day in the projection room for weeks on end without trouble and we know that with proper projection the pictures do not hurt the eyes, and nothing the oculist can pay will justify the running of this advertisement. In the same initial issue on page fourteen is another that says:

Watching the Movies.

If your eyes are uncomfortable it mars your enjoyment. Come in for a consultation. It is free.

This is better than the other, but why seek to create any impression that looking at pictures is injurious to the eyesight? Either the projection in the houses is rotten or the statement is untrue. They should either change the operators or the advertising copy.

A NEW HELP FOR MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World)

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and type-setting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. Mr. Sargent tells all he knows and this includes what several hundred successful exhibitors have told him. More than 100 examples. An introduction and then 290 pages of solid text. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. Handsome clothboard binding. By mail, postpaid, $2.00.

Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Ave., New York

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Inquiries.

Questions concerning the writing (but NOT the marketing of) photoplays will be replied to without charge if addressed to the Photoplaywright Department and accompanied by a fully addressed stamped envelope. Questions must be typewritten or written with pen and ink.

Questions as to the financial standing of concerns or the probable markets for specific or certain styles of stories cannot be answered.

In no case and under no circumstance will any manuscript or synopsis be handled and if sent will be returned without reply.

A list of addresses of producing companies will be sent if the request is made direct to the publication office, but not where request is made to this department.

Handling Keystone Scripts.

EVIDENTLY the recent activity of this department in bringing to the attention of the Keystone staff the illicit activities of one of their employees is responsible for this story by Mr. Sennett, who is the Keystone company so far as comedy production and the keeping up of the brand is concerned. But apart from the direct application to Keystone, this story is interesting in showing the care that really is taken of the scripts of outside authors, not alone in Keystone but in other companies.

The Modern Scenario Department.

BY MACK SENNETT.

The work of handling scenario manuscripts submitted by free lance writers has developed into a serious problem for the motion picture companies of to-day—a problem which demands careful attention. A large percentage of the population of the country seem to be writing or attempting to write screen plays, and the idea prevails among many of these people that producers are on the alert for opportunities to steal stories that are sent to them for consideration. While there undoubtedly have been instances of this form of theft, they have been few and far between, and to avoid the possibility of even the suspicion of such a thing the Keystone Film Company Scenario Department is governed by a system which eliminates all chances of plagiarism or of manuscripts going astray.

As soon as the scenarios arrive, they are handed to a trusted member of the Clerical Department, who properly records them with full data as to date of receipt, etc. The scenarios are then carefully locked in a filing cabinet by Mr. Frederick Palmer, assistant editor, to await the careful perusal of a first reader.

It is the first reader's duty to cull out all illegible, pencil written and utterly impossible stories and pass the surviving manuscripts along to a second reader, with instructions not to be too critical in his elimination. The surviving manuscripts finally come into the hands of Mr. Palmer, who passes careful judgment on same. In view of the diversity of mental attitude on the part of the several readers in the process of their criticism, the first reader, second reader and assistant editor each make use of an individual marking, which prevents the scenario from being rejected by any one of the three, and holds it for final conference. This obviates the possibility of any reader discarding a scenario which contains an idea which he may have overlooked but which another reader may have seen.

During the final consultation, the manuscripts under consideration are carefully talked over by all three readers, each one giving his idea as to the merit and possibility of acceptance of each individual story. Only on rare occasions do these manuscripts ever come under the personal observation of the managing editor, whose time is given principally to original compositions.

During the intervals between readings all of the manuscripts are kept in triple locked files and it requires the presence of two of the readers and the managing editor to open these files.

When the rejected stories are ready to be returned to the writers they are carefully checked and returned by the secretary of the department, Mr. Vernon Hoagland, who has not previously seen or handled them, and are then mailed with full postage for their return, regardless of the amount which accompanied the manuscript.

The names and addresses of all writers of submitted manuscripts are regarded by the company as strictly confidential. An effort was recently made by a Mr. Henri Nuss, a member of the clerical force, to make personal use of this information, but his activities were checked and the misplaced confidence was rewarded by his immediate dismissal.

The Keystone Scenario Department is under the able supervision of Managing Editor Hampton Del Ruth and Assistant Editor Frederick Palmer. The staff consists of the following writers: Harry Williams, William Jerome, Jean Havez, Vincent Bryan and William Campbell.

Just Like the Others.

Just like those who have gone before her, Mrs. L. Case Russell has given up criticizing scripts because the outlay in time required to give proper criticism does not balance the income from the work. In other words a competent critic cannot afford to give criticism at a price that the author can afford, and those who continue criticism are either cheating themselves or their clients.

Mrs. Russell finds it more profitable to write scripts than to criticize them, and so she has closed her office and will devote her time to original work.

Berst on Titling.

J. A. Berst, of the Selig Co., in a recent issue of The Dramatic Mirror, talks on cutting film and offers some very sound observations on subtitles or leaders. He says in part:

> "The film subtitle is a vital portion of the completed photoplay. Personally, I believe that the fewer the subtitles the more artistic the film production. Subtitles at the best are explanatory material. They are supposed to make the story clearer and more comprehensive. The better written the scenario, the more carefully produced the film play, the less need for subtitles. Those film plays which carry forward the story in a clear manner, with the need of only a few subtitles, are the best productions.
> "Subtitles cannot be hastily written. They require thought, and should be revised over and over again until they are brief and yet comprehensive."

The trouble is that most studios do not give much thought to the leaders, or if they do they carry the matter to excess and load the script with leader. Part of the reason for this is the fact that so many directors turn in an excess of footage that requires that not alone scenes but entire succession of scenes be eliminated to get the proper length and then a long leader is inserted to supply the facts advanced in the missing action.

If certain, indeed a majority, of studios would pay more attention to the footage turned in, and spend some energy in requiring the director to make his production in harmony with the footage allowance, there would be less cause for complaint, but too many of the manufacturers devote all their efforts to getting the film into shape after production instead of seeing to it that the director does the work he is hired to do in a competent fashion.

In a loose-jointed comedy it may be possible to make three thousand feet and pick out the best 1,800 feet for the film, but in drama this is not the case.

It really seems, sometimes, as though it did not pay to spend hours getting a script into precisely the right shape when a director is permitted to string out the production and utterly spoil it. Some pictures naturally run twelve to fifteen hundred feet and should be permitted to do so, but when action is planned for a single reel the director should not make scenes of flashes and flashes of scenes.

There are other chiefs of production who know what Mr. Berst puts into words, but they do not act upon their knowledge, yet wonder why their stories are not successful.

Questions of Payment.

Evidently the path of the adapter is not made smooth. Last summer we wrote of one master of technique who was told that ten dollars per reel was all a studio ever paid for adaptation. Now comes another writer—a woman—to say that she took an adaptation at that price and had to threaten to sue to get her money. In another instance she did ten reels for a company at $25 per reel and the company refused payment on the grounds that the adaptation was not properly done, and let her take the case into court.

A still more important angle is that of the author who refuses to accept the small payment offered by a company for a script submitted at usual rates. It often happens that a company will put a script in work before the author is queried or production will be started at the same time an author is approached. If the offer is refused the company is apt to argue that the author is aware of the fact and is "holding them up," where in reality the author merely demands a fair price for work done. It may even happen that an author suffers in subsequent submission.

We believe in keeping the prices up. Also we believe in selling at usual rates at a loss, but in offering all subsequent stories to that studio at a stated price. The best plan is to accept the small sum, but in returning the release to state that the writer is disappointed in the price but will be glad to make further submissions at a minimum price per reel. This may bring a letter from the editor that will straighten the matter out. If it does not, mark the price on all scripts sent to that studio, and hold out for the price.

This seems to be a matter that the Photoplay Author's League might profitably undertake.

Just the Same.

In the testimony in a song publishing swindle, now being tried in a Federal court one of the employees testified that the last resort was the "folder" letter in which the big-hearted publisher announced that he was not out for the money but for glory and the good of the great cause. And those who had resisted previous appeals "fell for" this cunning appeal.

And a certain revision bureau is using a letter in which all previously named fees are remitted "because we want the greater profit that will come in the form of commission for selling your excellent story." But of course you have to send some money "for postage."

Giving Value.

What would you think of a man who bought a second-hand pair of shoes for $3.50 when for $4 he could get the same shoe fresh from the shop.

Certainly a commission in sanity should be selected for him. You are quite right there, but they'll be getting after you, too, presently, if you keep on arguing that studios should take one of your stories now and then "to encourage you," when for little more money they can buy an original story instead of a rehash.

Think that over and think it over and over again. Nine times out of ten you do not sell because you do not know that you are offering second-hand goods. The story is new to you. You never heard of it before. You cannot realize that it is just like a lot of other stories that you have heard of. Your story is about a man and a woman. The other story is about a woman and a man. But does that make it so new that an editor will telegraph you his acceptance for fear you may sell it to another?

Before he was fitted for his job, he had to go through your experience. He had to think out plots only to be told that they were stale, so one day he got good and mad and started in to find out what was old and what was new. He probably was as surprised as you will be to find that his pet plots had been done many times before and often better done. It hurts when you first find out that you are not an author of amazing originality. Your bump of self-esteem will turn into a dimple and you'll be sore for weeks from the jolt, but if you pull yourself together and start in as the editor did to find out just what is old and what is new, you'll be an editor yourself some day, perhaps. If you are not an editor you may at least become a darned good writer, one whose work is in demand, and take it from the insiders that the work of good writers most assuredly is in demand and never was the demand more brisk than it is to-day. When a man who is making a fixed salary of $150 weekly, every week, talks of giving up the studio job because he can make more money free lancing and when another man who was getting $125 rejoices in the fact that he got fired, it is evident that the business of selling stories is not swathed in crape. But the men who talk like that are the men who are so thoroughly familiar with past production and literature that they avoid doing old things in old ways and do the old things in new ways or even new things in new ways.

And at that, one of the men above cited told us the other day that he had seen a play from which was derived a story that has probably been submitted to studios at least one thousand times. Now he felt that he had found the source of the play, and we had to take him back another fifteen or twenty years to show him the story from which the play was derived.

The more you know about what has been done, the better fitted you become to avoid the pitfalls. Spend your time familiarizing yourself with the work of others, that your own writings may not infringe.

There is little that is new. Take the Elizabethan story of the tinker who was made a king for a day. That is regarded as a standard source. But turn to your Arabian Nights and read for yourself the story of Abu-l-Hassan, the Wag. It is precisely the same thing. Mark Twain used the idea in "The Prince and the Pauper," but he changed it over and gave it a new twist. Perhaps you can give it a new form, and if you know of the old form you will give it a good hard twist before you attempt to use it. A familiarity with what has gone before is as much a part of your mental equipment as is an ability to distinguish between a close-up scene and a bust, and you cannot hope for a real success until you are so equipped, no matter how imaginative you may be.

A Champion.

Lately a writer offered to tell us about the champion boob. We have our own ideas as to the champion boob, but we dared him to try and get the record for his entrant and he came pretty close to it. He writes:

> A little over two years ago the writer and a friend were spending a few days at Barnes Lake, and while waiting for a bite we busied ourselves in reading the popular magazines. The writer discovered an article telling of the opportunities for the man of brains in the photoplaywright game. The writer was interested and so was the friend. Both set out to seek information on the subject. The Moving Picture World came to our notice and soon we had the opportunity of finding a complete working script printed therein. This was the start. With bushels of confidence we sent our separate efforts on their journey. Back they came. The writer stuck. His friend declared that the editors were thieves and he did not propose to stick in a game that required a pull to get on the buying end of the game. Two months and six scripts convinced the friend that his talent was being wasted. The writer was a little discouraged at the end of his tenth rejection, but his weekly copy of the World buoyed his hopes and he kept at it for two years. As rejection followed rejection, the kind friend lent his aid in asserting, "That's right, feed your energies to the crooks." Every day he insisted on knowing how my last story came out, and always favored me with a sneer. He never reads the World any more because he thinks that Sargent is paid by the little group of insiders to encourage the fools to continue and supply them with ideas gratis. Two years roll by and the writer finds his morgue filled with more than a hundred scripts. At last in a contest comes the writer's first check ($100). Behold, the friend takes new interest; a few weeks later comes the news of two sales for $50 each. And then a personal letter from the editor telling of his wants. The friend decides at once that there is money in the game. He tries again. Back comes the script. The friend calls on the writer and insists that he shall proceed to tell him all that he, the writer, had learned in his two years of study of the game. I kindly offered to loan him my complete file of the Moving Picture World, but he insisted that it was too much work to wade through 100 copies of that Sargent stuff. He asked me to spend two evenings a week and assist him to get his work in salable form. I explained that since I had arrived at the selling point that all my time was worth money, and while I was willing to loan him all the matter I possessed and that had cost me considerable money, I could not give him the little spare time that I possessed and needed to assist me to some time reach the goal of success. He gets mad and now he passes me on the street and turns his head. I often wonder if I have lost a friend or an enemy? In the two years that I gave almost every evening of the week and 40 entire Sundays to the work and listened to his words of discouragement, he was enjoying himself at worldly pastimes. Perhaps I ought to have given him the helping hand more than I did, but I sort of figured that he could read and think as well as I, and since we had an equal start I imagined that he might after awhile want me to think up the stories for him, too. So I just called a halt. Now he tells another friend that I was born under a lucky star. It was not luck, not a bit of it, but just plain hard work and stick to it, and if I should some day be numbered among the regulars I will know it was not by a streak of luck, but because I gave the fellows like Sargent, Peacock, Wright and others too numerous to mention the credit of knowing more than the booh and also silently gave them credit for lending a helping hand in spite of the rough criticism of a small (?) army of boobs. Perhaps Brother Sargent you may know a greater boob than the friend, but if you do, in the name of suffering Moses how do you keep your temper so well? Outside of my years of preparation the real reason why my work did not sell until recently was not so much that I did not write good stories, but rather that my good stories were not along new lines. Just as soon as three stories that I have sold are released, I am going to send the titles and you can see by them alone that I have slipped away from the two men and a woman and am taking up the great problems of life. Louis Reeves Harrison (bless his soul) opened up this new field for me with one of his delightful articles in the World, and the weekly articles in the World Photoplaywright Department gave me the encouragement to keep on plodding along. Sometime the memory of my one-time friend will fade away, but I can never forget the men on the inside that gave me a helping hand. Some day you may have the satisfaction of knowing that, in spite of the boobs, you and your kind have rendered a great service to the motion picture business in general and will reap the reward in the knowledge that you helped to give birth to a few real live authors.

And there you are. On one hand we are accused of being in the pay of the studios to lead new stories in to be stolen and on the other hand the studios cuss at us because we stand up for the author. We are getting pretty well hardened to the boobs by now and we are not under the expense we used to be for goats, but we are willing to put up with the boobs for the sake of the real ones, and there is a real satisfaction in feeling that we have helped to success this man or that woman. The ultimate success of the business lies more with the author than with any other one feature and the Moving Picture World gives two pages of valuable space a week, not as a circulation feature, but to help the business by educating and encouraging deserving and promising writers. That the boobs butt in is merely a side issue, unpleasant but unavoidable, and now and then we do find it possible to lift a "near" booh out of the booh class and get him started right, which pays for the trouble the others cause and the actual abuse they sometimes shower on us. We do not pose as a martyr and seek no canonization. We merely remark that boobs are a pest like mosquitos and the chigger, and must be endured if you go where they are likely to be, but no one ever made a pet of a mosquito nor does one hug a chigger to his breast.

Bill, Too.

William Lord Wright comes out with a flat-footed refusal to run a weekly list of studio wants. Lots of readers of this department have told us that we are real mean not to run a list weekly or monthly, giving the wants of all studios, but like Mr. Wright, we know that it cannot be done and so do not attempt to perform the impossible. Some monthlies purport to give such a list, because they need the circulation that such a list may bring, but the list is not correct and cannot be made correct. It will not stay in shape even for the brief interval between typewriter and linotype.

Visioning.

A correspondent writes that while Technique of the Photoplay states that unlike the story the photoplay cannot say "and in the meantime——" he notes in a play that the fore action is not related until well along in the middle, when it is introduced as a vision. He wants to know if this is proper.

It is permissible, but it is not—as a general thing—proper because a vision showing an intricate story interrupts the narrative just as would a long explanatory leader and so its use is to be decried. The post-dated vision is generally the device of an uninventive author and not an effect designed to make the story more interesting. Don't do it unless you have to, and don't have to do it.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 115.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Explain, in detail, the function of the revolving shutter of a projector. Is it possible to have as well proportioned an inside shutter as outside shutter? Give full reason for your answer.

Roll of Honor on Qestion No. 109.

The Roll of Honor on question 109 consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; Wilson Hays, Barton, Maryland; M. Nosti, Tampa, Florida; W. C. Crawford, Brooklyn, New York; Arthur H. Cuff, Fravenhurst, Canada; Harry Gordon, Tampa, Florida; M. T. Suttles, San Marcos, Texas, and T. Richards, Blaine, Washington.

I have selected the reply of Brother Hays for publication.

Reply to Question No. 109.

By Wilson Hays, Barton, Md.

The Question:

Suppose you have a side angle which throws the picture out of focus on one side, what would you do to remedy this defect? Could it be entirely remedied? In the process of remedying this defect would you or would you not set up other troubles? Could this defect be remedied on all makes of machines?

The Answer.

I would first make a very strong effort to have the machine moved square with the screen. This would be the practical method of remedying the whole trouble, and would not set up any other troubles. Failing in this I would have to do some doctoring. The screen could be made to face the lens a little more squarely, though not very much, unless you wanted to cause a heavy side view to those sitting down near the front on the side of the auditorium opposite from the side the projection machine was located. The width of the house would determine how much the screen could be angled. It is, with some makes of machines, possible to raise one side of the aperture plate slightly by slipping in thin strips of metal, but this has a tendency to create heavier tension on one side of the film than on the other, unless the gate could be doctored so it will set square with the angled aperture, and, so far as I know, this is only possible with the Power's Six. The out of focus effect can be helped some by cutting a paper ring to cover about ⅛ of an inch of the objective lens opening, this ring to be clamped in the mount of either lens combination, preferably the front. The out of focus effect may or may not be entirely remedied, depending on how much the machine is off center and the length of the throw. Strictly speaking it cannot, of course, be entirely remedied in any event, because there will always be distortion, except where the screen can be angled square with the machine.

In the process of remedying this defect by moving one side of the aperture out, you will have a slightly twisted top loop, also a twist in the film between the tension shoes and the intermittent sprocket. If the intermittent idler be moved away from the sprocket the proper distance, or a little more, the film will fit more snugly on one side of the sprocket than the other, with resultant heavy pull on that side. In stopping down the lens there is, of course, a slight light loss, though it is hardly sufficient to be perceptible.

All of which, I think, is a very excellent answer, though Brother Hays forgot to say that the bottom and top of the aperture should be filled in with solder to eliminate keystone effect.

An Article of Merit.

Mr. William Deshler Warner, Columbus, O., has submitted to this department a new product, known as Amberlux Lens, for trial, and has upon request sent one of these lenses to Brothers John Griffiths, Ansonia, Conn., and Armstrong, Ashland, Wis. Both of these gentlemen have tried these lenses (which are not really "lenses" at all, a thin ray filter ground perfectly plano on both sides), and the report is, in both cases, favorable. Both Griffiths and Armstrong pronounce them to have merit.

The lens sent to New York was for the Vitagraph theater, and unfortunately ever since it arrived the Vitagraph has been running tinted films, so I have been unable to make a satisfactory personal investigation of the matter, but Mr. Brenmer, chief operator at the Vitagraph, says that even in the tinted stuff he believes there is a softening of the picture, and an improvement.

I think there need be no hesitancy in recommending the Amberlux to operators and managers, particularly in view of the fact that in very many cases individual operators and managers prefer a very slight softening of the light, which they have attempted to secure through colored condensing lenses and by means of special screens.

I have not favored these latter schemes by reason of the fact that, in my judgment, they operate to diminish the brilliance of illumination too greatly, but the Amberlux accomplishes this purpose without perceptible diminution of screen brilliance. As Brother Armstrong very aptly says, it is equivalent to providing each one of the audience with a very light pair of amber spectacles.

The Amberlux people particularly claim that the greater mission of the Amberlux lies where the projection conditions are only average or poor, and that it enables the patrons to sit close to the screen without eye strain. With this latter contention I am unable to altogether agree, because there is, and must, in the very nature of things, be eye strain when one is close to the screen, but it may be and quite probably is true that the Amberlux will decrease this strain appreciably.

To sum this whole matter up, I am prepared to recommend the Amberlux lens to the very serious consideration of managers and operators. I believe that in the average theater it will prove to be a distinct addition to the effect on the screen, and anything of which that can be said is worth its price. In this case the price is very reasonable, as will be seen by consulting our advertising columns.

New $600 Machine.

For several years this department has been advocating an increase of price in projection machines, and has repeatedly expressed an opinion that projection machines ought to sell for at least five hundred dollars, so that the very best possible both in workmanship and material could be used.

Thomas A. Edison, Inc., has, in the parlance of the pokerite, "seen us and gone us one better." It is now on the market with the "Edison Super-Kinetoscope"; price, complete, six hundred dollars.

Well, six hundred dollars is some price, but on the other hand the Edison Super-Kinetoscope is some machine. We most cordially welcome this new high-class projector into the market, and bespeak for it the careful consideration of exhibitors.

Detailed description and instruction on this machine will be found in the new Handbook, and a detailed description and illustration of the mechanism will be found on pages 1675, 1676, 1677 and 1678 of the Dec. 14, 1914, issue of the department.

Important Note.—The regular Super-Kinetoscope equipment is such that the operator will only be able to get about 18 inches between the aperture of his front condenser lens and the film. This will not meet the conditions in the large number of theaters, and in such cases the Edison Company is prepared, without extra charge, to exchange the regular rods for other rods of any required length.

Can't Be Did.

B. J. Fenton, Fernandina, Florida, says:

> I have heard of a screen with which the audience can view the picture from either side. I can see that the picture might be made to show through, but don't understand about the reading matter. Can you give me any information on this point, as I would like to get such a screen if they are to be had, as we run a combined white and colored show.

Sorry, old man, but it can't be did. The titles would all read backwards. You might, however, do this. Install a ground glass screen, which can be had from the Mirror Screen Company, Shelbyville, Ind., and, on the "colored" side, flash the rendition of the titles on a small, separate screen, located beside the main screen, with a stereopticon. The picture will be good for both sides of the screen, and on the machine side the titles will read right, or, if you reverse the film in the machine and place the emulsion side against the aperture, then the titles will read backwards on the machine side of the screen, and right on the other side.

Mercury Rectifier Connections.

R. D. Barnes, Casper, Wyoming, writes:

In April 3d issue of a motion picture trade publication there appeared a diagram showing how to change a General Electric rectifier so that it is not necessary to use the bulb, thus enabling the operator to change over instantly to A. C. in case the bulb be broken. I have worked on the problem for some time, but cannot figure out how it is done. Would you please, using Figure 88, page 177, of the second edition of the handbook, tell me how to do it?

Sure I will, and I think those who have the old style 30 ampere rectifier will find the installation of this switch to be a good stunt.

In order to so connect the G. E. rectifier panel shown in Fig. 88, second edition of the Handbook, that by the throwing of a 3 P. D. T. switch the mercury bulb will be cut out and the compensarc cut in, supplying A. C. directly to the arc for emergencies proceed as follows: Mount a triple-pole, double-throw lever switch at any convenient point near the rectifier, and connect to it the following studs on the back of the rectifier panel. Using No. 6 wire, connect stud 33 to the middle stud of the left hand switch pole marked A. Disconnect lead 32 from stud 33, and connect one end to stud B of the switch, the other end being connected to any one of studs 13, 14, 16, 17 or 29, which ever may be found to give the proper D. C. amperage. Leads 45 and 46 must be carried over and connected to switch studs C and D. The arc lamp leads must be connected to center switch stud E and right hand middle switch stud F; F to the positive, and E to the negative. Lower right hand switch terminal G must be connected to stud 31 on the panel, and lower center switch pole H must be connected to stud 11 on the panel, and lower left hand switch stud 1 must be connected to any one of studs 13, 14, 16, 17 or 29, which will give the desired A. C. current at the arc, this latter to be determined when the rectifier switch is thrown in such position that studs I, H and G are engaged. When the switch is thrown in the opposite direction so that studs B, C and D are engaged, then the rectifier operates as a rectifier, supplying D. C. to the arc.

The Early Bird.

G. R. Cameron, Tacoma, Washington, says:

I want to be one of the early birds in line for the new edition of the Handbook, therefore kindly place my order for a copy to be delivered as soon as they are out. If you indulge in the pastime, you may also make a note on the order that you are to affix your "John Hancock" to the front leaf. You had better not ask more than five dollars for the book though, or I will have a go-round with my wife for spending so much money for "old books." Referring to the explosion of the gentleman in the state where I was born, Mr. Yancy, I beg leave to differ very materially with his views. It seems to me if there was competent, efficient and sufficient inspection made of the film at the exchange, and the faults were eliminated; also a complete report of the condition of the film, the exchange would be able to tell exactly just who was guilty of the maltreatment, and either compel that operator (I probably should say manager) to "cut the rough stuff" or refuse him service. There is no two ways to it: the manager is always at fault if you want to trace the matter back far enough to get at the real underlying basis of the thing. If the operator is supplied with those things which he needs to properly perform his duties, including sufficient help and good equipment, and the work is not properly done and the damage which he does the films is not repaired, get another operator. If the change in operators is the remedy, tell the dismissed one why he is dismissed, and the next job he gets he will be more inclined to be more careful and efficient. Please understand that I am only referring to cases where the manager himself does his duty in supplying proper equipment, etc.

I was glad to get the dope on the new Powers SixB. Wish I had the improvements on mine. I have the drive and would like the lamp and take-up, though I do not need the tilting device as I have leveled my motor by dropping the back end. The operation was quite simple and really hardly necessary, as I only have about a 12-foot drop in a 114-foot throw. I have two Elbert condenser mounts and from last October until July 15th I did not have a single lens break. Since then I have broken three. They are not tight, and there is excellent ventilation, as I have hoods over the top of each lamphouse with a two-inch pipe from hood to vent flue, and an exhaust fan sucking air all the time. Am anxiously awaiting the dope you promised us on condensers, as I want some meniscus-biconvex sets, but want the real dope before ordering. One day I spoke of you and the lens matter before a "friend" of yours, and he said: "What are you waiting for that for. Richardson don't know anything." Well maybe you don't, but you seem to be able to get the desired information with a very reasonable degree of accuracy, and everywhere I have applied it I have been able to get results which are satisfactory. We use Paramount program, and the inspectors or the operators who have the service ahead of me treat it well. Of course we have very little that has been in use more than twenty days, and some first run. That is, it is all first run for Tacoma, but what I mean is some film that has never been through a machine. You know I am just writing the most of this because I think you will take time to read all of it when you ought to be putting in time on the third edition of the book. We had some Labor Day parade. Yours Truly built the float for the operators, and the blooming thing captured the blue ribbon in the parade. Will send you a picture of it later, though it is not very good.

Yes, I read all the letter, all right, all right, Brother Cameron. It is interesting. You are perfectly right in saying that the manager is always at fault if you go back far enough. He is at fault first in not keeping proper record of the condition of films, or having the operator keep it, and reporting all faults to the exchange when he pays his bill. He is at fault if he fails to have the operator put the film into condition and pay him overtime. Of course he may reply it is the job of the exchange to put film in condition, and why should I pay for it? Which is quite true, but why, then, should the operator do the work of the exchange for nothing? It is a matter, Mr. Manager, for you to fight out with the exchange, and not to make the operator do a lot of work without pay. The exchange won't pay much attention to the operator, but when the man who pays the money does the fighting, that is something else again, and if enough of him proceeds to raise thunder there will be something done. The manager is at fault where the equipment is in bad condition and does unnecessary damage to film, or where he compels the operator to project a picture and repair film at the same time—a thing which cannot be done and be done properly. The projection or the repairs must suffer, and naturally the repairs get the worst of it. He is at fault when he supplies all the various necessary things, and then the operator, through carelessness, ignorance, or laziness injures the film and fails to make proper repairs, because he ought to fire the imitation operator and get a real one.

As to the breakage of three lenses after the long record of non-breakage, why there certainly is some reason for it, but I am too far away to tell what it is. So far as concerns the editor and his knowledge, well after five years of holding this job down, and the publication of text books on operating which are standard in this country and Canada, and considerably in use in England, Australia, and South Africa, and somewhat used in other countries, why I guess the good brother's remark is not worth getting fussed up over. I wish I had him here for about a minute though. I would like to ask him two or three questions, and watch him fall all over himself trying to explain something he probably knows nothing about; such as, for instance, light action through lenses. Glad to have the picture of the parade, even though it is not a very good one. Oh yes, by the way, I am willing to autograph a reasonable number of the books when such request accompanies the order.

Can't Be Did.

Burlington, Iowa, sends in a page which he has amputated from a trade paper, and asks my opinion of a certain article in which a correspondent asks whether or not he will get better results with a compensator than with a rheostat. The answer in part reads:

"It is not to be expected you would receive as much illumination at the arc with alternating current when a rheostat is used in series with the arc as when you are using a transformer like the compensator you speak of. If you stop to think, you will realize that the rheostat being connected in series with the arc limits the amperes at the arc to that passing through the rheostat."

I am sorry, Burlington, but it is not the province of this department to criticise or comment on advice given in other papers. All I would care to say is that, while what the gentleman says is partly true, still there is no reason why you cannot get just as good illumination with the rheostat as with the transformer, provided you want to use power enough to do it. The rheostat limits the amperage, true, but there is no limit to the amperes that a rheostat, or a series of rheostats in multiple will deliver at the arc. The use of a rheostat on A. C. is, however, bad practice because, as compared to the transformer it is very wasteful.

The New License Situation.

FOR quite some time there have been rumors piled upon rumors, and then more rumors circulating among the operators of Greater New York. One had only to place his "ear to the ground" to hear almost anything, and pretty nearly everything that could be put into words concerning the licensing board, and the proposed change in the ordinances affecting the licensing of operators.

Practically ever since the licensing board was formed there have been sporadic rumors of graft, and accusations along those lines have ranged from plausible to very weird. Just now there is, however, a charge which is very bad indeed, not because it is true, but because it is built upon a plausible foundation. It is an unfortunate fact that there are in Greater New York moving picture machine operators "schools" in which city employes have a direct financial interest. That is a well known fact. The editor has personally brought this matter to the attention of the department, only to be informed that the department was aware of the situation, regretted it deeply, and was trying in every possible way to find some feasible method of putting a stop to it. Unfortunately these city employes seem to be protected in doing these things by civil service rules, but nevertheless for city employes to be interested in an institution which is avowedly educating men to pass a city examination is wrong from any and every point of view, civil service or no civil service. The present charge is that candidates who have graduated from these schools, and particularly one of them, will be promptly passed and given licenses, regardless of competency, the charge going further and saying that the passing of the applicant is paid for, meaning presumably that the board receives a portion of the school fees.

Now, I do not belive a word of this. Mr. Brown, the chief examiner, and his assistant, Mr. Coghlan are, I think, entirely honest, and so far as getting anything of that kind pass Mr. Wynkoop, why that is, in my judgment, rank nonsense. However, I have simply set forth the situation as it is. Any operator who can produce legal evidence that any of these schools have advertised that they will secure a city license for their graduates, or any other legal evidence of wrong doing, should bring them or send them to the office of the projection department of the Moving Picture World, and we will guarantee that prompt action will be taken.

The very latest rumor has to do with the fact that the department has under consideration a plan for charging New York operators for examination and licensing. These rumors have set the proposed fee all the way from two to ten dollars, both for examination and renewal of license, and have for the most part presumed that the unsuccessful applicant for license would have his fee refunded. The editor took this matter up personally with the department, and proposed that all applicants for original licenses be charged a fee of any reasonable sum, say five or ten dollars, but that the successful applicant have his fee refunded, thus placing the burden upon incompetents who came before the board and took up its time uselessly. This proposition was based primarily on the fact that it is hardly right to charge a competent man for the privilege of working, but it is entirely proper to charge the man who thinks he is competent but is not, and who therefore consumes the time of the examining board to no purpose.

The department, however, took the position that while conceding the justice of that sort of thing, still it would be impossible to secure its passage. What it now proposes to do is contained in the following ordinance, which was presented to the Board of Aldermen on July 7, 1914, and was recommended for passage, but was at that time rejected.

AN ORDINANCE to provide for license fees for license to operate any moving picture apparatus and its connections in the City of New York.

Be it ordained by the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York, as follows:

Sec. 1. Any person applying for a license to operate any moving picture apparatus and its connections in the City of New York shall, at the time of his application, pay to the officer authorized by law to examine the applicant and to issue the license an examination fee of two dollars and fifty cents ($2.50), and if after such an examination a license be granted, the applicant shall pay in addition, upon the issue of such license, a license fee of two dollars and fifty cents ($2.50). The fee of two dollars and fifty cents ($2.50) paid by the applicant before taking the examination shall be retained by the officer authorized by law to conduct examinations of applicants, whether the said applicant passed the examination or not.

Sec. 2. Every licensed operator of any moving picture apparatus and its connections in the City of New York shall pay an annual renewal fee of one dollar ($1.00) for each annual renewal of his license.

Sec. 3. All fees received by the officer authorized by law to conduct examinations of applicants under this ordinance shall be returned to the Comptroller at the end of each month, and by the said Comptroller paid into the City Treasury to the credit of the general fund for the reduction of taxation.

Sec. 4. This ordinance shall take effect immediately.

It will be observed that this ordinance proposes nothing radical. It means a fee of five dollars for all operators hereafter examined and licensed, but will not mean any such fee for those now holding licenses, since the renewal fee is but one dollar. It also means that the incompetent who fails to pass must pay $2.50 for making the try. Personally, I think this latter fee should be higher, but am told it would be difficult to get the alderman to agree to it.

Taken as a whole, under the conditions, while this law is not all we would like it to be, still, as has been pointed out to us, it is at least reasonable, and stands a chance of getting through the Board of Aldermen; therefore, under the circumstances, it has the approval of this department.

In this connection I might add that the proposed law will raise but little revenue in excess of the actual legitimate expenses of the board.

There are at the present time in force approximately 2,000 licenses. The annual examinations total about 2,400, only about 300 to 350 of whom pass; hence even if there are no falling off in examinations after the fee for examinations goes into effect (and there certainly will be), the income would only be:

2,000 renewals at $1 each	$2,000.00
2,400 examinations at $2.50 each	6,000.00
325 licenses granted at $2.50	812.50
Total	$8,812.50

Against this are the salaries of three men whose entire time is consumed in the work, and the salary of one stenographer, plus the rental value of the space occupied, which would not be less than $1,200 in any equally modern office building (the board has rooms in the Municipal Bldg.).

However, income figures are susceptible to considerable shrinkage after the fee for examination becomes operative, because applicants will use more care in preparing themselves, and not risk an examination unless reasonably certain they can pass. Therefore, I think it will be fairly said that the proposed fees will no more than meet the expenses of the board.

Slides from Newspaper Pictures.

R. E. Wicker, Pinehurst, North Carolina, writes:

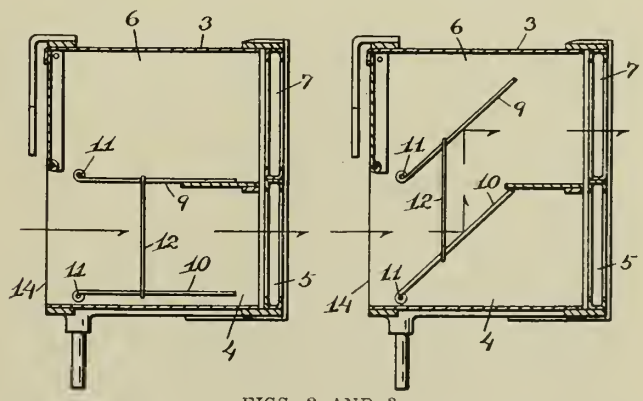
> Here is a scheme for making slides from newspaper advertisements, prints and photographs, etc., at small cost. Secure a small amount of good, clear, hard-drying varnish, such as body or coach varnish, and give a perfectly clean slide glass a thin, even coat. Cut your text or photo the same size as slide. When the varnish has dried sufficiently to become tacky, lay the print face down and press it from the center outward toward the edges until all air bubbles have disappeared. Now set the glass aside until the varnish has become very hard, which should be from twelve to twenty-four hours, depending upon its drying qualities. Next place the glass in running water until the paper is thoroughly softened, and with the finger rub the paper gently until you have removed it all. You will then have a transparent slide which looks very well indeed. By using transparent water colors on the print before applying it to the glass a very good colored slide may be had. Using ads of coming releases I have made advertising slides in this way which brought people to the theater, and that, after all, is the purpose of slides of that kind. Local scenes may be put on the screen in this way without the necessity of making a photograph.

This sounds interesting. I would not want to say just how it will work out, but if carefully done I should suppose it might prove satisfactory. Try it out and report. Many thanks to the brother for his contribution. In rubbing the clipping down onto the varnish to remove air bubles I think the back of a silver spoon will be found to be excellent.

Clever Arrangement.

Sherry McAuley, Atlanta, Ga., submits patent drawings, sketches and description of a dissolving stereopticon, the invention of Sherry McAuley, presumably of Atlanta. The scheme is a clever one, and barring the fact that I am inclined to think there may be some difference in illumination of the two pictures, seems to be entirely practical. The illustration shows the attachment, which I presume may be placed on any ordinary lamphouse head right up against the slide carrier.

Fig. 2. Fig. 3.



FIGS 2 AND 3.

In Fig. 2 mirrors 9 and 10 are dropped down, so that the projection goes straight through to the screen. In Fig. 3 these mirrors are raised to an angle, so that the light is reflected from mirror 10 to mirror 9, and thence forward into the objective lens and to the screen, there being, of course, two matched objectives.

I would not care to comment on this apparatus more than to say that wherever light is reflected there is necessarily some loss through absorption. Whether this would be sufficient to materially affect the result I could not say without having viewed the apparatus in actual operation.

How It Is Done.

John P. Van Empel, Chicago, Ill., says:

> Mr. Moore of this city was kind enough to give me your address as the best informed man with relation to matters pertaining to projection. No doubt you have seen Bert Levey's act in vaudeville, in which he uses a machine to project his drawings on a screen; in fact his hand and brush, as well as the picture, are reproduced. The same, or a similar machine was used in some cities during the last presidential election. I am in vaudeville, doing a cartoon act. I would like to get a machine which would project my work on a large sheet or screen. I intend to do my work in full colors on an opaque surface. Any information on this subject will be highly appreciated.

Brother Van Empel is not as clear as he might be. If he means what he says, viz: that he is going to paint pictures in colors on an opaque surface and wants to project them to a screen, then he can get all the necessary information by examining a post card projector, which may be seen at almost any department store, or, I believe, at the McIntosh Stereopticon Company, Chicago. Yes, I have seen Mr. Levey's act, and it is a peach, too, but have not examined his apparatus. Broadly speaking, however, it is nothing more or less than a glass, possibly frosted, set in a table, under which is a suitable light, probably a Nerst glower. Over this glass, at any suitable distance, is probably located, at a 45 degree angle, a mirror, which reflects the picture into an ordinary stereopticon lens, probably "full size," around which is, I presume, arranged a hood to shut off all stray light. Mind you, I have not viewed this apparatus, but I think that is what it amounts to. I did have a plan of a similar apparatus, but when I moved my office a year ago it apparently got lost in the shuffle.

Wants to Hear from Operators.

W. W. Dilley, Jr., Akron, O., says:

> Would like to hear from operators on the following: Single phase converter 70 volts, 50 amperes, 2, 110-volt rheostats, 45 ampere notch, in multiple. What is the arc voltage? Also can you recommend any books on designing transformers? Am experimenting on film cement. If I succeed will report to the department. Am using 6½ and 7½ condensers, and my spot is in focus at the aperture when the front lens is 14 inches from same. My arc is nearly as far forward as it can be gotten in a Power's 6A lamphouse. According to the tables, if I remember rightly, the distance should be 22 inches from the apex of the front condenser to the film.

Well, Brother Dilley, you had better look at that table again. The distance will depend upon the size of the aperture of your objective lens. If you cannot get your arc close enough to the lens to meet the condition the table calls for, that is no fault of the table. The equipment should allow of bringing of the arc within 3¼ inches of the condensers—I am not speaking of your particular case but of equipment in general. Glad to hear from you on your film cement experiments, but I have rather lost faith in that proposition, due apparently to variation in chemicals. As to the converter, why I am afraid you won't get many replies to that, but it is up to "de byes" who can go as far as they like. If you mean a book giving the technical data to enable one to build a good transformer, I do not. You would have to be a trained E. E. to do that.

Lenses.

C. W. Henke, Dassel, Minnesota, says:

> I beg to inquire of you as to what size condensers we should use. The throw is 81 feet and the picture 9½x13, using a mirroroid screen. We would be glad to have you give us as much information as possible.

Friend Henke, if you will read and study the light ray articles which begin in Sept. 18 issue and end in Oct. 23 issue, it should not be necessary for you to ask this particular question. I could not tell you what you need without first knowing the diameter of your objective lens. Table No. 1, Oct. 16 issue, gives you the whole dope. If you cannot match up your objective by this table, then it is because of the fact that either your machine does not allow the lamphouse to go back far enough or your lens is of too small diameter.

More About Lenses.

Charles H. Willliams, manager Strand Theater, Providence, Rhode Island, says:

> Can you give me any information about lenses? Am dissatisfied with the ones we now have; also with the ones we have had. Length of throw 134 feet 6 inches; picture 12 x 16; mirror screen, tilted to overcome keystone. Have tried the two leading makes of lens. Am using 60 amperes with ⅝-inch lower and ¾-inch upper carbons. Need two lenses and don't care what the price will be, provided they DELIVER THE GOODS, therefore, if you can suggest anything, I certainly would appreciate it. High grade lenses can be had for taking moving pictures, I do not, therefore, see why the same cannot be had for projection.

Ordinarily, Brother Williams, they could be had, but the little family row over in Europe has stopped the importation of lenses, as the governments have commandeered all optical manufacturing plants for their own work, and up to date none of our American manufacturers can, or, at least, will, produce a really high grade anastigmat projection lens. You are using a very long focal length lens, and what you need is an objective having an opening not less than 2 and preferably 2¼ inches in diameter. If you can secure such a lens, and get one of high grade (I don't believe you can now, but—possibly) it will then be necessary to very carefully match up your revolving shutter to match the new conditions.

I am laying your proposition before a large and thoroughly reliable dealer, who can supply you with what you need if anyone can. You should hear from him long before this is printed. If you find you can get the lenses, we will then go further into the matter of the revolving shutter. Meanwhile I would suggest that you match up your present lenses according to Table No. 1, October 16th, issue, of the light ray data.

A Boost for Cripple Creek.

Colorado Springs, Colorado, says:

> You may or may not remember me, but I was one of the committee who met you in Denver when you were on your way back after attending the Convention in 1913. Have given up operating, and am devoting all my time to camera work now; part of the time on the road, therefore, am in position to observe the projection in various parts of the state. Recently, I was in Cripple Creek, and on my first afternoon looked up the manager of the "Star" theater, Mr. C. H. Gunn, a most affable gentleman, who very seriously informed me that he had as good projection as could be found in the state, requesting me to drop in that evening and see for myself. I did so, and was told that the regular operator, Mr. William Sterrett, was ill and unable to be on duty, Mr. Fred Sheppard, an extra man, being in charge of projection. Equipment consisted of a 1913 Motiograph, taking juice from a 125 volt, 5.5 K.W. generator, with the resistance located in the operating room. He was pulling about 25 amperes at the arc, and I want to say that the projection was good for sore optics. The picture that boy was getting was certainly some doings; moreover, it was on a screen that did not look very good to me. I was, a little later, standing at the door talking to Mr. Gunn when the usher came and told him the house was jam full. From where we were standing Mr. Gunn could speak to the operator. I asked him why he did tell Friend Sheppard to "shoot-em-through," so he could turn out the crowd inside, and accommodate those in waiting. His answer was: "Nothing doing! We give them the show right, regardless of how many may be waiting on the outside." (Banzai for Neighbor Gunn! May his tribe increase!—Ed.). Is it not a shame that this type of manager is so nearly extinct? (No, I don't think they are nearly extinct. In fact I think they are on the increase.—Ed.). Later I visited the "Majestic," managed by Mr. E. P. Briggs. Mr. Briggs is a real feller, and also apparently a real manager. At this house projection was in charge of Mr. W. Jordie, who has a Power's Six A and a General Electric rectifier. He was projecting a reel of the "Broken Coin" series when I first entered, and the light was handled right; also, I do not believe the speed could have been improved on. I want to say that not one of the people mentioned in this letter had the least idea that I was going to write anything about conditions as I saw them, therefore, that must be the kind of show they offer Cripple Creek all the time. I have not been operating for more than a year, nevertheless, I always read the department. I have the second edition of the Handbook, and intend to get the new one as soon as it is out. That shows my interest, especially when I tell you I never intend to follow operating again. I just need the book; that's all. In closing I wish you personally and the projection department of the Moving Picture World all the success in the world. I'm for you.

Yes, darn you, I remember you; also I have a very vivid recollection of that committee, which nearly scared the gizzard out of me by making a football rush when I came through the Denver depot gate, fully expecting to reach my hotel unmolested, and sleep the sleep of the innocent. Well, I reached the hotel all right. They bubbled me up to it, showed me a room and asked me if I liked it. Inasmuch as it was good enough for a "kink," I, very naturally, said yes, whereupon they informed me they were glad of that, because I would not see it again—and I didn't, either, until next morning, when I went to get my junk to take the train for Little Old New York. Yes, Dear Heart, I remember the committee, good and plenty, and a fine bunch of fellows they were, too. Well, I am mighty glad to hear that good report of Cripple Creek, because I know, or knew, that old village from the back bolt in its rudder to the gold out on the tip of its figurehead. I lived in the Cripple Creek district for quite some while. My home was in Victor, not far from the foot of Straub Mountain. I wonder if I will ever see those hills again! When I first went to Cripple Creek the gold coin vein was not yet discovered. It was simply a trench in the street, which everybody was cussing because they had to climb around it. Finally some one got busy—and I do not know how many millions that trench yielded, but it was plenty.

My compliments to the gentlemen of the Star and Majestic. The manager who would not order his operator to speed up simply because a crowd was waiting outside is the man I would like to shake hands with, and take him out and buy him a dr——. I'd better shut up, or the prohibitionists will get me if I don't watch out. However, here's to Messrs. Gunn and Briggs, and Brothers Sheppard and Jordie. May they live long and prosper.

The Richardson Rub.

H. M. Lindley, Terre Haute, Indiana, encloses a check and says:

> Please send me the World for another year. The projection department is mighty fine. Mr. Richardson is sure there with the goods when it comes to applying the "Richardson Rub," the sure cure for sick projection.

In the language of our distinguished Spanish brother, muchas gracias. (If that isn't spelled correctly, just lay it to my ignorance, and let it go at that.)

The Motion Picture Camera as an Engineering Instrument.

THE modern engineer has commenced to realize the effectiveness of the motion picture camera for solving many engineering problems.

Every day finds new applications for the records of the Cinematograph ribbon. With the aid of the motion camera, accurate visual records can be made, which not only magnify or reduce the size of the materials and movements studied, but which may also enormously reduce or magnify the time interval during which a movement takes place. Heretofore it has been practically impossible to attain an accurate analysis of swift movements at regular specified intervals. Ordinary photographic "snap shots" or instantaneous exposures were not only liable to an error of a large fraction of a second, due to the personal equation, but also have the disadvantage of representing only a small isolated section of any complete action. Even in instances where it was possible to eliminate the error of the personal equation by mechanical means and, by endless repetitions of a movement, obtain a rough approximation of any analysis, it was never the analysis of a single movement nor could it even be a fair average of the various repetitions.

It is interesting to note that experiments of this nature, carried on about 1873 by Mr. Muybridge, an Englishman, then residing in California, were the first photographically produced motion pictures ever made. The old Zoetrope Toy or "Wheel of Life," of course, antedates these experiments by many years, but the pictures used in these toys were drawn by hand in a crude manner and were only rough approximations at their best.

Leland Stanford, then Governor of California, became interested in Mr. Muybridge's scheme for photographing sucessive positions in the motion of a moving animal. Governor Stanford was a racing enthusiast and had an immense stock farm on the site of what is now the Leland Stanford University. Governor Stanford thought that these scientific records would prove of great use in studying his thoroughbred horses, and placed every facility on his exercising track at Muybridge's disposal.

As no one had at that time thought of a single camera which could take rapid successive exposures, Muybridge attained his results by placing twenty-four duplicate cameras, side by side, in a row beside the track. As photographic materials, at that time, had not reached their present speed, it was almost impossible to obtain snap shots or exposures in a small fraction of a second. To increase the amount of light, he erected on the other side of the track a high board fence, painted white. Then from each camera crossing the track, to the fence, a thread was stretched, each thread being connected to the shutter of the camera. When this preparation had been carried out, the horses which were to be studied were turned out along the track at whatever gait desired, breaking the threads as they passed and releasing each shutter successively.

On account of the insensitiveness of the plates which he used, the pictures were mere silhouettes, but they served the purpose admirably. These pictures were later exhibited on the Continent of Europe, where they excited a great deal of scientific interest, specially when viewed through an enlarged Zoetrope.

The interest aroused by Muybridge's pictures seems to have been the starting point which aroused an army of inventors to work to perfect a more feasible method of making motion pictures.

The marvelous analysis of motion attained by the cinematograph camera has given us the animated cartoons. Anyone who has ever seen any of the animated cartoons by Winsor McCay, Bray, Forsythe, Palmer and others will appreciate, if they stop to think, the enormous amount of patience and intricate thought expended in producing the thousands of drawings necessary for one of these pictures. These pictures, such as "Little Nemo," "The Mosquito" or "Gertie, the Dinosaurus," by Winsor McCay, are as far abead of the old Zoetrope drawings as the professional cinematograph camera is ahead of Muybridge battery of still cameras.

When the motion camera is used for time studies, a split second time clock is generally placed in the picture and photographed at the same time, thus giving an accurate record of the time interval between each picture.

One of the most interesting pictures exhibited in a long time, was one released by Pathe, showing an athlete in various simple athletic feats such as walking, running, jumping and shot putting, taken simultaneously by two cameras. One camera took the pictures at the ordinary rate of sixteen pictures per second, while the other camera took the action at the rate of one hundred to the second; the normal and the ultra speed pictures were projected one after the other at the normal rate of projection, thus prolonging or amplifying the ultra film to six times the duration of the normal motion. It was very weird and interesting; the ease and deliberation of the prolonged action gave time for the study of every movement and the play of every muscle. One could not help but marvel at the co-ordination of the work of the muscles. The figure of the athlete seemed like a diver immersed in crystal clear water, the buoyancy of which floated him through the graceful attitudes of his movements. Such a film would at once reveal to a coach or even to an amateur athlete himself, any false moves of which he might be guilty.

Percy Haughton, the Harvard football coach, has already adopted the motion camera for revealing the faulty and unnecessary motions of players in the football field. Every fraction of a second gained on the athletic field is a big boost toward the goal of victory.

In the field of industry, no less than on the athletic field, the motion camera has rendered possible signal victories in trade production. Frank Galbreath, a noted efficiency engineer, has, by the use of motion pictures, succeeded in eliminating false and useless motions to such an extent that various factory operations have been speeded up so that the output has been increased as much as three and four hundred per cent., and, marvelous as it may seem, the worker was able to turn out this increased amount of work with much less fatigue, than when he had done a less amount under the old haphazard system.

As ordinarily shown, motion pictures are taken and projected at the rate of sixteen pictures per second, but for the scientific investigator the rate of taking may vary from a speed as high as 30,000 to the second in the study of high speed phenomena to as little as one exposure per hour or even one exposure per day, as used in studies in the change of structural materials, or the growth of a plant. All of these are projected at normal speed for screen study or examined, one by one, with a magnifying glass in some special cases, where seeking to eliminate useless motion.

The magnification or reduction ranges from maps of entire countries, telescopic views of the stars and aeroplane views to the highest power of the ultra microscope. Both the speed and the magnification depend upon the results desired from the subjects under consideration. Many new facts in the science of physics have been brought to light by the ultra speed camera, many of which are of immense practical value. Many new properties of explosives, and more particularly the control of different properties of explosives and many new principles in ballistics, and the penetration of projectiles, have been discovered by the photographing of bullets in flight, bursting soap bubbles, detonating explosives, breaking of water jets, etc.

Reduced to normal projection speed, bullets swim across the screen like leisurely fish and bursting shells separate like a group of mosquito wrigglers. Many high speed processes, such as the flow of steam, air and gases, combustion and explosions, automobile engines, the action of governors, the synchronism of electric generators, the flow of water in turbine wheels and water wheels, the action of woodworking machinery, the action of machine tools, etc., may be photographed at high speed, and reduced to a speed in which the action may be studied with the utmost accuracy.

The magnification may be made use of by sanitary engineers to record the development of bacteria over a period of time, the condition of water, etc. It may be made use of by municipal engineers to record the condition of a street over a period of weeks, not only in its entirety, but detail specimens of the materials used, the value of the cinematograph in these various works being that it illustrates the microscopic examination in its entirety.

Up to the present time the great weakness of microscopic examination has been that any given plate shows only a fraction of the examination pursued by the inspector. The possibilities of microscopic examination are endless in their application and examination of materials, manufactured products, chemicals, minerals, etc. Agriculture is now approaching engineering so closely that mention may be made of the use of the cinematograph for studying insects, and the development of fruit, together with the development of pests, in conjunction with the microscope. Without doubt, great strides could be made in this field. The Marey Institute in Paris, incorporated by Dr. Marey, now deceased, under the guidance of Pathe Freres, is one of the few institutes of this kind now in existence. An institution of this kind is now being developed on the Pacific Coast.

In this subject, engineering is referred to in the broadest sense of the word, meaning the commercial engineer as he exists today in the fields of civil, mechanical, electrical, sanitary and other departments. The purely technical engineer is becoming less known, and engineering work becomes more and more a problem of meeting commercial requirements and selling goods. Our industries are now managed by engineers and the policies are shaped to suit engineering ideas. The sales departments are in charge of engineers, and the goods are sold along engineering lines. They are also purchased by engineers, to comply with specifications drawn by other engineers. Engineers as a class find themselves confronted with the problems of design, manufacture, distribution, sales and maintenance. In these fields the cinematograph can be very useful, as has been already proven.

BRITISH NOTES

THE proposals, outlined in my last letter, of film manufacturers and their agents in England to establish a more stringent control of those films issued on the open market, has, as anticipated, met with the usual torrential criticisms from the exhibiting side of the industry. The exhibitors' main argument is that with any sort of restrictions upon its exhibition, cost or return, a film ceases to be an "open market" film and might as well be handled as an exclusive. The manufacturers, however, are obdurate, and unanimous that the new arrangement will be more beneficial for both than the present system of the unconditional sale of films.

News has reached the London office of Pathe Freres that Max Linder is any day expected to be back again at work before the camera, having obtained his discharge from the French Army. Linder, it will be recalled, was seriously wounded a year ago in a collision.

W. Taylor, of the Clarion Film Agency, the agents in this country for the World Film Corporation, arrived home from New York on Saturday, bringing with him "The Butterfly on the Wheel," "Camille," "Salvation Nell," and a few other notable recent feature production of the World Film Corporation.

The local committee of the Exhibitors' Association for one of the industrial districts of the North Country has been the first to hand along the effect of the film tax to the general public. The showmen of Bradford met last week to adopt a fixed scale of admission charges, graded to suit the "clientele" of the different types of theaters, but with a minimum equivalent to four cents. Other branches of the C. E. A. may be expected to follow suit.

Pathe Freres have acquired the world's rights of the Samuelson Film Company's version of "The Dope Doctor," after Richard Dehan's novel of the same title. The rareness with which the Pathe Co. adopt contemporary productions is eloquent testimony to the strength of the picture.

The Authors' Society, according to the official report of its last transactions, appears to be experiencing certain difficulties with American film producers regarding agreements for the visualization of its members' work. The American agent of the society (name not disclosed) has submitted forms of agreement acceptable to the American manufacturers, but without disputing the financial aspect of the contract this was rejected. Louis J. Vance, who resides in America, and who is an honorary member of the committee, was requested to advise the society upon this and other points affecting the American markets. Considerable discussion took place regarding the duplication of film-titles and what ought to be a very practical solution to the difficulty is to be drafted into effect. The committee will write to the different film companies asking them to send in as far as possible ahead of release date a list of titles of forthcoming productions. These will be checked by the society's officers and again checked by literary agents and in the event of any title having been used the manufacturer will be immediately notified.

D. W. Russell the other day unspooled the first of the David Horsley one-reelers, "Distilled Spirits," which was favorably reviewed by the London buyers.

Larry Trimble's next production on behalf of the company with which he is identified, Turner Films, Ltd., will be an adaptation of the popular novel of Thomas Hardy, "Far From the Madding Crowd." Many of the scenes have already been done at the Walton Studios, and the production is expected to make its debut early in the New Year.

Although the Kriterion Corporation has been in existence for some time now in the world of motion pictures, it has been an incomprehensible circumstance to many why their products have not been seen on the British market. I am, however, informed that the Kriterion Sales Corporation will henceforth export their feature films to Europe under the agency of H. A. Browne & Co., Ltd., of Charing Cross road, London.

With the approach of the festive season comes a welcome activity on the part of distressingly few of our film manufacturers. Too long it has been the custom to reserve, year in and year out, one or two stereotyped features of the pantomimic order and bounce them at Christmas time upon the unsuspecting exhibitor as new productions. There are amongst us those who agree that it is unprofitable for a manufacturer to produce special Christmas subjects and expect to realize upon them in a single season, but the extensive bookings of the Christmas releases of the Edison, Universal and Essanay Companies is convincing evidence to the contrary.

A few cases of unusual interest to the moving picture trade are likely to occupy the attention of the law courts ere long. They are actions by film renting exchanges to enforce the payment of film hire in cases where certain pictures, after passing the British Board of Film Censors, have been banned by the local licensing authorities.

According to the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Reg. McKenna) the duties paid on imported moving picture films from the imposition of the tax up to date amounted to £43,000. Over £30,000 of this is on undeveloped films.

The effort by the British trade to benefit the Ambulance Fund has attained £30,000 up to date. This includes a recent donation of £1,500 from the Essanay Co.

Stella Hammerstein in Rialto Star Feature

AGAIN the Gaumont policy of having a new star in each of its Rialto Star Feature releases scores in the booking of Miss Stella Hammerstein by that company to play the leading role in "The Ace of Death." This will be released on the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program. The story is from the pen of O. A. Nelson, and is being produced at the Jacksonville studio by William F. Haddock.

Stella Hammerstein.

Miss Hammerstein comes honestly by her talent, being the daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, the impresario who has at least seven distinct sides to his versatile nature. He has done everything, from inventing cigar-making machinery to building opera houses in New York and London. His daughter confines her versatility to the stage and screen, where her range seems apparently unlimited, since she has appeared with equal success in light opera and such modern classics as Hauptmann's "Lonely Lives."

In America Miss Hammerstein has appeared in "Everywoman" as "Vice," in "Lonely Lives" as "Anna Mahr," and in the leading role of the remarkable vaudeville production of "The Tyranny of Fate." In "The Ace of Death" Miss Hammerstein has the role of a mother whose child has been stolen from her by a woman who loves her husband. The husband disappears. In time the bereft wife and mother opens two gambling houses in Central America. The thrilling scenes are those in which the daughter comes to the house to win or lose on the turn of a card.

MABEL TALIAFERRO JOINS METRO.

Mabel Taliaferro, the successful star of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Polly of the Circus," and other notable stage productions, who will soon be seen on the screen under the auspices of the Metro Pictures Corporation, will begin work in a few days on the first big feature at the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., studio in West Sixty-first street. The call for Miss Taliaferro's services was first suggested by a scenario that Max Karger, general manager of the Rolfe forces received. It is an interesting story depicting a phase of life that seemed to breath Miss Taliaferro in every line of it, a typical Taliaferro role. The feature is yet unnamed.

Photoplay Conditions in New England

Carl H. Pierce, Morosco Representative, Finds General Business Excellent.

CARL H. PIERCE who has recently spent about two weeks in New England for the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, of which he is the special representative, in a letter recently written to a friend outlines some of the conditions as he found them in New England, which are of more than passing interest. To quote from the letter:

"The general tone of the photoplay conditions throughout New England is good—very much better than a year ago when things looked so dark from the commercial side. Foundries and manufacturing establishments, particularly in Waterbury, Bridgeport, New Haven, Ansonia, Fall River and New Bedford are running full blast.

"In Bridgeport they are working three shifts of men each twenty-four hours. In both Waterbury and Bridgeport the phrase is current: 'Everybody has plenty of money.'

"The demand of the photoplay theater owner and manager is for pictures with more punch. Eighty per cent. of his trade is from the mills people of perhaps average intelligence, but to a large extent interested in melodrama. The other twenty per cent. are so-called 'high-brow' audiences of the Beacon Hill type who desire the so-called higher and better things in photoplays.

"One new note in this district which is very encouraging to manufacturers is the fact that banks are beginning to lend money to responsible citizens with which to build the better class of photoplay houses. I visited one such theater in Somerville, the Strand, beautifully decorated and built to accommodate about fourteen hundred. The house opened while I was in Boston to a fine audience the first night, and gave every evidence of fulfilling the hopes and predictions of its backers. There are about eight of these houses going up in towns around Boston. Moe Mark with his own capital, has built a very beautiful theater, the Strand, in Lynn, and everywhere along the line there is evidence of an improvement in the exhibition of pictures.

"There is still much need for improvement and probably always will be in advertising the pictures on the part of the exhibitors. Theater managers are still too prone to remember the old days when all they had to do was to open the front door and have a constant stream of people. One theater along the line told me that its receipts were $500 a week less than they were last year, and wondered how to account for it. The reason is very simple. Their advertising had not kept pace with the progress of the times. With several programs on the market and a constantly increasing discrimination on the part of the public, the exhibitor must let his people know in ways that are increasingly attractive what he is going to show and what is the reason for his demand for their patronage.

"Where exhibitors have shown the right hand of progressiveness in this respect, as instanced very plainly by such men as Nichol of the Poli Theater at Waterbury, and Morrison of the Majestic theater, Hartford, there are no complaints as to the profits from showing good pictures. Mr. Nichol is an unusually progressive exhibitor—is constantly thinking up new ways of presenting the good points of his pictures to the people in Waterbury. His receipts the first day when he took hold of the theater about a year ago was $10.80. The house was run down and every one predicted that he could not make it pay. To-day he has a magnificent trade that is showing him a good deal more than 1,000 per cent. over and above the receipts when he took charge of the theater. This is merely a just tribute to an intelligent and active exhibitor. While it is an exceptional case, it need not be, because every exhibitor has the same opportunity to do what Mr. Nichol is doing if he will give his individual problem the time, attention and labor.

"I understand that the banks in Pennsylvania also are beginning to lend money for the purpose of building the better class of theaters. I assume that it is only the question of a short time after these prove their worth that the photoplay industry will be recognized throughout the United States as a legitimate and solid field into which financial institutions of our country can put their capital."

WAR INVENTION IN KALEM FILM.

A model reproduction of a torpedo deflector, such as John Hays Hammond recently announced that he had perfected and would present to Secretary Daniels' Naval Board of Advisors, is seen in operation in a forthcoming Kalem production, "The Spy's Ruse," an episode in the "Ventures of Marguerite." By the use of a large tank and the electrical apparatus in reduced form, photoplay followers are shown the amazing value of the Hammond invention.

Special Pictures for Christmas Season

The Educator makes it a rule to remind exhibitors of the wisdom of taking advantage of the special season of the year for the purpose of planning programs, particularly suitable and appropriate to the seasons. There is no time of the year equal to Christmas which, with the close following New Year season, gives such splendid opportunities for exhibiting films which at once secure the combined attention of churches and schools, in addition to the general public. A splendid and harmonious combination of a holiday and festival season with a religious basis, surrounded by religious and educational interests, give occasion to the exhibitor who desires to do the best by and for all classes of people, to make a record for himself and one determined to join in the general advance of all that is best in kinematography. That there are many subjects not appropriate to this season, however they may suit other more regular days of the year, is an accepted fact, making it incumbent upon every one to see to it that if the best and most appropriate films cannot be obtained there should, at least, be an exclusion of those subjects distinctly contrary to the occasion.

For the purpose of helping our friends we herewith give a list of film subjects, which it is hoped may serve as a guide to many, and encourage a spirit of harmony in both entertaining and leading to a more satisfactory use of the world's greatest entertainer and educator in conjunction with the world's greatest events.

Films Suitable for Christmas.

The Birth of Our Savior—Edison—Dec. 19, 1914.
Mr. Santa Claus—Vitagraph—Dec. 19, 1914 (2 parts).
'Twas the Night Before Christmas—Edison—Dec. 23, 1914.
The Knight Before Christmas (Sonny Jim)—Vitagraph—Dec. 24, 1914.
Santa Claus Versus Cupid—Edison—Dec. 18, 1915.
Christmas Memories—Gold Seal—Dec. 21, 1915 (3 parts).
Is Christmas a Bore?—Vitagraph—Dec. 24, 1915 (Comedy—Drama).
His Majesty, the King—Thanhouser (3 parts).
Alice in Wonderland—Nonpareil Feature Film Corporation. 1915 (4 parts).
Rumpelstiltskin—Mutual Masterpiece—1915 (4 parts).
Helen's Babies—Thanhouser—Sept. 14, 1915 (2 parts).
Otherwise Bill Harrison (Day Dream of a Newsboy)—Essanay—May 22, 1915.
Fairy Fern Seed—Thanhouser—May 25, 1915 (2 parts).
The Little Orphans—Reliance—Aug. 5, 1915.
The Little Boy Who Once Was He—Reliance—Aug. 4, 1915.
The Golden Rainbow—American—June 2, 1915.
Her Fairy Prince—Reliance—July 26, 1915.
The Heart of a Waif—Edison—April 24, 1915.
The Little Mother—Majestic—April 6, 1915.
A Letter to Daddy—Biograph—July 26, 1915.

HOW ADLER WON THE DAY.

Bert Adler, manager of the Universal Coytesville studio, in the borough of Englewood Cliffs, N. J., received a neat editorial compliment in the Fort Lee Sentinel, official organ of the borough of Fort Lee, wherein most of the Jersey studios are located, on his manner of handling a successful fight on some police ordinance aimed at the picture manufacturers. The editorial said:

"Just as if to prove that The Sentinel's advice to the moving picture studios to keep out of politics was in their own and the community's interest comes the story of what has transpired in Englewood Cliffs.

"The Mayor and Council there had in mind a certain set of ordinances affecting certain features of moving picture taking. Most of the film companies operate now and then in Englewood Cliffs and one of them is located directly within the borough and operates almost exclusively within its confines.

"When the Mayor first proposed the ordinances at the instance of one of his taxpayers, the manager of that particular studio didn't rave or rant at the Mayor, nor start a 'we are persecuted campaign.'

"He merely went to the Mayor, told his side and asked for the appointment of a special committee, which request was granted. The special committee permitted the studio manager to write to the neighboring studios for their views in the matter. Then, having got the taxpayers' side and the moving picture men's side, the special committee reported back to the Mayor. The Mayor recommended that the proposed ordinances be not enacted, until at least the studios had plenty of chance to show that they were unnecessary.

"This speaks well for the art of quiet, sane procedure as against noise and mud-slinging. It also makes certain gentlemen who would precipitate the studios into politics go 'way back and sit down hard.'"

Equitable Productions

Interesting Notes on Current and Future Releases Worth Bearing in Mind.

THE first all-star cast production from the Equitable studios, is the John Ince production of "Sealed Lips" in which William Courtenay, Mary Charleson, Arthur Ashley, Marie Wells and Adele Ray handle the principal roles and which required seven weeks of work before the scenes in which Mr. Courtenay appears were completed and four additional weeks to complete the lesser scenes. It was necessary to build many big sets for the picture, as owing to Mr. Chesney's being engaged at the Hudson theater in "Under Fire," it was impossible to travel to locations out of town. Mr. Ashley, who recently completed his appearance before the Rolfe camera, portrays the role of Cyril Maitland, while Mary Charleson and Adele Ray and Marie Wells have equally important parts.

Katharine Kaelred.

E. Mason Hopper completed the production of "The Labyrinth," in which Gail Kane is making her Equitable debut and leaves for Tucson, Ariz., this week, to begin work on Miss Kane's second production, "Her God," which will characterize the Equitable program early in February.

In "The Labyrinth," Mr. Hopper engaged for the theatrical scenes Marcus Loew's Plaza theater, and the entire Town Topics company of one hundred and ten players. The company worked with Miss Kane for the better part of ten days.

In "Idols," in which Katharine Kaelred is playing for Equitable, Murray's Restaurant is the locale for a great number of scenes. The elaborate ballroom was engaged for an entire week, with privilege of using the magnificent ballroom each day until the lunch hour. Lighting equipment was installed and moved each day, but the effect was well worth the time and expenditure.

Molly McIntyre.

Charles Seay, accompanied by Muriel Ostriche, Molly King and eighteen other principals, left last week for Albany, Ga., where, in conjunction with the Con T. Kennedy Carnival and Gala Week Company, Miss Ostriche's next picture, "Babette of the Ballyhoo," a purely circus story, will be staged. The production of the Ostriche picture was delayed one week because of the accident suffered by the Kennedy Company, when five of their people and a number of animals were killed in a train wreck. At the Civic Ball held by the municipal authorities of Albany, Director Seay procured the use of the big open air ballroom and staged a number of essential scenes, using the several thousand natives as extras.

In addition to Seay, Ince and Hopper, Equitable has Harry Pollard, Webster Cullison, S. E. V. Taylor at work, and Frank Powell preparing to begin his first production under the Equitable banner.

Mr. Taylor with Molly McIntyre in "Nan Perinne," the debut of Miss McIntyre is at Port Royal and Kingston, Jamaica, in the Antilles, where the principal scenes of his picture will be staged.

The anticipation of President Spiegel to have eight pictures ahead is fast being realized.

Ocean Film Elect Officers

New Feature Company Plans to Erect Large Studio in the East and to Produce Two Subjects a Month.

AT a meeting of the subscribers to the capital stock of the Ocean Film Corporation, held last week, the formal organization was completed. The following were elected: President and financial manager, John L. Dudley, who is a trustee of the Citizens' Savings Bank, and a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce; vice-president and general manager, Jesse J. Goldburg, formerly secretary and general manager of the Life Photo Company; secretary, Geo. S. Brown. The board of directors consists of the three named and Francis R. Masters of William Whitman & Co., Paul E. Rasor, William D. Judson and R. C. E. Brown. George De Carlton has been engaged as manager of production. Joe Farnham has been engaged as publicity and advertising manager.

Plans have been drawn for the erection of an eastern studio and laboratory in Westchester County, the construction of the building to be under the personal supervision of Edward Barnard Kinsila. The plans embrace innovations that permit the conversion of an artificially lighted studio into an open-air studio, as well as a daylight studio.

Mr. Goldburg says: "We have proceeded rather slowly in our organization work in order to systematize the entire organization and will not engage men with fanciful titles in order to lead the exhibitors in the exchanges to believe that we intend operating their business. Every employee of this company will be engaged in the production end of the work. We feel that if we deliver to the exchanges a meritorious production that they, in their turn, knowing how to operate their business, will not require assistance by way of local advertising men, traveling inspectors, and the like."

EDISON FOLK HAVE PARTY.

A big "house warming" and get together party of the Edison folk was held Saturday evening, December 4th, in the Edison studio, which was given over to the fun of the hour. Manager Leonard W. McChesney believes that all work and no play makes not for the best, so the Edison players, who have been particularly busy of late turning out features for the General Film Company's program and the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, made a playground of their workshop.

The officials of the Edison organization, at Orange, were invited and Thomas A. Edison, C. H. Wilson, vice president and general manager, and second vice president William Maxwell, among many others, met the players.

The entire studio floor was cleared and especially prepared for dancing. A large orchestra furnished the music. A huge pie concealed favors for every one present, which came into view by each one pulling on his surprise string. Jesse Stevens surmounted physical differences and gave an imitation of the little star, Viola Dana, with laughable success. Under guise of an imitation of "Maple Prunnella," sketched by Mabel Dwight, Miss Trunnelle was easily seen. Raymond McKee imitated Edward Earle. Harry Eytinge took off Dick Weber, assistant to Manager Leonard W. McChesney; Julian Reed, an Edison official, while Richard Tucker picturized "Henry Ford-ham," the jitney actor. Mr. and Mrs. Brad Sutton got away with a mind reading act, and Messrs. Harris, Fables and McKee did a trained animal skit. Carroll McComas, well known on vaudeville and dramatic stages, rendered songs and a whistling act.

Prizes were awarded for the best dancers. John Rough, chief scene artist, gave some lightning cartoon sketches of players. About four hundred attended. The affair was informal and in charge of a committee of Sally Crute, Jessie Stevens, Mabel Dwight and Richard Tucker.

GOLDFRAP WITH WORLD FILM.

John R. Goldfrap, well known as a publicity man with Fox and other concerns, has been appointed publicity manager of the World Film Corporation, in association with E. Richard Schayer. Messrs Goldfrap and Schayer took charge of the office on December 6. While new to motion picture work, Mr. Schayer has had ample experience as a theatrical press agent and as a special writer for magazines and newspapers. Recently he has been a war correspondent in Europe.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

THIS time I am going to tell you of a new theater dedicated to moving pictures and which reflects great credit on the promoters, architects and managers whose guest I was on opening night. It is in East Somerville just over the border between the Bunker Hill district of the Hub and the city of seven hills. The theater is a gem in every way, seats 1,200 persons and is most artistically decorated in white with a touch of gold in the proscenium arch and the lights are "the last call" in such houses. There is a feeling of security and comfort in all the details, and we like particularly the screen, set in a deep frame of dark wood and well placed for all eyes. Most fitting was it that Marguerite Clark should be the first star to appear, for she appeals to all in her daintiness and art. We had the new release, "Still Waters" by the author of "Rags," and I thought it the best Miss Clark has given us. Particularly enjoyable to the adults were the canal scenes staged on the famous Jersey waters way, but, of course, the circus caught all, and what a splendid company they have given us! This house is to run only the best releases and strives to present as little slap-stick as possible. Mayor Z. E. Cliff expressed his appreciation of the fine addition to the city's handsome new buildings. Mr. Hurst, the manager, made a modest address, and the other entertainment was furnished by Mrs. Emma Prichard Hadley, the well known teacher of dramatics, picture posing, etc.; Mrs. Florence Wakefield, the dancer, and Miss Marie Estelle Walker in musical numbers. A reception followed in the large studio of Mrs. Hadley, the only other occupant of the building.

Am sure I voice the sentiment of all film goers in expressing regret over the death of Colonel Draper, who has been such a dignified, courtly man in the pictures. His Burnside whiskers made him conspicuous, and his miltary bearing was a treat to the eye, for he was never the martinet or poser. He is still seen here, of course, in releases filmed long ago, and we have him in the "Battle Cry" here for a long run, and rightly. The hyphenated citizens have cooled off in their protest and have issued an inane excuse for the "retreat."

Not having been an enthusiast on moving pictures more than a year I naturally have missed some of the older releases and it is a joy now and then to see reissues of the early short subjects put on by thoughtful managers to please those of the newer generation of patrons. Why not? When there is a good one, why put it in storage? I firmly believe in a revival of good films as well as of the speaking plays, and the day is coming for long runs. Some films might profit through a new cast, giving a change of faces as the speaking drama furnishes in their revivals or return engagements. Perhaps I am too optimistic, but when we get a good thing that lives in memory we want others to see it.

"Enoch Arden" is the most artistic, poetic and pathetic picture yet to be witnessed by me and so reverently done. To reproduce the poem in the titles was a joy. Lillian Gish, our little friend in "The Birth of a Nation," was admirable all through, and the kiddies were quite unusual. A striking thing about them to me was the resemblance between them as children and as grown-ups. I was unfortunate to be seated near some chattering women, evidently wealthy as to world's goods, but poor in mind and soul, for they utterly failed to grasp the spirit of Tennyson and they even giggled at the death scene. Such conduct at a Sunday evening performance should be hissed, or the disturbers asked to leave the theater. It surely can be controlled by tactful managers. One expects it at slum theaters, but not in a high class one.

"Carmen," with Farrar in this exotic part, has been seen here in three houses starting in, as you know, at Symphony Hall with seats at $2 per, the same film seen now for 15 and 25 cents. The first night was a sort of reception to the singer in the flesh, and had the additional attraction of symphony players giving us the score.

Opinions are divided on the merits of the film version, but all admit that it is full of color as to action, and most artistically staged. It may not sound ladylike but I rather liked the bull fight scene, never having seen one, and this was surely realistic enough to satisfy the fans. The friend who accompanied me declared that no good woman could play a part like that, but I told her of many really fine women, like Charlotte Cushman, who had played worse parts and got away with them, like the Lady Macbeths and the vampire type, but she was unconvinced, which shows how well "Gerry" Farrar did it. Glad she is having a return engagement in "dear old New York."

I saw a film the other night located in Streeterville, Ill., illustrating some sort of a strike or labor riot and the flag shown was a disgrace, two-thirds of it gone as a result of the elements, or old age, being evidently left out continuously, contrary to good taste and patriotism. Why do directors pay so little attention to our beloved flag.

* * *

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" was a disappointment, as the speaking version was, in that the dramatists failed to reproduce the bridge scene and Sir Oliver's first meeting with Glad. It would have made a stunning film, most dramatic and giving a bit of London fog. Forrest Robinson made a fine Sir Oliver and dignifies any part however small, like the servant in "The House of a Thousand Candles." One familiar with Mrs. Burnett's book would like to see the dear old cripple of the alley, who converted Glad to better thoughts. Mary Pickford was exceptionally good, and there was a well balanced company.

We had a strong bill at the Modern recently, with Charles Cherry in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" and Nance O'Neil in "A Woman's Past." The combination furnished a gripping performance of both plays. Alfred Hickman does good work with Miss O'Neil, as heretofore. Dear Lillian Tucker certainly had her troubles as Lady Lumley, owing entirely to the unintentional neglect of her husband, supposedly the "mummy," whom jealousy brought to his senses. We liked the Italian settings too, and the atmosphere of it all scenically.

On the same program (at the Park, owned by the incomparable Lotta) was "Chimmie Fadden Out West," and it was good, clean fun with a touch of pathos toward the end. Victor Moore is nothing if not original, and rightly a favorite with us over here. The company is so well balanced with dear old Mrs. McChord as the mother. Ernest Joy was hardly recognizable in his make-up, but it was easy to pick out Tom Forman, one of the "wild and woolly" Westerners. The play was wholesome in its finale.

We are anticipating "The Cave Man," a Vitagraph offering, with "Bob" Edeson in the title role. Being familiar with the story and a friend of the hero, I shall enlist patronage knowing all will get their money's worth. "The Turn of the Road" is being anticipated with handsome Naomi Childers, and I predict packed houses when "Colton, U. S. A." comes, for Charles Richman is a strong drawing card, and all who are enjoying "The Battle Cry of Peace," with such a leading man, will want to see him in a film where he is not likely to meet with such an awful end. Dear Mary Maurice, the heroic mother in the above film, is doing versatile work with the Drews in "Is Xmas a Bore?" and I saw her in a little comedy the other night written around the dancing craze, in which she goes through the paces of the old time evolutions with Pa, and at the last is doing the tango taught by the young folks. It must be a joy to know her in the flesh as she radiates good cheer and motherliness.

My first look at Ethel Barrymore in the films was in "The Final Judgment," and all through she was a delight to the eye, and the Metro people have some film with ornate settings. H. Cooper Cliffe made a villain worthy of his name, the part calling for versatility and art, in which he is past master. Miss Barrymore has done nothing better on the speaking stage than this, and the audience actually applauded her work so compelling was it. Her gowns delighted the ladies and the way she outwitted the villain brought down the house.

"Bella Donna" took well here, and gave our own Pauline Frederick another chance to show her ability. Eugene Ormonde, another local favorite, made good, while Julian L'Estrange seems always dependable wherever placed. The scenes were sumptuous and the Egyptian atmosphere adhered to, though staged in our own sunny South. They were suggestive to a degree in spots, but escaped the censor. The finale was well staged and the entire dramatization commendable.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by S. M. BERG

A GREATER MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

Work of Clarence Sinn to Be Supplemented by Music Suggestions.

By S. M. Berg.

THE enormous strides taken by the motion picture industry has reached the point where it is classed as one of the most important in America. It has given employment to thousands of people, and opportunities to musicians who are endeavoring to fit their music to the requirements of the screen.

Much of the success in the important master productions such as "Quo Vadis," "The Miracle," "Cabiria," "The Birth of a Nation," etc., was owing to the elaborate musical programs, either originally composed or carefully adapted and presented with the film. In all instances the presentations were received by the press and the public as masterpieces of conception and artistic production.

When music for the picture is discussed between men who are closely in touch with motion picture affairs, such a broad diversion of opinion is expressed that one wonders what the ultimate attainments will be. Few realize that music is the oldest of all the arts and that it has been bent and buffeted by human ingenuity through the years of existence to portray every emotion and sound known.

The Moving Picture World has heretofore given only a small amount of space to music, but realizes that the increasing importance of such a department merits its consideration in every issue. In addition to the articles from Mr. Sinn, which we will carry as usual, we have arranged with S. M. Berg, musician and director, who has been associated with many of the leading picture houses in New York City and who is today recognized as one of the leading experts and authorities, for a weekly department devoted to the proper musical interpretation of the films.

Almost every exhibitor and manager has his own particular pet theory on the fitness of musical settings and criticises unmercifully the efforts of another, though in a great many instances his own knowledge of music is sadly deficient. It will, therefore, be the aim and endeavor of this department to travel a broad road and with the readers' assistance and co-operation work out a solution of the many problems involved. At the earliest opportunity, subjects will be dealt with such as: The Musician's Library, Instrumentation of Small Orchestras, Value of Standard Compositions, Modern Arranging, The Handling of Dramatic Situations, The Use of Themes and of What They Should Consist, etc. A review of all new musical publications and their fitness and adaptation to the service of the film will also be a regular topic.

A special space in the magazine will be opened to our readers for a question and answer column. Readers are invited to use this freely, and all suggestions or criticisms of musical interest will be welcomed and discussed. Everyone will receive fair and impartial treatment and it is expected that such a course will prove an invaluable aid towards working out the difficulties confronting musicians and exhibitors.

MUSIC SUGGESTION CUE SHEET.

(Prepared by S. M. Berg, by Special Arrangement with G. Schirmer, Inc., Music Publishers, New York.)

Although this Music Suggestion Cue Sheet is not designed to solve every possible musical requirement of the film, the exhibitor, the orchestra leader and the public, it has proven a great assistance to the leader, not only by relieving to a degree the tedium of rehearsals, but by assisting materially in overcoming that chaotic condition encountered when the film is not available until almost the hour of opening, resulting in a rehearsal instead of a performance.

The importance of suitable musical accompaniment is so great that a number of producing companies and exchanges are supplying to every exhibitor a number of cue sheets, similar to the one here published for the benefit of readers of the Moving Picture World, sufficient to provide a copy for every member of the orchestra. The following musical suggestions for an accompaniment to "The Labyrinth" were prepared for the benefit of Equitable exhibitors by the photoplay department of the New York music publishing house of G. Schirmer, Inc. This advance publication will, however, afford to the progressive leader an opportunity to acquaint himself with the general character of the film drama which he is to portray with his orchestra.

The timing of the picture is based on a speed of 15 minutes to a thousand feet. The time indications will assist the leader in anticipating the various cues, which may consist of the printed sub-title (marked T) or by a described action (marked D).

"THE LABYRINTH."

Released December 13, 1915, by the World Film Corporation.

Flo Burke, a cabaret singer, by trickery succeeds in getting a theatrical king to star her in a musical comedy at an enormous salary. She is a great success and at a summer resort, where she is unknown, Fenton, a minister, falls in love with her. She gives up her stage career and in a train wreck she again meets Fenton, whom she finally marries.

Especial care should be taken by the leader in handling this picture. At opening there are many scenes of cabaret singing and dancing. Later a stage scene of a musical comedy with star and chorus singing and dancing. At end of third reel a church scene where organ solo is appropriate. At middle of fourth reel there is a train wreck, and at end of fifth reel a struggle and a shooting takes place.

Time schedule: Five reels (about 5,100 feet), 76½ minutes.

The theme selected is "My Beloved Queen," Rose.

The Ed-Au Club

Organization of Scenario Writers and Editors Peculiarly Interesting—Next Meeting Dec. 14.

THE Editors' and Authors' Club has awakened into greater life and activity than ever before. The increased demands for the best materials for screen drama has aroused greater interest and the men and women who are the foundation of the photoplay business, have come to realize that a strong organization is imperative.

Although composed of editors and writers and people familiar with publicity methods, they think they have hitherto been very reticent about themselves.

The club meets every two weeks at Martin's Restaurant, where those who are able to get there early partake of a Bohemian dinner together, and afterwards discuss the problems which affect the photoplay writers. In addition to the very pleasant social side of the meeting of their fellow craftsmen in a social way, they discuss seriously the problems which arise in their work.

At an enthusiastic meeting held last Tuesday, November 30, Reverend Jasper Ewing Brady, who is putting the works of his celebrated brother, Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, into photoplay form for the Vitagraph Company, addressed the club on the subject of stolen plots. He spoke with great vigor and conviction and condemned the people and companies who pirate other people's stories and ideas, as being no better than a thief who enters the house or bank at night to steal and rob. His remarks were received with great enthusaism by the club.

Resolutions were passed by the club, heartily condemning the practice of pirating and plagiarizing of other people's books and plays.

Walter Macnamara, author of many successful scenarios, also spoke and gave a very interesting account of his debut in scenario writing. Instances of flagrant piracy on the part of some of the largest photoplay producers were given and discussed and many valuable pointers were thus gained by the club members.

The persons who are qualified for membership, are invited to send their applications to the secretary of the club, Mary Louise Farley, 607 West 136th street, New York City.

The officers of the club are: President, Arthur Leeds, head of the Edison scenario department; vice-president, Howard I. Young, of the Kalem Company; secretary, Mary Louise Farley. The board of governors are: Mary Louise Farley, George Ridgewell, Howard Young, Carl Louis Gregory, Arthur Leeds.

The next meeting is Tuesday, December 14, at Martin's, 221 West 45th street, at 7 o'clock.

Flickers

OUR old friend, John Hardin, formerly connected with the Edison company, has, after more than two years absence, come back to New York. At this time we do not know what the idea is.

Ben Goetz, special representative for the Erbograph Company, is receiving congratulations. Ben says that when it grows up, he will be a cop. Mother and son are doing nicely.

* * *

Have you seen the latest creation in publicity from the pen of Nat Rothstein? The book of hints for selling and exploiting the new Universal triumph, "Graft," must have been some effort.

Montgomery, the Moving Picture Man from Jacksonville, was a visitor to the offices of the "World" during his stay in the city.

It is rumored around town that Joe Farnham, publicity manager for Lubin Films, will associate himself with the Ocean Film Company, New York, in the same capacity.

Tom Quill, sales representative for the Goes Lithograph Company, Chicago, is in town for a few days, during which time he is making Mrs. Astor's hotel his home.

I didn't go to the Boston Exhibitors' ball, but from what I have heard about the elaborate preparations, Joe Engle made for Metro Films, I feel as though I sure did miss something.

* * *

That is some trick stick Arthur Lobel carries (when he is dressed for the promenade).

Jesse Goldberg looks like a real film magnate now-a-days. The English accent and tortoise-shell rims help some.

Eddie Roskam is back again at the head of the Commercial Film Company.

Up to now we have not heard anything like the noise a certain "cattle rustler" moving up and down Broadway. Oh, Jay, where is thy "punch?" MAC.

Working in Death Valley

World Film Players Had Strenuous Time Making "McTeague of San Francisco."

COOKING utensils, provisions, tenting outfits, with the bag and baggage of Holbrook Blinn, Barry O'Neill, Fania Marinoff, and company of over twenty people of the World Film Corporation, landed at a town on the Union Pacific railroad, consisting of a railroad station, combination post office, general store and saloon. They were met there by Death Valley Jim Scott, and the famous twenty-mule team from the Borax mines. Scott, who knows this territory like a book, acted as a guide through the Death Valley, where the World players took scenes for Frank Norris's story, "McTeague of San Francisco."

Before leaving New York, Director O'Neill explained minutely the terrors of the desert and the horrors of camping and the hard work that would befall them, ending this little talk with the remark, "Anyone who is in the least bit afraid shall speak now or forever hold their peace." Instead of any member declining the engagement, they were all most enthusiastic to make the trip and many other people in the studio pleaded to be taken also.

The company arrived on the desert after traveling twenty miles on the backs of mules, accompanied by the twenty-mule team, hauling the supply wagon, in one of the worst sandstorms they had experienced on the desert in many years. The wind blew so hard that they were unable to put up their tents, and at the suggestion of Mr.Blinn, they all set to and unloaded the supply wagon and bunked in it. The next morning they packed their outfit and again started on a tedious journey to the mines. After enjoying a day of getting acquainted, putting up their tents and establishing themselves in their new abode, they started in for real hard work. It was many days before any member of the company saw daylight, for they went into the mines early in the morning and did not return until after dark.

After completing all the inside scenes they then started on the exteriors, traveling many miles each day and erecting their tents in a different locale each night.

Mr. Blinn and Mr. O'Neill are more than pleased with the results of their trip and the company tell many interesting, but harrowing tales always finishing with "I wouldn't take a million dollars for the experience, but I wouldn't go through it again for ten times the amount."

CHANGES IN PARAMOUNT PROGRAM.

Mary Pickford's starring vehicle, "The Foundling," produced by the Famous Players Film Company, will be released on the date originally reserved for the Lasky Feature Play Company's "The Immigrant," in which Valeska Suratt makes her debut as a Paramount star. The latter production will now be seen on the Paramount program beginning December 20th, and Miss Pickford will postpone her appearance until December 27th. The Lasky production, Edna Goodrich in "Armstrong's Wife," was substituted for the Famous Players picture, "The Red Widow."

Estimating Salaries in Seconds

Anna Pavlowa Received from Universal $1.11 for Each Sixtieth of a Minute.

WHEN Anna Pavlowa was signed by the Universal for "The Dumb Girl of Portici," she demanded and received $50,000 in cash, paid her before the completion of the picture, and also retained half interest in the pictures. Pavlowa would not allow the publicity department to hint that she was receiving so much per day, hour or minute, as that had become a popular pastime of press agents. But when it was pointed to her that the price she received a second would show the immense value of her services she consented.

There is probably not another star in the world who is as alert for money-making possibilities as the great Pavlowa. She has a manager who attends to all minor details of her business, but when it is a question of dollars and cents she attends to that herself. With the $50,000 she received from the Universal she purchased a half interest in the Boston Opera Company. At the time she signed for her appearance in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," Pavlowa was playing at the Midway Gardens in Chicago, and it was necessary for the Universal to lease Sans Souci Park and there build a studio for the production of this picture which cost the company over $20,000. It was so situated adjoining Midway Gardens that Pavlowa could step from her boudoir dressing-room in the theater through the stage door, walk twenty paces and be inside the Universal studio in the park.

She was working in the daytime for the Universal and rehearsing her ballets and playing at the Midway Gardens at night. It was a very busy time for Pavlowa and she was very exact and punctual. If a certain time was set for her to be at Sans Souci park to work for three hours she would be there on the dot and would leave on the dot. Her time was measured by seconds and here we have the original watch, the property of Anna Pavlowa, which ticked off the seconds when every tick meant $1.11 to her.

Pavlowa purchased this stop watch purposely for this occasion, and calls it her "Portici" watch. Pavlowa worked practically five weeks in making "The Dumb Girl of Portici." According to the official sheets which her timekeeper kept she worked from three to five hours a day. When summed up her time averaged five weeks, working five days each week, five hours each day. As she received $50,000. this amounted to $10,000 per week, or $2,000 per day, $400 per hour, or $66.66 per minute, which made Pavlowa's salary $1.11 per second. She can now claim without fear of contradiction that she received more money per second for her appearance in motion pictures than the average high-class star received per hour.

ROMAINE FIELDING JOINS UNIVERSAL.

It is announced that Romaine Fielding, author, actor, director and manager, late of the Lubin Company, has decided to remain in Phoenix, Arizona, where he has built a beautiful home and studio and will produce pictures for the Universal Company under the title of the Cactus brand. The new organization, of which Mr. Fielding is managing director, is called the Cactus Films. One and two-reel subjects will be produced in which Mr. Fielding will be featured.

He has retained the valued members of his former company and is quite busy now finishing the extensive alterations and improvements on the plant which he commenced some weeks ago.

When Mr. Fielding severed his connections with the Lubin firm it was with many regrets; simply a case where he could remain in Arizona which has been for a number of years his home State.

There is no need to add that his pictures have always stood for quality and distinction, and now that a wider field for his endeavors has opened up with the constructive skill and directing ability that has characterized his former efforts, we may look for something exceptionally good in the future.

Big Essanay Series

To Be Issued in January and Will Feature Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo—Extensive Advertising Campaign Launched.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE," a drama of mystery, is being produced by the Essanay Company. Henry B. Walthall, probably the most finished actor in motion pictures, and beautiful Edna Mayo, whose dramatic ability equals her pulchritude, will be the stars. The drama will be issued in a series of episodes, the first of which is to be released early in January. Each episode will be complete in itself.

The production is announced as being "not a dramatized dime novel acted by acrobats," but a first-class drama with a notable cast and with direction and photography of the highest type. The story, which will be printed in serial form by nearly 500 newspapers, is by the author of that famous serial, "What Happened to Mary."

A feature of the photoplay, appealing especially to women, will be Miss Mayo's gowns. Her elaborate wardrobe, which includes costumes for every occasion, from boudoir to ball room, is being designed by Lady Duff-Gordon (Lucile).

"The Strange Case of Mary Page" is the first series ever offered by the Essanay Company, which has kept out of this department of picture production until its officers were positive that they could release the best and most fascinating series of all time.

In addition to the publication of the series of sales in the newspapers, a monster advertising campaign in a score of magazines of the widest circulation has been launched. Among the periodicals that will be used are Cosmopolitan, McClure's, Ladies' World, Pictorial Review, McCall's, Metropolitan, Hearst's, Mother's, Collier's, Leslie's, Munsey's and all the motion picture publications.

Dorothy Phillips

PRETTY Dorothy Phillips was born in Baltimore on October 30, just twenty-three years ago. She was educated in the Eastern High School of Baltimore, and immediately after was engaged to play ingenue roles in the Fawcett Stock Company. Then followed a series of successes in "Mary Jane's Pa," the part of Modesty in "Everywoman" and the title role in "Pilate's Daughter."

Dorothy Phillips.

Her unusually sweet face attracted the attention of the Essanay film producers in Chicago and Miss Phillips made her bow to the screen public while with that company. This was two years ago. After about six months' experience with Essanay, Miss Phillips received a flattering offer to play leading parts for the Universal.

She is a brunette of a rare type, possessing dark hair and gray eyes, and has been called an ideal photographic subject for the films. She has great emotional power and carries comedienne roles with skill and artistry. Miss Phillips' latest screen appearance is in "The Bachelor's Christmas," the Universal photoplay produced by Ben Wilson.

"Jane" at the Strand.

CHARLES FROHMAN'S famous comedy success, "Jane," is at the Strand theater, with Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant in the principal roles. The cast also includes Forrest Stanley, Myrtle Stedman, Herbert Standing, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Howard Davies, Syd de Grey and Natalie Warfield. Oliver Morosco, who is the producer of the photodramatic version, has mounted the picture in lavish style. The story of the play is as follows. Charles Shackleton offers Jane $500 to pose as his wife during his uncle's approaching visit. The housemaid, who with William, her butler-husband, is planning a chicken farm, accepts the offer, much to the relief of the gay young bachelor, who has told his relative he was married, in order to secure an increased allowance. Jane finds it hard to lay aside her feather duster instincts, but gets along very well until the inquisitive old uncle benevolently inquires for "the baby." To quiet any suspicion the conspirators fill the vacancy, but requisition the infant of a reluctant washerwoman, who does not speak good English. In the midst of the uncle's ecstacies over the "heir to the house," the mother bursts in and demands the immediate return of her child. Reduced to the last resort, Shackleton has to tell the truth, and this proves the best strategy of all. The uncle is mollified, Shackleton gets the wife he had despaired of, and Jane tucks away $500 for the chicken farm. Other attractive features are a new scenic and scientific study, the Strand Topical Review, and a new comedy. Mme. Zarad Fisher, the Austrian soprano, heads this list of soloists.

Triangle Program at the Knickerbocker.

William Collier, Sam Bernard, Weber and Fields, Roscoe Arbuckle, Fred Mace, Joe Jackson, Mack Sennett. Jane Grey, Tully Marshall, Willard Mack and George Fawcett are seen on the Triangle program at the Knickerbocker theater this week. Miss Grey and Tully Marshall are featured in "Let Katy Do It," a play from the Griffith studios. Willard Mack and George Fawcett appear in "The Corner," a tense, dramatic vehicle supervised by Ince. The others are all concentrated in thirty minutes of Keystone comedy of the Sennett standard, called "Fatty and the Broadway Stars."

"Fatty and the Broadway Stars" is a typical "behind the scenes" conception of the films. The Triangle-Keystone studios are seen in their daily function of creating comedy. Mr. Sennett reveals the intimate workings of his plant with the keen sense of burlesque for which he is noted. Mr. Ince has taken for his material in "The Corner," the conflict between labor and capital. In "Let Katy Do It," Miss Grey is the younger sister of the mother of seven children, who is forced to bring them up. For a long time they stand as a barrier between her and the man she loves. Ralph Lewis, Walter Long, Luray Huntley and the Fine Arts children are prominent in the supporting cast.

"Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," at the Broadway.

"Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," the thrilling novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim, is being presented in photodramatic form, by Jesse L. Lasky on the Paramount Program, at the Broadway theater this week, with Theodore Roberts and Carlyle Blackwell in the stellar roles. The story is based on an actual occurrence which came under Mr. Oppenheim's observation, while at Monte Carlo less than two years ago. This prophesy of the present European conditions was written several months before the present was was declared, but its relations to present conditions seem most unusual, although Mr. Oppenheim did not use the exact characters involved. Another "Buck Parvin" three-part comedy, entitled "Film Tempo;" Broadway Animated News, colored scenics and cartoons, are also on the program.

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty continues its run.

PATHE'S "HAZEL KIRKE" HAS FINE CAST.

The Whartons have begun work on the famous old time play, "Hazel Kirke," the popularity of which is perennial, and are using a fine cast, including, besides Pearl White, Bruce McRea (who starred in Pathe's "Via Wireless"), Creighton Hale, William Riley Hatch, Eddie O'Connor and Allen Murnane. "Hazel Kirke" will be put upon Pathe's Gold Rooster Program.

William Nigh, Metro Director

WILLIAM NIGH, the Metro director, who is responsible for the scenario and the excellent and artistic directing of "A Yellow Streak," the wonderful five-part Columbia-Metro feature, possesses the genius of introducing novelties and human touches that make all his pictures distinctive. This is forcibly demonstrated in his last picture, in which Lionel Barrymore and Irene Howley are starred. It is also true of "Emmy of Stork's Nest," another Columbia-Metro production, in which little Mary Miles Minter is starred, and which is winning unprecedented favorable comment wherever it is presented.

William Nigh.

Although Mr. Nigh has been in motion pictures in every branch of the business for several years, it was not until he became affiliated with Metro that he was given the opportunity to put into execution the revolutionary ideas and innovations he entertains. He came to Metro with the understanding that he would be given a free hand and full sway in this direction. It has proved a happy arrangement for both Metro and Mr. Nigh, and he is fast being hailed as a great director.

Mr. Nigh is peculiarly fitted for a feature director. There is probably no other man in the profession who is as proficient in as many different lines as Mr. Nigh. When he was graduated from the University of California he launched out as a playwright. In this he was successful from the start, and his play, "Off the Road," which was afterward converted into a musical comedy, scored heavily for three seasons. Mr. Nigh then made his debut on the stage and became one of the foremost comedians in musical comedy on the Pacific Coast.

From musical comedy Mr. Nigh was attracted to motion pictures, and he became the leading comedian with the old Majestic Company. There he not only acted the leading roles, but he wrote the scenarios and directed the features as well. From the Majestic he went to the California Motion Picture Company, where he came into national prominence through his masterly direction of "Salomy Jane," "Mignon" and other big feature productions. Mr. Nigh not only understands photography, but he is an artist with black and white, and for more than a year was a cartoonist on a San Francisco newspaper.

FOX LEASES SELIG EDENDALE STUDIO.

Fox Film Corporation's invasion of California for the purposes of active studio work had its beginning Wednesday, December 1, when Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager; William Farnum, Dorothy Bernard and more than fifty photo players under Fox contracts, departed on a special train for Los Angeles.

Coincident with their departure Fox Film Corporation announces that it has taken on a long time lease with the option to purchase, the large Selig studio located in Edendale, a Los Angeles suburb. This studio is one of the largest and most perfectly equipped in the country.

NEW ADDITIONS TO HORSLEY STAFF.

Recent engagements by David Horsley for his playing forces at his studios in Los Angeles include Howard Millcrest and Edward Alexander, both well-known photoplayers, and for his technical departments Irvin J. Martinas and Freddie Wade. Messrs. Millcrest and Alexander have been placed in Director Wm. J. Bowman's company producing Centaur feature animal pictures, in which company Wm. Clifford is featured. Mr. Martinas has been appointed Mr. Bowman's assistant, and Mr. Wade has been made cameraman for Ulysses Davis, who is also engaged in directing Centaur features.

"Jane"

Morosco Company Makes Picture Version of Farce-Comedy Once Popular on the Stage.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

IN photoplay form "Jane," written by W. H. Lestocque and produced on the stage some twenty-five years ago, makes pleasant entertainment. It is not uproariously funny, but genuinely amusing for the greater part of the five reels made by the Oliver Morosco Company, with Charlotte Greenwood in the role of Jane and Sydney Grant playing William, the butler. Miss Greenwood and Mr. Grant are effective screen comedians without resorting to the tricks of slapstick, and they are given admirable support by Myrtle Stedman, Forrest Stanley, Lydia Yeamans Titus and others in a cast of exceptionally even merit.

On the stage "Jane" is classed as a farce of the old school; as a picture production it will be termed comedy; one might add polite comedy, for there is nothing to offend the taste of a sensitive audience. The farcical possibilities of the situation are realized with considerable expertness, in view of the difficulties confronting the director of a five-reel comedy. The intricacies of the problem arising out of Shackelton's attempt to deceive his uncle into believing that he is married, when as a matter of fact he remains a bachelor, are made more mystifying as the story progresses. With each new move Shackelton becomes more deeply involved in the network of deceit and the last reel brings the liveliest sort of a farcical climax, capped by explanations satisfactory to all concerned.

Miss Greenwood displays a keen sense of photoplay comedy in her portrayal of the servant who consents to pose as Shackelton's wife. Her facial expressions are varied and well judged and she never spoils an effect by unnecessary exaggerations. She was in every respect a fortunate choice for the character of Jane. The settings for the picture call for particular comment. The interiors are rich, and what is more, indicate a refined taste in decorations.

"See America First"

Number 13, in Which We Take a Trip About Providence, R. I., Including a Complete Lesson in the Manufacture of Fine Silverware.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE trip around the city of Providence, R. I., is not all that is of interest in this number of the Gaumont educational series "See America First." It contains an industrial that is exceptionally worthy. The industrial portion of the film gives a detailed exhibition of the manufacture of all kinds of fine silver, such as spoons, loving cups, trays, and in fact all the articles belonging to the household silver service and cabinet. The lesson of how all the shapes, polishes, engraving, etc., are made possible, is most complete, from the carrying of the bullion from the vaults to the melting pots, to the very last item in the general history of our silverware.

Each of these "See America First" subjects is a gem in itself, and is accompanied for the sake of variety by a Harry Palmer animated cartoon, cleverly fashioned in true Palmer style, and in which Pa and Ma McGinus perform many remarkable feats "keeping up with the Joneses." In this particular instance Pa McGinus tries to prove to Ma McGinus that he is a "bear cat" on skates, and Ma McGinus fails miserably in trying to follow his lead.

"A Man's Making"

Richard Buhler Is Star in Five-Reel Photoplay by Lubin—Excellent Character Drawing and Acting in Picture Released on the V-L-S-E Program.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

DURING the first four reels of "A Man's Making" the development of the plot is simple and direct. The last reel is over-crowded with motives and comes dangerously near being anti-climaxed. The opening scenes present a clear exposition of the hero's character and the causes which send him out into the world and give the photoplay its title. Harold Graham, a college boy, is more fond of athletics than study. When his father upbraids him for an escapade with a chorus girl the young fellow leaves college and starts out for himself. He is soon down to his last dime and glad to ship on a fishing smack. He falls in love with Mary Haskell, the captain's daughter, and is thrown from the cross-trees of the smack by a jealous rival. Harold lands on the deck and is badly injured. He is taken to Captain Haskell's home and nursed back to health by Mary. His father is sent for and when he arrives the quarrel is patched up. The elder Graham realizes that the rough life has made a man of Harold. Meantime the sailor who attempted to kill Harold is drowned and his body cast on the beach. This much of the story takes up the first four reels. The action from the time Harold leaves college moves rather leisurely, but is always interesting and well within the bounds of human experience. The scenes at the fisherman's home and along the coast and also on board the smack are not counterfeits, but the places and things themselves. The tang of the air and the salt of the sea is always present. The last reel shows young Graham instructing the fisherman how to beat a fish trust and helping his father to down his rivals in a stock manipulation; then, returning to the fishing village and telling Mary of his love. A simpler solution of the story would make for better construction.

The character drawing and acting are entitled to unreserved praise. Richard Buhler is forceful, physically commanding, and dominates the character of Harold at all points. There is a quiet reserve to his method that is greatly in his favor. George Clarke's impersonation of Captain Haskell, the kindly-hearted old skipper, is finely lifelike, and the Bill Rose of Nelson Hall is another true-to-type portrayal. Rosetta Brice makes Mary Haskell well worth the winning, and Herbert Fortier and Wm. H. Turner lend strength to the cast. Director Jack Pratt, who is the author of the play, has filmed his work painstakingly and well.

"The Taint"

A Three-Reel Lubin Photoplay of the South, Produced by Sidney Olcott, With Valentine Grant in the Leading Role.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE one remarkable feature connected with the production of "The Taint," a three-reel Lubin drama directed by Sidney Olcott, is the effective way in which the burning of an extensive lumber yard has been utilized in the telling of the story. The locale is in Florida, and a costly and spectacular fire is made an integral part of the plot. The story itself furnishes material for an interesting photoplay. The spoken drama contains two notable examples of plays built on a similar subject, "The Octoroon," by Dion Boucicault, and Bartley Campbell's "The White Slave." Like "The Taint," the heroine of both these dramas is wrongly accused of having negro blood in her veins. The author of the Lubin photoplay has treated the theme on original lines and fashioned it into an interesting, and at times intensely dramatic picture. As already indicated, the scenes incident to the burning of the lumber yard are the most outstanding feature of the production, but "The Taint" has other positive merits, and is worthy of serious consideration on account of the strength of its story and the general excellence of its transference to the screen.

Scene from "The Taint" (Lubin).

Valentine Grant plays the girl with the spurious taint. She is easily mistress of every situation imposed by the exigencies of the plot, and is aided as much by her personality as by the resources of her art. Roy Sheldon, P. H. O'Malley and James Vincent are laudable members of the cast.

"The Gold Cobra"

Well Produced Three-part Melodrama Appearing on the Pathe Exchange, Inc., Program.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THIS production hies from far Europe, is staged in pleasing style, and is of that mysterious fiber as regards the story which is characteristic of the European film creation. It has just a touch of things Oriental, and much of the spaciousness of the typical English home. It brings to us the underground passages of other days and the ghostly memories that linger with them.

The story of "The Gold Cobra," interpreted on the screen by competent players, has its origin in the overturning of a Hindoo secret society, the confiscating of the golden serpent used in the ritual ceremonies of the sect, and a phial containing a sleeping potion.

At the opening of the picture, years after the incident referred to has happened, Colonel Douglas, the owner of the gold cobra, returns to England and purchases the estate of a man named Mallon, of rather questionable morals. On the eve of the celebration of the betrothal of his daughter to Robert Hamilton, a young man of wealth and position, the gold cobra is taken from its accustomed place in the safe before the eyes of the guests, among whom is the man Mallon, and presented to the bride-to-be. It is therefore not surprising when one day the cobra is missing; but the message accompanying the disappearance of the betrothal gift is of such awful significance that the house of Douglas is thrown into a paroxysm of fear for the safety of Kathleen, daughter of the Douglases, who is threatened with death should the gold cobra not be returned to its original owners; so signified the message.

It is not exactly clear in the picture whether or not Kathleen kidnapped herself in order to be able to gain the money necessary to repair her lover's broken fortunes, or whether Mallon, who turns out to be the thief of the gold cobra, had placed her under the influence of the sleeping potion. At any rate the thief is discovered and the young woman is restored to her people.

The production is an attractive one and holds the interest to the last.

"No Greater Love"

A Powerful Domestic Drama of Love and Tragedy, in Five Parts, Featuring the Fine Emotional Actress, Regina Badet—Released by Selig.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

WHOEVER views "No Greater Love" on the screen will be the subject of a spell that is akin to the magical. What with the compelling drift of the story and its strong cumulative interest, as climax succeeds climax until the dread scene at the close reveals the final tribute of a mother's devotion, the spectator realizes that he has completely lost himself and his real surroundings in the maze of happenings on the screen.

The tense interest is created by following the actions and promptings of a beautiful mother on behalf of her only and beautiful daughter, and since she stops at nothing to achieve her ends it is only natural that the spectator becomes a witness of scenes and incidents that sometimes thrill the mind with horror. At no time is one subjected to "vulgar" crime, if that be any extenuation of the imagining of crime, for the mother in question, Sadunah by name, is of Oriental birth and ancestry and can plan a murder and have it carried out with the utmost expedition either by another or by herself.

The scenes and the story are laid in Paris and on the beautiful coast line of the Riviera, Italy. As the dramatis persona are nearly all members of select society, with ample means to gratify every whim, it is to be expected that the pictures will abound in fine settings, both interior and exterior. The interiors in every case are gems of good taste and delightful art, and reflect evidence of the nicest care in the production. Those in the Chateau Miramar, on the Riviera, are especially praiseworthy, while the exteriors on this beautiful spot exercise an influence akin to that of sweet music. The scene overlooking the Devil's Pool is one that will not soon be forgotten. The narrow, winding way cut out of the solid rock leading to the top of the cliff and the cottage on its summit, with a frail wooden fence as the only prevention, in case of a stumble, from plunging into the seething abyss far below, is memorable for its fine picturesque beauty. And it will be memorable too by reason of the tragedy that takes place there at the story's close.

The acting in this screen play excites admiration throughout. There is distinctive class and good form in the representation of all the principal characters. Mme. Regina Badet's characterization of Sadunah bears the stamp of great talent. She is a lady of fine presence and symmetry, graceful and sinuous—though on the verge of the day of too much flesh.

The costumes worn by Mme. Badet, in fashion about two years ago, are numerous and all beautiful. The bridal dress worn by her as she sacrifices herself and the man who threatens her daughter's happiness cannot fail to make a poetic appeal to women.

Biographs of Good Quality

"Packer Jim's Guardianship" and "The Tides of Retribution" Are Among Coming Releases on Regular Program.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE first picture made by the Biograph players after establishing winter quarters in California was "Packer Jim's Guardianship," a two-reel adaptation of a Roy Norton story. Director Wray Physioc, whose productions have maintained a consistently high tone during recent months, may be credited with another emphatic success. The picture presents an adequate tale of western life, in an artistic fashion, and it utilizes to fine purpose one of the most likable little girls known to the screen. In Zoe Bech, aged five years, the Biograph Company has a veritable treasure. She is the heroine of this photoplay and it needs no other.

Scene from "Packer Jim's Guardianship" (Biograph).

Zoe's first surprising exploit comes early in the opening reel when her father, a prospector, lies dying in his cabin. Sent for a doctor, she climbs to the back of a horse and gallops off at a lively clip. Presently she is pursued by a band of Indians, headed by Spike Robinson, and after a chase is snatched from the horse and carried by the Indian brave. When the wounded Indian slips to the ground Zoe, nothing daunted, rides bareback until a friendly prospector comes to her assistance. In addition to a fearless spirit, this diminutive actress possesses a winning personality free from pertness or childish self-consciousness.

The kindly man who becomes the guardian of the homeless orphan and makes it his business to protect the claim left by her father is sympathetically portrayed by Ivan Christy. One of the touches in the picture certain to be appreciated by an audience is the use made of a well trained burro that accompanies Mr. Christy on his wanderings.

Scene from "The Tides of Retribution" (Biograph).

In "The Tides of Retribution" the Biograph Company has produced a three-reel drama of somewhat conventional theme that permits of some effective acting. Jack Mulhall has the role of an inventor robbed by an unscrupulous assistant. His wife, admirably played by Vera Sisson, is blinded by an explosion and the man responsible for all of their trouble waxes fat on the revenue from the invention until the author of the story has worked out his retribution. Gretchen Hartman is convincing, first as the country girl, who is the object of the defrauder's attentions, and later as a very sophisticated woman of the world—the instrument of his undoing.

"Curing Cissy"

Casino Comedy in Which Cissy Fitzgerald Defies Competition in the Game of High Kicking.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ACCOMPANYING Cissy Fitzgerald in this special effort in athletic comedy are "Budd" Ross, Charles Craig, Phin Nares and others. Edwin Middleton, Gaumont director, is the man who has cleverly whipped the comedy, which is really a burlesque on the rabid physical culturist, into shape.

An extremely funny high kicking scene opens the picture, with Cissy as the central figure, bloused and knickerbockered as becomes the discipline of the gymnasium. Especially entertaining this will be to those familiar with the stage career of Cissy and her "wink."

Scene from "Curing Cissy" (Casino).

Cissy's papa was made to suffer many ordeals because of his daughter's adherence to the strictest rules of health, including draughts, and objected to her sickly lover (Charlie Craig), who, following in the wake of his beloved Cissy, fed his brain with the culture of "How to be healthy though in business." He objected, we presume, on the ground of having two instead of one to face in his single-handed contention. The discovery of a down-on-his-luck actor inspired a bright idea in the head of papa, when the young man arrayed as the leader of the "back to nature" cult is introduced to his daughter, who falls immediately in love with the ideal of her dreams.

The plan of the elder member of the family goes awry, however, for living on nuts that she has to gather herself and sleeping in the open in company with mosquitoes and other undesirables is not quite to the lady's liking, and so the sickly lover with the business cares has still a place in Cissy's heart.

"The Galley Slave"

Theda Bara Plays the Role of a Much Abused Woman in Fox Melodrama Produced by J. Gordon Edwards.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE character of Francesca in Bartley Campbell's "The Galley Slave," a five-part Fox melodrama, is a new type for Theda Bara. Odd as it may seem, Miss Bara appears, not as a beautiful vampire, rather as a long-suffering mother, whose misfortunes are in no way the result of her own misdeeds. The evil in this picture is concentrated in the person of a young artist who marries Francesca against her father's wishes, then makes her life miserable. This artist, acted with considerable force by Stuart Holmes, is a thoroughgoing villain of the old melodramatic school. One finds no limit to his wickedness; in fact the artist might appear a little more human were he not so relentlessly evil.

In arousing sympathy for Francesca and the appealing child that accompanies her through most of the picture, the author made the most of the brutality of the worthless husband. Unable to dispose of his paintings and needing money, the artist tries to sell his wife to a wealthy uncle who "has an eye for a pretty woman," and failing in this he does not stop at physical abuse. Having inherited the title of baron, he deserts Francesca entirely and plans to marry an American heiress, made extremely attractive by Claire Whitney. The scene of the story is shifted to Florence, Italy, where Francesca gains a meagre living by posing for an American painter while her husband is developing his plans for a wealthy alliance. When the story has run its course, when the temporary success of the artist's plan has been turned into failure, Francesca shoots him and the triumph of virtue over vice is complete.

J. Gordon Edwards supplied a satisfactory production for a quite sensational melodrama developed along old-fashioned lines.

"The Painted Soul"

An Impressive Five-Part Mutual Masterpicture Produced by Scott Sidney.

WITH Bessie Barriscale featured and Charles E. Ray and Truly Shattuck in the supporting cast, one is prepared to be pleasingly entertained before the picture opens. And in this instance especially the production surely lives up to anticipations. Bessie Barriscale is surely at her best in a role in which a novice might hesitate to cast her. As the "fallen woman" she has borrowed all the tricks of the trade, and presents us with a type that is easily recognizable. Charles Ray, whose splendid interpretation of the character of the "coward" in the film production of the same name on the Triangle program called forth much favorable comment, gives an intelligent portrayal of the young artist. While Truly Shattuck as the artist's mother, whose motherly interference halts temporarily the resurrection of the soul of the "fallen woman," is a life-like representation of the sweet but conventional mother that looks well to the future of her brood. We even find ourselves sympathizing with her, while on the other hand we are made to realize to the full the position of the unfortunate individual whose struggle to cut loose from the sloth of her surroundings is retarded, sometimes permanently, by just such well-meant proceedings.

Scene from "The Painted Soul" (Mutual).

As the story runs, Barnard, a young artist, has made a successful painting, a feminine study called "The Resurrection." In search of a model for a companion picture to be called "The Fallen Woman," he visits the night court and chooses a young woman of the underworld who is just being released from a ninety-day sentence. Much could be said of the construction of the story just at this point. The circumstances leading to an important and delicately defined situation have arranged themselves with remarkable ease, and have been handled effectively by the director. In other words, one of the fine points of the story, an unexpected turn in the tide of affairs, shapes itself without apparent effort. For the girl left alone in the artist's studio while its proprietor responds to a call from an artist friend in another studio on the same corridor, is tempted to steal a watch from a vest hanging over a chair. A moment after she catches sight of the soulful face in "The Resurrection," which influences her so strongly that, ashamed before the face in the picture, she puts back the watch, and when the artist resumes his work such a change has taken place in the soul of the fallen woman that he is unable any more to gain from his model the proper inspiration for his picture. Space does not permit a full outlining of the story, and suffice it to say that after the two have discovered that they are in love with each other, the woman has become a transformed likeness of her former self, the mother of the artist has succeeded in bringing about a separation and the woman returns to her former life, we leave her again emerging from the grime, this time alone. She steals to the studio in the silence of the night and discovers in the painting of the other woman a transfiguration of herself.

Director Sidney is to be highly complimented on the effective manner in which the picture has been produced.

"Curly"

Three-Part Clipper Star Feature with Lottie Pickford in the Title Role.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

MADE at the studios of the American Film Company with the well-known cast of "The Diamond from the Sky," Lottie Pickford obtains possibly the best opportunity that she has ever had in the picture field. In the role of "Curly" her personality has taken on a softened charm that is very pleasing.

Eugenie Forde as the drunken Mrs. McCarty strengthens her claim to versatility and plays as usual in a finished manner. Then we have William Russell in the role of a hero, a wealthy young man whose chief diversion is work in the slums where he founds a mission house for poor wayfarers to find some grains of comfort in. Charlotte Burton continues in the role of the villainess, and George Periolat as her associate plays well.

The story of "Curly" is an interesting one. As a child she was left by her grandfather in the care of Mrs. McCarty, who afterward developed the alcohol habit. The grandfather and Mrs. McCarty's husband being drowned at sea, the child is allowed to grow up in an unhappy and unhealthy environment. By chance she meets young Arthur Brewster and is employed by him at the mission, where he learns to love her, in spite of the fact that he has allowed himself to become bethrothed to Isabel Morrisey, who with her brother, after having spent their father's fortune, are on the lookout for a good catch. Mrs. McCarty on her deathbed tells Brewster of Curly's identity, and by accident it is discovered that Morrisey, Isabel's brother, is in possession of papers of value in this connection. Brewster forces him to give them up and after trying to prove Curly the thief of one of her diamond rings, Isabel's perfidy is uncovered and Curly becomes the betrothed of Arthur Brewster in place of the villainous Isabel.

"Father and the Boys"

Five-Reel Broadway-Universal Production Features Digby Bell and Splendid Cast in Ade Comedy.

THE screen has again drawn upon the inimitable and refreshing comedy of George Ade in this enjoyable production. Digby Bell plays with fine spirit the part of the despairing father of two frivolous-minded youths, who turns the tables on the boys and shows them how the butterfly life should really be played. The expressive features of the veteran actor show up to particular dvantage.

Ida May Park, the scenario writer, and Joseph De Grasse, director, are to be congratulated on getting this comedy over without either padding or loss of action. It runs smoothly and clearly from scene to scene and preserves the undercurrent of genial humor throughout. The supporting cast is very pleasing. It includes Doc Crane, Louise Carbasse, Yona Landowska, Harry Ham, Lon Chaney, Hayward Mack, Bud Chase, Thomas Chatterton and others. The work of Louise Carbasse as the Western girl who acts as father's confidential adviser, stands out pleasingly.

Playgoers are already familiar with the quiet, forceful humor of this piece. It is well worth seeing again in film form, for it is a comedy drawn from modern life and carries an important little message of a kind, as humor frequently does.

"A father is a great responsibility!" This line, taken from a subtitle, is the keynote of the story. It pictures the way in which a business man who hasn't had a vacation for 28 years breaks over and convinces his boys that home and business are after all worth more than some other things.

THE leading role in the five-part comedy, "What Happened to Father," is taken by the inimitable Frank Daniels, to whom the world is still in debt for laughter. While we cannot say that the film is mirth-compelling all the way through, it is a picture that keeps getting better until it gets decidedly good. There are laughs, and a good many of them, in the first reel and there are dry places; but in the latter parts of the offering the laughter is much more even and continuous.

What did happen to Father was the question that Wifey and the girls were asking. Daddy was in jail and his getting there and then his getting out are matters of satisfying merriment. The dry parts seem due to the assumption that Frank Daniels would be funny in a picture without an amusing situation, just as he is on the stage, whereas, on the screen he merely makes a laughable situation the more a scream by his peculiar personality. He here plays a father who has written a comic opera without the family's knowing it. He finds a backer and a pretty leading woman. The leading woman and the rich backer have an "understanding" and the backer wants to install another leading woman; but Daddy won't let the first one go. There's a quarrel with the backer and Daddy has to take a part himself. His acting gets him a shampoo and starts a riot in the theater. This is all very funny and through to the closing there is no lagging and many good hearty laughs. It was produced by C. Jay Williams.

"A Man's Sacrifice."

The climax of this five-reel red-blood story is a sensational fight between the heroine (Edith Story), the villain (Ned Finley) in a lonely cabin which is pretty well wrecked. It is a rough, fierce fight, with the rescuing hero (Evart Overton) near at hand, but delayed till the last minute. After this rescue the suspense is skilfully continued by the expedition of making the villain, left for dead or done for, creep very slowly and unnoticed towards a gun against the wall. His fingers are just touching it when the hero comforting the girl notices it. "It is all up now," we say; but the boot of the hero's friend is seen coming through the door and the gun is kicked out of the villain's hand. Then we are all satisfied to have the cowboys and miners chuck the varmint over the cliff, the same cliff over which the drunken husband of the girl fell, thus leaving the way for the hero open.

It is a well constructed picture and the climax is led up to by an interesting flow of events that are ably acted and carry a freshly human atmosphere. The first scenes are village pictures set in middle Ohio, from which the hero, disappointed in love, goes to the West. When the girl's husband (Thomas Mills) through drunkenness loses all chance, the hero, unknown to the girl, gets him out to the mines and tries hard to keep him straight for her sake; but the weakling won't leave the drink alone and dies. It is the mystery of the weekly pay checks that makes the girl go out to the mine. She had supposed they came from her husband; but finds that he has been dead six months. It was directed by George Baker.

"The House of Tears"

Exceptional Story and Fine Acting Give Character to Rolfe-Metro Five-Part Drama.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

POWERFUL in theme and plot development and acted with a fund of sincerity, "The House of Tears," written by Frank Dazey and produced by the Rolfe Company under the direction of Edwin Carewe, leaves a vivid impression. It is not easy to recall a stronger or more dramatic photoplay treatment of a story based on a domestic tragedy—one that so completely moves an audience by reason of its truth to human nature, its originality and the sincerity that goes into the acting of the emotional scenes.

Emily Stevens, playing a dual role of mother and daughter, is on the screen most of the time and her work is truly remarkable. She is, in turn, a beautiful, pleasure-loving wife, an aged woman broken by misfortune, a pretty girl of eighteen and a self-reliant young woman who earns her living as a newspaper writer. Miss Stevens' transformation in appearance and personality in meeting the varied demands of these characters marks her as a most versatile and accomplished picture actress.

At a well-managed divorce trial one sees how the home of the Collingwoods came to be "The House of Tears." As the trial progresses the author is fair to both husband and wife. Using cut-backs he shows that the man has reason to question his wife's fidelity; also that there might have been no cause for unhappiness had he paid as much attention to his family as he did to the stock ticker. The divorce is granted and the woman goes west with the co-respondent, leaving her little daughter with her husband.

This open break is only a step in the history of "The House of Tears," for relentlessly and with many clever turns in the plot, the author brings out to the full the misery that embitters the lives of his four central characters. And as a fitting climax we find the daughter about to marry the man who shot her mother and left her dying in a western cabin. The story rings true, it is pathetic as well as dramatic and is a fine example of expert production in which many double exposures are used with fine effect. There is no fault to be found with the well-phrased verses that frequently fill the place of subtitles. Henri Bergman as the husband and Walter Hitchcock as the co-respondent give Miss Stevens excellent support.

Hal Forde has returned from Jacksonville, Fla., where he starred in "Lessons in Life," a Rialto Star Feature, which is to be released December 1 on the Mutual program. The photoplay was written by Paul M. Bryan and directed by Richard Garrick.

"The Honor of the Road"

The Sixth Episode of the "Stingaree" Series Holds Up Interest in the Adventures of This Character—Thomas Lingham's Work a Great Help.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE center of interest in this two-reel installment of the "Stingaree" series, as in several of the others, lies in the character assumed by Thomas Lingham, though it remains true that the situation of which he is the center is built up by Stingaree (True Boardman) and the girl (Marin Sais), and that they and the rest, in the good work they do, keep the design whole. It is called "The Honor of the Road" and the idea is that Stingaree, who only holds up the mail like a true knight of the road, is disgusted when a rascal who has not only robbed but murdered his partner in the ranch business, lays the blame on him and is believed, for a time even by the girl who is a guest at his house, the friend of his wife. He makes him confess and shows him up.

We are not told at first who really committed the crime, but see the shifty-eyed and grouchy rancher tell of being attacked by the road agent and murderously fired upon. Then shortly the body of the partner whom we knew had gone to the bank is found dead and his pockets rifled. It is naturally laid at Stingaree's door. He is nearby in the bush listening and knows that the girl half-believes him. He goes to her and tells her the truth as far as he knows it, and then stealing the uniform of an inspector comes to the ranch to ferret out the facts and the story goes on with good suspense.

One of the things that shows especial excellence in the direction (James Horne produced it) is the unmistakable effect that the dead body, always in the other room and never seen, has on the life at the ranch during those two days. We don't remember seeing in any other picture that "death in the house" effect so marked. In one place there is a marked falling down for a moment when to Stingaree the rancher confesses, telling of something that happened in the earlier part of the story. We had seen so much that it was only necessary to be shown that he confessed. We do not dare lay it down as a principle that no director should ever thus carry us back to "battles long ago," as it were; but we do know that it is very seldom done effectively.

"The Siren's Song"

Melodramatic Story Produced by George W. Lederer Is Released by World Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

DESPITE a few effective scenes, this five-part melodrama, produced by George W. Lederer from a scenario by Herbert Hall Winslow, falls below the average production included on the World Film program. There is plenty of material for an extended story, but it is not always developed to the best advantage; too many of the incidents seem forced, rather than the natural outcome of the situations in which the characters are placed, and overwrought acting does not better the matter. Seemingly the director sought to create an impression by overemphasis instead of by presenting him characters and his story in a normal manner. Restraint is a rare quality in this production.

The picture derives its title from a scheming woman in league with a swindling promoter. Together they draw John Wayne, a well intentioned young man, into their net, and when the government authorities threaten the illegitimate business, they leave John to bear the scorn and the blows of disgruntled depositors. There is no need to follow the subsequent complexities of a plot that brings John through a prison term and finally makes him a respected member of a fishing colony, where he is again menaced by his former partners in crime. Having become a minister, he is especially vulnerable to slander; moreover, the siren has the upper hand for a time by threatening to ruin the mother of the girl he loves. John confesses the darkest secrets in his past to his congregation, asks for toleration and all is forgiven.

The effect of some of the most promising scenes in the picture is partially discounted by cloudy photography; but even at that they may startle an audience. Life among the fisherfolk on the seacoast is faithfully depicted, the gatherings of the congregation in the little church are not without appeal, and audiences no doubt will like Helen Weer in the role of John's youthful sweetheart. With Charles Trowbridge she should be given credit for natural acting. Adolph Link's characterization of the village minister would be better if a little less obviously benevolent.

"The Destroying Angel"

Drama of Certain Appeal Is Produced by Edison Company for Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE Edison Company displayed good judgment in selecting this story by Louis Joseph Vance for production in a five-part picture. It offers an abundance of incidents that lend themselves to photoplay drama; it has variety and without being overmelodramatic it contains a fair share of sensational scenes. The plot is direct, sufficiently plausible and works up interest in the romantic girl who wants to be an actress and the wealthy bachelor who according to the diagnosis of a physician has not more than six months to live. These are the author's central characters, the third of importance being Max, a theatrical manager, whose villainies are responsible for the title, "The Destroying Angel."

Mabel Trunnelle makes a pleasing, romantic girl of Mary in the early scenes of the picture—quite the type of girl likely to declaim "Camille" in front of a mirror, or elope with her father's chauffeur. Mary does both, and after the chauffeur-lover has registered as man and wife at a country hotel and the expected minister has not appeared, the girl faces a most unpleasant situation. When the chauffeur is killed the predicament is no easier, and here it is that Hugh Whitaker, doomed to die in six months, appears in the role of a quixotic gentleman. He gives Mary the protection of his name by marrying her and then, having provided ample funds, disappears that she may live her life unhampered.

Max, a coarse not to say bestial producer of plays, makes Mary a full-fledged star and then, with the persistency of his kind, he looks for payment. More than that, displaying diabolical ingenuity, he manages to remove each man that gives indication of interfering with his plans, until the entirely innocent girl comes to be known as the destroying angel. There is a good story in this picture, with occasional scenes, such as the performance of "Columbine," in which Mary's actor-admirer is mortally wounded, that will impress an audience as being especially well done. Marc MacDermott plays Whitaker with his accustomed poise, whereas Walter Cravan is careful not to gloss over the repellant nature of the theatrical manager.

Charles W. Travis, who plays heavy roles in the Rialto Star Feature company at Jacksonville, Fla., directed by Richard Garrick, has been under a doctor's care for a week. He is suffering from a severe cold which it was feared might result in serious complications. He is now on the road to recovery.

"THE CORNER," five-reel Kay-Bee by C. Gardner Sullivan, directed by Walter Edwards under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is a gripping story of modern theme and fine construction. deeply impresses the fact that the greatest criminal, the creator of conditions which drive naturally honest people to desperate violations of the law, is as comfortably removed from punishment as those irresponsible monarchs who have stained our boasted civilization with ruthless murder and rapine.

Such plays are silent contributors to social and political betterment, the more eloquent that they are not oratorical. They lay hold of attention and win the tender heart of common sympathy from the very nature of their appeal, an appeal almost universal at this moment to the sense of wrong and deep injustice burning in the minds of millions. "The Corner" sounds one of the big notes so seldom attempted and sounds it with no uncertainty. Clara Williams, George Fawcett and Willard Mack are given magnificent opportunity and respond without flaw in their acting. The direction is forceful and convincing.

Bernard, Joe Weber, Lew Fields and William Collier—he used to be "Willie." This is a change from the regular thing and highly amusing in spite of the efforts of the Broadway stars to be funny. The stars twinkled faintly now and then, but they were outshone by the huge full moon, the rotund Roscoe. Even Sennet surpassed them in psychological moments—it begins to look as though he will yet learn to be an actor, though it has seemed hopeless after all these years, and he has enough honors as a director. The story's chief merit is that it is something new.

"Let Katy Do It."

"Let Katy Do It," five-reel Fine Arts deserves praise as an effort to get away from the monotony of sex plays, particularly as the subject is a difficult one to handle from the outset. Bernard McConville, the author, had no easy task in adapting from a novel covering one long succession of time periods, but he has succeeded in building an interesting story through adherence to a single line of interest. Directors C. M. and S. A. Franklin have done their full share in admirable treatment, particularly in handling a bunch of seven lively children in some difficult groupings.

The story is that of a Cinderella sister-in-law, who takes charge of her deceased sister's brood after spending all her girlhood in perpetual self-sacrifice. Her character is a very beautiful one, and Jane Grey makes it one of strong appeal by delicate methods. Notwithstanding the many difficulties which the story may have presented to author and directors, it is one naturally suited to screen portrayal and it will surely please wherever it is shown.

MATTY ROUBERT, formerly of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, is the clever child actor who held the attention of an audience at the Wurlitzer Fine Arts theater on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 4. The subject of the occasion was a five-reel picture production directed by William L. Roubert, father of the Matty, a production especially attractive because of its human quality and the sincerity with which the character of the precocious child of the slums has been portrayed.

Supporting Matty are Morgan Philthorpe, who as the old actor who gave the waif a share in his lodging place, although he had no food to offer him, gives a particularly sympathetic portrayal of the character; Harry Weise as Tony the drunken Italian who stole the waif as a baby and made him earn money by selling papers at night to buy him beer, Wm. Heidloff as the father, Bessie Shanklein as the Italian woman, and Jennie Gilbert as the waif's real mother.

The first glimpse of the waif that we get in the picture shows him in the barrel of straw in which he has bunked ever since he ran away from the wicked Italian people, and from which he emerges with his shoe shining outfit, makes his morning toilet in a horse trough and starts out with a businesslike air to hustle a breakfast.

The first three reels of the picture are brim full of heart interest. And while there may be a difference of opinion as to the construction of the latter part of the story, still we must admit that the production is one that will hold any audience. Children will be delighted with the work of little Matty. The play is clean and wholesome, and of fine moral tone throughout. Matty has done his part in a manner that would put many older heads in the business to shame. The film is well photographed and well supplied with appropriate atmosphere, and it is unfortunate that space will not permit a brief outline of the story, which is a good one.

A genuine cattle round up is shown in a forthcoming American (Mutual) release "The Law of Humanity." For several weeks an entire "Flying A" company headed by Vivian Rich, has been camped at the Mohker range in the Santa Ynez mountains.

THE scenario furnished by Lee Arthur for the three-reel photoplay, "Faith and Fortune," has enabled Frank McGlynn to mark his entry into the ranks of the Edison directors by the production of a vital, human and absorbing picture drama. every-day sort of folk. Their sins as well as their virtues are red-blooded, and no veneer of sickly sentimentality is spread over their wrong-doings. Molly Claiborne, a poor but well-bred Southern girl, has a dissipated brother, who is forced to leave home. He goes out West and meets Jerry Mason, the hero of the tale. Douglas tries to reform, but soon returns to his evil habits and is killed in a drunken brawl. Jerry, who has fallen in love with Molly's portrait, is accused of murdering the girl's brother. Molly arrives on the scene, is present at an attempt to lynch Mason and, when the truth comes out, is glad to marry the man who had tried in every way to befriend Douglas.

Not a particularly novel story, but wholesome and energetic, admirable in its diversified and picturesque scenes of western life, and peopled with clearly sketched types of the sort of Americans that Abraham Lincoln loved.

Grace Williams is sweet and womanly as Molly Claiborne, and Curtis Cooksey, as Jerry Mason, recalls the personality and acting ability of Dustin Farnum. Yale Benner and James Harris are excellent in the heavy roles, and Jessie Stevens is an ample and humorous embodiment of a colored "aunty." Mabel Dwight and Rolinda Bainbridge deserve credit for their lifelike portrayals of women of the underworld.

The interesting series of war pictures which have been appearing in a special section of the Mutual Weekly, will be augmented in the forthcoming number by a series of views Editor Pell Mitchell has just received from the front. These include the first pictures of the wonderful Aerail Torpedoes which, it has been promised, will revolutionize this branch of warfare. The Allies are using them effectively on the western front.

"The Labyrinth"

An Equitable Production in Which Gail Kane Takes the Leading Part.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS feature is well named. A labyrinth, I believe, is a maze with an uncertain entrance and a lot of shifting or unknown exits. In this feature we have very good acting, local color in pleasing abundance, settings that deserve special mention, satisfactory photography, good group work, marvelous realism, amazingly genuine types—there is but one thing lacking: a simple, strong, coherent story. The story leads us from one maze into another. We are thrown from one sensation into another, but the connecting link is not always as plainly visible as it might be.

Gail Kane impersonates a woman with a strange craving for deception. Her deceptions will to most spectators seem both harmless and needless and, therefore, it would seem of scant dramatic value. We are beguiled from dwelling on the looseness and incoherency of the story by the array of merit mentioned above. The scenes in the theater, in the dressing rooms, in the chambre separee, in the drawing room of the star, the many pleasing novelties and original departures will make most of us forget the fact that the story is travelling either too slow or too fast and always in zig-zag fashion. There is a splendor and an atmosphere about the whole feature which greatly tends to redeem the defects I have just alluded to.

Gail Kane's acting was excellent, she displayed that rare thing which for want of a better name I would call screen magnetism. Edward Roseman as Oscar Rose and Richard Neal as the Reverend Robert Fenton gave most creditable performances. Both had most difficult parts, parts indeed that in less competent hands might have degenerated into naked melodrama. They made the very most of their parts and next to the star are entitled to a generous share of the credit for the good parts of the play.

as in the present instance, the old English romance retains its original flavor. It is sweetly sentimental, carrying an appeal to the eye and to a wholesome liking for a pretty love story, rather than to the mind. Refreshing in spirit, it leaves a pleasant impression and perhaps a wish for more productions of a similarly healthful tone.

Directors William Bowman and Fred J. Balshofer are to be congratulated on the fidelity with which they reproduced an old English inn and the interiors of a mansion on an English estate. Exteriors, too, are all that the action demands and such difficult effects as a storm on a country road at night are handled with reasonable success. The fire in the barn from which Dorothy is rescued by Sir Jasper, the most thrilling incident in the picture, appears to have required accurate timing, for the roof all but falls on the heads of the actors.

Marguerite Snow makes a very pretty and graceful figure of Dorothy, whose love affair with Westwood is not favored by her father, a retired sea captain. George F. Hernandez, as Captain Cruickshank, gives a sterling characterization in a comedy vein, and with Frank Bacon, as Professor Jogram, is responsible for a number of humorous scenes. The feud between these two gives the picture a welcome comedy element. In playing Sir Jasper, William Clifford brings out the kind unselfish nature of the man, who makes the best of a lonely old age. His acting of the pathetic scenes in the epilogue is masterly.

Tradition Clings to "The Old Homestead"

Famous Players Catch Spirit of Denman Thompson in Adaptation—Interesting Features in the Pictures.

WHEN the adaptation of Denman Thompson's celebrated rural classic, "The Old Homestead," is released by the Famous Players Film Company on December 23, through the Paramount Program, the film world will receive one of the richest heritages of the stage. This beloved old play, the germ of which had its inception in 1875, has been one of the accepted standards of the theater for over thirty years—a fact which has earned for it the name of "America's oldest living play."

Associated with the name of Denman Thompson, who presented the familiar Josh Whitcomb in every nook and corner of the world, circling the globe three times, the play is rich in tradition and full of delightful associations. To the personal co-operation of Frank Thompson, son and heir of the author-actor, in the staging of many important scenes, the investing of the production with much of the atmosphere which surrounded the original play, is largely due.

Three weeks were spent at the old Thompson home in Swansey, N. H., by Director James Kirkwood, Frank Losee—the new Josh Whitcomb—Louise Huff, Creighton Hale, and others in the supporting cast while the rural portions of the story were being filmed. Then, returning to New York, the players spent the major part of their remaining time on the street scenes, particularly those which occur before Grace Church.

Those who are familiar with the play will remember how Uncle Josh, upon entering the home of his wealthy friend Hopkins, is astonished by the statue of the Venus de Medici. Uncle Josh is deeply concerned by the possibilities of the lady's contracting a severe cold. Then, when he has been sent to bed, he hears the guests singing a comic song in which the chorus shouts "Fire!" It is too much for the skittish Uncle Josh, and he rushes out into the drawing room in his night clothes, hoping to save his life at least.

These scenes, and many others that have become traditionally associated with Thompson's presentation of the play, have been retained. To further strengthen the connecting link between the stage and the screen, many of the best lines in the play have been used in the sub-titles.

In his characterization of Josh Whitcomb, Frank Losee has carefully followed the wonderful conception of Denman Thompson in every possible detail. As the two men were friends and Losee saw Thompson himself in the role several times, his natural ambition to create the best possible characterization that he could was augmented by the desire to perpetuate upon the screen the character made famous by a personal friend.

The chief characters in support of Mr. Losee are played by such well-known actors and actresses as Louise Huff, Creighton Hale, Denman Maley, Horace Newman, Thomas Wood, Margaret Seddon and Russell Simpson, whose names are well-known both on Broadway and to the film world.

With its homely lessons of parental devotion and its delightful pictures of domestic life on the old New England farm, "The Old Homestead" is a particularly happy selection for release just before Christmas.

VITAGRAPH PROGRAM FOR WEEK OF DECEMBER 13TH TO 18TH.

A program consisting of three reels of comedy and six of drama is announced for release by the Vitagraph Company for the week commencing Monday, Dec. 13. Each release gives the best work of the players and directors at the Eastern Studio and each cast is made up of popular stars.

The week's program starts with a one-reel comedy from the pen of W. A. Tremayne entitled "Benjamin Bunter, Book Agent," produced by Courtlandt Van Deusen with a cast including Ethel Corcoran, William Dangman, Templer Saxe, William Shea and Florence Natol as the important characters.

"A Question of Right or Wrong," listed for Tuesday, is a dramatic story in two parts, written and produced by Van Dyke Brooke. This drama, besides having a very strong cast of characters, is a story that will hold from beginning to the end.

The popular young favorite, Bobby Connelly, is featured in the release of Wednesday, which is an appropriate Christmas story entitled "The Faith of Sonny Jim," written by Frank Dazey and produced by Tefft Johnson, who is also in the cast, together with Mabel Kelly as "Mother Dear." Harry Fisher is "Father Time," Logan Paul is "Sonny Jim" in after years, and Harry Waldron portrays Santa Claus. This picture will hold the interest of both young and old.

A dramatic story written in collaboration by Edward Montagne and Frank Dazey entitled "The Flower of the Hills" is announced for Thursday, Dec. 16. The production is by William Humphrey, enacted by a cast including Carolyn Birch, Leo Delaney, Denton Vane, Louise Beaudet and Rose Tapley.

For Friday, December 17, Sidney Drew Day, Paul West, the well-known humorist, has written around Mr. Drew a comedy entitled "The Deceiver," in which the popular comedian has many exciting and laughable experiences. He is ably assisted by Mrs. Sidney Drew, Edward Faver and Mrs. C. Jay Williams, all of whom lend merriment to the picture.

A three-part Broadway Star Feature, "A Man's Sacrifice," is announced for Saturday, December 18, written by A. C. Lichty and produced by George D. Baker. The story is enacted by a cast including Edith Storey, Ned Finley, Evart Overton, Thomas R. Hills, Frank Bunny, George Stevens and Jay Dwiggins.

Book Holiday Feature Direct

Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross" Can Now Be Secured Direct from the Company.

KALEM announces that arrangements have been completed in time for the holiday season by which the famous feature, "From the Manger to the Cross," can now be booked direct from the makers. The statement is made in response to frequent inquiries from exhibitors who were desirous of making early arrangements to show the pictures during the Christmas weeks.

For the further information of exhibitors it is also stated that an unusually complete line of advertising helps have been prepared for the feature. The colored lithographs have been especially prepared by poster artists capable of turning out the class of work in keeping with the impressive subject. The line includes two styles of one sheets, two of threes, three of eights, and a beautiful twenty-four sheet stand. A large four-page courier, printed on quality paper and telling the interesting story of the filming of the production, with a score of commendatory quotations from metropolitan newspapers and prominent men is another advertising aid.

"JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN" (Dormet).

Hearts and minds of children and grown-ups throughout the ages have thrilled in the retelling of that wonderful story of Joseph of the coat of many colors, and of his rise to power in ancient Egypt.

Every ingredient that combines to form dramatic narrative is richly contained in this six-part photoplay, being released by the Dormet Film Company of 220 West 42d street, New York. The dastardly conspiracy of the brothers in selling Joseph into slavery; the deeply poignant brief of the old father when shown the coat of many colors and told the false tale of the younger boy's death under the lion's claw, dramatic highlights which have gripped us since our lives were young.

Woven delicately with mysterious touch are the strange means by which Joseph comes into his own—his rare interpretative gift which enables him to penetrate the intangible realm of dreams. How his prophecy tells of life for one fellow captive and death for another, later brings him as an oracular power before Pharaoh himself. Of Joseph's explanation of the dream of the seven lean and seven fat kine, this is so widely and familiarly known as to have passed into common conversation.

The treatment of the story for motion picture purposes has been poetical and highly theatrical. Beauty and strength run as a team of spirited steeds, the film flashing on with cumulative power.

THE LEGEND OF THE POISONED POOL (Lubin), Nov. 29.—The scenes of this one-reel drama are laid in an Indian village in New Mexico, the characters being native Red Men. The settings are made from life and the story is novel and well told. William J. Spencer, Adelaide Bronti, Jay Morley, George Routh and Vivian Caples assume the Indian characters very successfully.

ONE PLUS ONE EQUALS ONE (Vitagraph), Nov. 29.—Sonny Jim is the one who gives the answer to the sum as stated in the title. It is the answer to a love affair. Elaine Sterne has written a pleasant one-reel comedy, and Bobby Connelly is as cute and winning as his past reputation would lead one to expect. Mae Greene and Arthur Cozine are the lovers.

ONLY A COUNTRY GIRL (Kalem), Nov. 30.—Life on the farm is anything but a calm and peaceful existence, according to this one-reel comedy. With four such experieneed actors of burlesque as Rube Miller, Bud Duncan, H. Griffith and Ethel Teare, the comic mix-ups are frequent.

WHICH IS WHICH? (Lubin), Nov. 30.—D. L. Don assumes two roles in this one-reel comedy, the characters being as alike as two peas. This condition of affairs leads to a goodly measure of rough-and-ready fun. Florence Williams, Carrie Reynolds and Cassady & Turner comprise Mr. Don's principal support.

BAD MAN BOBBS (Selig), Nov. 30.—The thread of quaint humor running through this one-reel comedy-drama will insure it a welcome in nearly every moving picture theater. Tom Mix has "cinched" all the good points by his production, and Pat Chrisman is just the actor for Bobbs. Ethylyn Chrisman and Sid Jordan are also in the right company.

THE MAGISTRATE'S STORY (Edison), Dec. 1.—Echoes of '61 are found in this one-reel drama, in which Gertrude McCoy, Richard Tucker, Pat O'Malley and William West have the leading parts. The story rings true and has a vein of unforced pathos.

THE FABLE OF "THE LOW DOWN EXPERT ON THE SUBJECT OF BABIES" (Essanay), Dec. 1.—This subject is productive of a great deal of merriment when handled by an expert of the George Ade school. Friend Ade throws considerable new light on this important question and enlivens the reel with much sage reflection. Ernest Maupain, Charles J. Stine and Camille D'Arcy impersonate the important characters in the picture with excellent results.

JACK SPRATT AND THE SCALES OF LOVE (Essanay), Dec. 2.—Victor Potel, Margaret Joslin and Harry Todd carry the weight of the comedy in this one-reel photoplay. The subject is not shopworn, moves at a lively pace and is productive of laughter.

THE CONQUEST OF CONSTANTIA (Vitagraph), Dec. 2.—A human little story is found in this one-reel comedy-drama, an old maid, her pet cat and a lost boy being the leading characters. Flora Finch is pathetically humorous as the old maid, and Kate Price makes much of the part of a warm-hearted Irish cook.

HIS EMERGENCY WIFE (Biograph), Dec. 2.—The greater portion of the material in this one-reel comedy is not new, the predicament of the young chap who must secure a spurious wife on short notice, having been used many times. The author has constructed his photoplay very skillfully, however, and its amusing qualities are not to be denied. The cast is a satisfactory one in every respect.

MY HERO (Biograph), Dec. 3.—Another D. W. Griffith reissue of life on the frontier, with an abundance of swift action and many realistic Indian scenes. Henry B. Walthall and Lillian Gish are in the cast.

THE BURGLAR GODFATHER (Essanay), Dec. 3.—The regeneration of the crook in this one-reel drama is brought about by that "one touch of nature" referred to by the poet—himself a newly made father, he cannot rob a man who has just arrived at the same dignity. The story will appeal to those who love plenty of sentiment. G. W. Anderson gives an earnest portrayal of the burglar.

THE KEY TO A FORTUNE (No. 6 of "The Ventures of Marguerite" Series) (Kalem), Dec. 3.—Marguerite and her faithful friends once more find that the peaceful life is not for them. The enemies of the young heiress, led by her chauffeur, abduct the young lady, but she is rescued by Bob Winters. Marguerite Courtot and the supporting company make the reel a spirited one.

WITH STOLEN MONEY (Lubin), Dec. 3.—The infatuation of a country bank clerk for a dashing widow and the price he pays for betraying his trust, is the subject of this one-reel drama. The plot is well constructed and interesting. Lucille Younge, J. A. Morley, Benjamin Horning, Melvin Mayo and Mary Creighton complete a competent cast.

LOVE, PEPPER AND SWEETS (Vim), Dec. 3.—Jabs, Pokes and Runt enter a race for the love of the same girl, in this one-reel comedy, and punch, slap and kick each other, after the highest style of the art known to the demonstrators of their strenuous and broadly comic school of fun.

THE HOME CURE (Vitagraph), Dec. 3.—Sidney Drew is the author, producer and star of this one-reel comedy. He is assisted in the acting by Mrs. Drew, and the reel shows a humorously effective way of curing a man of his thirst for liquor. The picture divides honors between being an excellent temperance lecture and an amusing comedy.

THE SUFFERIN' BABY (Edison), Dec. 4.—This short reel photoplay is a hit at the Militant Married Woman. Its fun is all good-natured, however, and carried out in the spirit of broad burlesque. Bob Walker, Mabel Dwight, William Wadsworth and Jessie Stevens attend to the acting.

MICROSCOPIC POND LIFE, an interesting study of germs, is on the same reel.

THE TRAMP TELEGRAPHER (Episode No. 56 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), Dec. 4.—The "thrill" in this one-reel railroad drama is novel and also a fine exhibition of nerve on the part of Miss Gibson. She climbs from the rods of a moving passenger coach to an open window and effects the capture of a pair of crooks. The entire reel has the usual amount of vigorous action.

AND THE PARROT SAID—? (Lubin), Dec. 4.—There is considerable amusement in this one-reel comedy and not the slightest danger to any person's morals—the screen not registering bad language. The parrot's position in the cast is an important one, but Billie Reeves, Arthur Matthews, Richard Wangemann, Patsy De Forest, Clara Lambert and Charles Griffiths must be credited with doing the greater part of the work.

A JUNGLE REVENGE (Selig—Jungle-Zoo Subject), Dec. 4.—A very compact little drama is contained in this one-reel photoplay, written by Minnie Strehz and produced by Thomas Santschi. The animal actors are worked into the plot in a very natural way. Leo Pierson, Marion Warner, Lafayette McKee and Olga Celeste have the leading roles.

General Film Company Specials.

THE LURING LIGHTS (Kalem), Nov. 29.—This four-reel drama, adapted from a novel by George H. Brennan, is an intimate study of life behind the footlights. The atmosphere of the stage in connection with a small repertoire company, is convincingly maintained. The plot is mildly dramatic. Stella Hoban is attractive as the heroine, Anna Malleen. Bradley Barker, Frank Woods and Helen Lindroth are important members of the cast.

JUST AS I AM (Selig), Nov. 29.—The author of this two-reel drama, Lanier Bartlett, has started out with the intention of getting at the heart strings of an audience and has accomplished his purpose. The story is human and appealing, and director Colin Campbell has given it every advantage to be derived from his comprehensive art. Wheeler Wilson, Harry Lonsdale, Will Machin, Eugenie Besserer and Edith Johnson do justice to their respective roles.

COUNT TWENTY (Biograph), Nov. 30.—There is plenty of action and interest in this two-reel drama. The situations are based upon a serious motive, but the injunction, "Count twenty when you're angry," adds a refreshingly human touch to the story. Mary Malatesta, Ivan Christy, Joseph McDermott, Jack Drumeir and W. C. Robinson render a good account of themselves in the principal roles.

THE LOSING GAME (Essanay), Nov. 30.—Darwin Karr has the star role in this three-reel drama. The part is suited to his personality but makes only moderate demands upon his ability as an actor. The story deals with the good and the bad brother and a stolen will, and was written by Edward T. Lowe, Jr. Hugh. E. Thompson, Anzonetta Moore, Thomas Commerford and Peggy Sweeney are well selected members of the cast.

THE MYSTERY OF THE EMPTY ROOM (Vitagraph), Nov. 30.—The foundation for this two-reel drama—the mystery of an empty room—has done excellent service in several short stories. The motive never fails to grip the imagination and has been adroitly handled in the present case. Wm. Dangman, Ethel Corcoran, John Costello, Alice Lake, Florence Natol and Roland Osborne form a competent cast.

THE HUNGARIAN NABOB (Biograph), Dec. 1.—Adapted from a novel by Marus Jokai, this four-part picture was pleasingly produced and adequately acted by Charles H. Mailes, Franklin Ritchie, Louise Vale and others. The story is not especially convincing, but it carries a romantic flavor that probably will please an audience.

A VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS (Kalem), Dec. 1.—Second Episode in the "Stingaree" series, a longer account of which is to be found in our issue of November 13, 1915, page 1320. The installment is worth note as a good, amusing and exiting number. It is well acted and directed and pretty sure to please well.

THE TAINT (Lubin), Dec. 1.—A review of this picture will be found in this issue.

THE SILENT MAN (Lubin), Dec. 2.—The two reels of this photoplay tell a highly romantic story involving scenes in America and among the aristocracy of Russia. The subject is handled in a very dramatic manner and the picture is an excellent specimen of its class. L. C. Shumway, George Routh, George Berrell, Velma Whitman and Eleanor Blevins appear to advantage in their respective roles.

THE LOVE OF LOTI SAN (Selig), Dec. 2.—Bessie Eyton has the title role in this three-reel drama and plays the Japanese wife of an American civil engineer, with fidelity and strong dramatic effect. The story is very similar to "Madame Butterfly," and the scenes in Japan are close copies of the real places. Edward J. Piel, Richard Norris, Virginia Kirtley and Cecil Holland are commendable.

LIFE'S PITFALLS (Edison), Dec. 3.—A well made three-reel photoplay, written by Edward E. Kidder, in which Miriam Nesbitt, Sally Crute and Harold Meltzer portray the leading characters. A review of this picture appeared in the issue of Dec. 4, page 1851.

ON THE PRIVATE WIRE (Essanay), Dec. 4.—Joseph Byron Totten impersonates a newspaper reporter in this two-reel drama, who gets the better of a pair of English crooks. The story is on an average with this class of plays, and has been given the benefit of a good cast. Betty Brown and John Cossar have important allotments.

CAL MARVIN'S WIFE (Vitagraph), Dec. 4.—The motives of this three-reel drama start well below the surface of life, and tell a tale of love and devotion that is good for the soul to know. It also contains a well executed rescue scene, involving a high cliff. Mary Anderson, Anne Schaefer, William Duncan, Otto Lederer and Carleton Weatherby act their respective roles with fine sincerity, and Ulysses Davis has made an excellent production of the picture. L. C. Russell wrote the scenario.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE GALLEY SLAVE, Nov. 29.—In this five-part melodrama Theda Bara plays the role of a much-abused mother, instead of the vampire type of character for which she has become famous. Stuart Holmes portrays a brutal husband, who abuses his wife and child. The picture presents a few strong situations adequately handled by Director J. Gordon Edwards.

Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

THE DESTROYING ANGEL (Edison), Dec. 8.—In this five-part drama the Edison Company supplied an excellent production of a story by Louis Joseph Vance, the principal roles being played by Mabel Trunnelle, Marc MacDermott and Walter Cravan. The picture has an interesting plot that works up to a number of forceful dramatic situations. Scenes on the stage of a theater and in the dressing rooms of the players are very well arranged.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE HOUSE OF TEARS (Rolfe), Dec. 13.—A powerful domestic tragedy in which Emily Stevens gives a notable performance in the dual role of mother and daughter. The picture possesses strong human appeal, is finely produced and offers an unusual number of dramatic situations. Miss Stevens is ably supported by Henri Bergman and Walter Hitchcock.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 48, 1915 (Mutual), Dec. 2.—Interesting items of this issue are a game of Rugby between the Stanford and Santa Clara universities at San Francisco, a welcome for Whitlock at New York, submarines reaching San Francisco after a stormy trip, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Estes living the primitive life, and the latest war pictures.

SEE AMERICA FIRST (Gaumont—No. 13), Dec. 7.—The Mutual Traveler visits Providence, Rhode Island, in this half reel. The inside view of the silverware factory is delightfully entertaining.

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES (Gaumont), Dec. 7.—On same reel with above. Pa McGinnis and family get the skating craze. Palmer's animated drawings are very funny.

A BROKEN CLOUD (American), Dec. 10.—A good one-reel offering, featuring Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and Roy Stewart. The girl loves the young author, but the unprincipled attorney seeks to gain her hand by trickery after her father's death. The action is good and the story entertaining.

DOCTOR JERRY (Cub), Dec. 10.—In this number George Ovey appears in the part of Jerry. He plays doctor in order to see his best girl. The small pox scare has been used often before, but leads up to some amusing action in this. A characteristic number.

CURING CISSY (Casino), Dec. 12.—A number featuring Cissy Fitzgerald and Budd Ross. She appears as an athletic girl. Most of the action takes place in the woods, where her father has taken her to break up her athletic tendencies. The humor is only fairly strong in this.

HER CONFESSION (Thanhouser), Dec. 12.—Florence La Badie is featured in this production in which a young woman, sick and in prison, confesses to the chaplain the story of her former life, and of how she has murdered her artist lover because he had ruined her life and then clung to another woman. The story has been given an effective production.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

BROADCLOTH AND BUCKSKIN (Mustang), Dec. 3.—This is an entertaining two-reel western with Jack Richardson, Louise Lester, Anna Little. The story is an interesting one which pits the western cowboy against the eastern society man in the love game. The story has sufficient complications and outside interest to give it backbone. A very acceptable offering. Frank Cooley has directed the picture.

FILM TEMPO (Mustang), Dec. 4.—A three-part "Buck Parvin and the Movies" comedy. Art Acord is, of course, the centre of attraction as Buck. A new actor, whom the "boys" dub a "lady killer," wins the affection of the prettiest girl in town, pretends to be one of the stars of the company, and eventually tries to elope with the girl and some money borrowed from his associates. Buck proves to be the hero of the day, meets the pair at the station and exposes the morals of the stranger. The girl returns to her own fireside, and the actor goes his way back east.

THE STAB (Reliance), Dec. 5.—A two-part melodrama in which a man is arrested for stabbing his wife. He is released, however, when it is found that a man with whom she has been flirting is the real criminal. Irene Hunt, Mary Wiles, William Hinckley and other competent players are in the cast.

HER MOTHER'S DAUGHTER (Reliance Star Feature), Dec. 8.—A three-part production in which appear Dorothy Gish, Mary Alden, F. A. Turner, and other players of ability. There is much to please about the picture, in which some very effective scenes will be found. It seems unnecessary that there should be three deathbed scenes in it, however, even though they have been exceptionally well done.

STANLEY IN DARKEST AFRICA (Centaur), Dec. 9.—This is the concluding two-reel episode of the Stanley in Africa series and is one of the best. There is the usual animal thrill, and plenty of atmosphere. Mona Darkfeather as Ada performs a daring feat when she allows a lioness to leap at her and falling as though dead apparently dumbfounds the animal, then rolls into the water. The close of the picture shows Stanley meeting Dr. Livingston, in search of whom he has started out from New York.

CURLY (Clipper Star Feature), Dec. 11.—A three-reel production in which appear the same cast as in "The Diamond from the Sky." The story on which the picture is based is a good one. William Russell plays the role of a young mission worker who, in an indirect way, gets a clue to the identity of a young girl who has been brought up by a drunken woman, and later is employed at the mission house. The role of "Curly" is played by Lottie Pickford. A full review of this film appears in our issue of Nov. 11.

THE WATER CARRIER OF SAN JUAN (American), Dec. 6.—A two-reel number, with Spanish settings. Edward Coxen, Winifred Greenwood and George Field play the leads. The story has good atmosphere and pleasing settings and the plot itself is quite strong. The old water carrier tells of his early love, his narrative being pictured in detail. The girl was lured away by a rival, who afterward forced her to sing in restaurants. The hero seeks revenge and finally finds it. A pleasing number of its type.

THERE'S GOOD IN THE WORST OF US (Mustang), Dec. 10.—A fine two-reel Western number, featuring E. Forrest Taylor and Anna Little. The situation at the opening is a good one, the Eastern girl wandering into a gambling resort by accident, where she is treated with every consideration by the gentleman gambler. Later, her sweetheart arrives and proves to be a worthless fellow. He is killed and the gambler, a former college man, reforms and wins the girl. A strong, well-developed story, with pleasing scenic effects.

THE SOLUTION OF THE MYSTERY (American), Dec. 13.—A two-reel number, featuring Alfred Vosburgh, Vivian Rich and Roy Stewart. The girl and her father live in a house infested by a gang of criminals. The action is full of mystery and melodrama. Some of the events in the second reel do not entirely convince the observer, but if not taken too seriously this proves to be an enjoyable number of the kind. The hero and the girl are both made captives, but later released and the gang rounded up.

AN INNOCENT TRAITOR (Thanhouser), Dec. 14.—A two-reel story built around the Fairbanks twins. The plot is a little far-fetched, but contains much that is novel and enjoyable. One of the twins is stolen at birth by a doctor and nurse, who are foreign spies. The parents do not know two children were born until, in later years, when the stolen twin is employed to get copies of some army plans. The action takes place at a military post. This holds the interest throughout.

HIS MAJESTY, THE KING (Than-o-play), Dec. 18.—This is an entertaining drama in which Helen Badgeley and her baby brother play important roles. The baby boy plays the role of the king, and little Helen is his sister, the princess. The uncle of the young king plots to get him out of the way. His plan, however, is overheard in the making and is frustrated by the friends of the child king. Gladys Hulette plays the role of the first lady in waiting, with her usual charm. This picture will be especially pleasing to the children.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

ARMSTRONG'S WIFE (Lasky), Nov. 18.—Edna Goodrich makes her screen debut in this subject, which is of stirring dramatic power. Supporting her are James Cruze and Thomas Meighan, who portray their parts with great art and cleverness. The climax is strong and the photography and settings are up to the Lasky standard. For a review of this picture see page 1846 of December 4.

JANE (Morosco), Dec. 6.—Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant are featured in an entertaining five-reel adaptation of a farce-comedy presented on the stage many years ago. As a photoplay, "Jane" makes refined comedy, cleverly acted in expensive settings. Audiences will find genuine humor in the playing of Miss Greenwood and those in her support.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

PATHE NEWS, NO. 94, 1915 (Pathe), Nov. 24.—In this issue are to be seen further scenes of destruction from the scene of the tornado in the Missouri valley, Christy Mathewson pigeon shooting, the funeral of Booker T. Washington and a number of other interesting incidents, among which are scenes with the Red Cross workers in France.

PATHE NEWS, NO. 96, 1915 (Pathe), Nov. 27.—Among the interesting items of this issue are the French army photographers scouting the surrounding country with cameras attached to kites fashioned especially for this purpose, juvenile cops installed at some of the busy crossings in New York for the prevention of accidents to other children, and the first U. S. air fleet en route to San Francisco.

RAGTIME SNAP SHOTS (Phunphilms), Nov. 29.—A good farce comedy number in which Lucas and Larkin, looking for a job, make frantic efforts to be of use in a photograph gallery. There is, of course, a good deal of slapstick work in the comedy, but all is of an amusing nature.

HOT HEADS AND COLD FEET (Starlight), Dec. 4.—One of the best of the Starlight brand, in which Heinie and Louie are commissioned to murder a woman and fail woefully in their mission. There are many good laughs in this film.

INTIMATE STUDY OF BIRDS (Pathe), December.—This number of an interesting series gives an insight into the haunts and habits of sea birds, such as macaws and pelicans, showing their nests, eggs and young.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

THE GOLD COBRA (Victory), Dec. 1.—A three-reel subject of considerable interest. The picture which was made in a European studio is well produced, and is a melodrama with some oriental atmosphere, but principally English as regards location. A full review of this production will be found on another page of this issue.

NEAL OF THE NAVY, NO. 14, "The Great Goal" (Panama Films), Dec. 2.—This is the last episode of this series and is entitled "The Great Goal." A splendid finish is given to the serial, the villain Hernandez, brought to bay, jumps from a high cliff and kills himself. The brute man, recovering from the effect of an accident, regains his mental balance, and after a long and stormy siege of circumstances, he and his daughter are again united.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF J. RUFUS WALLINGFORD, NO. 10, "Apples and Egg Beaters" (Pathe), Dec. 6.—This is the tenth number of the series and is entitled "Apples and Egg Beaters," and is full of the quality that brings a laugh. Slookum is the mean cur with the apple orchard and the snarling dog, and Bushman, of the Egg Beaters, is his victim, who is being hounded for his rent. As usual Wallingford and "Blackie" Daw find a way of making the villain part with his money.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 195 (Universal), Dec. 1.—A Kansas tornado's aftermath, boy scouts at drill work on Long Island, mine disaster in Washington, and interesting war scenes are the important features of this number.

SLIGHTLY MISTAKEN (Joker), Dec. 11.—An excellent low comedy number, by Allen Curtis, featuring Gale Henry, Max Asher and others. The cook and daughter of the house are both named Susan and their love affairs become amusingly entangled. The photography and title headings are pleasing. This form of comedy at its best.

LIZZIE'S SHATTERED DREAMS (L-KO), Dec. 12.—Alice Howell and Fatty Voss are featured in this comedy of country life. The eccentric types are funny, including the cruel stepfather, romantic girl, fat boy who sucks eggs, and the city villains. The elopement and chase are well pictured and the number is a good one of its kind. This is laughable.

HER SPEEDY AFFAIR (Nestor), Dec. 13.—A comedy number, by Irma Skinner, featuring Billie Rhodes as a girl with a mania for speeding. Neal Burns and Ray Gallagher are also in the cast. The girl also dabbles in the stock market and makes some money. This is well pictured and contains a fair amount of humor.

ALMOST A PAPA (Imp), Dec. 14.—King Baggot and Edna Hunter appear in this comedy number. The traveling man, returning home expecting to see his baby, finds his wife has adopted a dog. The situation is an amusing one, though the observer shares something of the traveling man's disappointment in the outcome.

COLONEL STEELE, MASTER GAMBLER (Big U), Dec. 16.—A comedy number by Walter Woods, featuring Murdock MacQuarrie and others. He tells a big yarn concerning his early gambling experiences, which proves to be a hoax. Very slight, but rather diverting.

THE VACUUM TEST (Imp), Dec. 17.—The story of an inventor whose neglected wife remains true to him after difficulties. The thief almost meets death in the vacuum room, being mistaken for the lover. The mixture of comedy and drama is somewhat conflicting at the close. A number of fair strength.

THE OPERA SLINGER'S ROMANCE (Joker), Dec. 18.—A low comedy number, featuring Gale Henry as a country girl with stage aspirations. Max Asher and Wm. Franey also appear. The stage burlesque is funny and this makes a pleasing number of the kind.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials.

THE SACRIFICE OF JONATHAN GRAY (Big U), Dec. 9.—A three-reel production, by Lucille Chatterton, featuring Murdock MacQuarrie, Yona Landowska and Arthur Moon. The story is hardly worth three reels, as it deals with the familiar subject matter of a man wandering for years after being deserted by his wife and child. He finds his wife and daughter and departs from them again, as the child is in good hands. The wife is living unhappily with her former sweetheart and eventually drops entirely out of the story. Later the daughter grows up and has a baby of her own. This child finds the grandfather, and once more he refuses to divulge his relationship. A sentimental offering of fair strength.

JUROR NUMBER SEVEN (Rex), Dec. 12.—An interesting two-reel subject, featuring Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Joseph Girard and Curtis Benton. There is a certain flavor of melodrama in some of the subtitles and the main feature of the plot depends upon coincidence. Yet the construction is good and the offering holds the attention closely. Mr. Wilson first appears in realistic hobo makeup; he is chosen as a juror and "fixed" in order to railroad the defendant to the penitentiary. But he discovers that he has much in common with the defendant and that the contractor is endeavoring to repeat a familiar crime. A good jury story.

THE PRIMROSE PATH (Broadway Universal Features), Dec. 13.—A five-reel drama, written by Bayard Veiller, featuring Gladys Hanson and Hal Forde. The story is one of heart interest and toward the latter part the strongest scenes are found. Miss Hanson gives a dignified and convincing picture of the soul torture endured by a wife who sacrificed herself to a man she hated in order to save her husband's life. Later the husband recovers and would have forgotten her but for leahning what she had done. There is considerable unevenness of photography, but it is generally quite acceptable. The cabaret setting is elaborate and appealing. The production is one of considerable strength.

LIQUOR AND THE LAW (Universal—Special Feature), Dec. 13.—The first two-reel installment of the serial bearing the general title "Graft," each number of which is to be suggested by a famous author. Hobart Henley, Jane Novak and Glen White play the leads. In this number is pictured the murder of the district attorney by a band of liquor dealers, known as "The Fifteen." The son takes up the fight where his father left off. The story is well constructed and full of action. The incidents are melodramatic and stirring. The political scenes are particularly well staged.

LORD JOHN IN NEW YORK (Adventure No. 1 of "Lord John's Journal"—Gold Seal), Dec. 14.—This is the first of the series bearing the general title "The Journals of Lord John." William Garwood is interesting in the character of Lord John and when the main incidents are reached they prove well worth while. The story would have been much stronger told in three reels instead of four, as many of the opening scenes have little relation to the main plot. The murder mystery is a good one and is cleverly unraveled by Lord John. Stella Rozeto, Albert MacQuarrie, Laura Oakley, Grace Benham and Gretchen Lederer are in the supporting cast. The series is promising.

THE BRIDE OF THE NANCY LEE (Laemmle), Dec. 16.—A two-reel sea story, by Lynn Reynolds, with Myrtle Gonzalez, Alfred Allen, Frank Newbury and Val Paul in the cast. The story, as related by a grandmother at her fireside, is full of interest. The seacoast atmosphere is pleasing and the incidents are exciting. The yarn pictures the manner in which the daughter of a stern old sea captain finds happiness after much suffering brought about by her father's misunderstanding.

WHERE THE HEATHER BLOOMS (Nestor), Dec. 17.—This two-reel number is one of the best things Al E. Christie has done. His light comedy touch is in evidence throughout. Eddie Lyons, Betty Compson, Lee Moran and others are in the cast. The story concerns a young Scotchman in America, who falls heir to a castle in Glengarry if he will marry the Lady Mary. He goes to Scotland and Mary's mother pretends to be the girl. He also meets with departed spirits and has innumerable adventures before he discovers the real Mary. The settings are good and the number is a pleasing one in every way.

V-L-S-E, Inc., Specials.

THE CAVE MAN (Vitagraph), Nov. 29.—The superb artistic talent of Robert Edeson makes this subject an extraordinary feature. The plot is interesting and highly diverting and takes its origin in a society woman who decides to make a social lion out of a coal heaver. How she does this and how the man finally is converted to social refinement is truly remarkable. A review of this picture can be found on page 1844 of last week's issue.

World Film Corporation.

THE WARNING (Equitable—Triumph), Dec. 6.—An impressive subject and highly entertaining. Henry Kolker is featured as the father, who is a victim of drink. Though a charming and lovable husband, he is constantly tempted by liquor. Then comes the warning in the guise of a dream; here the visualization is competently directed and the acting likewise. For a review of this subject see page 1847 of December 4.

THE GRAY MASK (Shubert), Dec. 6.—A detective melodrama, produced by Frank Crane from a story by Charles Wadsworth Camp. The plot is rather ingenious and the picture profits by fast action. Edwin Arden gives an able portrayal of a resourceful detective and Barbara Tennant does very well as the heroine who assists in avenging the death of her lover.

Miscellaneous.

THE WAIF (Aurora Film Plays Corp.), December.—Matty Roubert, the child actor is featured in this five-reel production of which a full review appears on another page of this issue. The picture has a special appeal and is splendidly moral in tone. An excellent production for children to see, as well as entertaining to adults.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

ALICE BRADY IN "THE RACK" (World Film).

Emile Chautard, the well known World Film director, is busy completing the final scenes of the forthcoming World Film feature, "The Rack," based upon the famous Brady theatrical success of the same name. In this film, Miss Alice Brady will make a very welcome appearance.

In this film, Alice Brady plays the part of a sorely harassed young wife who undergoes a great deal of torture through having innocently compromised herself.

Her many admirers will realize that Miss Brady is making rapid steps in her new profession when they see her fine dramatic work in the picture. Miss Brady always screens exceedingly well and is immensely popular with the picture fans all over the country.

Scene from "The Rack" (World Film).

In the same picture Mr. Milton Sills, who has so frequently acted in Brady plays with success, will also be seen. Mr. Sills, if you will remember, made a striking success in World Film's drama, "The Pit."

"The Rack" will be released on the World Film programme on December 27th.

PATHE GETS KIPLING'S "LIGHT THAT FAILED."

Pathe has acquired the picture rights to Kipling's greatest work, "The Light That Failed," and Edward Jose will start work on the production of it within the next two or three days. This is the first Kipling book to be put into pictures and is filled with excellent dramatic material. Mr. Jose has secured an excellent cast headed by Robert Edeson, Jose Collins, Lillian Tucker and Claude Fleming. "The Light That Failed" will be put upon the Gold Rooster Program.

Simultaneonsly with the making of this picture Mr. Jose will put on Sir Gilbert Parker's famous novel, "The Weavers," using the same cast in both. This is probably the first time in the business that such doubling has been done, and it is made possible in this instance by the fact that each novel has many scenes laid in the Soudan. Many hundreds of extras will be employed in each picture for the battle scenes.

The Feature Film Corporation, of which Mr. Jose is the managing director, has made arrangements with Pathe for the production of a twelve-chapter serial picture. Carroll Fleming, formerly stage director for the Shuberts at the Hippodrome and a master at obtaining big effects, has been engaged to direct this serial, which will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Jose.

The Feature Film Corporation is now conducting negotiations for the building of its own studio, and plans a considerable extension of its activities.

William C. Dowlan is directing the production of another Universal one-reel drama entitled, "Sixty, Sixteen and Twenty-three." Gloria Fonda appears opposite Dowlan in this picture with Earl Page in the heavy role.

"THE VOICE OF THE WILDERNESS" (101 Bison).

J. J. Franz and his company of 101 Bison players has completed the production of Ben Cohn's three reel story of the West, "The Voice of the Wilderness." Sherman Bainbridge, Edythe Sterling and Rex de Rosselli appear in the leading roles.

NEW KLEINE MANAGER AT KANSAS CITY.

W. O. Edmunds, formerly manager of George Kleine's Los Angeles office, has been sent to Kansas City, where he will assume management of the Kleine branch in that city. Mr. Edmunds is one of the oldest known film salesmen in the business. He has been associated with Mr. Kleine more or less since 1908, at which time he was manager of the Kleine office at Winnipeg, Canada.

"THE COQUETTE'S AWAKENING" (Selig).

"The Coquette's Awakening" is a Selig two-reel drama from the pen of Will M. Hough, featuring Kathlyn Williams, supported by a noteworthy cast.

The flirt lives only to play the game of love for the delight of the gamble. Ralph Warner, who loves the flirt, is informed by her that she has merely tolerated him for the enjoyment of the game. Ralph then tells the flirt that he is going to end it all that night, but she laughs heartily and tells him that she has heard that story before.

The flirt falls asleep and dreams that Ralph is to take his life before 10 o'clock. Overcome with remorse the flirt beseeches Father Time to turn back the clock so that she may save Ralph. Father Time takes her through the Garden of Love and shows her many examples of the loves of men and women and how Time destroys the unworthy and helps the worthy. The days of Antony and Cleopatra; of Romeo and Juliet are recalled. Father Time ends by stating that unless the flirt is true to the man who loves her. Time will see that she is punished. The flirt awakens and meets Ralph, who has returned for his gloves which he has forgotten. She informs him that she regrets her action and that she dearly loves him.

Scene from "The Coquette's Awakening" (Selig).

This beautiful production gives Kathlyn Williams many opportunities for unusual characterization in the role of the flirt. It is a photoplay that carries "the different story" and one that will prove a distinct acquisition to any exhibitor's program. It is released through General Film Company on Monday, December 13th.

"TWO HEARTS AND A THIEF" (Beauty).

An American "Beauty" comedy that bristles with humorous situation and incidents is "Two Hearts and A Thief," in which Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage play the leading roles, and which will be released on the Mutual Program December 18th.

The fun hinges around the Cupid darts that fly between the leading characters in spite of the objections of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winters, humorously enacted by Lucille Ward and Rae Berger. Of course, romance is triumphant, but before the victory is gained, there is a laughable mixup of letters—one addressed to some stockbrokers and the other addressed by Jack to his sweetheart. Father Winters is of the opinion that financial ruin stares him in the face. It develops that a certain stock which has taken an unexpected slump was not purchased for Winters by his brokers, because of the fact that Jack had got the letters mixed. So Father is saved from bankruptcy and, in gratitude, consents to the marriage.

Scene from "Two Hearts and a Thief" (Beauty).

Winsome little Miss Gerber skips cleverly through the comedy and her vivacious versatility adds much to the fun of the picture.

"THE GIRL AND THE GAME" (Signal).

Helen Holmes, the heroine in "The Girl and The Game," performs some feats of daring in the forthcoming screen novel that have not been equaled by any other leading woman.

The accompanying picture shows Miss Holmes in a rescue scene which is typical of the thrill and "punch" in the Signal production. When this scene was taken the train was moving down hill at a speed of 35 miles an hour. A slip of the arm or an error of judgment on the part of either possibly would have meant serious injury or maybe death for both.

Taking the chances Miss Holmes does is a serious business. In "The Girl and The Game" the action is continuously thrilling and the heroine in imminent peril time after time, but like a regular heroine Miss Holmes manages to escape, although there is none of the mollycoddle in her efforts to do so. The speed with which the trains move and the constant peril in the path of a giant locomotive is incentive enough for everyone working in "The Girl and The Game" to be constantly on the alert and none is more watchful than Miss Holmes. To see her on the screen one would think she never gave the surrounding dangers a passing thought. The first release of "The Girl and The Game" will be December 27.

BARSKY GOES WITH FORD EXPEDITION.

Irving J. Barsky, who has been occupying the position of director of publicity for the Associated Film Sales Corporation, was picked as a suitable person to represent his firm and several newspapers on the famous Ford Peace Expedition. He sailed on the Oscar II at 2 o'clock Saturday from Hoboken. The Associated is to be congratulated on its pick, as there is no doubt in the minds of those that know Barsky that he will produce the best possible results for them, if there are any results to be got at all. Mr. Barsky will take moving pictures of the expedition as well as stills, and will write articles which will be syndicated to newspapers by a firm specially incorporated for that purpose.

Mr. Barsky, although still a young man, is an old man in the film business. He has occupied every position from prop boy to director, and from reel boy to manager of exchanges. He should be a much wiser man when he returns from this famous expedition. We all wish him the best of luck.

"THE SOLUTION OF THE MYSTERY" (Flying A).

Mystery—deep and dark and dangerous—abounds in this newest of two-reel "Flying A" dramas, the title of which is "The Solution of the Mystery."

There is a mysterious screen that moves about apparently unaided. There is a mysterious arm which strikes a mysterious blow with a mysterious knife. There is a mysterious disappearance, a mysterious dead man and mysterious events too numerous to mention. In fact the picture reeks with mystery.

The stars are Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh. Miss Rich, as Bessie Mitchell, is kidnapped after she has refused to marry Scene from "The Solution of the Mystery" (Flying A).

James Willard (Roy Stewart). Her sweetheart, Franklyn Davis (Alfred Vosburgh) apparently has disappeared from the face of the globe. The flashing of sunlight on a mirror reveals his whereabouts, however, and he is rescued from the clutches of a band of crooks. He makes short work of finding Bessie. The villains get their just deserts. The chain of mysteries is solved, and all ends happily.

"The Solution of the Mystery" is a cleverly enacted piece to be released December 13th. Miss Rich and Mr. Vosburgh are to be complimented upon their excellent acting in this picture. Both the parts assigned them call for artistic portrayal and both the young favorites respond.

The element of mystery is the outstanding feature of the picture, and a number of incidents of exceptionally difficult photography add to the merit of the piece.

JACK PICKFORD IN "THE MAKING OF CROOKS."

Jack Pickford, the versatile young actor, will make his initial appearance in Selig productions in the forthcoming feature production, "The Making of Crooks," to be released through General Film Service on Monday, December 27. In "The Making of Crooks," which is a very unusual story, Mr. Pickford assumes the role of an unscrupulous pool shark who, through the instigations of the "pool room ring," entices the rising generation into ways that are dark and tricks that are vain. Mr. Pickford is supported by an all star cast of players and there are many exciting situations in this drama. The play teaches a good moral lesson. Parents are urged to escort their boys to the theaters showing "The Making of Crooks." Too many parents, neglectful of their boys, permit them to frequent disreputable pool rooms and then cannot understand why the boys develop into crooks. The acting of Jack Pickford will prove a revelation to motion picture critics. "The Making of Crooks" is one of the strongest productions ever scheduled for release by the Selig Company.

"THE BECKONING FLAME" (Kay Bee).

The recent story, told in connection with the East Indian troubles, how the Nizamate of Hyderabad was made a dependency of the British crown as the result of a romance between the English resident and the Nizam's sister, is closely approached by C. Gardner Sullivan in "The Beckoning Flame," which Thomas H. Ince has just sent East for presentation under the Triangle aegis. Those who have seen it in private view say it is a vivid and colorful romance of old India. The leading figures are a British Army officer, played by Henry Woodruff, and an East Indian Princess, played by Tsuru Aoki. In the play the girl is affianced and wedded to a potentate whom she hates. He subsequently dies of heart failure during the wedding feast and, according to the Hindu laws, her fate as a widow is immolation on the husband's funeral pyre. From this awful death the officer rescues her and takes her to another part of India. Later his English fiancee comes out, and at the same time the officials of the native state discover the whereabouts of the officer and the Ranee. Having lost the white man's love and believing immolation to be the only means of averting from him the consequences of his kidnapping of her, the little Ranee kills herself in the fire that completely destroys the bungalow. The rite of suttee was abolished in India about ninety years ago, which fixes the date of the story early in the last century. Tsuru Aoki, the leading woman, is a find of Thomas H. Ince. She was born in Japan, but has had her bringing up and University education in the United States.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR SELIG-TRIBUNE NEWS WEEKLY.

The Selig-Tribune, the new animated news film to be released starting the first of the year by the Selig Polyscope Company in conjunction with the Chicago Tribune, will carry the slogan of "The World's Greatest News Film." The Chicago Tribune's corps of cameramen and special correspondents located in all parts of the world were long since advised to film the most extraordinary motion pictures possible, and these wonderful films have been arriving in Chicago daily. A corps of expert editors have been installed at the Selig studios, Chicago, who are preparing the initial numbers of the Selig-Tribune for exploitation. A number of interested innovations will be introduced in the Selig-Tribune and no time nor expense will be spared to make the new news reel, to be released every Monday and Thursday, the very last word in timeliness and interest.

GOLD KING SCREEN COMPANY ENLARGING PLANT.

The fast growing demand for "Gold King Screens" and their increasing popularity among exhibitors all over the country have compelled the Gold King Screen Co. of Altus, Okla., to seek additional factory space for the manufacture of their screens. In addition to the three buildings already occupied by this enterprising concern, President S. H. Jones has just leased another two-story brick building fifty by one hundred and fifty feet to relieve the congested condition in the balance of the plant.

NEW CANADA OFFICE FOR KLEINE-EDISON.

Productions of the Kleine-Edison Feature Service will have another outlet in Canada beside the office now located at Toronto when a new branch is opened at Montreal. Canada has taken extremely well to the Kleine-Edison output, as practically all of the better class theaters throughout the Dominion are now using the K-E Service.

"SINS OF GREAT CITIES" (Gt. Northern).

On about the 20th of this month the Great Northern Film Company will release the next Polar Bear feature entitled "Sins of Great Cities." This is an enthralling problem play, featuring the distinguished and internationally famous actress, Miss Ebba Thomsen.

After her father's sudden death Dorothy Reynolds finds a temporary home with her friends, Paul and Irene Walter.

Scene from "Sins of Great Cities" (Great Northern).

"Monty" Sullivan, an adventurer and proprietor of the ill-famed "Red Mouse," represents himself to her as a former business friend of her father, and arranges to have his manager offer Dorothy an engagement at the "Red Mouse," which she, much to her distaste, accepts. In order to ensnare her he soon proposes marriage to her. One of Sullivan's butlers, garbed as a minister, officiates at the mock-marriage, which takes place at Sullivan's home. Dorothy discovers the plot, and at once returns to her friends, through whom she obtains an engagement at the Casino theater. After a successful debut she becomes acquainted with Judge Walcott, who falls in love with her, and after a short while he proposes to her. Sullivan, who has not lost track of his intended victim, threatens to denounce her as his former mistress unless she leaves Walcott. Paul, learning of this, shoots Sullivan, who sends for Dorothy and Walcott and with his last breath brands her. Walcott thrusts her aside, but her grief soon turns into happiness when Walcott learns the truth, whereupon he and Dorothy face a happy future.

EAGLE FILM TO PRODUCE "PIRATES OF THE SKY."

The photoplay rights to "The Pirates of the Sky," Stephen Gaillard's novel of adventure which was published serially in a score of daily papers in the United States and which has since enjoyed phenomenal sale in book form, have been purchased by the Eagle Film Manufacturing and Producing Company of Chicago. Under the contract with Rand McNally & Company, the publishers of the book, work of producing the six reels into which the story has been condensed will be begun at once under the general direction of William J. Dunn, general manager of the Eagle Company.

Irene Tams probably will play the role of Princess Theodora, who is the chief character in the story. The book is said to lend itself readily to photodramatization and a thrilling scenario has been written by B. C. Boyle, for twenty years managing editor of the Louisville Post, and now publicity manager for the Rand McNally Company.

In order that the six-reel feature may be developed under the most advantageous circumstances, work on the Eagle company's studio at Jacksonville, Fla., is being rushed and the members of the company will be transferred to the southern city in about two weeks. President A. S. Roe is now on the ground in person, overseeing the various details and hurrying the work, which is in charge of A. H. Kelly, general superintendent of the company.

OTIS B. THAYER IN NEW YORK.

Otis B. Thayer, who has been making pictures for the Associated Program in his Garden of the Gods studio, has just arrived in this glorious city to look over the field of new stars, as well as to recuperate from his long stay in the wild and woolly West. He has brought with him two of the forthcoming releases of the Associated Program featuring the pre-eminent actress, Gertrude Bondhill. Mr. Thayer also is looking for some novel scenarios which he will use in his future releases that will be released on the Program as Big "A" Features.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

The policy of the Gaumont Company to use a new star in each production has brought to the studios either at Flushing, N. Y., or Jacksonville, Fla., in recent weeks Miss Francine Larrimore, Miss Grace Valentine, Miss Alice Dovey, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Waters—to say nothing of "Stuffy" Davis, who appeared with them—Harry Vokes, Miss Dorothy Rogers, Miss Eleanor Fairbanks, Miss Cissy Fitzgerald, Robert T. Haines, Hal Forde, Malcolm William and Miss Stella Hammerstein.

* * *

"The Girl with the Big Voice" is the latest recruit to the photoplays. Miss Marjorie Lake, who has been heard in vaudeville for the past three years, and who has just concluded an engagement on the Orpheum circuit, joined the forces of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universal City for the past week, where she has been cast as a member of Joseph De Grasse's company.

* * *

Miss Stella Hammerstein, daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, the grand opera impresario, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to appear in a Gaumont production, "The Ace of Death." This photodrama is a multiple-reel Rialto Star Feature on the Mutual Program, and will be released on the Mutual Program late in December.

* * *

A bit of broken glass plays an important part in "The Solution of the Mystery," the American (Mutual) drama recently produced by Reaves Eason for the Mutual Program. David (Alfred Vosburg), uses it to flash a signal from the room where he is kept a prisoner, by the aid of the sunlight, into the room of Mitchell (Charles Newton) the graft investigator. The device is quite novel, used in a picture and is most effective.

* * *

Director Matt Moore of the Imp-Universal, has just completed a cute little comedy in which he starred with Jane Gail, called "The Little Lady Across the Way." It is refreshingly different from the general run of comedies, and is unique in many ways.

* * *

So great has been the demand for Miss Cissy Fitzgerald's work after exhibitors and motion picture patrons saw her in "A Corner in Cats" and "Zablitzky's Waterloo" that she has been engaged by the Gaumont Company to star in four more Casino Star Comedies on the Mutual Program. The first of these, "The Widow Wins," is now being filmed at the Flushing studios. It will be released Nov. 28. Two weeks later Miss Fitzgerald will be seen on the screen in "Curing Cissy," the second of the four she is doing under Edwin Middleton's direction.

New Theater in Maine

Old Town's Bijou, a Fine New Theater, Now Catering to City's Picture Patrons—O. B. Fernandez, Who Also Controls the New Central, Is the Proprietor—House Seats 675 Persons—Personnel of the Staff.

From John P. Flanagan, Maine Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

OLD TOWN, ME.—The new Bijou moving picture theater at Old Town, Me., opened during the past week, and the people of this city now have one of the finest motion picture houses in the State. O. B. Fernandez, the proprietor, is justly proud of his new establishment, which will accommodate 625 people, 475 on the main floor. The auditorium is 92 feet long and 36 feet wide at its broadest point. The ceiling, 29 feet and 9 inches above the floor, gives an effect of massiveness and also affords a fine view of the curtain. Overhanging the rear of the auditorium is a spacious and well arranged balcony, in a portion of which are located two of the latest model 6B Powers projectors, with Westinghouse motor generator sets. They are said to be the only machines of their model in the state.

The finest sign in the city, ordered long before the city took drastic action against overhead signs, has been received and if placed overhead would be a striking advertisement of the new theater. Owing to the order removing all overhead signs, it is impossible at present to install the glowing name plate on the new Bijou.

There is a most competent corps of assistants to look after the comfort and pleasure of the patrons of the new amusement place. George Rowe will be in charge of the door and Paul Carrow will be house manager and ticket seller. Harold Dorr will officiate at the piano, Clarence O'Brien, chief operator, Raymond Bartlett, assistant; Kenneth Mitchell, Maurice Dumond and Elden Dolan, ushers.

Mr. Fernandez now controls two Old Town theaters, the New Central and the Bijou. When outside capitalists took over the New Central a few years ago, Mr. Fernandez was engaged as the Old Town manager. Only recently, upon their desire to apply their activities elsewhere, these men disposed of their holdings to Mr. Fernandez, who thus became sole proprietor of the New Central and Bijou, in both of which he will continue to show the highest quality of motion picture plays.

NEW PORTLAND HOUSE BEGUN.

Contracts for the excavation and concrete work on the new theater to be built on Elm street, Portland, Me., by the Elm Theater Corporation, were closed last week in the office of Miller & Mayo, architects, the contracts being awarded to Percy H. Belyea. Work will begin at once on the excavation as well as on the foundation for the new structure. After the old Elm house had been partially razed, activities ceased there for a while, but it is now planned to push the work and make up for lost time.

The new theater is to be one of the finest of its size in New England and will be modern in every possible way. The lot on which the building is to be erected is but a few steps from Congress street, on Elm, and is one of the best sites for a theater that could be obtained. D. D. Leader, at one time manager of the Empire theater in Portland, will manage the new house when completed.

OWEN BUYS ORONO THEATER.

Frank A. Owen, for 30 years manager of the Bangor (Me.) Opera House, has taken over the Orono theater, which has lately been used as a moving picture house, with his son, David Owen. Mr. Owen, as manager of the Bangor Opera House, provided Bangor with its theatrical attractions, and he says he will conduct a first-class house in Orono, giving the people of that city an opportunity to witness the best that the big companies are producing.

The house has lately been managed by a Mr. Chase of Boston, under the name of the Orono Amusement Co. Both Mr. Owen and his son have been in Dover and Foxcroft much of the time since the Bangor Opera House fire, as managers of Central Hall, a motion picture theater, and their Bangor friends are pleased to know they will be near Bangor this winter.

The Palace theater, at Bangor, is showing a daily change of program, except that Friday's program is also shown Saturday. This is the only Bangor theater having such a frequent change. United and Universal service are used.

S. M. Moscow Visits.

S. M. Moscow, who has been for the past week at the United Film office in Bangor, Me., has returned to Boston, whence he will proceed to the New United Branch in Albany, N. Y. Mr. Moscow, as Proprietor Murphy's lieutenant, has general supervision under Mr. Murphy of the various United Film exchanges.

Searsport Theater Sold.

Union Hall theater, Searsport, Me., has been sold by Messrs. Green and Parker to A. P. Hopkins of the Cumberland County Electric Co. Mr. Hopkins is one of the pioneer exhibitors of Maine, having previously owned Emery Hall theater at Bucksport. United Film service is being used.

Chosen Pine Tree Items.

M. C. McMartin is to open a moving picture theater at Oakfield, in Aroostook county, Maine, within the next few weeks.

Thomas Willard of Van Buren, Me., proprietor of the Dreamland theater, has been using Universal service twice a week. He will shortly use the complete Universal program.

Manager Charles M. Stern of the Universal film at Bangor reports that the outlook for a good winter's business in northern Maine is excellent. The potato situation is much better than it was a year ago, and prosperity is on the way. Mr. Stern, who has just returned from Aroostook county, reports that there are six inches of snow on the ground.

E. J. Farrell Promoted

Boston Manager of General Film Is Appointed by President J. C. Berst, the District Manager for the Southern States—Succeeded by L. J. Hacking.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, Boston Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

BOSTON.—Edward J. Farrell, who has been the manager of the New England branch office of the General Film Company for the past year, has been appointed as the new district manager for the Southern States by President J. C. Berst.

Mr. Farrell is one of the most successful and efficient exchange managers in this territory. He has been connected with the General Film for a number of years and worked his way through the ranks to the position of manager.

The New England exhibitors have always boasted that their business dealings with Mr. Farrell were always pleasing and although they regret his departure for the South, nevertheless, they are elated over the fact that his ability has been recognized by this promotion.

Mr. Farrell has left to assume his new duties and will work his own original policies, which have proved so successful here. He will try to install the pay in advance system, which has been such a success here for the past year. Mr. Farrell was the originator of this system and it is one of the best innovations.

Mr. Farrell will be succeeded in the New England office by Lawrence J. Hacking, who has been his assistant for the past year. Jefferson Levine, who has been in charge of the New England feature department, has assumed the duties of assistant manager.

WALTHAM SUNDAY SHOWS.

Mayor Thomas F. Kearns, of Waltham, has announced that at the suggestion of a number of local ministers, he will refuse to grant any more permits to any of the four moving picture theaters in his city to conduct Sunday shows, until an agreement is reached between the ministers and theater managers. The ministers have complained that the Sunday night shows have not been conducted strictly in accordance with the law which requires such shows to be held for charitable purposes. The Mayor stated that he will arrange for a conference between the two factions.

School Neighborhood Hearing.

The Boston school committee has voted unanimously to oppose the granting of licenses for moving picture theaters in the immediate vicinity of school buildings. The stand is taken as the result of a protest made to the board by the Rev. Michael J. Cuddihy, of St. Margaret's Church, Dorchester, against a proposed theater near the Harbor View street school. A hearing on the petition of the owners of the theater for a license to give moving picture performances will be held before Mayor James M. Curley and the school committee has definitely decided to oppose its granting.

New World Film Assistant Manager.

Augustus Schaeffer has been appointed assistant manager of the New England office of the World Film Corporation, owing to the increasing business of the concern.

An Advertising Stunt.

A unique card reading "Mary Page," which was passed out at the third annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts attracted considerable attention. Investigation showed that "Mary Page" is the name of a new serial to be produced by the Essanay Company. The stunt was put across in good shape by Max Carmusin, who will handle the Essanay interests in New England.

NEW YORK MIDSTATE LETTER.

By E. O. Weinberg, Troy Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

TROY, N. Y.—Proctor's Griswold played "The Battle Cry of Peace" for three days to big business at 5 and 10 cents.

Alice Brady was the main attraction at Proctor's New theater for two days, Nov. 26 and 27, and she scored a big hit.

James Dolan of Albany is building a picture theater of 1,000 seats on Second street near Swan.

C. Charles is now in charge of the Rex exchange (Universal), Albany, N. Y.

Proctor's have booked "The Birth of a Nation" for one week each in Albany, Troy and Schenectady.

The Plaza theater, Troy, N. Y., is arranging for a run of "Damaged Goods."

The three-day run of "Alice in Wonderland" at Central School, Troy, N. Y., under the auspices of Parent Teachers' Assn., netted over $100.

Beman Park theater, Troy, N. Y., is now managed by McCarthy and Van Burgen.

Mr. Jermain is now in charge of Fox Film Office in Syracuse.

Films in Philadelphia Schools.

According to Dr. Garber, Superintendent of the Public Schools, the purchase of moving picture apparatus by the Home and School League of the Sheridan Public School, Ontario and G streets, will be followed by similar purchases in other schools. He thinks that moving pictures will replace the old lantern slides in helping to impress lectures on the minds of the pupils.

"There is no doubt that the moving picture in our school room will be the next step in education," said Dr. Garber. "The expense of the moving picture films has kept the board from officially endorsing them, but if the home and school leagues finance the work at the beginning, it may be that it could be taken under control by the board later."

Trenton Walkout Fails

Trenton, New Jersey, Picture Operators' Union Fails to Win Recognition from the Majority of Theaters—Only Five Out of Twenty-five Sign Agreement—Places of Strikers Quickly Filled.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

TRENTON, N. J.—According to Charles Hildinger, proprietor of eight moving picture theaters situated in Trenton and vicinity, the recent walkout of moving picture operators caused little or no discomfort to exhibitors in Trenton. Word had been received of the intended strike and, when the operators left their booths, others on hand took their places. In no case was an exhibitor forced to discontinue his show for any length of time. Of the twenty-five owners of moving picture theaters only five have come to terms with the union. Milton Herschfield, owner, and Herman Wahn, manager of the State Street theater, are included among the five to affix their signatures to the terms demanded by the union.

Mr. Hildinger declared positively that he would not sign the agreement presented by the operators. He stated that his operators were receiving the money demanded in the agreement and were working under conditions satisfactory to themselves and therefore a further agreement was not required. He further asserted that only a small percentage of the operators in the city were affiliated with the union and that there was absolutely no shortage of good experienced operators of the type satisfactory to the exhibitor.

A compromise was effected between the union and the theater owners who signed the agreement, regarding the clause demanding recognition of the union. It was at first demanded that at each performance there be thrown upon the screen an announcement to the effect that the theater was employing a union operator. Owing to an agreement between the moving picture men and the curtain advertising companies such a situation would be impossible. The owners finally agreed to place a card bearing such an announcement in the fireproof booths.

WEST PHILADELPHIA HOUSE.

New Theater to Cost Over $200,000 Will Be Erected.

Harry J. Koehler has completed negotiations with Ida L. Sithen and F. G. Shisler for the purchase of the property at the southwest corner of Fifty-fifth and Woodland avenue. The lot is 60 feet on Woodland avenue by 140 feet on Fifty-fifth street and 60 feet on Saybrook avenue. On this site, which cost $35,000, Harry J. Koehler and others whose names are withheld, will build a modern theater to cost in the neighborhood of $175,000. The new theater will be the home of first-class vaudeville and moving pictures. Such a theater should prove a huge success in that neighborhood as many people from every section of West Philadelphia are within ten or fifteen minutes ride, due to the excellent car service offered on Woodland avenue.

FRANK FABEL BACK AT PLAZA.

Word comes from East Stroudsburg that Frank Fabel, former owner of the Plaza theater, will once more resume the active management of that theater. Complete details of the arrangement are not known, but it is thought that Raymond Milliman, who has been successfully managing the theater for the past several months, will be retained in the capacity of operator. It is thought more than likely that Mr. Fabel will institute a program containing both vaudeville and moving pictures at the same old admission price of ten cents.

A VERY PEEVED MAYOR.

The authorities of Corry, Pa., are greatly incensed at the manner in which they were hoodwinked by several moving picture exhibitors. It so happened that Harry W. Parker, manager of the Liberty; Joseph Shamburg, manager of the Amuseu, and C. N. Waters, manager of the Lyric, wished to run a Sunday performance. Realizing that there would be dire consequences it behooved the above mentioned gentlemen to think of some scheme whereby they would escape with the least possible punishment. The idea was finally conceived that they should have each other arrested. This they did and each one appeared before Alderman Porter to answer to the charge of operating their picture shows on Sunday. A fine of $4 and costs was imposed upon the exhibitors. Almost immediately Chief of Police Davis appeared upon the scene with warrants issued by Magistrate Shields, but nothing could be done as they had already answered to the charge. Mayor Patterson, of Corry, was so peeved with the exhibitors that he asked council to impose a fine of $100 for the operating of a moving picture show on Sunday.

Chosen News Items in and About Philadelphia.

The Royal Palace theater, 2716-18 Girard avenue, has been sold by Barrist & Company, for the Spier Brothers, to Benjamin Shindler, subject to a mortgage of $15,000. The property is assessed at $14,000.

Louis M. Swaab, proprietor of the Swaab Film Service, 1327 Vine street, is preparing for a trip to Hot Springs, Arkansas. Mr. Swaab will be accompanied on the trip by William Sachsenmair, of the Interstate Film company. They expect to leave on the first of the new year and will be gone for three or four weeks.

J. J. McCartney, proprietor of the Richmond and Empire theaters, has recently had many improvements added to his houses, including the installation of much new equipment. New signs, lights, decorations and several improvements in service are among the new features and the projection departments of the theaters are greatly aided by the addition of several new 6B machines.

The Avoca theater, located at 1944-46-48 McKean street, was recently sold at auction for $11,000. It is a one-story brick structure with two adjoining lots.

Magistrate Hogg Fines Another Exhibitor

Case in Philadelphia Similar to That of Manager Katz—Another Picture Man Has to Bear the Expense of an Appeal to Higher Court.

JAMES MULHERN, formerly manager of the Fifty-second Street theater, has appealed to the Court of Quarter Sessions from the judgment of Magistrate Hogg, who on November 26 imposed a fine of $25 and costs on Mulhern for alleged interference with Frank P. Brennan, an employe of the State Board of Censors, in the performance of his duties. Judge Davis granted the appeal, which will be heard before Judge Sulzberger in the near future.

Brennan alleged that Mulhern refused to allow him to enter the projecting booth at the theater or to stop the exhibition of pictures and remove the films from the booth so that Brennan could examine them. Mulhern said that the demand was unreasonable, as an audience was at the time watching a performance. He also declared that he was simply obeying the rules of the fire marshal in allowing no one but the licensed operator in the booth during an exhibition and refused to stop the show and remove the films for fear the audience would think there was a fire and become excited.

Manager William Katz, of the Stanley, 16th and Market streets, was recently relieved by Judge Sulzberger of a fine of $25 and costs imposed upon him by Magistrate Hogg for alleged interference with an employe of the State Board of Censors. The cases are identical. It seems that Magistrate Hogg doesn't mind being reversed by the superior courts. It also looks as though the censor didn't regard the law either.

The Fight Film Suit

Brief Filed in Supreme Court on Behalf of the Government Contends That Films Are Articles of Commerce and That Exclusion of the Willard-Johnson Films Is Legal—Case of Weber Against Freed.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Assistant Attorney General Warren has filed a brief in the Supreme Court of the United States, on behalf of the Government, in the case of Weber against Freed, in which it is contended that as motion picture films are capable of sale and traffic, they are articles of commerce which Congress has the plenary power to exclude. The case is one testing the constitutionality of the prize fight film importation law of 1912.

The owners of the film showing the Willard-Johnson prize fight in Havana brought a bill in equity to enjoin the collector of customs at Newark, N. J., from excluding these films which the owners sought to import into the United States. In their bill, they seek to maintain the proposition that since they import the films merely for their own use for exhibition purposes and not for sale, the statute is an unconstitutional exercise of power by Congress and an unwarranted infringement on the state police power.

The government contends that even though the immediate purpose of the importer may have been to refrain from sale, the articles imported are still susceptible of sale and traffic, and the importer may change his mind after importation, and also they may be sold on involuntary legal process. Neither the purpose for which articles are imported or transported, nor the use to which they are to be put after transportation is, however, any test of the commercial character of the transaction. It is not what is done or is to be done with the films after they reach the United States, but it is the intrinsic nature of the article and the act of transporting or introducing them here from abroad for any purpose that brings them within the purview of the Commerce Clause.

H. HAYMAN TO OPEN EXCHANGE

H. Hayman, of the New Film Corporation, of New York, was a visitor in Washington last week, coming here for the purpose of arranging for an agency to handle the films of that company in this territory. The New Film Corporation, it is said, has secured a considerable number of films from the World Film Corporation and will also open offices in Philadelphia and Boston.

NEW WASHINGTON THEATER.

The Rialto Amusement Company, Incorporated, of Fairfax, Va., with a capital stock of $350,000, and a minimum of $100,000, has been granted a charter by the Virginia State Corporation Commission. The par value of the stock is $100. The president of the new corporation is Jerome H. Pennock, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Victor L. Abbey, of Washington, who is connected with the Mutual Film Corporation in the Mutual Masterpictures department, is named as secretary and treasurer. It is said that the new corporation proposes to erect a very elaborate and costly theater on Fourteenth street, near Columbia road, in the heart of the Mount Pleasant shopping section, Washington, D. C.

A. J. BACHRACH WITH V-L-S-E.

Alan J. Bachrach has resigned his position as traveling representative for the World Film Corporation and secured similar employment with the local office of the V-L-S-E. Mr. Bachrach started in with his new employers on November 28 and left immediately to cover the territory assigned to him. He is now among his old friends, the exhibitors of North Carolina. Mr. Bachrach is one of the most popular young film men in this section. His long experience as an exhibitor is proving very helpful to him as a film salesman.

Cosmos Theater Running Features.

The Cosmos theater, on Pennsylvania avenue, near Ninth street, Northwest, as an added attraction is running big features between the regular vaudeville entertainments, using Fox, V-L-S-E, Pathe, and other well-known photoplays. This is also in addition to the Pathe news and the comedies which it has been the practice of the management of using.

Papers to Run New Pathe Serial.

The Pathe exchange has arranged with the Washington Times and the Baltimore American for the publishing of the new serial, "The Red Circle," to commence on December 13, in connection with the campaign to give these films publicity. The serial is to run for fourteen weeks.

NOTED CHEMIST MAY MAKE RAW FILM IN AMERICA.

Polish Scientist Has Hard Time Getting Out of Germany.

Benno Borszowski, a Polish chemist of international repute, who is in the United States for the purpose of establishing factories which must be removed from European centers because of the war, spent a week recently in Baltimore looking over available sites. He declined to state whether or not the ground looked at would be suitable for his needs.

Mr. Borszowski is the inventor of a non-inflammable celluloid for the manufacture of motion picture films, of a process for color photography, and of artificial silk. The factory for the latter will be erected in Ohio where the necessary raw materials are available, but it is said that for the photographic materials a tidewater port is required.

He operated at the beginning of the war two great factories in Berlin, two in Paris, and one in London. All of these are now closed down. He predicts that at the conclusion of the war the United States will receive hundreds of manufacturing plants that were operated in the capitals of Europe before the outbreak of hostilities. This movement will be necessary because there will be a great scarcity of labor.

The chemist was marooned in Berlin for many months and was required to report to German officials daily. Because of his international reputation, although a native of Poland, he was not confined in a retention camp. He at last secured permission from the German government to come to the United States after proving that his services were desired in this country by a group of capitalists interested in his silk-producing invention and upon the promise that he would not discuss the conditions now prevailing in Germany, or disclose any of the information thereon obtained by him during his long residence in that country. He had also to promise that he would not return to Germany until after the war.

The British Government, it is said, recently granted a permit to Mr. Borszkowski for the trans-shipment of the models of his apparatus from Rotterdam to the United States. He had taken them from Berlin to that place and there was informed that owing to the provisions of the British Order in Council which prevented the movement of goods of German or Austrian origin he would be unable to take them on shipboard without express provision of the British Foreign Office. Negotiations were immediately entered into upon his arrival in the United States. It was then found that he must also secure similar permission from the Russian Government.

Those to whom he has explained his inventions for the production of photographic materials are of the opinion that these will serve to revolutionize the industry and actual demonstrations are being awaited with considerable interest.

Baltimore Operators Amplify Organization

Arrange to Have Office Force Always on Duty at Union Headquarters—Will Be Able to Send Out Supply Men at Moment's Notice.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

BALTIMORE, MD.—A new policy has been introduced by the Baltimore Motion Picture Operators' organization, it having been decided by the officers of the union that in future there will be an office force always on duty at its headquarters in the Gayety Building. The union will then be in a position to render any service operators may require. Thus, if an operator in any of the motion picture houses should suddenly become ill, or meet with an accident, the headquarters force will immediately furnish a substitute. This new policy has already been put into effect and has been found very efficient. The innovation was made through the efforts of National Vice-President Oscar Scheck with the assistance of G. Kingston Howard, president of the Baltimore organization, and other members of the local body.

It is reported that the union has pretty generally won out in its recent undertaking looking to the adoption of a new agreement between the operators and the exhibitors, which contemplated an increase in pay of $2 per week and some few changes in working conditions.

PATHE OFFICE MOVES.

The Baltimore local branch of the Washington, D. C., Pathe office, has been moved from 28 West Lexington street to larger quarters at 418 East Baltimore street. Here three rooms are being occupied. The additional space will allow of the storage here of posters and other advertising matter and will greatly facilitate the business done with exhibitors in this section. H. E. Reddish looks after the business of the Baltimore office.

CONTRACT FOR NEW THEATERS.

Plans have been filed in the office of the building inspector for a one-story motion picture theater to be erected at 902 and 904 South Luzerne street. According to these plans, the new building will be of brick and will measure about 45 feet by 70 feet by 24 feet. A contract has already been awarded for the construction work.

Sparklin & Childs have recently completed plans for the motion picture theater to be erected at 404 and 406 North Howard street, and a number of general contracting concerns have been invited to submit estimates for the construction work. The building is to be one story in height and be of brick and stucco. It will be 37 feet wide and 121 feet in depth. It will be owned and operated by the Howard Amusement Company.

John H. Kelly has been awarded a contract for the erection of a one-story motion picture theater at 902 and 904 South Luzerne avenue, Baltimore, to be operated by the Linwood Amusement Company. The theater will be about 45 feet wide and 70 feet deep.

A new motion picture theater, with a seating capacity of about five hundred, will be opened in the very near future in Towson, Md.

The Gordon Realty Company, it is announced, will erect a motion picture theater on the southeast corner of Baltimore and Catherine streets. The theater, which has been designed by H. C. Aiken, will be of brick about 88 feet wide and 118 feet in depth, and will cost approximately $12,000. The building will be one story in height and have four stores on the ground floor.

After something of a wrangle between the First and Second Branches of the City Council, the Committee on Police and Jail has finally approved the ordinance authorizing the Howard Amusement Company to establish a moving picture theater at 404 and 406 North Howard street, and the ordinance, already passed by the Second Branch, has been advanced to the third reading calendar.

The two branches were practically deadlocked over the measure. The Second Branch passed it after having taken it away from the committee at a previous session of the Council.

NEW FACES AT MUTUAL BRANCH.

The local Mutual forces have been increased recently by the addition of Owen D. Weems and Edward R. Price. John A. Cunningham, manager of this office, has just announced that Mr. Price will hereafter act as assistant manager and will have charge of the regular service as well as of the booking of Mutual Masterpictures. Mr. Weems will take charge of the booking in this territory of "The Girl and the Game," the new series of pictures to be put out by the Mutual company. Both Mr. Price and Mr. Weems are well known locally and each has a wide experience in the motion picture business.

BALTIMORE FILM RELEASED.

Baltimore, Md.—The first Baltimore-made photoplay, "Love and Cannon Balls," produced by the National Film Company, of this city, was released on November 29. The picture is a comedy and was made by Al Ray, a former director of Pathe. Mr. Ray appears in the leading role in the picture with Marie Hart. All of the other players are Baltimoreans.

BALTIMORE SEES POE PICTURE.

A preliminary showing of the Essanay six-reel photoplay, "The Raven," was given here recently for the benefit of the exhibitors of Baltimore by Frank B. Spurrier, of Washington, D. C., manager of the V-L-S-E, Inc., office in that city, at the Wilson theater through the courtesy of its manager, Guy L. Wonders.

NORTH CAROLINA TRADE LETTER.

Wilmington (N. C.) Theater Notes.

CARL B. REHDER, who was formerly advertising manager for Deluca Bros., former owners of the Grand and Victoria theaters in Wilmington, N. C., is now acting in a similar capacity for Howard & Wells, who have recently taken over the Grand and Victoria. He will also handle the advertising of the Bijou and Royal theaters for that concern, succeeding Julius P. Taylor, who has become the manager of the latter named house.

The general offices of the Howard & Wells enterprises and Bijou Amusement company in Wilmington have been moved to commodious quarters on the second floor of the Royal Theater building. The move was made necessary by an extension of the latter concern's activities. D. M. Bain, publicity and office manager of the company, will be in charge.

A ticket booth and an automatic ticket vending machine, similar to that now in place at the Royal theater, in Wilmington, has been placed in operation at the Bijou theater and a similar installation will take place at the Grand theater in the very near future.

MANAGER LOGAN PROMISES KIDDIES A XMAS TREE.

Poor Children of Atlanta to Have Good Christmas Time at the Georgian.

By A. M. Beatty, Atlanta Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ATLANTA, GA.—Manager R. H. Logan, of the Georgian theater, realizing there are many poor and needy children in Atlanta, has determined they all shall have a fine old fashioned Christmas this year. He has made arrangements to give in the Georgian theater on Sunday, December 26th, a big performance for the poor children of Atlanta. There will be a Christmas tree and gifts for all—the kind of gifts that will be of service—woolen sweaters, caps, shoes, mittens and other articles of wear to keep them warm and comfortable. Mr. Logan has arranged a system whereby he will be able to reach every child who is needy, through several charitable organizations.

IRVING CUMMINGS IN ATLANTA.

Irving Cummings, the star of the recent serial "Diamond from the Sky," appeared this week at the Palace theater, in Macon, Ga., and the Strand theater in Atlanta, in person. He told of many interesting incidents in connection with the taking of motion pictures

FIRE SUIT AGAINST MUTUAL.

Gordon Adams, twenty-three years of age, through his attorney Saturday morning filed suit in the Fulton County Superior Court against the Mutual Film Corporation, for $10,000 for alleged injuries sustained in jumping from a window on the second floor when the film concern was destroyed by fire on October 16, last. Adams alleges he sustained a concussion of the spine.

A CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT.

Gayety tinctured with a bit of sadness marked the gathering of motion picture men last Tuesday evening in the office of the George Kleine Company, 71 Walton St.

There was a hearty welcome for the new manager of the Atlanta branch, B. F. Hardcastle, and a regretful parting with the man he succeeds, Ben F. Simpson, who for two years has managed the Kleine interests in Atlanta, and proved to be one of the most popular moving picture exchange men ever serving in Atlanta. Mr. Simpson has since left for New York, where he will continue in the show business. Mr. Hardcastle will prove a worthy successor to Mr. Simoson,

MANAGER'S BIRTHDAY DINNER.

Friends of Ralph de Bruler, manager of the Strand theater, were entertained Tuesday night at a dinner at the de Bruler home, 88 Lucile avenue. The occasion was Mr. de Bruler's fortieth birthday, and the dinner was a surprise arranged for her husband by Mrs. de Bruler. The table was charmingly decorated and the dinner itself was a feast.

A BENEFIT AT THE GRAND.

A benefit moving picture performance was given at the Grand theater Sunday under the auspices of the Georgia war relief committee for France and her allies. Children were in charge of the ushering. Dr. F. E. May, executive secretary of the Georgia war relief committee, arranged for Pathe war pictures, which were among the best ever seen in Atlanta. Dr. May also had several pictures direct from France and Belgium taken on battlefields and of actual battles. The benefit was a success financially.

"Nation" Film at the Atlanta.

"The Birth of a Nation" was shown at the Atlanta theater on December 6. It comes to Atlanta without any marks of the censor as far as known, and will without doubt draw the largest audience of any picture ever shown in this city.

PITTSBURGH NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Pittsburgh News Service.

Rothapfel, Nearing Home, Reaches Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—One of the most enthusiastic meetings of exhibitors and film exchange men ever held in Pittsburgh took place on Wednesday evening, Nov. 24, at the Fort Pitt Hotel, under the auspices of the Mutual Film Corporation, of which Walter Kinson is the Pittsburgh manager. S. L. Rothapfel was the guest of honor and delivered a most interesting lecture to the Pittsburgh film men.

After Mr. Rothapfel's lecture he answered all manner of questions asked of him by the local exhibitors.

Pittsburgh May Get League Convention Next Year.

Fred J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, attended a meeting of the Pittsburgh Screen Club Sunday, Nov. 28, and in a speech he said that Pittsburgh has excellent prospects of getting the next national convention of the Exhibitors League of America. Mr. Herrington stated that the Chamber of Commerce has arranged to send a representative to the meeting of the executive committee of the league in Chicago during the last week in this month, with inducements enough to get the convention for the Smoky City. The Chamber of Commerce offers Exposition hall free of charge, decorate and light the building and provide autos for tours of the city for visiting delegates.

Pittsburgh is conceded by many as having many claims for recognition at the hands of the organization as it is one of the leading film centers of the United States and is the "home town" of Mr. Irwin, of the V-L-S-E; Lewis Selznick, of the World, and R. M. Rowland, of the Metro.

Screen Club Will Elect Officers Dec. 12.

The Pittsburgh Screen Club held a meeting Sunday, Nov. 28, in the Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, at which the officers for the ensuing year were to be elected, but owing to the small attendance it was deemed expedient to defer the election to Sunday, Dec. 12, in the same place. Each member present was appointed a committee of one to secure a large attendance on that date.

President Kester presided at this meeting and in an address stated the objects of the gathering and asked for suggestions as to future activities of the club.

Fred J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was present. He suggested that an address by a man prominent in the industry would prove a strong attraction and mentioned W. Stephen Bush, of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of New York, as one of the most desirable men for the purpose. Mr. Parke stated that he is a warm personal friend of Mr. Bush and that he would get in communication with him with the object of getting him here on Dec. 12.

M. H. Berman Made a Manager.

M. H. Berman, road man for the Metro pictures service, working out of the Pittsburgh office, has been chosen as manager of the Kansas City branch of the Metro. He left last Thursday night for his new field of activities and immediately took charge of the office upon his arrival in Kansas City.

Mr. Berman has been in the moving picture game only seven months, but in that time has made much progress. He was first with the World and for the past two months with the Metro. His success as a manager is predicted by all who know him.

Highland Film Company Directors Named

Cincinnati Picture Producing Concern Completes Its Organization—Will Now Begin the Making of Offerings.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Cincinnati Correspondent Moving Picture World.

CINCINNATI, O.—The completed organization of the Highland Film Co., which was incorporated some time ago for the purpose of operating a producing moving-picture studio in or near Cincinnati, was accomplished last week, the board of directors of the company being announced as follows: United States Sub-Treasurer Arthur Espy, John W. Peck, D. J. Reinhart, Thomas Ford, J. J. Winn, T. M. Flannigan and F. B. Bishop. The company is about ready to begin producing, according to Director Ford. It will use on all of its films a striking and attractive trademark, featuring the figure of a Highlander and the word "Cincinnati," thus giving the Queen City nation-wide publicity. Financial details are now out of the way, enabling the company's executives to concentrate on the important work of preparing for actual production of films.

L. LIBSON IS VICE-PRESIDENT.

Advices from Denver, Colo., whither I. Libson went a few weeks ago in charge of various matters connected with the acquisition on the Tabor Grand Opera House, indicate that the deal went through as intimated some time ago in these columns. A new company, to be known as the Denver Amusement Co., of which Mr. Libson is vice-president, will control the theater hereafter, in its career as a moving-picture house in the exhibition of the Harris-Schubert attractions. John P. Harris, of Pittsburgh, is president of the company, and B. L. Heigingsfeld, of Cincinnati, is secretary and treasurer, while Lee Schubert, George B. Cox and Joseph Rhinock, big figures in the film world, are of course interested in the company, as it is organized for the purpose of operating a house in their string.

LET CHILD SING—IS FINED.

John W. Popp, one of the proprietors of the Main photoplay house, got "in bad" with the municipal authorities last week, without the slightest intention of doing so. The trouble arose when he permitted an infant prodigy of six to sing in the theater one evening, at her mother's request, according to Mr. Popp. The juvenile singer was not only not a regular professional performer, it appeared, but was brought to the theater for the occasion by her mother. Notwithstanding these facts, however, the municipal court imposed a fine of $5 and costs, due time being allowed to take the case up on appeal, which it is understood will be done.

HITE BUILDING A BUSINESS.

Arrangements for the Triangle Film productions are rapidly being closed by leading houses everywhere, Manager C. C. Hite devoting much time to personal work in placing the program advantageously. He returned triumphant last week from a trip to Indianapolis, where the Triangle service will be used by E. G. Sourbier, while Louis Chakeres, of the Majestic Amusement Co., of Springfield, O., is one of the more important Ohio exhibitors to join the Triangle fold. The Plaza, of Norwood, Ohio, one of the most popular of the several big suburban houses in Cincinnati, will show Triangle releases every Sunday and Wednesday. The Plaza recently decided to eliminate vaudeville completely, and to devote its program entirely to first-class features, one each evening. Manager Hite is still engaged in negotiations for a Cincinnati downtown house for his program, and while it is rumored that the Walnut may be secured, nothing is yet in shape for a definite announcement in this connection.

THRIFT FILMS HERE.

The "Thrift Display" accompanied by moving pictures, which have been shown in most of the larger cities and towns of Ohio, as well as in other states, have arrived in Cincinnati. The exhibit, being shown under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., includes three excellent reels, arranged by the American Institute of Banking. It is a campaign designed to educate the American people on the numerous advantages of thrift, and the high value of moving pictures for this as for other educational purposes was fully recognized. The pictures will be shown during the week at the various large manufacturing plants in the city, in order to get to the wage-earner directly.

New Massillon House Opened.

The Lincoln theater, the newest and prettiest house in Massillon, O., was opened last week, with Helen Ware in "The Price" as the opening attraction, coupled with the Pathe News Weekly. Manager F. C. Kelly also had special music for the opening, and was much pleased with the success of the affair.

New Youngstown Theater Company.

The Morgan Grand Amusement Co. has been organized at Youngstown, O., by H. F. Shaughnessy, Daniel Robins and others for the purpose of opening a picture theater. The company has a capital stock of $10,000.

To Build in East Liverpool.

The East Liverpool Photoplay Co., of East Liverpool, O., will construct a moving picture theater in that city, according to its present plan. The company was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 by Sherman T. Martin, John A. Medcalf, Frank Demetros, Victor Biddle and Lee Von Filburg.

Fined for Crowded Aisles.

An excess of good business resulted in a fine of $25 and costs for Victor L. Schram, manager of the Grand theater, of Canton, O., last week. He pleaded guilty to the charge of permitting the aisles of his house to be crowded, stating that the difficulty had occurred without his knowledge, as he always endeavored to keep the passageways clear. The court stated that the case was instituted for the purpose rather of serving as a general warning to exhibitors than with any intention of selecting the Grand as the only house violating the ordinance on the subject of crowding.

TENNESSEE TRADE LETTER.

By J. D. Crain, Jr., Chattanooga Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Triangle at Popular Prices in Chattanooga.

THE Bijou theater, of Chattanooga, is now showing the Triangle program at popular prices and is doing a nice business with this high class film service. Matinee prices all over the house are 15 cents, while night prices for the lower floor, which is reserved, are 25 cents. Balcony prices at night are 15 cents, while the special colored balcony is sold at 10 cents a seat. Children under six years of age, accompanied by parents, are admitted free of charge.

Free Concert on New Organ.

On Sunday afternoon, November 28, Prof. Emerson gave a free organ recital on the Vartola Grand at the Bijou theater, Chattanooga, and the public was invited to attend. This instrument cost $5,000 and has attracted a great deal of attention. Previous to brightening of the screen for the pictures at regular performances a thirty-minute organ recital is indulged in. The regular plays at the theater consist of four separate pictures and take about two and one-half hours to run off. None of the theaters are showing regular pictures on Sunday afternoon or night at this time, awaiting the outcome of the test case which was recently filed.

Clarksville Opera House Sold.

The site of the old Elder Opera House, at Clarksville, Tenn., has been sold to the Robinson-McGill Carriage Company, of Nashville. The opera house, which was formerly used for moving pictures at times, was one of the buildings destroyed along with the old Lillian theater, in a big fire last December. The Lillian was recently rebuilt on far more handsome lines, but the city will remain without a regular opera house for the time being.

Fox Films Please the Lillian Patrons.

The Lillian theater, of Clarksville, Ky., recently showed the big Fox production, "Sin," in which Theda Bara and William E. Shay take the principal parts. This picture is one of the best seen in Clarksville for some time, and played to good houses. The management has booked another Fox picture in which Miss Bara takes the leading role in the production "A Fool There Was." Bernard Gooch, a talented young pianist of Hopkinsville, Ky., recently gave a piano solo at the theater as an added attraction, while "Jim the Penman," in which Harold Lockwood and John Mason take the leading parts, was shown.

"Hearts Adrift" Draws Again.

Mary Pickford, in her old success "Hearts Adrift," recently "appeared" again at the New Majestic No. 1, of Memphis, Tenn., to large and admiring crowds. This picture is interesting from start to finish, and has always been a good drawing card at the moving picture theaters. Miss Marguerite Clarke, in the five-reel Paramount production, "Still Water," was another picture which went well at the theater. Miss Pickford and Miss Clarke are two of the greatest favorites in Memphis.

The Lyric, of Lebanon, Tenn., recently exhibited the six-reel Fox feature, "The White Sister," in which Viola Allen takes the leading part. Many people had previously seen the book and the play, and were considerably interested in the film version.

The Majestic Amusement company, of Memphis, Tenn., has been showing a number of big productions at the three Majestic theaters. Majestic No. 1 recently exhibited Olga Petrova in the wonderful production, "My Madonna," which took extremely well. Hazel Dawn, in the Famous Players production, "The Masqueraders," was also shown at Old Majestic No. 1.

IN KENTUCKY.

At Pineville, Ky., the Lyric was recently sold by order of the court to satisfy a mortgage claim of $12,000. C. W. Metcalfe and A. R. Tinney purchased the property for $16,000. Mr. Tinney has taken over the active management of the theater, and has made arrangements with the General Film Co. for service. The serial picture "The Diamond from the Sky" will be continued. Arrangements have been made whereby one big feature will be shown each week.

NEW NEIGHBORHOOD THEATER IN LOUISVILLE.

Louisville.—Plans for the new picture theater to cost $25,000 and to be erected at Second and A streets, are rapidly developing and it is stated that the theater will be erected and in operation inside of ninety days. It is understood that a syndicate composed of Aaron Kohn, Walter I. Kohn and Col. J. J. Douglas are behind the movement. Max Simon is also named as being interested in the deal. This is the first Louisville theater to be erected in a strictly residential neighborhood. About two years ago there was a movement started to erect a picture house in the same neighborhood, but opposition was met with on the part of the residents. The tide has turned, however, and the same people who were formerly opposed to the theater are now in favor of it.

W. J. O'Connor in Town.

W. J. O'Connor, the special feature representative of the Mutual Film, was in Louisville last week calling on the local office and a number of the exhibitors.

Tom Trakas' New Theater Growing.

Tom Trakas, the young Greek who recently organized a concern to erect a new moving picture house at Thirty-eighth street and Broadway, is getting along nicely with his new building and has already contracted for two Power's 6B machines with the S. & P. Film & Supply Company.

Business Changes—Personal Notes, Etc.

J. N. Brewer, of Princeton, Ky., has purchased from Mrs. L. B. Shaw the Orion theater, which he sold to her three years ago. The building will be remodeled, rearranged, and a number of improvements made.

Otto Brown, manager of the Manring theater, of Middlesboro, Ky., is the very proud father of a new 9-pound boy which he is quoted as saying is the "prettiest thing in the world," and later declared to have said that the boy looked just like him. The jokers report that Mr. Brown will have the new arrival photographed and thrown on the screen at the Manring as an added attraction.

The St. Paul public schools, at Greensburg, Ind., have made arrangements whereby 250 pupils of the upper grades will spend an hour each Monday afternoon at one of the local motion picture theaters. At these shows pictures will be exhibited of travel, geography and history. Trustee L. D. Jewett, one of the oldest teachers in the district, endorses the idea as a practical forward movement.

A. E. Irons, of the Cincinnati Motion Picture Company, of Cincinnati, O., was recently in Madisonville, Ky., where he made some special pictures of local interest which were later shown at the Garrick theater to large audiences.

The Novelty Amusement Company, of Bardstown, Ky., has started showing pictures in Crystal Hall. During the opening week a "baby and home folks" show was given in which local pictures of residences and people were shown.

Col. M. G. Weisiger, proprietor of the Colonial, at Danville, Ky., recently closed his theater during the Ham-Ramsay revival meetings which were held in the city. The Colonel stated that he did not wish to place a stumbling block in the way of persons who should attend the meetings. During the interim several small improvements were made in the theater.

Charles Mize, of Somerset, Ky., is making arrangement to remodel the Dixie theater building. Mr. Mize expects to double the present seating capacity of the plant.

At Paintsville, Ky., a change has been made in the management of the Stafford, whereby H. M. Stafford has been succeeded by Everett Hitchcock.

New Kentucky Fire Law

State Fire Marshal C. C. Bosworth Has Prepared a New Fire Code Governing Places of Amusement—Copy Has Been Sent to the Local Exhibitors' League President Dittmar—Provisions of the New Code.

By G. C. Crain, Jr., Louisville Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—C. C. Bosworth, the Kentucky State Fire Marshal, has the draft of a bill which will be introduced at the 1916 session of the Kentucky Legislature, convening in January, concerning fire protection in moving picture theaters throughout the state. A copy of the proposed requirements has been placed in the hands of Louis J. Dittmar, president of the Kentucky Branch No. 7 Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Mr. Dittmar is also an officer in the Louisville Photoplay Association, and will probably discuss the measure before the local association, and call a meeting of the executive committee of the state organization to discuss the proposed requirements of the bill, which is favored by the fire underwriters. The bill will probably be a hardship on many of the smaller exhibitors out through the state, but is generally provided for by the larger exhibitors of Louisville.

1. All electrical devices, equipments and appliances shall be of the approved type and design and shall be installed in each case to conform to the National Electric Code.

2. All moving picture machine booths and lamp houses shall be of the standard make and kind and shall conform to the standard specifications as furnished by the state fire marshal's office.

3. After performances and before closing above places, main line or service switch shall be opened in order to prevent passage of current in buildings when closed. Deviation from this rule will be made upon application to the fire marshal in writing, who will make inspection of case in question and render decision regarding same.

4. All exit doors shall open out and be equipped on inside with quick opening latches. All exits from buildings shall be marked with red lights above doors and where exits lead to alleys, yards and enclosed places, a light shall be placed on outside of same, and all exit lights shall be kept burning during the hours of performances, both inside and outside of building.

5. Each moving picture theater, opera house and other places of amusement shall be equipped with chemical fire extinguishers, stand pipes and hose. Upon application, the fire marshal will furnish requirements to each building according to the class, kind and area to be protected from fire. Each moving picture booth shall have at least one fire extinguisher on the inside of same.

6. All heating appliances shall be installed in a safe manner. Stoves, furnaces, etc., shall be protected from the ceiling, floors and partitions by fire resisting materials leaving air space between fire protection appliances.

7. No chairs or other obstructions shall be allowed in aisles, passageways or exits during performances, and no persons shall be allowed to stand in aisles during same.

8. Rubbish, trash, oily rags, etc., must not be allowed to accumulate, and must be burnt or removed from buildings each day.

9. Where places of amusement are located on second floor of building, same shall be equipped with standard fire escape of the balcony and stairway type.

10. Under no circumstances allow smoking in places of amusement.

11. Where open cellars are located on sidewalk in front of any places of amusement, same shall be protected with wire netting on underneath side in order to prevent paper, trash, etc., from falling into cellar.

The fire marshals' office is ready to advise and assist in above matters.

GRIFFITH'S MOTHER ILL.

Mrs. Mary Oglesby Griffith, 86 years old, of Lagrange, Ky., mother of David W. Griffith, has been very ill for the past two weeks at her home, where she is suffering from an attack of pneumonia. Albert Griffith, who recently returned from London, where he is in charge of one of the booking offices for his brother, David W. Griffith, arrived in Lagrange last week. Another brother, William Griffith, and Miss Ruth Griffith, of California, a granddaughter, are at the bedside. Dave Griffith is receiving three or more wires a day keeping him posted on his mother's condition, and has arranged to leave California on a moment's notice if Mrs. Griffith shows a turn for the worse. Mrs. Griffith is a very prominent Kentucky woman and the Louisville newspapers are running daily bulletins regarding her condition.

PRESSY RECALLS EARLY DAYS.

Charles A. Pressy, head of the S. & P. Film & Supply Company, of Louisville, Ky., who is interested in a number of park concessions in addition to his film business, in a recent interview with the Louisville correspondent of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, stated that he was probably one of the earliest moving picture men in the Kentucky district.

Mr. Pressy said that in 1898 he traveled through Ohio with a road show and an old style Edison gas outfit for projecting the pictures. A comedy known as "The Pillow Fight" was the best drawing card in his collection. Sometimes the gas would give out and the spectators would keep their seats while a cylinder was heated, and new gas made, probably on the stage in full view. A few years later Mr. Pressy built and sold a number of theaters in Texas from a speculative standpoint, and managed to clean up nicely. These theaters were at Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Beeville, and other points. A man died of heart failure in one of these theaters one night, but the house was so densely packed that the crowd held him up, thinking that he was intoxicated, for some time before the truth was known.

TRIANGLE PRICES COME DOWN.

Although the Triangle Program, being shown at the Walnut Street theater, of Louisvlle, is high class and is excellently produced, it is being demonstrated that Louisville people will not pay high prices to see moving pictures, and the management of the Walnut has reduced prices accordingly. Prices now at the theater are ten and twenty cents where they were formerly 15, 25 and 50 cents. With the reduction in prices the eighteen-piece orchestra has also been discontinued, and the theater is now using its $15,000 mechanical instrument. The theater continues to show fourten reels of film, however, and has arranged a schedule so that it is possible for the patron to look at a bulletin board in the lobby and tell just when to enter the theater in order to see any of the films which are being shown. Two large features and two comedies make up the bills.

World Film Men Visit.

Billy Ratz, general manager of the World Film Indianapolis office, and Robert Montgomery, of the company's New York office, were recently in Louisville where they conferred with one of the large local concerns.

Detroit Special Shows

City Recreation Commission Calls a Meeting of Film Men to Consider Plan to Have Specially Chosen Shows for Children on One or two Days a Week—Would Be Put on a Paying Basis.

By Jacob Smith, Detroit Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

DETROIT, MICH.—On Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 1, there was a conference held at the office of the City Recreation Commission, No. 818 New Farwell Building, Detroit, at which were present Ira W. Jayne, head of the commission, Mrs. R. H. Ashbaugh, of the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs, and several other ladies interested in educational work, as well as George W. Trendle, representing the John H. Kunsky interests; A. J. Gilligham, of the General Film; G. J. Trask, of the Mutual; J. A. Fitzgerald, of the Metro; A. Arthur Caille, of the Majestic Theater; Jacob Smith, of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, and a number of exhibitors.

The purpose of the conference is to work out some constructive plan to create greater interest in motion picture films that would be suitable for children and young boys and girls. In other words, it was the contention of the committee that it would be a splendid thing if every theater in Detroit could set aside one afternoon of each week—say Friday or Saturday—and give the children of Detroit humorous, instructive and films of educational nature. Just how this could be brought about was discussed pro and con. Mr. Jayne, in behalf of the Recreation Commission said: "We don't want you exhibitors to give the children anything for nothing. They can well afford to pay for whatever entertainment they get. What we want to do is to co-operate with the motion picture people and to see if we cannot get owners of theaters to show a class of film that will appeal especially to children—they need not be entirely of an educational nature—we don't mind if they are full of comedy, if they are clean and wholesome. We don't believe, however, that some of the big features and things that are understood by their parents and by grown people are suitable for children of tender years. We fully realize that the motion picture industry is a wonderful industry, and we do not want to do anything that will tear it down. It is too great a factor in life. But if this commission can do anything to help the children it wants to do it."

Messrs. Caille, Gilligham, Treedle and Trask gave their views, and it was decided to hold another meeting on Monday, Dec. 13, and to go into the matter further. Meanwhile both sides were urged to give the plan careful thought.

UNION PUTS LIMIT ON LOADS.

Five Reels Counted Enough for a Boy—Union Progress.

When the question of agreement between the union motion picture operators and the theater owners of Detroit came up recently the operators did not ask for any increase in wages, but they did ask that the managers be more considerate of the boys in regard to carrying film. The agreement is that the boys should carry five films, and the union has asked that they do not be requested to carry more. It is also understood that the operators are not to carry any paper.

The Detroit Operators' Union is making favorable progress. It now has 95 members. There are about 140 theaters. The wage scale runs from $17.50 to $32. The union plans a big dinner and dance on Feb. 11, when it will celebrate its fifth year of existence. A meeting will be held on Dec. 15, at which time new officers will be elected. The union has permanent quarters in the Sun building. The union announces that all difficulty with the Northwestern theater, owned by Charles Seestedt, has been settled satisfactory to both parties.

RICHARD BRODERICK DIES.

Detroit moving picture men lost a friend and colleague Friday, Nov. 25, in the death of Richard Broderick, Detroit, which was caused by typhoid-pneumonia. Mr. Broderick was taken ill in Grand Rapids, where he went five weeks ago as assistant general manager of the A. J. Gillingham chain of theaters. His father and four sisters survive. Burial took place in Detroit.

FAILED TO NOTICE CLAUSE IN CONTRACT.

"The Birth of a Nation," which was advertised extensively in the Detroit papers as being booked for the Windsor theater, Windsor, Canada (across the river), has now been canceled for that playhouse by the producers, and it may be that the Basil Corporation, who contracted for the Canadian rights to this film, may lose that privilege.

Bert C. Whitney, proprietor of the Detroit opera house, who has the picture booked for two weeks in January, on seeing the Canadian advertisement, got in communication with New York and asked for protection. Upon investigation it was found that the Basil Corporation had neglected to regard a clause in the contract which specified that the entertainment should not be advertised in the United States by the Canadian promoters.

In addition to two weeks in January, Mr. Whitney is planning to show the film at the Opera House at the close of the present theatrical season and running it until the opening of the 1916-17 season, which would mean about 20 weeks in all. Before the film was canceled for the Windsor theater many prominent negroes in that Canadian village protested to the mayor against its being shown, claiming it was injustice to their race.

Begin on Ferry Field Theater.

In the presence of a throng of business men from the northwestern section of Detroit, ground was broken on Thursday, Dec. 2, for the new Ferry Field motion picture theater to be erected on Grand River avenue, just south of the East Grand Boulevard. A. Arthur Caille, president of the company, turned the sod and made an address. It is expected to have the theater completed about March 1. It will seat about 1,500. C. Howard Crane is the architect.

Mutual Local Manager Announces Big Films.

Michigan exhibitors will be interested to learn that starting soon the Mutual will have several big features as a part of the regular program. Manager Trask of the Detroit office was apprized of this fact when he made a recent trip to the New York headquarters of the company. "Mutual Masterpictures" are in great demand by leading exhibitors in all parts of the state. They are getting better each week.

New House Named the Rialto.

The Rialto is to be the name of the new theater to be erected by the Boulevard Theater company, J. C. Ritter, president, at Gratiot and Van Dyke avenues. It will seat 1,800 people. There will be seven seat 1,800 people.

A Theater Man's View of Censorship

John H. Kunsky Tells World Representative Why Self-Appointed Censors Are Not Able to Give the Best Service to the Community.

THERE has been considerable talk lately about censoring all theatrical entertainment in Detroit, which includes motion pictures. John H. Kunsky when seen by the WORLD representative and asked to express himself on censorship, remarked: "Yes, I am in favor of censorship to some extent. I believe that pictures bearing the approval of the National Board of Censorship should be allowed in theaters without having to be further censored. I do believe, however, that pictures not having the approval of the National Board should not be permitted. In my opinion a picture failing to have the National Board approval is either unfit for the public or is because the producer is afraid it will not pass the board. What the board says is good enough for me any time. I would like to see an ordinance passed in every city, and in fact by the state legislatures, giving free reign to the National Board when it somes to taking a stand on what or what not should be shown in motion picture theaters. Of course if such an ordinance or law cannot be passed, then I favor having the local police department censor pictures, the same as it used to.

"When we had police censorship a few years ago we had very little trouble, and if the public feels that it must have censorship, then I say, leave it up to the police department. I do not favor any member of the clergy or club women censoring pictures, because while their intentions may be all right, they have not had sufficient theatrical experience to know what the public should have. It is wrong to say that the public demands immoral or suggestive pictures, because they do not. Of course if the theater runs that class of film the public will go in large numbers, but they will go to see clean pictures also, as has been proven by the kind of attractions being shown at the Alhambra, Washington, Garden, Strand, Majestic and others."

"PEACE" FILM MAKES BIG HIT.

No picture ever brought to Detroit has been given more free newspaper publicity, more advertising and created more intense interest than "The Battle Cry of Peace," which opened to tremendous crowds at the Broadway-Strand theater on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 5, at 5.30. There was a performance at 2.30, but it was private and held under the auspices of the Aero Club of Detroit and the Detroit Athletic Club. There was present at this private showing prominent state and government officials and many of the most prominent men and women in Detroit and Michigan.

Previous to the opening day an aeroplane circled about the city and dropped "bombs" upon the city's homes, streets, parks and factories. On one side of the bomb was printed "Dropped from an aeroplane by the Aero Club of Michigan." The reverse side read: "This might have been a real bomb. PREPARE. 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' at the Broadway-Strand theater shows us what may happen to us if we don't prepare. The Aero Club of Michigan."

MICHIGAN NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

What Censors Want in Charlotte.

CHARLOTTE, MICH.—Club women are not going to be ugly about moving picture censorship, they say, because they realize exhibitors cater to public taste. But they do want children barred from films with certain themes. In return they will boost worthy attractions.

Lansing Considering Race Prejudice Measure.

The Lansing (Mich.) city council has before it an ordinance preventing race prejudice-provoking shows. It is aimed at "The Birth of a Nation."

Ishpeming Mayors Honored.

Seven boxes in the rear of the auditorium of the new Butler theater at Ishpeming, Mich., will be dedicated to the thirteen past mayors and the present executive. There will be two silver nameplates on each box. When not reserved the seats in these boxes will be sold at regular prices.

Battle Creek Mayor Warns Managers.

Warning has been given moving picture men in Battle Creek, Mich., by Mayor Marsh. Complaints of films led him to state: "I intend to give the owners of the theaters a friendly warning to watch their class of film plays more closely and not bring in anything objectionable. Then, if there are further complaints we may have to have a censor."

Expensive Accident.

An operator at the Bohm theater in Albion, Mich., dropped a hot carbon on a film and several hundred dollars' worth of damage was done, but no one was injured.

New Company Formed.

The Southern Michigan Amusement Co., Ltd., is the name of the new company incorporated this week. The articles filed show V. C. Decker, M. L. Decker, of Paw Paw, L. A. Packer, of Lawton, and Mrs. G. Metzger, of Kalamazoo, as subscribers to the stock. These people now successfully operate theaters in Paw Paw, Lawton and Decatur and have just purchased the Watervliet theater. Other theaters will be acquired from time to time in nearby towns.

Better pictures, better service for the patrons and much saving in cost of films for the owners will be the main result from this consolidation.

The officers of the new company are M. L. Decker, chairman; L. A. Packer, secretary and V. C. Decker, treasurer and manager.

Michigan Changes.

John Marsch, of Iron Mountain, will convert a building he owns into an opera house of 800 seating capacity.

Fred Lauster, of Ionia, has made preliminary moves for the construction, next spring, of an opera house seating 1,000 at that place.

J. Biersman and Hugh Gannon, of Grand Rapids have asked the city council at Holland for a permit to operate a moving picture theater in that city. They contemplate erecting a $9,000 house.

Edward Rice has sold his moving picture theater at Leslie to E. W. Van Meter.

Manager A. E. Deschamps, of the Grand at Lake Linden, has booked "The Rosary," "The Christian" and "The Melting Pot."

A. J. Gilligham, of the Gilligham & Smith enterprises, contemplates having a prize competition on motion picture scenarios for Grand Rapids people, producing a motion picture play with local players in the spring.

To Abolish Censor Board

Alderman Weisenburger, of Quincy, Illinois, Introduces Ordinance to Nullify Local Censorship in That City—Referred to Committee Made Up of City Council, Censors and Exhibitors—No Decision Yet.

By Frank H. Madison, Illinois Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

QUINCY, ILL.—Formal action toward the abolition of the Quincy board of censorship was taken when Alderman Weisenburger moved that an ordinance be drawn to nullify the work of that body. Controversy followed and it ended in the matter being referred to the Council, as a committee of the whole, the censorship board and the moving picture exhibitors.

All but one theater was represented at the Council meeting. William H. Sohn, of the Star and Belasco theaters, precipitated the fight when, as spokesman for the exhibitors, he protested against granting the board further powers which would work hardship on the theater men. He cited the message of the late Mayor Gaynor of New York as a reason why there should be no local censorship.

EXHIBITORS ANSWER CHARGES.

Come on the Carpet Before Civic Club and Tell About Shows.

Oak Park, Ill.—Atrocious singing and serial pictures between the acts at moving picture shows were things that were criticised by Miss Minnie Whitman at a session of the Suburban and Civics club in Oak Park. Two exhibitors, Manager Hodgson of the Oak Park theater and Manager McManus of the Southern theater, had agreed to "go on the carpet." Miss Whitman, who presented the case against the picture shows, outlined the following objections: (1) Children in groups without chaperonage; (2) sitting in dark room without supervision; (3) great harm in a series of pictures that have no special point to them, that children follow up just to see how they come out; (4) danger when a long piece of literature is illustrated, for then the child "knows it all" and doesn't want the bother of reading; and he seldom cares to see the same pictures twice; (5) substitution of mental excitement for physical.

Manager Hodgson of the Oak Park answered the first two objections. The Oak Park theater is doubly lighted throughout on that very account; also, close to 200 seats have been sacrificed in fitting the theater with 22-inch seats with large spaces between. He also declared real opera singers had been at his house and were not appreciated. Hodgson's standard is not to run anything he would not want his own girl to see.

A tribute to Manager Hodgson was paid by Manager McManus, who spoke of the cutting and rejecting the former had done to keep his program high class. McManus himself found that only about 15 per cent. of his patrons were children and fairy tales and the like must be run at special shows.

NEWSPAPER GIVES A LUNCHEON.

The Springfield News-Record gave a luncheon at the Illinois Hotel, in that city, for the moving picture theater managers of Springfield. The affair was significant of the cordial relation between the paper and the capital city exhibitors. The News was one of the first (probably the first) Illinois papers to foresee the possibilities of moving pictures and at an early day inaugurated a department devoted to the photoplay houses. It might be said that at a time when other newspapers were a trifle too partial to their "legitimate" theater advertisers, the News was friendly to the moving picture house.

The guests at the luncheon included James A. Ettinge, business manager of the News-Record; Sam Harris, manager of the Majestic theater; Benjamin Rovin, manager of the Amuse-U theater; H. O. Shaw, manager of the Vaudette theater; W. W. Watts, proprietor of the Gaiety and Vaudette theaters; A. Edw. Kunz, manager of the Grand theater; Mrs. A. J. Marshall, manager of the Empress theater; J. David Stern, editor of the News-Record; Fred T. Wilhite, advertising manager of the News-Record; Clarence C. Cheadle, managing editor of the News-Record; Harry T. Loper, manager of the Lyric theater; Isadore Burnstein, of Burnstein & Sheperd, managers of the Capitol and Family Circle theaters; H. Warrington Wills, dramatic editor of the News-Record; H. A. Shapiro, manager of the Chatterton opera house.

No Censorship in Alton.

A censorship ordinance was introduced before the Alton (Ill.) city council, due to the recent appearance there of "The Birth of a Nation." The board would like to have a final decision on all classes of amusement. The aldermen declined to pass the measure.

Censors Out for Vaudeville Only.

Club women in Dixon want to censor vaudeville shows, but do not believe moving picture shows need any regulation by them.

Chris. Taylor Gives Kiddies a Treat.

An annual Thanksgiving benefaction of Chris Taylor, proprietor of Dreamland theater at Kewanee, Ill., was to feed fifty poor youngsters of the city at a local cafe, then have them as guests at the afternoon show.

Manager Proud of New Organ.

Manager J. J. Reilly of the Princess theater at Alton, Ill., used a whole page of newspaper space to tell what his new Seeburg pipe organ would mean to his photoplay patrons.

Cecil Rollins Building Fine Home.

Cecil Rollins is an exhibitor at Neponset and Sheffield. He is building a $10,000 country home midway between the towns and with the use of an automobile will be able to watch all his interests. The house will have a water supply and electric lights.

Chosen Illinois Items.

"Cabiria" was sponsored at the Princess theater in Canton by the Canton Register, which has undertaken to bring some of the big films to that city. This film was the Thanksgiving Day attraction at the opera house in Flora, where 35 cents admission was charged.

The film "Silver Threads Among the Gold" seems to find its way into the hearts of people as readily as the enduring song from which it was adapted. The return dates by request in Illinois are above the average for a feature film.

Military youths in Illinois like the moving pictures. Manager Savage of the Temple at Alton had a special matinee of Lyman H. Howe's films for the cadets and faculty of the Western Military Academy. The Illinois Naval Reserves at Moline saw "Neal of the Navy," as guests of the Grand theater in Moline.

Walter T. P. Goshorn, who pleaded guilty to stealing a motion picture machine from M. A. Law, proprietor of the Orpheum theater in Mt. Carroll, Ill., received an indeterminate term in the reform school at St. Charles.

D. C. McClellan, formerly a Pekin exhibitor, is now assisting in the management of the New Palace theater at Luverne, Minn.

An Exchange Man's Map

Kansas City Mutual Manager Has Scheme to Show at a Glance Business Condition in All Corners of His Territory—Grade of Towns Noted—Mutual Business in Each—Routes Taken by Films.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—F. L. Kiltz, manager of the local Mutual exchange, has at last worked out a device he has been studying for many years, in the shape of a map indicating the location of exhibitors in his territory, and the business of his exchange with them. It is already proving its usefulness though it has not yet been fully developed.

The territory involved includes eastern Kansas and western Missouri. Mr. Kiltz had his first job finding maps of the two states that would answer his purpose. These discovered, he pasted them on a board, and framed them, and hung the result on the wall behind his desk.

On this map every town containing a picture show is marked with a circle. The interior of the circle is colored differently, according to the classification of the town, by population and number of houses; for instance, the small towns showing only two nights a week are colored light green; the red towns have more than 4,000 people; blue and red towns show every night. Thus, Mr. Kiltz knows at a glance the location, and the material facts, about every town having a show, whether it uses his service or not.

The towns where exhibitors take Mutual service are marked with large-headed pins, cloth covered, the heads being of different colors. White pins indicate exhibitors on circuits, regular accounts. Yellow pins indicate commercial accounts. Black pins indicate Masterpicture accounts. It is probable that pins of yet another color will be used, perhaps pink, to indicate serial accounts.

At a glance, therefore, Mr. Kiltz can observe the number and distribution of the accounts, and their location. But the idea is carried even further into full efficiency. Threads are run from Kansas City along the circuits of the regular accounts, to show the routes taken by the pictures. These threads run, now, only to and among the white pins, the pins representing regular accounts. There is no need for threads for the yellow and the black pins, since the films for these accounts are usually sent direct from the exchange, and returned directly. But in case there should be any routing of these classes, threads of a different color would be used—yellow for commercial accounts, black for Masterpictures.

It is obvious that the course of the white threads among the white pins is a great source of time-saving in the discovery of routing of pictures, and in the working out of routes, to secure the greatest efficiency of the work.

A notable feature of this map and its operation is that no account is taken, no signs are recorded, concerning the business or the exhibitors of competitors. In the use of a former map, Mr. Kiltz had indicated by different colored pins, the accounts of two or three of the leading companies. Now, however, he is considering the business as a problem only between his exchange and the exhibitor, and he eliminates any notion of trying to get business from somebody else, or of worrying about the increase in the other fellow's accounts.

The map has proved a valuable aid to the traveling men, and to others connected with the exchange. Everybody studies it, and contributes the information necessary to perfecting its use.

CHAMPIONS MOVING PICTURES.

Clair M. Patee, of Lawrence, Kan., the Stormy Petrel of the Censorship Service, unregrettable and unafraid, grinds his Gatling gun of vituperation and deadly invective without tiring and, to change and mix the metaphor yet again, pours the flood of his eloquence in an avalanche of vocabulary on the nub of the question. He has written many letters anent censorship and some of them have been replied to quite warmly. A recent response of his was published in the Daily Gazette of Lawrence, Kan., and it took nearly a full page, some of it in small type at that. The title of the letter is "The Censorship Bug," "which," he says, "has deposited its eggs of discord (presumptuous and unnecessary regulations) into the nest of nearly every industry and household of Kansas, and as Secretary of State J. T. Botkin says, 'It is regulation from the cradle to the grave.'" The letter strikes many responsive chords in Kansas, in many lines of business besides that of exhibiting moving pictures.

A LITTLE PICTURE WAR IN CLYDE, KANSAS.

Exhibitor L. W. Bloom Gives the Other Side of the Story.

To The Moving Picture World:

In your issue of November 13th, page 1342, an article headed "A Little Picture Show War in Clyde, Kan.," made statements that are misleading. Although the affair is small, yet you have given space to one side only, and as you know that there are always two sides to any question I would like to also volunteer a little information in order to keep the record straight. In the first place, I opened the show at Clyde by invitation from a large number of the leading citizens who wanted something else besides "junk" pictures. They had not been given a feature for several years, and as I could not get a building, I rented a tent. I gave them the same features which were run at Concordia, something that no other town its size in Kansas was getting. Then the rains fell, the floods came and we got to show about two nights per week. Before this, however, the other show, which the writer of the article failed to mention, was about broke, with the bank holding a mortgage.

I went to them and made them a fair offer, which would let them out financially. In the meantime a few others figured that they could squeeze Johnson out, which they did, and then came to me and make me buy and "clean up." Their "forced" price at first was $1,400 for no business and a show that would not invoice $250; their second offer was $1,200, and after they saw that I was not there to be robbed they began to seek ways and means of bolstering up their show. It should be explained here that the Collins & Johnson mentioned were the original owners of the show until the local syndicate forced Johnson out. As soon as the great trust secured possession for $600 they had an article published in a local paper telling how they were "home boys, making their money in Cylde and spending it there, and how I proposed taking all the money out of town and how mean I had been in trying to break up the fine show there," but, mind you, in twenty minutes after the sale of the show to them, regardless of their boosting "home products," they had sent no less than two envoys to me offering to sell as above. It did not work, and the general public know nothing of the underhanded means used. I simply went ahead and sawed wood. If money was lost or the show closed down, it was my business, and I dare say that, although the air dome had the bulk of the crowds until September, when a storm blew it down, yet no money was made in Clyde this summer by any one in the show business. After September I had nothing to do with the show, and even yet some of the boys there have secured a heavy winter tent and give productions.

During all the time I was in Clyde I never made a fight on the other show and simply gave the people Paramount, Pathe and Fox features and General film program. The attendance showed that the citizens of the community wanted good stuff and of course this forced the other show to bolster up their program and spend a lot of money getting a good program, and I am pleased to say that a new standard has been set in Clyde for pictures and if the Wonderland would still continue in business this standard will have to be upheld, else some one will enter there who will—in fact, it is believed that a new picture play house instead of a barn effect will be given Clyde before next summer rolls around. I entered the show business at Clyde to make money and not fuss like a child. It is purely a money proposition with me any place, and if it don't pay, there won't be any show. The above statements can be submitted to any citizen at Clyde not interested in the show business and they will be found to be correct as to the conditions on both sides, and in justice to myself and to Bert Auten, who was mentioned in the tirade of the 13th, I ask the same publicity. L. W. BLOOM.

CENSOR HAS EXHIBITOR FINED.

Atchison Manager Shows Film Not Yet Passed and Pays Fine.

Atchison, Kan.—The first prosecution in Kansas of an exhibitor charged with showing an uncensored film, was that of Herbert Welsh, at Atchison. The Rev. Festus Foster filed the information against Mr. Welsh, and the county attorney conducted the prosecution. He was found guilty, and was fined $25. Mr. Welsh was charged with showing "The Enemy of the Stork's Nest" before it had been censored. He claimed that he presumed it had passed the board. There wasn't much of a trial about the proceedings, though—Mr. Welsh admitted, in response to questions, that he had shown it, and Mr. Foster testified that the picture had not appeared before the board. Mr. Foster added that the picture probably would be passed if shown; but technically he insisted that Mr. Welsh was guilty of violating the law.

NEW ASSOCIATION SLIDES.

The Amusement Association of Kansas is sending to each member this week, a slide which indicates the purposes and position of the association. It is a dignified presentation of the business of moving pictures, and should enhance greatly the favor of the exhibitors who are associated in the organization. At the top of the slide is the reproduction of the design of the organization, a sunflower containing the title. Below are the words:

THIS THEATER IS A MEMBER OF THE AMUSEMENT ASSOCIATION OF KANSAS.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES:

This association stands pledged and committed to a constant effort to improve and elevate the business of public amusement, to improve and upbuild the quality of public exhibitions given by the membership, and the places in which they are held or given.

Mutual Officials Visit.

J. J. Rotchford, special representative of Mutual Film, was in Kansas City last week on his way to the Coast. C. Paulson, auditor, arrived in Kansas City about the same time, after a route including Canada; he expects to be in New York for the holidays.

ST. LOUIS NEWS LETTER.

By A. H. Giebler, St. Louis Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Garrick Now Permanent Picture House.

THE Garrick theater, Sixth and Chestnut, was formally opened as an all-moving picture house on Sunday, November 28. The theater is under the management of the Cincinnati Amusement Company, who have taken an eight-year lease on the property. The syndicate controls four theaters in Pittsburgh, Pa., four in Cincinnati, and one in Denver, in addition to the St. Louis house. W. F. Jackson, who came on here from Cincinnati as manager of the Garrick, says he has been working day and night since his arrival attending to the innumerable details necessary in opening a big house like the Garrick. Mr. Jackson is a well-known theatrical man, who has lately cast his fortunes with moving pictures. He has had years of experience in managing legitimate houses. The Garrick was opened in 1904 with Chas. Richman and Ada Rehan in Shakespeare repertoire, but of late has played many motion picture feature programs.

Minusa Screen Business Good.

E. R. Anderson, of the Minusa Cine Products Company, says that all indications point to a revival of business for the coming fall and winter. The order books of the company show an unusually large amount of equipment shipped to theaters in all parts of the country in the last few weeks. Among some of the theaters to which new Minusa screens were shipped recently were the Strand, Marshallton, Ia.; the Coliseum, Seattle, Wash.; Sunbeam, Cleveland, Ohio; City Theater, Newark, N. J.; Odeon and Strand, Farrell, Pa.; New Fenway, Boston, Mass.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; Carson and Mack theaters, Jonesboro, Ark.; and the Temple theater, Toledo, Ohio. One order coming through the Picture Theater Equipment Co. of New York called for three screens for the biggest theaters in Hamilton, Ont., the Empire, the Queen and the Strand. Another order came from the Board of Health of Rosebud, Tex., for a screen that will be used for educational purposes. Another order came from Mr. Egbert O. Gregory, who is cashier of the National Bank of Edwards, N. Y., as well as a prominent motion picture exhibitor. The Minusa Cine Products have added to their office force, and otherwise show a healthy growth. Mr. Nat I. Brown, sales manager of the company, is absent on a business trip to Chicago in the interest of the corporation.

American Theater Sold.

John Michael, who has been operating the American theater at Twelfth and Barton streets, sold the property last week to John F. Brinkmeyer, who will open the theater again as soon as he has made some improvements on the place. The American was built about five years ago, and seats 700 persons. In the rear of the building is an electricity generating plant, and the auditorium has a width of 45 feet, with no posts intervening. Mr. Brinkmeyer paid about $20,000 for the property, and took a lease on an airdome adjoining the theater, which seats 1,200 persons, and has a very large and practical stage. Mr. Michael states that he is retiring from the picture business.

C. A. Maberry Opens the Delmar.

The Delmar theater, at Delmar and Kingshighway, opened on November 24th with an exclusive feature program, under the management of C. A. Maberry, who was in charge two years ago, when the house first opened. Since that time the theater has been under different managers, and last week was sold to Benjamin P. Stromberg, who has placed Mr. Maberry again in control of the place. The program is to be changed four times a week, with continuous performance on Sunday from 2 to 11 p. m.

Theater War Ends

Combination of Five Theaters in Indiana Harbor Closes a White Heat Show War That Has Cost Plenty of Money—Raise in Prices and Fewer Reels Now—A Businesslike Management and Policy.

Special to Moving Picture World from Indiana Trade News Service.

INDIANA HARBOR, IND.—The theater war in Indiana Harbor, where five picture and vaudeville houses, each within a stone's throw of the other, have fought for existence, was ended when all interests were merged into the hands of a combine, through the deal just closed. Julius Nassau, A. Engel and Nick Doicha purchased the Pictureland, Family, Liberty, Gem and Columbia theaters and will close all but two—the Family and the Columbia.

Paul Bumanovich of the Pictureland, A. Berkson of the Family, L. W. Sarica of the Liberty, Nick Doicha of the Gem, and the Rinpinger Brothers, of the Columbia, are the managers in the new deal. All of them have retired but Doicha, who entered the merger with Nassau and Engel.

Instead of seven reels for five cents, the public is now to pay ten and fifteen cents for its amusement. Vaudeville, which flourished at three of the houses, is to be discontinued. In other words, the business is to be placed on a paying basis.

The war, which has been at white heat for more than two months, is figured to have cost each of the five managers an average of $100.00 a week. They were giving patrons more and charging less than any theater in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS REGENT OPENS.

More Than 8,000 Visit the New Picture Theater on First Day.

The Regent theater opened to an attendance of more than 8,000 on the first day in Indianapolis. The house is owned by Bingham, Crose & Cohen. The newcomers were delighted with the interior design and decorations. The auditorium is lighted by indirect lighting fixtures, with white bowls suspended from the ceiling by chains. The auditorium is in tiffany effect with mahogany woodwork and seating throughout.

Special attention has been given to the lights and to the picture screen, which was designed to prevent the feeling of the spectator that the picture was framed in. Lights are placed behind the glass plates in the floor to mark the aisles when the lights are off and to serve as a guide for those who enter and leave while the pictures are being shown. The building is a brick, steel and reinforced concrete and fireproof throughout.

The house will be opened daily at ten A. M. and continue until 11 P. M. There are only a few houses in Indianapolis that are opened before noon.

CIRCLE THEATER DIRECTORS.

The Circle Theater articles of incorporation have been filed. The Indianapolis house is to seat 3,000. The capital stock is given as $25,000. The officers and directors are A. L. Block, president; Robert Lieber, vice-president; Ralph S. Norwood, secretary; Meyer Efroymson, treasurer; Morris Cohn, Denver; Colonel Albert J. Gillingham, Detroit; Isadore Feibleman, Indianapolis; A. L. Strauss and P. C. Rubush. A. J. Gilligham is owner of several large houses in Detroit and Grand Rapids.

NEW HOUSES IN MISHAWAKA.

Mishawaka, Indiana.—O. J. Lembrotte, of Crawfordsville, Ind., has taken a five-year lease of the old post office corner at Mishawaka, Ind. Mr. Lembrotte is the owner of a picture theater in Crawfordsville and expects to turn the old post office building into an up-to-date house with a seating capacity of 500 or more, modeled after the La Salle theater of South Bend. The house will include a balcony with a seating capacity of 200. It is the intention of Mr. Lembrotte to run only first-class pictures, at an admission of ten cents.

ENCROACHED ON STREET.

Dr. T. Armfield, who is building a new theater in Elwood, Ind., has been notified by the city authorities that the front extended 15 inches on to the city property. It was found that a number of other buildings on the street extended an equal distance on the city property and Dr. Armfield has proceeded with his work and has notified the city that if any steps are taken to stop him, he will file against the owners of every other building on the street that now extends over the city property line.

I. W. McMahan Started in Indiana.

I. W. McMahan, who with another Cincinnati man has just finished the Forest theater at Avondale, Ohio, at a cost of $60,000, is remembered in Lawrenceburg, Ind., as the first man to make a moving picture exhibition in that town. Mr. McMahan early moved to Cincinnati, where he has made a splendid success with the moving picture business.

New Gem Theater Company.

The Gem Theater Company, Indiana Harbor, capital $10,000, has been incorporated. The directors are Julius Nassau, N. T. Doicha and A. I. Engel.

Indiana Theater Changes and Business Items.

James E. Hankins and James E. Stewart have bought the theater at English, Ind., from N. E. Gobbel and Guy Longest.

John Day of Muncie, Ind., has leased the New Irvin theater, Winchester, Ind. The name has been changed to the Orpheum. Paramount pictures will be shown Monday and Thursday each week.

Charles Cummins has bought the Imp theater at Terre Haute from Arthur Collins and will re-open it under the name of the Palm theater. The interior of the house is being remodeled and redecorated and a new screen is being added. Once a week there will be a special feature film without any increase in price.

The Majestic theater, La Grange, Ind., is now charging ten cents for features.

Dana Hoch of Mulberry has bought 200 new chairs for his theater.

After showing "A Midnight Elopement" for one week, Manager Galligan of the Nelson theater at Logansport, Ind., received so many requests to show it again that the film will be repeated as a part of the Wednesday program until it is apparent people have lost interest in it.

Miss Addie Spangle will operate the new $5,000 pipe organ being installed at the Jefferson theater at Goshen, Ind.

The Lyric theater of Aurora, Ind., has turned over the house in the mornings to the Mothers' Club of Aurora, which is making an exhibit of cotton and silk quilts. This quilt show is a prize contest.

The New Lyric theater at Vevay, Ind., is giving a Saturday afternoon matinee from 2 to 4:30 for the special benefit of farmers who cannot be in town at night. The innovation is catching on.

Manager H. H. Hornbeck of the New Majestic theater, Monticello, Ind., is in receipt of a letter which he prizes very highly. It is signed a "Bunch of Enthusiastic Picture Lovers," and hasn't a knock in it from start to finish. In fact, every line is a boost.

Kenneth Piper, proprietor of the Tokio, Flora, Ind., has changed the policy of his house and is now using regular service exclusively, after having tried features. Flora, he says, does not want features.

Spokane Managers Agree to a Raise

Four Five-Cent Houses Sign Agreement to Charge Ten Cents on Sundays and Holidays—Lyric, Unique, Rex, Majestic, and Best Affected.

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokane Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Managers of the four five-cent moving picture houses of the city signed an agreement during the week to charge 10 cents admission on Sundays and holidays and announce that this is being done as a stepping stone with a view to making the regular admission 10 cents continuously. The theaters participating are Lyric, Unique, Rex, Majestic and Best. They report that the Gem will also join forces, but it is an outlying picture house that does not affect the downtown business and might be considered a neighborhood or suburban picture show.

"We are obliged to make the raise in price," said J. W. Allender, "because of the increased cost of film service so that we can get a fair profit that will justify continuing business."

TRIANGLE FILMS COME.

Liberty Theater Asks 10 and 15 Cents, With Boxes at 25 and 30 Cents.

Spokane, Wash.—On Sunday, Nov. 21, the new Triangle pictures were presented, for the first time, in Spokane at the Liberty theater. The bill for the first three days of the week was "The Iron Strain" and "A Game Old Knight," while the last four days of the week were given to the presentation of "The Lamb" and "My Valet."

Double interest was manifested in the theater not only due to the change of film service, but also to the fact that Frank T. Bailey, who has been associated with the management of the Liberty theater for several months, has withdrawn from active connection with it, and will confine his activities to the management of the American theater in Butte, Mont. Ralph Ruffner assumed full control as manager of the local theater. Mr. Bailey retains his interests in the Liberty Amusement Company, which built the Liberty. The American, in Butte, is operated by the Montana Amusement Company, of which Mr. Bailey is general manager.

The new Triangle films proved an instantaneous hit at the Liberty and people were turned away Thanksgiving Day, according to Manager Ralph Ruffner, who announced that new house records are being set by these pictures.

Special house lighting effects were supplied by Manager Ruffner. Two Japanese maidens stepped in front of the plush curtains and struck Chinese gongs three times to announce the beginning of the program. The house grows dark, the curtains brush aside and the Triangle pictures are before the spectator.

The pictures were shown to Spokane spectators at only a slight change in the former Liberty prices. The matinee prices were increased from 10 cents to 15 cents for adults and the evening prices remained at 15 cents.

This meant only an increase of five cents on the matinee prices. The price for children remains at five cents and box seats were increased from 25 to 30 cents.

NEW COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS IN SPOKANE.

Edward W. Stutes, Outlines Censorship During Short Term.

Edward W. Stutes, of Spokane, Wash., recently elected short term commissioner by virtue of his succession to the chair of public affairs at the city hall, becomes the new watch-dog of Spokane's theatrical morals. He has just stepped into the shoes of Samuel Glasgow as official censor of all that is thrown upon the alabaster sheet or enacted in the footlights' glare.

Mr. Stutes prefaced his entrance into the shoes of arbiter with a statement that no alteration in censorial administration would be made during his incumbency. As for what may happen after the holidays, when Mr. Stutes in turn will yield to a commissioner yet undesignated, there is no way to guess.

The ruling of the national board of censorship have been the deciding element in all film difficulties during the Glasgow regime. This practice Mr. Stutes announces himself as prepared to continue.

The decision is of particular interest right now because of the presence among current releases of a number of films calculated to cause censorial sleepless nights. Probably the most important of them is the Thanhauser feature, "Inspiration," in which Audrey Munson, Panama-Pacific model, has been photographed without the slightest trace of clothing. This film, it has been announced, the national board has passed without a murmur. It is to be shown at the Class A.

THANKSGIVING WEEK PROGRAMS.

Spokane's picture houses were crowded to their capacity on Thanksgiving day when the different managers arranged special programs for their patrons, and after 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon standing room was at a premium at practically all the first-class theaters.

Marguerite Clark, in "Still Waters," and the Wallingford pictures filled the Clemmer theater all day.

Manager Lee S. Forbes reports that Geraldine O'Brien, in "His Wife," kept the Class A filled from 3.30 until closing time and many were unable to secure admission.

Charley Chaplin, in "Work," was enough to kep the Hippodrome filled without a holiday, and crowded houses were in evidence at night.

The Rex theater presented a new program, "The College Orphans," featuring Carter de Haven and Gloria Fonda, the Seattle film beauty, and played to good houses throughout the day.

Nance O'Neill, who appeared in "A Woman's Past" at the Casino theater, drew good houses, according to Manager Will T. Reed. At 9.30 at night people were still waiting for seats.

Chosen Short Items of Interest.

The Orpheum Photoplay Company of Couer d'Alene, Idaho, which is owned and managed by W. J. Makne and George Sutherland, has started with a portable outfit on a circuit taking in the country towns where it does not pay to run a moving picture show continuously.

Joseph P. Cotter, half owner of the Orpheum and the New Grand theaters, Baker, Oregon, spent several days in Spokane on business. He said: "Business has been good with us and especially so since about the first of August. We are now using the Paramount program at the Orpheum and the Metro pictures at the New Grand."

Because of the ingenuity he displayed in the design and construction of a motion picture camera, built while he was employed as a motion picture operator in a Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, theater, Friend F. Baker, a Spokane boy, is now employed by the Thomas Ince Production company at Santa Monica, Cal., as one of their high salaried motion picture photographers.

TRADE NOTES IN TEXAS.

The Peerless Feature Film Company of Dallas has discontinued business, the Alliance Company purchasing their stock of films, paper, etc. Manager H. T. Peebles, of the Peerless company, is now in the employ of the Mutual in the Houston-San Antonio territory.

The Mutual Dallas office is receiving a coat of paint outside and in and will soon put on a brighter appearance. The World representative had a little trouble threading his way among the "Fresh Paint" signs, but as no "whitewash" appeared, he presumes none is needed.

According to a letter received by the Alliance offices, the Orpheum, Enid, Okla., has passed from the management of Cummings & McNeill to Leeka & Leeka.

W. A. Jones, Isabel, Okla., is installing one of the latest 1916 model Motiographs, purchased from H. K. Barnett, Dallas.

Pocahontas, Ark., will have a new moving picture theater, work being now in progress. L. F. Boyett is the owner.

The Lyric, a 5-cent house at Hot Springs, Ark., closed its doors this week on account of poor business.

New Dallas Censor Law

Ordinance Recently Passed Provides for Censorship of All Amusement Resorts—Gives Liberal Authority to Primary Board and Permits Appeals from Its Decisions to a Higher Board.

By S. M. Harrison, Dallas Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

DALLAS, TEXAS.—The city council at Dallas recently passed a censorship law that provides an entirely new method of dealing with all forms of public amusement.

Under the new law two or more censors are provided for, to be paid by the city. They will have liberal authority, but there will be a board of appeal consisting of seven persons, who will review decisions when requested to.

Although the ordinance legally went into effect some time ago, it is not actually in effect as the appointments of censors and appeal board have not been made. These are expected in the near future, being at present held up by the serious illness of a member of the council who was instrumental in the passage of the law.

Covers Commercialized Amusements.

The law covers all forms of "commercialized amusements" and will include legitimate theaters, vaudeville, dance halls, etc., as well as the moving picture exhibitions. It defines "commercialized amusements" as "all places and forms of amusement which are . . . for the purpose of profit."

Clauses in the law provide for the sanitary condition of buildings, safety, and general morale. Regular inspections are to be made and a general supervision had by the censors. Some notice is taken of the kind of patrons admitted, but it is presumed this will apply more to dances and cabarets.

The censor is required to give prompt approval or disapproval of any proposed performance, it not being necessary for him to have an actual view of the same. His decision is expected to be based on former reputation of the exhibition, advance notices or anything else that may bear on it. If he turns it down and appeal is taken the appeal board must view and pass on the protested performance within twenty-four hours and their decision is final.

Section seven of the ordinance is the only one which applies solely to moving picture exhibitions and it defines what shall not be shown, what is to be considered objectionable and how cuts may be allowed. The censor is permitted to prohibit the showing of any picture that "is calculated to corrupt the morals of youth, or is indecent, low, vulgar, or calculated to promote racial prejudice, or create disorder, or is reasonably calculated to cause a disturbance of the peace."

A censor may permit the showing of a picture of which he is doubtful, reserving his decision until after he has seen it. Also the board of appeals will, if possible, view the picture in advance, so as to cause as little delay as possible.

Twenty-four Hour Clause Criticised.

The twenty-four hour clause is the only one so far that is causing any dissatisfaction, and it seems to be likely to hit the exchange more than the exhibitor. Where a picture is booked for a run of several days or weeks this will make little difference, but where bookings are one-day affairs, the bearing will be great. If a picture is booked first-run and turned down by the censor, before an appeal can be taken and settled the picture will be miles away for its "second" and Mr. Exchangeman has lost the "first" entirely.

As a whole, however, the new law seems to be a reasonably good one, and if no graft creeps in, the censorship will work out to the advantage of all concerned, so far as local censorship can be of advantage. It is hardly likely that it will be long after the appointments are made before a test is had and that will be the best foundation for a final judgment.

WORLD MANAGERSHIP CHANGES

L. C. McHenry Succeeds W. M. Byrd as Head of the Texas Office.

A change has been made in the managership of the Texas offices of the World Film Corporation at Dallas, L. C. McHenry taking charge of this district, vice Wm. M. Byrd, resigned. The change was really decided upon and the transfer started in September, but was not officially effective until November 1, subsequent to a trip made to the general offices at New York by Mr. McHenry. He also visited the Chicago offices while away.

Mr. McHenry is an experienced film man, having been at the business for a number of years. His most recent work previous to this appointment was as traveler for the World organization in this district. Prior to that he carried "Cabiria" over Texas for the Raver interests. Mr. McHenry is a young man with a pleasing personality, with plenty of the "pep" necessary for the prosecution of his work here.

The Texas district of the World company now includes southern Oklahoma.

NEW HEAD FOR FOX IN TEXAS.

W. M. Byrd Takes Charge—Will Move to Larger Quarters.

W. M. Byrd, formerly manager of the World Film Corporation's Dallas office, has taken charge of the Fox interests in the same district. Messrs. S. G. Sladden and Sam Dembow of the general offices have been here for some time, reorganizing and renovating the local force, and upon their departure left Mr. Byrd as the Fox representative for the Southwest.

Mr. Byrd is well known to the film interests of this section, having held several responsible positions in the trade, and enjoying the reputation of being one of the good ones.

The Fox offices will move about December 10 to new quarters at 1907 Commerce street, where a large store building is being reconstructed for their occupancy. The new quarters will be large and elegant, quite in keeping with the Fox requirements.

ADVERTISING STUNTS.

The Amusu theater at Pine Bluff, Ark., advertised "Neal of the Navy" by parading the streets with a very clever battleship propelled by automobile power.

The Old Mill, Dallas, Tex., has inaugurated a special children's matinee for each Saturday, and although only a few weeks old, Miss Whitehead of the publicity department of the Hulsey Company, is authority for the statement that it promises splendid results. Chaperones are provided and such pictures as "Rumpelstiltskin" are run.

T. W. Plattenburg, of the Hippodrome, was host Thanksgiving morning at a special matinee of "The Battle Cry of Peace." His guests were the G. A. R., Confederate Veterans, Spanish War Veterans, High School Cadets, Boy Scouts, National Guard and other military and patriotic organizations. Something over a thousand turned out.

Battery A, Field Artillery, Texas National Guard, has two three-inch field pieces stationed in front of the Hippodrome, Dallas, during the showing of "The Battle Cry of Peace." The guns are attracting a good deal of attention, and members of the battery are ready to exhibit them at all times to the interested.

Film Row Grows

San Francisco Musical Instrument Company Moves in Among the Exchanges—Large Exhibiting Room for Convenience of All the Trade—Films Run to Music Acompaniment—Co-operation That Will Help Business.

By T. A. Church, San Francisco Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The American Photo Player Sales Company, for several years located at 130 Kearny street, San Francisco, has leased the entire upper floor of the Film Exchange building at Golden Gate avenue and Jones street, and will occupy the new quarters as soon as the necessary alterations and improvements can be made, which will probably be about the first of February. This concern, which devotes its attention almost exclusively to the manufacture of high-grade musical instruments for use in moving picture houses, is planning a number of interesting innovations for its new showrooms and its removal to Film Row is causing general satisfaction among exchange men.

One of the most interesting features in the new quarters is to be a model exhibiting room which will be open to all exchanges for the display of films. This will be of large size, with a throw of fifty-three feet, and will be handsomely furnished. Two instruments will be installed here, a large one and a small one, and when films are displayed to exhibitors fitting music will be rendered. For this service there will be no charge, the only expense to exchanges being those connected with the showing of the pictures. The manufacturing company expects to benefit materially by moving to the film exchange district and exchange men express the belief that they will also be benefited through being enabled to show their pictures under such advantageous conditions. The space taken over by the American Photo Player Sales Company covers more than 18,000 square feet, enabling it to make much more of a showing than is possible in the present quarters.

MOVCA FILM PRODUCER TO VISIT NEW YORK.

S. J. Sanguineti to Establish Branch Movca Office in the East.

S. J. Sanguineti, general manager of the Movca Film Service of San Francisco, will be in New York early in December to establish permanent headquarters for the sale of state rights, and also to arrange for the release of the moving cartoon productions in and around that city. He states that the reception by California audiences of the cartoon films made by this concern has been very flattering and this has caused the firm to make preparations to introduce the productions to Broadway.

The drawings are from the pens of H. M. Shields and J. C. Terry, prominent newspaper cartoonists, and they are seen at their best in this work. Twenty subjects have already been produced, which range from fanciful tales like the "Rooster's Nightmare" to pure caricature reels typified in "Charlie's Busted Romance."

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" CREATES A DEEP IMPRESSION.

The presentation of the "Battle Cry of Peace," at the Columbia theater, San Francisco's finest playhouse, under the supervision of the management of the Portola theater, is a distinct credit to the moving picture industry and has attracted unusual interest here. An especially attractive feature is the three-piece prologue stage set, made possible by the extensive stage facilities of this theater.

The first of these shows the horrors of war, the scene being a country town destroyed by shells. The scene is shown under a gray light, with passing clouds, lighting into day and again fading into night, followed by a fade-in scene of New York harbor with the Statue of Liberty and another of the American flag.

The program of musical numbers interpreted by Director Cellarious and twenty picked musicians is probably the most ambitious attempt along this line ever offered here, the musical score having been arranged by S. L. Rothapfel of New York.

The production is being shown to capacity houses and Mr. Roth of the Portola is now receiving many inquiries for bookings from outside cities. He will leave shortly for Los Angeles to arrange for an extended run in that city.

CRONE MAKES FLYING VISIT.

J. R. Crone, until recently manager of the San Francisco branch of the Mutual Film, but who is now in the producing end of the business at Los Angeles, was here for the Thanksgiving holidays, and after a short stay left for the Southern city by automobile.

"CLANSMAN" ENDS LONG RUN.

The engagement of the "Clansman" at the Savoy has been brought to a close, after a run of thirty weeks, which is a record for this territory. The last week was a very successful one, and the engagement could doubtless have been extended to advantage, but the production is now being booked for outside territory.

SUPPLY FIRM BRANCHES OUT.

G. A. Metcalfe, who conducts a large supply business on Golden Gate avenue, has returned from a visit to Los Angeles, where a location for a branch establishment was selected at 728 South Olive street. Fixtures have been installed and a stock will be sent there at an early date. The theater chair line of the Wisconsin Seating Company has been taken over by this house and the samples now on display at the Exposition will be moved to the local headquarters at the close of the fair.

San Francisco Brief Notes.

Marion H. Kohn, formerly engaged in the film exchange business in this city, is here from New York for a short visit on business and pleasure.

A. W. Goff, district manager for the V-L-S-E, Inc., is making a visit to the Los Angeles branch.

The Ocean View theater, formerly conducted by V. Preston, has been sold to F. Kuitzig, one of the pioneer exhibitors of the city.

E. J. Lipson, formerly of this city, but recently of Seattle, was here this week and has since departed for Los Angeles, where he is to have charge of the exchange to be opened by the Metro.

William Benard, for some time with the Fox Film, has accepted a position as road man for Metro out of this city.

John Ratto, an exhibitor of Jackson, Cal., was here this week to visit the Exposition before its close and to look over late releases.

C. H. Mehrten, treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California, made a short trip recently to his former home in Tulare county, the great circus center.

The Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., has inaugurated a new series of releases consisting of scenic, educational and comedy subjects, two being put out each week. This concern has placed M. Jacobson on the road and this booker is making his initial trip to Eureka and Northern California.

H. Blumenthal, of this city, has left for South America, with a large collection of film, including "Ambition" and several round-up pictures.

K. Kanagawa, of the Fiji theater, Stockton, Cal., was a recent visitor here and made extensive bookings.

The Crystal theater at 515 Cortland avenue has been opened by Laurelle & Hadley. A Power's Cameragraph No. 6A was installed here by Walter Preddey.

The York theater at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets has been refitted and is again being operated.

Extensive alterations are being made in the Electric theater at Church and Market streets, one of the oldest moving picture houses in the city.

Carl Schorr, a recent arrival from New York, is now manager of the road department for M. Calmy, 158 Eddy street.

H. E. Aitken, of the Triangle Film, arrived here this week and is looking over the local situation in company with C. Mell. Simmons, the manager in this territory.

California News.

The Novelty theater at Napa, Cal., has been re-opened by Fred Hater, formerly of Hanford.

The Central theater at Oakland, Cal., has been opened again under the management of G. G. Williams.

A new moving picture house has been opened at Raymond, Cal., by W. West. A Motiograph projection machine has been installed.

Shoemaker & Galindo have installed a Power's Cameragraph No. 6A in the Star theater at Elmhurst, Cal.

The new West End theater at Santa Ana, Cal., has installed a fine Photo Player, made by the American Photo Player Company of Berkeley, Cal., and this is operated part of the time by the nine-year-old daughter of the manager of the house, Miss Lois Schlessinger. Although without previous experience, this youthful operator is already a skilled performer.

Oliver Snyder has opened the Idle Hour theater at Woodlake, Cal., a new town in Tulare county.

The Globe theater at Petaluma, Cal., has been closed by Cortz & Landree, after having been conducted by them for three months.

The interests of Lester Foster and George Bilby in the Princess theater at Oak Park, Cal., have been taken over by Mrs. C. Siebert.

Permission has been given Webber & Marot to open a moving picture house at Pacific Grove, Cal.

W. E. Knotts, of the local office of the World Film Corporation, took charge of the Los Angeles branch, following his return from the Chicago meeting, and D. Palmer is looking after the Western division. This concern is enjoying a very heavy increase in business, and Manager Ralph Clark is very enthusiastic over the outlook, since looking over some of the coming releases.

H. J. Gosliner of the Edison theater has returned from a short vacation trip to Byron Hot Springs, feeling much better for the respite from business.

The Glen Odeon theater, at Glen Park, is being turned around, remodeled and renovated throughout by its owner, Edw. Evers. It will be opened again at an early date.

J. B. Houston of Klamath Falls, Ore., who has a circuit of seven houses, was recently here to visit the Exposition.

Sid Grauman, manager of the Empress theater, has completed plans for making this house the great white spot in the amusement district. The entire front will be lined with high power lamps and two twenty-four sheet stands will be erected on the roof for the display of Fox advertising matter. Two hundred twenty-four-sheet posters are now out to advertise Nance O'Neil, a former San Francisco girl, who is to appear in moving pictures shortly at the Empress.

A large moving picture theater is being erected at Anaheim, Cal., by John Cassou.

J. A. Trowbridge has taken over the management of the People's theater at Martinez, Cal.

The Hayward theater at Hayward, Cal., is now being conducted under the management of B. Busby.

K. K. Kay has purchased an interest in the Pastime theater at Eureka, Cal.

NOTES ALONG PUGET SOUND.

F. M. Simonton, Standard Feature Film Company, of Portland, returned recently from Seattle where he reports the proposed exchange license fee has been cut from $1,000 to $100, but even that does not meet with the exchange men's approval.

Tacoma, Wash., proposes a censorship ordinance which will require the film men to pay 50 cents for each reel viewed. Exhibitors and exchange men held a meeting on the subject on Nov. 16. At that time it was agred to raise the price of admission to 15 cents in former 10 cent houses and 10 cents in former 5 cent houses, these prices to be in effect at matinees as well as at night. Every house in the city except one joined in the raise.

Theater Notes from Albany.

Three weeks of continual rain had about demoralized the picture business in Albany, Oregon, reports a road man recently from there, when a troupe of traveling Evangelists came to town in a chapel car and put the finishing touches on the job. There were eight or ten ministers in the troupe who managed to make things interesting in the Albany churches and kept the people away from the show houses.

The Globe, Rolfe and Hub theaters have entered into a working agreement respecting matinees whereby only one house gives a matinee each day in the order named, the other two remaining closed in turn.

Theaters Remodeled.

The Sunset theater, Astoria, Oregon, H. J. Cummings, owner, has completed extensive alterations on the front of the house and it now has the appearance of a big town theater. A marquee has been constructed across the front of the house and a new electric sign has been hung.

The Grand theater, Oregon City, Oregon, Charles Schram, owner, has also been remodelled to give the front an up-to-date appearance. The Grand is the only house in town charging 15 cents, and did S. R. O. business on Nov. 18 with "The Spoilers," in spite of the fact that the picture had shown in the theater twice before.

Temple Theater Grows Wise.

The Temple theater, after a disastrous try at showing a mixed program of vaudeville and pictures, has gone back to straight pictures.

Film Men Win Point

Portland, Oregon, Chamber of Commerce Committee Listens to Both Sides of Censorship Question—Film Men Declare Censorship Hurts Business—Commercial Body Recommends Appeal Ordinance.

By Abraham Nelson, Portland Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

PORTLAND, Oregon: After waiting nearly three months to be heard before the Chamber of Commerce on the censorship question, as the film men in Portland are compelled to meet it, a delegation representing the theaters and exchanges of the city called upon the executive committee of the board of governors of the Chamber of Commerce and were given a hearing before that body on November 23. The primary purpose of the organization and the existence of the Chamber of Commerce is to foster new industries and to enlarge those already in the city and with this purpose in mind the film men were given a chance to explain to the committee how any censorship and particularly censorship of motion pictures as the Portland municipal ordinance permits it to be exercised is detrimental to the growth of amusement and film marketing enterprises in the city.

D. Solis Cohen spoke in behalf of the film men and William H. Warren, secretary to Mayor Albee, and F. T. Richards, the new member of the censor board, defended the ordinance.

From his own personal viewpoint, Mr. Cohen said, he considered any censorship un-American, but his plea in behalf of the film men before the committee was merely for an appeal ordinance.

Arbitrary Censors and Business.

"An industry that disburses over $5,000 per week to workers in the city and a grand total of over a million dollars a year in wages, taxes, overhead expenses and which represents an investment in Portland of over two million dollars, has a right to call on the Chamber of Commerce when a small dilettante clique is given the opportunity to exercise arbitrary power by virtue of a city ordinance from which there can be no appeal," declared Mr. Cohen.

He accredited the fact that three large film marketing concerns had passed Portland by in favor of Seattle to Portland's no-appeal ordinance and intimated that the treatment accorded the film industry in Portland might have had something to do with making Portland only a branch distributing point for every film marketing concern that does business on the Pacific Coast except one. "Portland," said Mr. Cohen, "is made the tail of Seattle's kite in the film business."

Mr. Cohen pointed out that Portland is in bad with the National Board because the local censors continually decry its work; that it is in bad with the producers by reason of the no-appeal ordinance and that it is in bad with the directors who object to having the results of their genius subjected to eliminations and condemnations. He showed that Portland is the only city in the state where the first class rental rate for films could be demanded and that if films were arbitrarily held up in Portland they could not be sent to any other city in the state except at a great loss in rentals which the producers did not wish to chance and were requiring bonds from exhibitors assuring the rental price whether or not the films were allowed to show.

William H. Warren, secretary to Mayor Albee, who followed Mr. Cohen, read Mrs. Colwell's report of the board's work as evidence of its fairness and F. T. Richards, the new member of the board, defended censorship along general lines.

"Meeting the People Half Way."

"When the report of the censor board apparently shows so few eliminations and condemnations and it will be no additional expense to the city to have a board of appeals, why not have one?" asked E. L. Thompson, a prominent banker of Portland, who had been questioning the speakers in behalf of the executive committee. To which Mr. Warren replied, "The Mayor now feels that the matter is perfectly fair and that the city is meeting the people half way."

[What is the real meaning of this "meeting the people half way?" Have "the people" only a half right to justice?]

The decision of the committee was in favor of an appeal ordinance. At the City Hall there is some talk of calling the present censor board the appeal board, leaving all the preliminary viewing to people not on the board. The film men are, however, drafting an ordinance providing for an appeal to a judicially constituted body.

Film men represented at the meeting were: Gus A. Metzger, C. F. Regan, G. A. Grombacher, Paul G. Noble, G. T. Holtzclaw, Edwin James, W. M. Rodgers and I. Leeser Cohen.

ORGANIZE IN PENDLETON.

Pendleton, Oregon, film men forestalled an attempt by the city council and the local hygiene society to create a local censor board by organizing an exhibitors' association and proposing a substitute plan which was submitted to the city council and accepted. The exhibitors have pledged themselves to show only pictures that have been passed by the Portland and Seattle censor boards. The officers of the exhibitors' association are C. G. Matlock, president; F. M. Downey, vice-president; D. M. Deary, secretary, and N. A. Medernach, treasurer.

MT. ANGEL EXHIBITOR WEDS.

J. S. Klinger, the genial proprietor of the Peoples' theater, Mt. Angel, Oregon, has joined the ranks of the benedicts. His marriage with Miss Stupell of Mt. Angel was celebrated there a few weeks ago and Mr. Klinger was seen at the Portland exchanges recently where, in contrast with other exhibitors from the valley, his stories were of success and optimism only.

VON HERBERG A VISITOR.

J. G. Von Herberg, of the firm of Jensen & Von Herberg, of Seattle, was a visitor in Portland looking after the firm's interests here. Mr. Von Herberg finds no faults with Portland as a theater town and reports that the local Jensen & Von Herberg house, the Columbia, is enjoying prosperity and that their new house in Seattle, the Coloseum, is rapidly nearing completion. Mr. Von Herberg left for New York City November 26.

STATE-WIDE BRIEFS.

E. S. Dennison has opened the Wexford theater, Salem, Oregon.

E. E. McDonald, Arcade theater, Dayton, Oregon, gave his Thanksgiving patrons a little excitement when he liberated five roosters dyed Pathe red in his house, permitting the people in the audience making the fowls captive to keep them.

Orton E. Goodwin, former manager of the National, Portland, entertained the football teams of the Multnomah Club and the University of Oregon at the Heilig theater after the Thanksgiving game. Mr. Orton and Sol Baum showed Griffith's "Avenging Conscience" at the Heilig during Thanksgiving week.

Oregon exhibitors seen at the exchanges Thanksgiving week were: A. C. Harrington, Grand, Hillsboro; L. E. Partridge, Gem, Tillamook; C. C. Ferguson, Baker, Newberg; M. J. Cooley, Gem, Silverton.

Sentiment Hurts Carmen

Geraldine Farrar's Pro-German Outgiving Has Markedly Lessened the Value of Picture She Acted in for Lasky Company—Owners of the Film May Be Pro-Ally, but Canadians Don't Want to Watch This Carmen.

By W. M. Gladish, Toronto Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

TORONTO, ONTARIO.—What was practically a country-wide agitation against Geraldine Farrar, the operatic singer who took the leading role in the Lasky Carmen, has resulted in great financial loss to Mr. Phil Kauffman, general manager of The Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Toronto. Mr. Kauffman arranged to bring the Carmen reels to Toronto, engaged Massey Music Hall, the largest auditorium in the city, for the whole week of November 29th, and had invested heavily in advertising when protests began to arise because of pro-German utterances credited to the prima donna. Mayor Church, Controller Thompson and Alderman McBride of the Toronto city council, tried to block the arrangements and their agitations resulted in considerable adverse publicity in the six local newspapers. Controller John O'Neill of Toronto declared that he would resort to extreme measures if it were found that Miss Farrar was obtaining a royalty from the picture. In answer to this Mr. Kauffman published telegrams from Mr. Samuel Goldfish, of New York, to the effect that Miss Farrar had only been paid for her work in connection with the taking of the picture and that she had no more financial interest in the film.

Apparently the people could not be satisfied, however, and, among other things, numerous letters from various persons who wished to air their views appeared in the press. Even Mrs. Fitzgibbon, a prominent authoress of Vancouver, B. C., wired a personal protest to the Toronto papers and resolutions were passed by several organizations outside of the city against the showing of the picture. Everyone was agreed that the picture itself was a tremendous achievement, but as for looking upon the form of Miss Farrar—never.

When the opening performance was given on the Monday afternoon there were barely one hundred persons in the hall, which has a seating capacity of 4,800. The official attendance for the first showing of the picture is, of course, not the above mentioned number, but it is a fact that a mere handful of people watched the flitting scenes. To make matters worse for Mr. Kauffman, he suffered a bereavement in the family only a few days before the picture was to be shown in the death of his baby son and he became plainly a worried man.

Mr. Kauffman had trouble from the start. First the Ontario Board of Censors banned the film, but his appeal from this decision was upheld by the Theatrical Board of Appeal. He then went ahead with the arrangements but with the above result.

METRO OPENS LOCAL OFFICES

Metro Features, Limited, the Canadian branch of the Metro, has established distributing offices at 245 Yonge street, Toronto, and at Phillips Square, Montreal, Que. The Metro brand of pictures are now being seen in half a dozen different Toronto theaters although they were only introduced a few weeks ago. They have also invaded the smaller cities such as Hamilton, Berlin, London, Ottawa, and other places in Ontario. The Roma theatre, Berlin, Ontario, has signed a contract to show Metro features the first half of each week for a year and the balance of the week is to be filled in with high-class dramatic productions.

SOME INTERESTING FILMS.

Mr. James Travis, manager of Pathe's Feature Film Syndicate, Toronto, has announced the importation from France of some new educational films of Globe manufacture which are taken at the rate of 120 pictures per second and which are intended to be shown through a projector at the normal rate of sixteen pictures per second. These pictures, which are the invention of Pathe, will be introduced in Canada forthwith. One film showing the action of an athlete has ben demonstrated to school boards, artists and others, but general interest is being taken in the novel pictures. Mr. Travis declares that a number of these special films were lost when a merchant vessel was torpedoed and the release of the pictures was delayed until more could be added to those already in hand.

Canadians Patronize the Fox Carmen.

Rival feature film productions of "Carmen" were seen in Toronto during the week of November 29 when the Lasky production was presented at Massey Hall and the William Fox production was shown at the Strand theater, the large downtown theater. Big crowds attended the latter house in preference to viewing the feature in which Geraldine Farrar appeared because of the latter's alleged pro-German tendencies.

"Nation" Film Coming Back.

Griffiths' "Birth of a Nation" is scheduled to return to Toronto at Christmas for an extended run in Massey Hall. This big feature enjoyed three great weeks at the Royal Alexandra theater last October and desperate attempts were then made to continue its run at that time, but no suitable house could be secured. Thousands will probably see the picture again.

Films of Toronto's New Highway.

W. James & Sons, commercial motion picture photographers of Toronto, have just completed the taking of views along the new $600,000 model concrete highway extending for forty miles between Toronto and Hamilton. Pictures were taken every mile along the route. They are to be shown in various cities under government auspices.

"The News" of Toronto Has Film Department.

Still another leading Canadian newspaper has lined up with those who publish moving picture departments regularly. This latest daily is the Toronto Daily News and in its announcement on Saturday, November 27, the declaration of policy was made in the following manner: "To give ample news and gossip of the film business and its relation to Canadian theaters and to Canadians." The paper also declares that the material for the new department "will be carefully edited so as to give the reader full information about the best class of producers and the highest grade of pictures."

This aim is well carried out, because in the first two issues in which the moving picture department appears there is a great quantity of real Canadian film news. The department has for its heading the following caption: "Told on the Screen."

Toronto's Majestic Leased.

An important deal has just been completed whereby the Majestic theater, Adelaide street, Toronto, has been leased by the Canadian Theaters Corporation, of which Clark Brown is the president. It is intended to reconstruct the house, which is a very large one, and operate it solely as a feature picture theater. The Majestic, which is in the downtown section, was formerly the home of melodrama in Toronto, but it has been closed for a year.

Not Wise to Stop the Applause.

One night recently the manager of a Toronto theater of small size actually ordered the audience to stop applauding a particularly thrilling war picture. He did not want any noise in his theater, he said. Most managers are happy when they "hear 'em yell." The people did not enjoy the remaining scenes of the film and caustic remarks were passed.

OTTAWA TRADE NEWS.

By Carl J. Ketchum, Ottawa Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

Patriotic Pictures Make Hit.

OTTAWA.—The Canadian military authorities, officials of the various patriotic and soldiers' relief funds, recruiting officers and the many other agencies and organizations incidental to the war, are making use of the moving picture houses throughout the Dominion in their campaigns. During recent weeks nearly all of the local houses have been opened on Sunday evenings with some kind of patriotic demonstration or other, and the speakers who are working in the big recruiting campaign here invaded the moving picture theaters and, through the courtesy of the managements, ever ready everywhere to help along the cause, were permitted to make their appeals to the young men to enlist.

On the invitation of Maj. General Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, Governor General, the officers of the headquarters staff of the Canadian militia and other prominent military and government officials, were present at the Center theater, recently opened here, to witness the showing of some 6,000 feet of moving pictures depicting the activities of the Canadian troops at home and abroad. It was the first official experiment of the militia department with moving pictures and General Hughes and other members of the staff were very much impressed with them. As a result of their success it is understood several additional photographers may be appointed by the government to follow the troops into France.

The largest staff of experts in all departments makes the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the one paper in the trade that fully fills the requirements of every reader.

Rex Theater Commended.

When rejection by the censors and complaint and criticism by the inspectors is so generally the rule in Ontario, it is sometimes naturally gratifying when an inspector has something commendatory to report as a result of his visit. Mr. R. Newman, chief inspector of moving picture theaters in Ontario. was here recently and warmly congratulated a local manager, Mr. P. J. Nolan, on the many public safety features of the Rex theater. He declared that, outside of a few theaters in Toronto, that the Rex was a revelation as regards fireproof and other safety equipment. This naturally very much pleased Mr. Nolan, who takes enviable pride in the fact that he has also received congratulations from Fire Chief Graham along similar lines. The theater is built of solid brick and concrete, with terra cotta walls and partitions. The boiler rooms, stage and operating room are built of reinforced concrete and terra cotta, with fireproof doors.

VANCOUVER EXCHANGE MOVES.

The Vancouver branch of the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., formerly quartered in the Holden Building, was moved last week to the Orpheum Building, in which is located the Orpheum theater, one of the two principal users of the Paramount program in this city. This brings the Famous Players people right into the film centre, and gives them much finer offices than before. A suite of four rooms is occupied, with a roomy vault adjacent.

NEW THEATER IN ALBERTA.

A new Empire theater has been erected at Peace River Crossing, Alberta, to take the place of the one destroyed by fire a short time ago, and was probably opened about Dec. 1. The new house, owned by Berhold Hopp, is on Main street and has a seating capacity of 300. Although moving pictures will be used almost exclusively, a stage 24 by 24 feet has been installed, so that theatrical performances may be given if desired. The house will be opened with a minstrel show arranged by a committee representing the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Irene Cottage Hospital.

"LOTTERY" CASE IN EDMONTON.

Edmonton, Alb.—The Hudson's Bay Company's Edmonton establishment was convicted last week in the local court of violating the statute prohibiting lotteries, in that it distributed to customers "chances" on an automobile, to be drawn for and awarded to the holder of the lucky number. An appeal was immediately taken by the company, and judgment was reserved.

Moving picture men are watching this case with intense interest, as a further conviction will mean the end of the "country store" and allied contests in Alberta.

"NATION" FILM AT THE WALKER.

Winnipeg.—The customary protest on the part of negro citizens against the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" took place in Winnipeg last week, and for a time it appeared that the picture would be suppressed. It will open at the Walker theater Nov. 22, as scheduled.

Holds Raise Back

Winnipeg Theaters Not Getting the Fifteen Cents Admission Hoped For—Two Managers Refuse to Come In and So Cut Off Project—Manager Barrett Still Hopes to Get the Matter Through.

By E. C. Thomas, Vancouver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—After the exhibitors of Winnipeg had definitely decided to raise their price of admission to fifteen cents, two managers refused to carry out the agreement, and the others, though still in favor of the raise, feared to go ahead without the co-operation of all the theaters. W. F. Barrett, manager of the Universal exchange, who engineered the projected raise in prices, has not given up hope, and will continue his efforts to bring about the change. The plans which have just fallen through included all the first-class downtown houses.

To an impartial observer it would seem rather strange that Winnipeg should be the only city in Western Canada which is unable to get fifteen cents for a really good picture show. In all other cities, where conditions are certainly no better than in Winnipeg, fifteen cents is almost universally charged, with box seats in all cases at twenty-five cents. Winnipeg is not called upon to do any pioneering. The other Western cities have successfully demonstrated that the people will pay a good price for a good show in a good house, and it only remains for the Winnipeg theaters which come within these specifications to make a concerted raise to fifteen cents.

WINNIPEG'S MORALISTS.

The Johnson-Willard fight pictures are still the subject of considerable agitation in Winnipeg, and a strong protest against the showing of this film was made at a recent special meeting of the executive committee of the Ministerial Association. At a meeting of the Social Service Council on the following day it transpired that Rev. W. J. Hindley, a member of this council, had seen the fight pictures, and, further, that he had discovered that they showed nothing brutal or offensive. Mr. Hindley's so-called "confession" followed remarks by Rev. J. N. MacLean, the secretary, calling attention to a letter protesting against the proposal to exhibit the pictures locally.

Still another reform body is active in the city. Sunday "patriotic" concerts in Winnipeg theaters are under close scrutiny just now, and the Lord's Day Alliance intends to see that such concerts shall not constitute an opening wedge for Sunday performances to be continued after the war. At a meeting held recently attention was also called to the fact that many of these concerts are being held for private gain, and that very little, if any, of the amounts collected is being donated for patriotic purposes.

In at least one Eastern Canadian city theaters are operated regularly on Sunday, and recent court decisions seem to indicate that performances might also be held in the West on that day, provided no definite admission is charged, but that patrons be allowed to contribute or not, as they see fit.

SOMETHING BIG COMING.

The atmosphere in Vancouver is electric with more or less wild rumors of a gigantic combination said to be forming among various local moving picture interests. Although no details have been given out for publication, it may be stated that the proposition consists of a contemplated amalgamation of the leading theaters of the city for their mutual benefit. It is expected that a definite policy will be outlined in the near future.

THEATER SAFE BURGLARIZED.

Some time during the night of Wednesday, Nov. 17, the vault and safe of the Walker theater in Winnipeg was blown open with heavy charges of nitroglycerine and cash to a stated amount of $3,400 was taken. The house was having the biggest week of the season, with Margaret Illington in "The Lie," and the amount taken represented the day's business in addition to a large advance sale for the balance of the engagement. It is thought by the police that the safe-blowers must have secreted themselves in the theater after the evening performance, and then proceeded with their work. An exit, opening only from the inside, was found open the next morning, and it is assumed that they made their escape in this direction. C. P. Walker, proprietor of the house, was in New York at the time of the robbery.

The fact that the box office safe, where theaters usually keep their cash, was not molested, but that the burglars were sufficiently acquainted with the routine of the house to know that the money is kept in the vault opening off the poster room on the second floor of the building, leads the police to believe that the robbery was an "inside job," and they are at present working along this line. It is established that the yeggmen were undoubtedly professionals, however, as just enough nitroglycerine was used on each door to open it effectively, without any unnecessary damage or noise. On this account, the robbery was not discovered until the following morning.

J. R. Muir, of the Dominion theater in Vancouver, has booked the Famous Players production of "The Eternal City" to open on Dec. 6, and on Nov. 13 inaugurated a heavy campaign of advertising for the feature in the Saturday and Sunday newspapers. The picture will be run a full week.

The Bijou in Winnipeg has just installed a Fotoplayer, a unit orchestra purchased from The Overseas Film Limited, who have been demonstrating the instrument in this city.

Base License Fees on Seating Capacity

Vancouver Trades License Inspector Jones Presents New Theater Tax Scale—What Houses of Different Capacity Will Be Asked for Licenses.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The finance committee of the Vancouver City Council last week heard the report of Trades License Inspector Charles Jones, relative to a readjustment of the scale of license fees for moving picture theaters, designed to put in force a sliding scale based on seating capacity, and bringing to the city approximately the same revenue as under the present flat rate. This amounts to somewhat over $3,000 per year.

Under the scale suggested by Mr. Jones, theaters with less than 300 seats would pay $100 per year, with larger houses paying an additional twenty-five cents per seat for all over that number. This, it was pointed out, would greatly increase the tax on some downtown houses, while lowering that of the smaller ones. The Rex, for instance, would be forced to pay $257.75, which is over $100 more than its present fee. After various conflicting motions, amendments, and amendments to amendments, the matter was put over until Monday evening.

By this time the downtown picture men had taken up the question, and Exhibitors W. P. Dewees of the Rex theater, James Pilling of the Orpheum, J. R. Muir of the Dominion, and W. P. Nichols of the National Amusement Company, attended the meeting, as did W. W. Armstrong and G. Corriveau, Jr., representing the suburban houses. The larger exhibitors pointed out that, while the investment in the small outside houses amounts to probably $5,000, the sum tied up in each large downtown theater represents $50,000 to $75,000 or more; that running expenses are $125 to $150 a day, as compared with $25 for a suburban house; that film rental downtown amounts to $300 or $400 per week, as against about $50; and that rents are infinitely higher downtown. It was further stated that all houses are at present operating at a loss. After considerable discussion the proposed change was laid over for three months, which practically means that the matter is settled.

Offers Theater for Xmas Party to Poor Kiddies.

At the last meeting of the Rotary Club at Victoria, B. C., the proposition of holding a Christmas tree celebration for the poor children of the city was brought up. Clifford Denham of the Royal Victoria theater aroused enthusiasm by offering the use of that house on Christmas eve, and also announced that he would undertake to provide suitable entertainment for the children prior to the distribution of the presents.

BIG FOUR
V L S E FEATURE PLAY

Caught on a Flood of Success

THE V-L-S-E was the first of the large feature distributing companies, we are told, to show a substantial gain in both collections and billings during the summer months.

It was the first, and thus far the only film organization to share its profits with all its employees—the division made October 10th last, and to be made every subsequent quarter, amounting to 20% of the company's net profits.

These forward steps have been made possible only by reason of the superior money-making qualities of Big Four productions, for the exhibitor and for the producer.

Crammed with heart-interest, powerful dramatically, unequalled photographically and with it all, wholesome and purposeful, the public has placed its stamp of overwhelming approval on them—accorded them a favored place as the highest expressions of the photoplay art.

Immediate new releases:

"THE CAVEMAN" (Vitagraph) which one critic described as "the only picture I ever saw at a private showing which made every reviewer laugh" yet it is also an intense drama— Featuring ROBERT EDESON.

"THE ALSTER CASE" (Essanay). An honest-to-goodness detective story, from the great stage success, which will make you mad because it is so baffling— Featuring BRYANT WASHBURN and RUTH STONEHOUSE.

"A MAN'S MAKING" (Lubin). A straight-from-the-shoulder story of the making of a man against terrific odds— Featuring RICHARD BUHLER and ROSETTA BRICE.

"I'M GLAD MY BOY GREW UP TO BE A SOLDIER" (Selig). A smashing, patriotic knock-out, which sounds the high note of love for country, with thrills by the bushel— Featuring HARRY MESTAYER and EUGENIE BESSERER.

And do not overlook the fact that these features represent but half of the Big Four's business-building service.

The other half begins where the film ends—in the most modern merchandising program to help you sell to the best advantage that which you have bought, that the motion picture industry has ever known. This plan of mutual helpfulness and service we call "The New Religion." We give our sales organization a share of the profits, so that they will work harder for you,

A dozen exhibitors in your vicinity will attest to the value of this co-operation. Shall we send you their names?

BRONCHO BILLY'S LOVE AFFAIR (Nov. 26).—The cast: Broncho Billy (G. M. Anderson) His sweetheart (Ruth Saville); Her father (Lee Willard).

Broncho Billy becomes engaged. A month later the engagement is broken when the girl's father comes into a fortune. She moves to the city with her parents, where she lives surrounded by luxury. But she longs to be back in her plain western home. Her mother pleads with her to forget Broncho Billy and to marry an English nobleman. She refuses, and finally returns to the West with her father, who also loves the rough western ways. Broncho Billy is overjoyed at the return of his sweetheart.

BIOGRAPH.

HER STEPCHILDREN (Special—Two Parts—Dec. 14).—The cast: Dr. Lambert (Charles Perley); Rose (Vera Sisson); Frank (Jack Mulhall); The Stepmother (Gretchen Hartman); Philip Ray (G. Raymond Nye); Frank's friends (W. C. Robinson and Robert Nolan); Nurse (Helen Bray).

Doctor Lambert, a widower, has two grown children—Rose and Frank. Having lacked a mother's care during much of their life, the children are wilful and disobedient. So, when the doctor marries again, he is somewhat nervous about the reception which his children will accord their stepmother. Rose treats her rudely; Frank is hardly more courteous. Strained relations exist in the household. Rose meets Philip Ray, a dissipated bachelor, and he calls on her. The acquaintance ripens, and one day Mrs. Lambert, entering the drawing room, surprises Rose in Ray's arms. After Ray is gone, she is apologizing to Rose for her awkward intrusion when the doctor enters and, remarking that he has seen Ray leave the house, tells his daughter that she must not see him again, as he has a bad reputation. Rose is indignant, and at the first opportunity she meets Ray in secret at the end of the garden.

Screened behind a trellis, Mrs. Lambert is sewing when she hears voices and sees Rose with Ray. She hears Ray ask the girl to visit him, and later, when she attempts to dissuade Rose from entertaining her lover, she is flouted by the girl. Rose leaves the house, and Mrs. Lambert follows her. Ray lives in a bachelor apartment house frequented by young bloods. Frank has friends in the building, with whom he plays cards for large sums of money. He has lost $100 to Ed Sands and has received a note hinting that his father will be told if he does not pay up. He goes to see Sands about it, preceding Rose by a few moments. Rose enters Ray's apartment and is quickly disillusioned about the man, for he attempts to bend her to his will. She is helpless when Mrs. Lambert walks into the room.

Rose, mortified, refuses her stepmother's aid, tells her that this is her own affair, and is going to say more when, through the window, she sees her father entering the building. Frank, leaving his friends, has seen his stepmother enter Ray's apartment, and has telephoned for his father. Mrs. Lambert hides Rose behind the hangings and faces her husband as he enters. She realizes that it is a delicate situation, but is quite unprepared for her husband's refusal to listen to explanations. Doctor Lambert casts her off and strides out. Rose slips away unseen, and Ray laughs as Mrs. Lambert staggers from the room.

Time passes, and Rose confesses to her father. The doctor hires detectives to search for his wife, but they cannot find her. She is in a hospital, where her baby is born. Later, when the child is dying for lack of medical attention, she brings it to the doctor's doorstep, rings the bell and flees. The nurse takes the baby indoors, where it is examined by the doctor. The mother, watching through a window, hears her husband say that the child will live, and in her joy she faints. She is found lying under the window, and is reconciled with those for whom she has made such great sacrifices.

DIVORCONS (Special—Four Parts—Dec. 15).—The cast: Henri Des Prunelles (Dell Henderson); Cyprienne (Gertrude Bambrick); Adhemar de Gratinan (Dave Morris); Madame de Brionee (Florence Lee); dope fiend (Charles H. West); drunk (Walter Lewis).

Henri Des Prunelles loves his wife, Cyprienne, but unintentionally he neglects her for experiments in his laboratory. Cyprienne, hungry for excitement and adventure, accepts the love of her cousin, Count Adhemar, and meets him clandestinely. Des Prunelles becomes suspicious. Clavignac, a friend of the family, and Madame DeBrionec, another friend, become acquainted with the state of affairs in the Des Prunelles' houshold. Des Prunelles catches his wife and the count together, but, to the astonishment of Adhemar and Cyprienne, makes no move to harm them. Instead he courteously asks Cyprienne to withdraw, orders the servant to bring cigars for Adhemar, comments on the weather and otherwise tantalizes the puzzled count. Finally Adhemar demands to know what Des Prunelles intends doing. The latter replies, "I intend to give my wife to you," and, to the utter amazement of Adhemar and Cyprienne, he does it.

An easy divorce law passes the Legislature, and Madame DeBrionee and Clavignac, thinking Des Prunelles and Cyprienne interested, call to discuss it. Cyprienne is jealous of Madame DeBrionee, who flirts with Des Prunelles, and the count is puzzled at Cyprienne's indifference. Cyprienne, to arouse her husband's jealousy, has her maid place a package of the count's love letters where her husband will discover them. Des Prunelles reads one of the letters and angrily places it in his pocket. Madame De Brionee invites Des Prunelles to dine with her, and Cyprienne gets the message. Cyprienne delivers the message to her husband, but determines to break the engagement. Des Prunelles, in return, hands her the letter from Count Adhemar. Cyprienne throws her arms around his neck and pleads with him. The count sees Cyprienne making love to her husband, and cannot understand her change of heart.

Madame DeBrionee telephones Des Prunelles about his engagement, but Cyprienne interrupts and tells her that Des Prunelles will dine with his wife. Cyprienne and Des Prunelles steal away from Adhemar, leaving a note to the effect that Cyprienne has gone to her aunt's home. Adhemar secures the address of Cyprienne's aunt, which is away out in the suburbs. On the way he loses his taxicab and has to walk. At last he arrives, only to learn that the aunt has been dead two years. Tired and jaded, Adhemar stops an auto party to ask them for a ride to the city. They mistake him for a highwayman and have him arrested.

Cyprienne and her husband, reconciled, are dining happily in a private dining room. Madame DeBrionee and Clavignac are informed of Adhemar's arrest and leave at once to secure his release, whereupon they all return to the cafe. Clavignac plays a joke on Adhemar and engages a private dining room, adjoining the one occupied by Des Prunelles and Cyprienne. The count hears Cyprienne's laughter and, after two attempts, succeeds in entering the room. Cyprienne hides herself, and Adhemar, thinking Des Prunelles is dining with another woman, is about to leave when Cyprienne appears and upbraids him. The count becomes enraged, creates a scene, and orders Des Prunelle's arrest on the charge of dining with his "wife to be," but is sent about his business by the policeman. Cyprienne returns home with her husband to start anew and prove to him that she has always loved him. She has discovered the great secret about man's love—that it doesn't have to be visible to be there.

CUPID ENTANGLED (December 16).—The cast: The actress (Claire McDowell); her sweetheart (Alan Hale); the country girl (Vola Smith); the rube (Victor Rottman).

Suffering from a nervous breakdown, the actress is ordered to the country. On the farm she meets a country bumpkin who falls in love with her and neglects his sweetheart. At first the affair amuses her; but when she learns of the girl's love for the rube, she gives him the cold shoulder. That does not make him return to his first love, however; so the actress decks the girl in one of her own beautiful costumes as a bait to love's eyes.

But her beauty thus adorned still fails to impress the rube, so the actress tries another plan. She invites her sweetheart from the city to visit her, and, introducing him to the girl, demands that he pretend to be in love with her, so as to arouse the rube's jealousy. He refuses, but she persuades him, and he sets out for a walk with the girl. He does make the rube jealous, and the latter tries to enlist the aid of the actress in reclaiming his sweetheart; but she laughs at him. The laugh is on her, however, when her sweetheart falls in love with the girl and elopes with her, then sends back a message stating that she shouldn't have egged him on to it.

FATE (Dec. 17—Biograph Reissue No. 28).—The cast: The girl (Mae Marsh); her grandfather (Lionel Barrymore); Sim Sloane (Charles H. Mailes); his son (Robert Harron).

The brutal Sim Sloane has but one redeeming quality—his love for his son, who is a chip of the old block. Sloane is out hunting one day when he falls and hurts his leg. His cries are heard by an old forester, who assists Sim to his own cabin and treats him kindly. Sloane's response to this treatment is what one expects only of the vilest nature; he becomes drunk, insults his host, abuses the little granddaughter's pets, and is finally driven out by the old man. At the store he boasts of his prowess, but the forester tells the true story, and Sloane is made the butt of ridicule.

Thirsting for revenge, he hangs about the cabin until the children leave for school, then enters and lays a fuse of shavings from the hearth fire to a keg of powder that stands in the inner room. Hardly has he left the premises when the children return, as there is no school. A few moments later, Sim's beloved son enters, drives out the children, ransacks the larder and sits down to eat and drink. As he opens and shuts the door the draft first breaks, then mends the burning fuse. Sim boasts of his deed to the old man, who hurries home. As he reaches the scene there is an explosion which hurls the beloved son into eternity, and Sloane, coming to gloat over his enemy, remains to grieve over his devilish handiwork.

Further Concerning the HEARST VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL

Formerly Hearst Selig Weekly

The Greater News Reel

LAST week all motion picturedom sat up at the news of the discontinuance of Hearst-Selig and the entrance of its successor Hearst-Vitagraph. It was told how in a dramatic interview with Mr. William Randolph Hearst, foremost news authority in America, a plan for a greater news reel was evolved. It was told how this new outline was so revolutionary in its aspect that it was difficult to appreciate at one sitting.

As someone said, "The greater news reel is more than a news reel". It should be defined by another name. It might also be called the motion picture newspaper, for the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial is to be run on the same lines as any of the Hearst newspapers. In other words, the Hearst-Vitagraph is to be bound by no traditions, no past rules—it is to be built on imagination, such imagination as governs only Hearst himself.

JANUARY the THIRD NINETEEN SIXTEEN

the first issue of the new Hearst-Vitagraph makes its appearance succeeding the Hearst-Selig.

Get your requests in now so as to permit no lapse in your news reel service. Every Hearst-Selig exhibitor should make it his business to book the Hearst-Vitagraph.

But this doesn't limit those who have not known the Hearst reel to take advantage of it at once.

Greatest-News-Gathering-Organiz

Survey your news field, consider where those men who furnish the real news, the newspaper news, get their material.

The Hearst Organization gathers and furnishes news not only to Hearst's many newspapers and magazines but through International News Service and International Film Service to over a thousand other publications.

Examine the map, prick it at any point and I will show you the name of the man who writes the news at that place and the name of the camera man who takes the pictures.

Gaze at the attached graphic representation of the Hearst news gathering organization. Each of these squares represents at least a dozen men. Jump down to the very last square on the page, illustrating the Individual Staff of the Hearst-Vitagraph and I will convince you that no other reel has any greater staff than that division alone.

Man for man, the individual editorial staff of the Hearst-Vitagraph measures up, man for man with the entire staff of any other news reel. And then from that point upwards through those other magazines and Hearst newspapers and news gathering institu there is nothing with which to compare the petitors.

When you want steel the U. S. Steel Corporati the place to go for it. When you want oil the Sta Oil is the place to go for it. When you want new to news headquarters—the Hearst Organization.

If you want to prove to yourself how infalli ble the Hearst Organization is from a new standpoint, take any newspaper in the country which doesn't use the Hearst Service and article for article, photograph fo photograph—see which got there first wit the news—the individual publisher or Hearst

You can, therefore, imagine why Hearst-Vitagraph this entire organization at our disposal, the best of unit of it turned into the direction of the Hearst- graph, why it must immediately assume the upper position.

In Collaboration with
VITAGRAPH

Hearst for the news gathering. Vitagraph for the pictorial effects. There you have the ideal combination.

The Vitagraph Organization which has gained its supremacy as a producer, through sheer force of perfect productions, has gained this place because it has the inherent abilities. Therefore, realizing that Vitagraph not only assists in the news gathering and making up of this reel, it is important to realize its function in the refining of the film itself.

The exhibitor can scarcely appreciate the care and religiously zealous attention which is lavished on every foot of negative and positive in the Vitagraph Laboratory—the largest and most perfectly equipped of its kind in the world.

The Vitagraph staff which has earned its right to be known as the foremost technical group in the industry, has itself been responsible for numerous improvements in cameras, films and projection.

It is one thing to get a film, it is another thing to bring out its fullest value. Just as the artist works over his canvas until it is perfect, so the Vitagraph Laboratory men will work over the Hearst-Vitagraph negative.

Vitagraph as the print manufacturer and distributing agent will answer all questions regarding the reel itself—or for that matter any other question that might be addressed to it individually.

You Book It Independently

NO! Hearst-Vitagraph is not to be bought on a program. The exhibitor who wants it must get it separately. This means that it is not to be packed away and bolstered up by anything else.

No good comedy or drama is going to save it. It has no aids, no helpers, no supporters. It comes to you absolutely unaided.

It comes to you as itself. You accept it in that way and this means that if it does not make good as an independent—out it goes.

Free On Request EXHIBITORS Guide Book

There is now on the press and will be ready for distribution inside of the next two or three days a complete analysis of the story of Hearst-Vitagraph.

This explains the reasons for the discontinuance of the Hearst-Selig for its successor the Hearst-Vitagraph; explains about the intricate workings of the entire news gathering organization, explains about the work of Vitagraph in the make-up of the reel, and explains the various ideas listed on this page.

The ZONE Idea

The exhibitor residing in San Francisco will have an entirely different service than the man in New York. The man in Pittsburg will have a different service than the man in Chicago.

Each territory will have its Hearst-Vitagraph organization. A distinct entity working independently of any other as far as local news are concerned—but supplying other sections with that which is of importance outside. In other words you will receive European and Eastern News from New York, Far East and Pacific News from San Francisco, interior news from Pittsburg and Chicago and then in addition your own local news.

Buy at Your Own Price

We have worked out a system whereby you absolutely make your own price. A chart most simple to understand enables you to select for yourself the date of your release and the price you are to pay.

Backed by National Advertising

When you take the Hearst-Vitagraph you thereby do more than merely show the greatest news pictorial — you attach to yourself the power of a tremendous national campaign, runnning in newspapers and magazines throughout the country, which is to send the multitudes to that theatre exhibiting Hearst-Vitagraph

This campaign will be the most astounding thing yet heard of in the advertising of motion picture features and we promise you that the publication power of William Randolph Hearst is at the disposal of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial. Analyze this and see what it means.

NEWS PICTORIAL

(Formerly the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—Now Better)

226 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK CITY

(Kathlyn Williams); Ralph Warner (Harry De Vere); George (Guy Oliver); Father Time (Charles Le Moyne).

The Flirt lives only to play the game of love for the delight of the gamble. Ralph Warner who loves the Flirt dearly is informed by her that she has merely tolerated him for the enjoyment of the game. Ralph then tells the Flirt that he is going to end it all that night. The Flirt laughs heartily, for she has heard this story before.

She falls asleep and dreams that she receives a message from Ralph that unless she telephones him before 10 o'clock that night he will take his life. The hands of the clock are pointing to the hour of 10. Overcome with remorse the Flirt beseeches Father Time to turn back the clock so that she may save Ralph.

Father Times takes the Flirt through the Garden of Love and shows her many examples of the loves of men and women and how Time destroys the unworthy and helps the worthy. Father Time shows her the true and false hearts, and how even the primitive man sought the love of a good woman. With magic touch Father Time brings back the days of Anthony and Cleopatra; of Romeo and Juliet, and ends by stating that unless she is true to the man who loves her, Ralph, Time will see that she is punished, for Time conquers all things.

The Flirt awakens and in the mirror sees a vision of herself as an aged woman, deserted by all her suitors. Ralph returns for his gloves, which he has forgotten, and the Flirt informs him that she regrets her actions and that she dearly loves him.

ON THE EAGLE TRIAL (Dec. 14).—The cast: Tom Merry (Tom Mix); Vicky (Victoria Forde); Henderson (Joe Simkins); Jordan (Sid Jordan).

Tom Merry, a stage coach driver, is in love with Vicky, daughter of Henderson, superintendent of the Eagle Mining Company. Henderson does not approve of his daughter's choice. Jordan, who works in the office, proposes to Vicky, is refused and when Jordan becomes insulting, Henderson discharges him.

Jordan incites the men to a riot at the mining company's office and plans with two others, to hold up the stage which Tom drives, on his return trip and get the pay-roll. Vicky overhears Jordan's plot and goes to warn Tom. As the stage speeds by Tom throws the money to Vicky, and then he arrives at the mining company's office just as the miners are about to wreck the place. After a few days Tom and Vicky meet and soon formulate a plan where love will find a way.

THE GOLDEN SPURS (Special—Two Parts—Dec. 16).—The cast: Helen Ryder (Bessie Eyton); Lieut. Dick Belmont (Wheeler Oakman); Private Bert Ryder (Edw. J. Piel); Col. Ryder (Richard Morris): Capt. Geo. Favre (Edwin Wallock).

Dick Belmont and George Favre, brother officers, are rivals for Helen Ryder's hand. Bert Ryder, Helen's brother, is in the power of Favre. Helen and Dick announce their engagement at a week-end reception held at Helen's home. Dick longs for a pair of golden spurs owned by Col. Ryder, who declines to sell them. Favre forces Bert Ryder to steal the spurs from his father's home and place them in Dick's room. Helen's father breaks his daughter's engagement with Dick, who later is dismissed from the military service.

Living in solitude in the jungle, Dick goes on a hunting trip. Helen and Favre are out together to force his advances. Helen frightened, flees into Dick's shack. Favre searches for her in vain. Having no means for defense Dick fashions a torch with which he hopes to frighten a lion. Throwing the torch from the window, it sets the cabin ablaze. The flames are seen by searchers who drive off the lion and rescue Dick and Helen. Favre is later found dead, the victim of a leopard.

JUNGLE JUSTICE—(Jungle Zoo Picture Dec. 18).—James Clinton, hunter of big game, incurs the enmity of Kahale, a chief of the jungle. Nell Clinton, daughter of the hunter, receives a letter from her cousin, Laura Brandt, saying that she will visit her. When Laura arrives, Captain Trent, Nell's sweetheart, becomes infatuated with her.

Kahale, the jungle chief, gives Clinton final warning to keep off Kahale's lands. Laura flirts with the native, and when he asks her to be his wife, Captain Trent and Clinton order the savage away, and he leaves, vowing revenge.

Laura continues to flirt with Trent and Nell silently suffers. Kahale seizes an opportunity and kidnaps Laura. He ties her to a tree in the jungle. When they find her tied to the tree, she is dead.

KALEM.

THE BANDITS OF MACARONI MOUNTAINS (Dec. 21).—The cast: Trovatore (Bud Duncan); Concha (Ethel Teare); Doughbags (Jack MacDermott); His wife (Myrta Sterling).

A wife like Mrs. Doughbags would give any man gray hair and send him to an early grave. Consequently, when her husband meets the fair Concha, while touring in the Macaroni Mountains, it is not to be marveled at that Mr. Doughbags promtly falls in love with the maid. Unknown to Doughbags, Concha is a decoy for Trovatore the Terrible. Said Trovatore is a full-fledged member of the bandit's union. Consequently, he is surprised when Doughbags, instead of being frightened when Concha betrays him into the outlaw's hands, merely reaches forth and disarms Trovatore and the rest of his band. The outlaws flee in terror.

Mrs. Doughbags comes in search of her husband. In revenge, the outlaws capture the woman and hold her for ransom. To Trovatore's dismay, Mrs. Doughbags falls madly in love with him, while her husband obstinately declines to pay the sum demanded for her release. In despair, the poor bandit chief offers to give Doughbags all his wealth, if only to take Mrs. Doughbags off his hands. Again the husband declines. In the meantime, the woman, in cleaning up the bandit's cave, discovers a harmless-looking switch. Ignorant of the fact that the closing of this will explode a ton of dynamite and destroy the cave, Mrs. Doughbags throws the switch in. The next instant, she feels her head bumping against the clouds. Kind Fate elects that Mrs. Doughbags shall land atop of Concha and Mr. Doughbags, who are spooning. One look at the couple and the woman grabs hold of her husband with murder in her eyes!

A BUSHRANGER AT BAY (No. 5 of the "Stingaree" Series—Special—Two Parts, Dec. 22).—The cast: Stingaree (True Boardman); Ethel Porter (Marin Sais); Guy Kentish (Thomas Lingham).

Kentish, recently arrived from England, is astounded to discover in the locket dropped by Ethel Porter, a photo of Stingaree. The Englishman shrewdly suspects Ethel of being in love with the bushranger. Later, Kentish is a passenger on the stagecoach held up by Stingaree. When the bushranger departs with the stolen mail bags, Kentish follows. First, however, the man scribbles a note, which he requests the driver to deliver to the police inspector at the next station, with instructions that it be opened at six o'clock, should he fail to return with the mail bags.

Hearing Kentish approach, Stingaree holds the man up. To the bushranger's amazement, the Englishman calmly informs him that he knows his real identity. He also tells Stingaree that unless the mail bags are delivered up to him, the letter in the police inspector's hands will inform this officer as to who the bushranger really is. It develops that Kentish had known Stingaree prior to the outlaw's exile from England and that he entertains a strong feeling of sympathy for him. This, together with the desire that his identity remain secret, causes Stingaree to turn the mail bags over to Kentish and help the man reach the spot where the stagecoach is to pick him up.

The Englishman returns to the station just in time to prevent his letter from being opened. The man hastens to see Ethel, to whom he tells his adventure. In the light which shines in the girl's eyes, Kentish finds his reward.

THE ORIENTAL'S PLOT—(Episode No. 9 of the Ventures of Marguerite—Dec. 24).—The cast: Marguerite (Marguerite Courtot); Peter Enright (Richard Purdon); Bob Winters, Marguerite's admirer (Bradley Barker); Gungha (A. Lever); Alota (Eleanor Lewis); Bertha (Lois Howell).

Marguerite and Bob rescue Bertha from Gungha, who has held the girl prisoner. Bertha informs her benefactors that it is because she knows the whereabouts of an old painting which tells where a fortune in gems is concealed, that Gungha had kidnapped her. Later, the Hindu succeeds in again kidnapping Bertha. Marguerite, attempting to go to her assistance, is also entrapped. The two are taken to the house formerly occupied by Bertha and in which the gems are supposed to be concealed. Bob tries to enter Gungha's den, but is overpowered and bound.

In spite of the cords which hold him helpless, the boy succeeds in giving the alarm. While the police are coming to Bob's assistance, Gungha, aided by Alota, an accomplice, tries to compel Bertha to reveal the hiding place of the painting by torturing her. Marguerite tries to go to the victim's rescue, but is herself threatened with torture. The arrival of the police, who are accompanied by Bob, results in the capture of the Hindu and his accomplice. After the two are dragged away, Bertha brings the painting to light. A close examination of the canvas gives Marguerite an idea. Taking an old blunderbus from the wall, she orders Bob to stand in the center of the room, aim towards a certain spot over the fireplace and shoot.

Bob follows out Marguerite's instructions. A flash follows the pulling of the trigger and it is found that a key, suspended by a fine wire, hangs from the muzzle and over a tiny hole in the floor. When the key is inserted in this hole, a secret trap opens up and the treasure is discovered.

A BOY AT THE THROTTLE—(Episode No. 59 of the Hazards of Helen Railroad Series—Dec. 25).—The cast: The Operator at Lone Point (Helen Gibson); Odell, an engineer (Franklin Hall); Pinture, his fireman (Clement Graw); Layson (Clarence Burton); Bobbie (Tom Trent).

Climbing into a cab of a freight engine, Bobbie Layson, the son of a station engineer, pulls the throttle open. The alarm goes out and Helen, stationed at Lone Point, is ordered to derail the runaway and thus prevent it from running head-on into the approaching passenger train. Fearing for his son's life, Layson phones Helen and implores her not to send the engine into the ditch. Outside the station a small truck suggests a way out of her dilemma. Leaving the derail open, Helen gets the car on the track and speeds down the grade to the end of the siding, where she opens the switch and flags the passenger train.

Her warning causes the engineer to sidetrack his train. This done, Helen speeds to the Melius Bridge and reaches it before the runaway train. Climbing to the topmost girder she then hangs suspended by a rope and as the onrushing train roars across the bridge she drops to the top of a freight car and in a few seconds the runaway is brought to a stop.

LUBIN.

THE MOMENT BEFORE DEATH (Dec. 13).—The cast: Dr. Cummings (Melvin Mayo); Florence, his wife (Adda Gleason); Dr. Grant (L. C. Shumway).

After a chase by the police, following a crime he committed, Dr. Cummings, a crazed scientist, is cornered on the ledge of a building. Realizing that he is caught, Cummings jumps. In his fall through space Dr. Cummings' mind reviews the events that led to his crime.

He was working on a wonderful machine in his laboratory, and refused to tell his wife, Florence, or his assistant, Dr. Grant, about it. But he was not too obsessed to observe that his wife was passing the assistant loving glances. One night he finds Grant in his home, and his wife is whispering, "He must never suspect what we are about to do!" And then in his brain was born his plan for vengeance. Again he found them. She holding his hands, and saying, "We'll be able to leave to-morrow!" He confronted the guilty pair. They pleaded their innocence. His invention was at last completed, and with its sensitive means of registering the blood pressure, he could tell whether Florence was guilty or not.

The instrument adjusted to her arm, he accused her of loving Grant. She was guilty! He seized her madly. Grant tried to interfere, but he brushed him aside. Maddened, he thrust Florence into a closet, and while he locked the door on her, Grant escaped. He took a revolver, and fired shot after shot through the door. He heard nothing from the other side, and trembling, sat in a chair as the reaction set in. His gaze wandered to his machine again. The needle was still beyond the normal point! He examined it, and found that a broken spring was the cause of it all. His wife was innocent!

But still there were her suspicious actions to account for. These were cleared when he found a letter showing that the secret between his wife and Grant was the planning of a new laboratory, which they would present to him the following day. Realizing the enormity of his crime, he opened the door, but Florence seemed lifeless. Then he looked below, and saw the police. He rushed out wildly, closely pursued by them. The last glimpse of his wife showed her moving feebly in the arms of Grant. And now, Dr. Cummings sinks mercifully into unconsciousness, and the last scene shows the people rushing to the sidewalk where he has fallen.

THE GREAT DETECTIVE (Dec. 14).—The cast: Mr. Scrapp (George Egan); Mrs. Scrapp (Florence Williams); Gwendolin (Patsey De Forest); Hinky Dink (D. L. Don); Constable (James Cassady).

Hinky Dink swaps money for a tin badge from the Skinnem Detective School, and becomes a full fledged sleuth. Fate then decrees that he should try to prevent Mrs. Scrapp from giving her worthless husband a much needed shakedown. Mrs. Scrapp turns on Hinky but her daughter, Gwendolin, slightly ancient in years, saves him from a beating. Mr. Scrapp becomes despondent and almost commits suicide, but as the point of the dagger touches his flesh drawing a drop of blood, he gets cold feet, wipes away the blood with one of his wife's handkerchiefs and instead pretends to have committed suicide by throwing his clothes into the river. Mrs. Scrapp refuses to weep or even get excited over her husband's disappearance.

Hinky determines to bring Mr. Scrapp's murderer to justice. Finding the blood stained handkerchief he concludes that Scrapp was first stabbed and then thrown into the river. Calling on the women in the village, he tells of Mr. Scrapp's death. As they weep, he watches closely to see which one of them will bring forth a handkerchief that will look like the one he

New York Reviewers and Critics Assume Role of Enthusiasts

"The principal play in the Triangle program was 'Aloha Oe,' a romantic drama of San Francisco and the South Seas, which had Willard Mack as the star.. Enid Markey is also featured in the romance, which is, perhaps, the finest example of artistic staging by Thomas H. Ince. Nothing more realistic has been produced on the screens than the ship laboring in the 'white squall'—a storm to fill the spectators with terror."—Philadelphia Press.

"No fault can be found with the way in which this production ('The Lily and the Rose') has been put on the screen; the acting is above reproach, the settings are charming and the photography excellent. As for Lillian Gish, who has the leading role, she is truthfully described in a subtitle as being 'most adorable.' "—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"In 'Aloha Oe,' an Hawaiian film-drama, produced by Thomas H. Ince, with Willard Mack and Enid Markey, the Triangle Film Corporation presents this week at the Knickerbocker Theater the most beautiful and artistic picture-play which has yet appeared upon its program."— N. Y. Evening Post.

" 'The Lily and the Rose,' produced by Paul Powell, featuring Lillian Gish, is a most unusual and charming production, built upon the story of the love of two men for one woman. 'Aloha Oe' is a Thomas H. Ince production—a story of the South Seas—with extraordinary scenic effects, featuring Willard Mack."—Chicago American.

What Triangle Offers for Week of December 12th

The production of consistently successful picture plays demands the highest resources of the human mind. You know what TRIANGLE PLAYS have done toward setting a high standard. It is time to tell you what some particular TRIANGLE products will do towards elevating it still further.

"The Lily and the Rose," with Lillian Gish, Roszika Dolly and Wilfred Lucas, we believe, strikes an entirely new note in motion picture history. Everyone who has seen it comments on its wonderful charm and atmosphere. There are features of photoplay artistry in this production that make it of extraordinary attraction, and ultra-novel appeal.

Then comes a distinctly new type of drama—one that makes full use of natural resources, "Aloha Oe," a powerful Hawaiian tale with Willard Mack and Enid Markey in the principal roles. The storm at sea is acknowledged to be a triumph of motion picture artistry. In fact, the play has that extraordinary quality that makes a theatre patron talk about it afterwards.

And then there are two Keystones. Any exhibitor knows what results follow the announcement of a Keystone Comedy. "The Great Vacuum Robbery" and "Fatty and the Broadway Stars." The first with Charles Murray and Louise Fazenda outdoes anything Mack Sennett has attempted for swift action. It is filled with real "Keystone Stuff." The second brings in Weber and Fields, William Collier, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson and the inexpressible Roscoe Arbuckle. That's one week's bill. Your patrons have a right to such service.

found. The first one brings forth a big red bandana; the second dries her eyes with the edge of her skirt; and the third one is Mrs. Scrapp, who grabs the handkerchief. Hinky is now certain that Mrs. Scrapp murdered her husband and he determines to hunt for clues.

At night he steals into Mrs. Scrapp's house through the window; she spies him, leaves the dogs outside the window to prevent his escape. Hinky promises Gwendolin to marry her if she will save him and she hides him under the bed where he remains all night because Mrs. Scrapp locks the door and hides the key. Five A. M. Mrs. Scrapp awakens and jumps back startled as her foot comes down on Hinky's head. Hinky manages to escape to the woods where he stumbles across Mr. Scrapp who is cold and hungry, but is afraid to return to his spouse. Mrs. Scrapp, Gwendolin and the constable give chase. Gwendolin again comes to the rescue, and when Mrs. Scrapp sees her nestling in Hinky's arms, her mother heart softens and she gives them her blessing at the altar.

THE INNER CHAMBER (Special—Three Parts—Dec. 15).—The cast: Hope (Ruth Hyatt); Ralph Morgan (Melvin Mayo); Fadette Devore (Adda Gleason); Guy Darwin (L. C. Shumway); Marian Day (Helen Eddy); Mrs. Day (Adelaide Bront).

Ralph Morgan, the ne'er do well husband of Fadette Devore, an actress, deserts her and goes to the metropolis to operate a bucket shop. Successful in his enterprise, Morgan is welcomed in society, and wins the heart of Marian Day from her humble suitor, Guy Darwin, a cub reporter. Morgan is blind to consequences, and proposes marriage to Marian. On the wedding day, Guy saves a woman from committing suicide. The woman is Fadette. With approaching motherhood and no funds she has become desperate. When Guy learns that she is the wife of Morgan, he rushes with Fadette to stop the wedding. They arrive at the church just in time. Morgan is also wanted by the police for swindling, and is sentenced for several years. Marian finds that old love is best, and is soon Guy's wife. Fadette dies shortly after her child's birth, and Guy and Marian promise to take care of her child.

In prison, Morgan acquires the drug habit from a fellow prisoner, who has the drug smuggled to him. Several years later, Morgan escapes and finds a haven in an abandoned mine. While going to the city for his drug, he sees Marian and Guy, who are very prosperous. The drug-crazed man thinks only of revenge, and plans to steal the child, Hope, from them. A careless nurse gives him the opportunity, and the child goes away with him. Morgan ties her in the mine, and then goes to gloat over Marian and Guy. They convince him that Hope is his child. He promises to bring the child back.

Meanwhile, a railroad construction gang has set a tremendous charge of dynamite in the hill above the mine. When Morgan comes up they try to prevent him from entering the mine, for the charge has been set. Morgan is frantic. He breaks away from the men, and releases the child. He collapses as a result of the years of drug using. His last words are a command to the child to run away, and a few moments later, the fearful explosion takes place. Beneath the tons of earth is Ralph Morgan's body—the retribution for his years of sin. The child is returned to Guy and Marian, and never learns the truth.

A THIEF IN THE NIGHT (Special—Two Parts—Dec. 16).—The cast: Caesar Lebrun (Herbert Fortier); Louis Lebrun (Wm. H. Turner); Klyda (Ormi Hawley); The Stranger (Earl Metcalfe).

Caesar Lebrun, a celebrated lawyer, brings his brother Louis, a famous surgeon, home to spend the night. They alight from a taxi at midnight and enter Caesar's home. Beside the library table, they find Klyda, the wife of Caesar, reading. Her right hand holds an open book, which, singularly enough, is held upside down, and her breathing, Caesar silently observes, is not regular. Caesar explains that Louis is to perform an important operation next morning, and he suggests that Klyda show Louis to his room.

Immediately they leave, Caesar's movements become quick and decisive. He takes a pistol from the table drawer, levels it at the closet door and says sternly, "Come out." From the cupboard steps a man, pale and calm, clad in evening clothes. Caesar exults over the capture of the stranger and tricks him into admitting that he gained access to the house through an area-way. Caesar's intention is to turn the fellow over to the police, since he has the stranger's admission to rob. Then Klyda enters.

Caesar notes her ghastly face—the face of guilt. Caesar adds to the torture of Klyda and the stranger by revealing the signs by which he knew of the stranger's presence—the odor of cigarette smoke, the book held upside down. Klyda implores him not to call the police, to spare the stranger for her sake. At this point Caesar plays his trump card. He outlines his plan to have his brother, the surgeon, immediately operate upon the stranger, and relieve the pressure on his brain which makes him a criminal. Caesar forces him back into the closet, then leaves to summon Louis. Klyda makes her voice heard through the closet door and reproaches herself for allowing the stranger to accompany her home from the opera, and repeats over and over again the words she uttered when he tried to induce her to elope—words of loathing. Caesar and Louis enter, the closet door is unlocked and the stranger brought forth. Caesar lays his pistol on the table. Darting forward, the stranger snatches it and points it at the brothers. Caesar explains that he overheard the conversation between Klyda and the stranger from behind the portieres and is convinced of his wife's purity.

Caesar demands the revolver. The stranger makes a menacing gesture and threatens to shoot. Caesar, with a laugh of relief, declares it is not loaded. "That's right, drop it," Caesar says. "Good night."

SWEETER THAN REVENGE (Dec. 17).—The cast: Bess Bowen (Octavia Handworth); Molly McCall (Rosetta Brice); Mrs. Smith (Clara Lambert); Joe Best (Thurston Hall); Missouri (Charles Brandt); Kansas Pete (James Daly); Scotch Joe (George Clarke); Frenchy (Bernard Siegel).

In the mining town of Gedney, Bess Bowen, saloon keeper, and Molly McCall, laundress, both select as a mate, Joe Best, a prosperous miner. After changing his mind two or three times, he finally selects Bess. Jealous, Molly McCall, goes to Joe with a trumped-up story that Bess is a desperate criminal. Joe goes to Bess, secures the return of the engagement ring, and transfers it to Molly McCall.

On the evening before the wedding, Bess appears in Molly's cabin determined to do her an injury. A struggle ensues between the two women which is interrupted by Joe and several miners. It is agreed that Bess shall be punished and Molly is permitted to denominate the nature of it. She insists that Bess be whipped and driven out of town. This is carried into effect, and Bess seeks refuge in the tepee of an Indian family, who provide her with clothes of their own kind, to replace those torn from her back. The next morning in this disguise she returns to find her resort burned away. While there the stage coach, taking Joe Best and Molly away for good, drives up. Bess swears to never cease her efforts until the five men most concerned in her disgrace has met their death. Two of them, while crossing a stream swollen by a freshet, falls into the torrent and drown. The third is bitten by a rattlesnake. The fourth falls into a railway cut while fleeing from her and is ground to pieces by a passing train.

For five years she has searched for Joe Best to no purpose. One day she rides up to his door and draws her pistol. In his terror he pleads with her. "What will my poor little babies do?" Then the womanhood asserts itself, and she spares the husband of the woman she hates because of the little ones. She places them in his arms and rides away into the mountain wilderness, all the better, because she has learned that to be merciful is sweeter than revenge.

AN UNWILLING BURGLAR (Dec. 18).—The cast: Mr. Henry (Billie Reeves); Mrs. Henry (Carrie Reynolds); Spike, the burglar (Ferdinand O'Beck); Hogan, the cop (Frank Smiley); The Cook (Jessie Terry); The Maid (Adelaide Hayes).

Mrs. Henry is afraid of burglars and begs her husband not to go to the club. He goes, however, leaving her alone and Mrs. Henry looks under the bed and turns in. At Two A. M. Henry comes homes, but in error he tries to enter his neighbor's house. He thinks he is locked out, so tries to climb in a window. He is seen by Spike Murphy, who mistakes Henry for another burglar and tells him the place is no good and proposes that they "crack the crib next door." Henry is averse to this but when Spike menaces him with a gun, he gives in. They are seen by Hogan, a patrolman who summons the reserves. Henry is aghast at finding he is compelled to rob his own home. He falls with a tray, awakening his wife, also the maid and the cook. Mrs. Henry recognizes her husband's voice as he pleads to Spike for mercy, and comes down stairs. Spike pushes Henry under the table and also hides, but Mrs. Henry drags her husband out. Spike realizes that Henry lives in the house and he pushes the gun against Henry's ribs and threatens him if he moves. Henry has to sit and endure his wife, in fear of death.

Hogan enters and announces there is a burglar in the house. Henry denies it. Hogan finds the bag of silver and Henry says he put the silver in the bag. Spike reaches up and turns out the light. Mrs. Henry screams. Upstairs the maid and cook crawl under the bed. Spike rushes through the house seeking safety. Henry also seeks safety. Spike enters the room where the maid and cook are and tries to crawl under the bed. He sees them and gets out. Henry tries to hide in a room. Spike picks out the same room. Henry trips him and shuts him in. Hogan then captures him. Henry tells his wife he has been trailing Spike and takes all the credit for the capture. His wife apologizes and Henry says he will forgive her, if it never happens again.

BENJAMIN BUNTER BOOK AGENT (Dec. 13).—The cast: Polly Crundell (Ethel Corcoran); Benjamin Bunter (William Dangman); Daniel White (Templer Saxe); Jonah Grundell (William Shea).

Jonah Grundell, a retired sea captain, is in charge of his niece Polly's fortune, till she comes of age, or marries with his consent. If she marries without his consent before she is 21, the fortune goes to Jonah. He has handled the money so long he hates to give it up, so when Polly reaches 21, he manages to keep her in ignorance of the fact, and enters into an agreement with Daniel White, the family lawyer, to marry Polly and divide the money with him.

White is a solemn old hypocrite, much admired by Jonah's spinster sister, Myra, and he has one weakness—love of the bottle. Benjamin Bunter, a fresh bookagent, arrives in town with a flourish, meets and falls in love with Polly, and she with him. Bunter puts White out of the running, then digs up a birth certificate, showing Polly is over 21. He forces Jonah to give his consent to their marriage, while White is left to the consolation of Myra.

A QUESTION OF RIGHT OR WRONG (Special—Two Parts—Dec. 14).—The cast: Paul Mathews (Maurice Costello); Grace Caldner (Leah Baird); Jason Caldner (Van Dyke Brooke); Detective Dayton (Daniel Leighton); Turner (Edward Elkas).

Immediately after entering her new home, bride is confronted by supposed dead lover and learns she has been tricked. Grace, when confronted with apparent proof of her lover, Paul Mathew's death, consents to marry Jason Caldner, a man she instinctively dislikes, to save her father from financial ruin. The whole affair was faked up, and immediately upon entering her new home, Grace and her husband are confronted by Paul, alive and well. He hands her a written confession of her dying father which explains the whole plot and denounces Caldner bitterly. Later, Mathews asks her to meet him in the garden in a note which Caldner sees and secretly reads.

In a terrible rage, Caldner plots with Turner, an escaped convict, whom Bayton, a detective, is shadowing, to kill Paul. While arguing the matter, Caldner and Turner get to quarreling over the money which the convict is to receive, and finally, Turner hits Caldner over the head and seriously injures him. Mathews comes upon the scene, and when the servants appear, Caldner, on recovering his senses, accuses him of striking him. Meanwhile, Bayton, waiting outside, has witnessed Turner's escape and judging from the fellow's agitation that something is wrong, follows and arrests the crook. He brings Turner back to Caldner's home and there everything is explained. Caldner, overcome by conflicting emotions and the shock of his injury, staggers back, and as Grace goes to his assistance, he drops dead, pulling off Grace's wedding ring from her finger as he falls. Gazing upon the body of the man who had caused them so much suffering, Mathews and Grace silently shake hands in their realization of future happiness which is deservedly theirs.

THE FAITH OF SONNY JIM (Dec. 15).—The cast: Sonny Jim (Bobby Connelly); Sonny Jim as old man (Logan Paul); Daddy Jim (Tefft Johnson); Mother Dear (Mabel Kelly); Santa Claus (Harry Waldron); Father Time (Harry Fisher); Dick and Bill (Johnny Cahill, Billy Johnson).

Just before Christmas, Sonny Jim learns the awful truth that there is no Santa Claus from some of the older boys in the neighborhood and is heartbroken. In vain Daddy Jim and Mother Dear try to argue with the boy; he will not be comforted. Determined to prove the truth for himself, Sonny sits up the night before Christmas in a big chair by the fireplace, and falls asleep. He dreams that a big, gruff, cross-looking Santa comes down the chimney and carries him in his auto over the roof-tops to the great throne-room of King Santa Claus himself, who reprimands Sonny severely for doubting his existence. He then introduces the boy to the City Santa, who is sufficiently thin to get down the steam pipes, and various other interesting people, then he is sent to Father Time, who lives in a weird cave.

Father Time sadly tells him he must take away his youth, as only the old people do not believe. Sonny sets up a yell, but it does no good, the old gentleman places him underneath a big machine, and he grows and grows until he is a great big man with a long white beard and grotesque features. Just as he regains normal size, Sonny wakes up to find his stocking filled with toys and good things, and with a happy smile he tells his dog, Toto, "never to doubt Santa Claus!"

THE FLOWER OF THE HILLS (Dec. 16).—The cast: Jane (Carolyn Birch); Jack Brooks, the City Man (Leo Delaney); Joe Dakes (Denton Vane); Jack's Aunt (Louise Beaudet); Cousin Marie (Rose Tapley).

Jane, known as "The Flower of the Hills," is loved by Joe Dakes, a young countryman. She is contented until she meets Jack Brooks, a young city man, and falls in love with him. When her mother tries to force her to marry Joe, Jack takes her to the city with him, where his cousin, Marie, siding with his mother, against the girl, leads Jane to believe that Jack is ashamed of her.

Joe, meanwhile, has followed the girl to the city, and when she prepares to leave, heartbroken, he takes her back to her mother. Jack finds her pathetic little note, and learning of Marie's duplicity and the suffering which it had caused, follows her. There Joe, who blames the city man, nearly takes his life, but the girl intervenes, and convinces the countryman that she loves Jack.

After a mighty struggle, Joe renounces all claim to her, and "The Flower of the Hills" becomes the bride of the city man.

THE DECEIVERS (Dec. 17).—The cast: Mr. Simpkins (Sidney Drew); Mrs. Simpkins (Mrs. Sidney Drew); Mr. Jones (Edward Favor); Mrs. Jones (Mrs. C. Jay Williams).

When Mr. Simpkins gets a raise, his married friend, Jones, advises him to "hold out" a five or ten-spot, and Simpkins is surprised to find that that seems to be the general practice among the married men in his office. Guiltily putting his hold-out in his hat-band, Simpkins goes home and nearly has heart disease when his wife, after relieving him of his regular salary, insists on taking his hat. However, he gets away with it safely and hides the money in a vase on the mantleshelf. That night he has a slight chill and his wife sleepily tells him the quinine pills are in the medicine chest.

After taking two he sees the fatal skull and crosshones on the box, and yelling "I've taken poison! Help! I'm dying!" he runs into his room and leaps on the bed writhing in agony. Suddenly he gasps, "I'm afraid it's too late, I've lost all feeling in my arms!" But his wife shrieks, "That's my arm you're pinching!" Simpkins pathetically confesses the truth of his "hold-outs," and is astonished to learn his wife has also been saving "hold-outs." When the doctor arrives and announces he only took quinine and that the pills evidently got in the wrong box, all ends in supreme joy and relief.

A MAN'S SACRIFICE (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three Parts—Dec. 18).—The cast: Mary (Edith Storey); Andy (Evart Overton); Bob (Thomas R. Mills); "Yellow Jake" (Ned Finley); Harry (Frank Bunny); Mr. Simpkins (George Stevens); Jud Jones (Jay Dwiggins).

Mary Aldin rejects Andy Stevens, a worthy young fellow, and accepts Bob, a weak characted countryman, with a fondness for drink. On the very night of their betrothal, Bob gets drunk and Andy takes him home. Mary thinks that Andy has brought Boh to her in that condition to taunt her, and furiously upbraids him. Andy is so hurt that he leaves the village and goes to the gold fields.

Months later, Andy has prospered in the gold fields, while Bob has lost his position through his love of liquor. A friend, writes Andy that Bob and Mary are in debt, and he arranges a job for Bob at the gold fields, without revealing his identity. Bob accepts the job and comes on alone. In the mining town he tells Boh who he is and forces him to send home part of his wages to Mary in addition to protecting him from the evil influence of "Yellow Jake," a "bad man" of the mining camp. Mary is still kept in ignorance of who her real benefactor is.

Bob, one night, while under the influence of liquor, falls down a ravine and is killed. The body is found by a prospector, who finds Mary's address and copies it, then brings the body to the village. Andy is shocked, and not having the heart to tell Mary, continues to forward the monthly salary installments. Several months later, though the prospector, Mary learns her husband is dead, and as she has received several months' money, is mystified and worried. She finally goes west, and after being rescued from a perilous predicament, by Andy, she learns who has so consistently helped her without hope of reward. His unselfish devotion wins her heart and both find happiness as man and wife.

LEVY'S SEVEN DAUGHTERS (Personally Picked Program—Dec. 20).—The cast: Levy (Edward Elkas); his wife (Eulalie Jensen); Straus (Nathaniel Gross); Mrs. Straus (Anna Brody); seven girls (Nitra, Frazer, Alice Lake, Katherine Franck, Edwina Robbins, Mae Greene, Jeanette Ehrman, Marion Henry); Straus's sons (Arthur Cozine, Sig Stark and others).

While on a business trip, Levy meets Straus, a friend of his youth, and after recounting old times with great unction, Straus brings Levy home and proudly introduces him to his seven sons. Levy, who is childless, gets envious, and chestily announces he has seven daughters—and all good-looking. On his arrival home, he and Mrs. Levy are shocked to receive a note from Straus, saying he is coming with all his sons to pay them a visit and meet their seven daughters.

In desperation, Levy prepares to make good his bluff by getting seven of the girl clerks in his store to pose as his daughters. The girls are michievous, and when Straus and his seven sons arrive, things begin to hum. All go to a cafe and enjoy a good time. Their feast is interrupted by Straus, Senior, who sends them all home. Next day, the boys meet the girls in the store, and Levy laughingly tells Straus he will soon have to support seven daughters-in-law, in addition to his seven sons.

THE PATENT FOOD CONVEYOR (Personally Picked Program—Dec. 20).—The cast: Cook (Kate Price); Thatsim (Charles Eldridge); Mr. Itsky (Harry Fisher); Burglars (Chas. Edwards and Jas. Moran); Mr. Knowism (Daniel Leighton).

Thatsim lives in one of those "railroad" flats, where the kitchen is four rooms away from the dining-room, consequently, he cannot keep a cook any length of time, because of the terrific distance to be covered in bringing food to the table. Thatsim is about to lose another cook, when Itsky, the Inventor, happens in. He learns why cook is leaving and invents a contrivance on the spot to make her work easier. It is a long conveyor belt with a windlass at each end, stretching from the kitchen, through several rooms to the dining-room.

An electric bell signal is used to communicate with the cook. Everyone is delighted, and it works finely, but unfortunately, when Thatsim's rich aunt and uncle dine with him, the signals get mixed up and havoc follows. A couple of burglars break in, and in the intervening rooms see savory dishes passing through on the conveyor. The cops are called and a burglar-chase ensues. After it is all over, Thatsim finds the will left by his disgusted uncle and learns he has lost an inheritance of $1,000, but doesn't care when the police hand him $2,000 reward for catching the burglars.

ON HER WEDDING NIGHT (Special 4 Parts—Dec. 20).—The cast: William Carter (Charles Kent); Mrs. Carter (Louise Beudet); Helen Carter (Edith Storey); The Veiled Woman (Inez) (Carolyn Birch); Henry Hallam (Antonio Moreno); John Klendon (Denton Vane); Carlo (William Dunn).

On the very night of bis wedding, John Klendon is talking to Helen Carter, his fiancee, on the phone, when he is mysteriously shot by a veiled woman. The shot is heard at the other end and the girl goes into hysterics. Henry Hallam, a guest, is an amateur detective and wealthy. He takes up the case, but the only clue is a bit of paper with the scrawl: "It was I——," inclining the police to the suicide theory.

The next night Hallam finds a man lying in the roadway, whose features remind him of when he was in Spain with the Carters. He remembers a Spanish beauty casting threatening looks at Klendon, and begins to see light. After caring for the seriously wounded man, he leaves him in care of a physician. Helen enters settlement work to forget the whole terrible affair. The unsuspecting girl is lured to an upper room in a tenement by a dark-visaged woman who pretends her baby is sick, and there finds herself confronted by a dead child, a crazy woman and the door locked. The woman by the crib, after a tirade of abuse, tells Helen how Klendon, after refusing to legitimatize their child by marriage, had thrown her over for Helen. The woman then attempt to throw a vial of vitrol into Helen's face, but is prevented, and the two women struggle desperately.

Fortunately, before Helen is overcome, Hallam, who has been notified of Helen's foolish act in going unprotected into the tenement, breaks into the room, followed by Carlo, the man Hallam had found in the roadway. The Spanish woman swallows the acid, and dies almost at once, while Carlo, who proves to be an old sweetheart of the dead woman, explains the meaning of the missing note. The missing letters make it read: "It was I-nez (Inez)!" This was the Spanish woman's name, and the mystery, now cleared, Hallam tenderly leads Helen away; and long after, when time has healed wounds, the two find happiness as man and wife.

IS CHRISTMAS A BORE? (Dec. 24).—The cast: Paul Pantoum Punctual (Sidney Drew); Mrs. Polly, his wife (Mrs. Sidney Drew); Paul's mother (Mary Maurice).

"Merry Christmas, Paul," is the greeting Paul Pantoum Punctual's wife hands him on Christmas morning. With a growl of disgust he turns over, after reminding her that they are "going to cut out all that foolishness this year." In the newspapers he finds every headline contains Christmas tidings—Christmas, Christmas, everywhere, until Paul is in a fine temper. He delivers an oration in which he says: "Then there is the family dinner with 18 kinds of dessert which you must sampio and wash down with cider and get a stomach-ache."

When his mother calls and the dear old lady presents him with a silk muffler, he hurts her feelings by refusing and is so disagreeable she doesn't stay long. With her last words, "You might have wished me a Merry Christmas—there won't be many more for me," ringing in his ears, Paul wakes up to find it was all a night-mare. Mother is really waiting downstairs and hurriedly dressing, Paul, now a changed man, goes down with his wife and gives the little lady a regular bear hug, then Mr. and Mrs. Punctual do a war dance of good old-fashioned Holliday happiness.

THE THIRTEENTH GIRL (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Special—Dec. 25).—The cast: Lottie Evans (Arline Pretty); Ray Schiller (Julia Swayne Gordon); Ethel Gibson (Lillian Burns); Joe Daymond (Robert Whitworth); Lewis de Freece (Arthur Cozine); Mr. Daymond (Frank Currier).

Lottie Evans, a girl of the sweatshop, is offered the position of "13th girl" in a wonderful Fashion Show given by the Department Store firm of Daymond & Sons, through the store's agent, Ray Schiller, a mercenary woman, and Joe Daymond, the Junior partner, becomes infatuated with the girl's beauty. In the little pink room of Daymond's establishment, where Lottie is displaying as a living model, the latest French lingerie for the crowd of women patrons, she experiences her first fears as to the future, but the remembrance of her almost starving mother and little sisters holds her.

Lewis De Freece, the artistic advisor of Joe Daymond, also falls in love with the girl, but Daymond angrily orders him to keep away and continues his attentions to the girl. Joe is engaged to a wealthy society girl, unknown to Lottie, who is a Rescue-Home patroness and settlement worker. Finally, Joe asks Lottie to go away with him, but although she has learned to love this masterful man of the world, she refuses. Immediately after this she loses her position in the store, and the family suffers great hardships.

One cold night Lottie meets Joe, and this time, poor starved, suffering Lottie gives in to his pleading. After that, Lottie's family is secured from want, and she, herself, happy in the thought that after Mr. Daymond, Senior's, death, Joe has promised to marry her. Lottie's mother believes she is working again in the store; but not long afterward, Joe is forced by his father to marry Ethel Gibson, and the first Lottie knows of it, Lewis De Freece walks into the fashionable apartment where she is living and hands her a bill of sale for the place, intimating that it includes her. Lottie is horrified at Joe's perfidy and goes to the Rescue Home, where she meets Ethel and both women learn the truth. The affair gets into the papers, killing Joe's father, and Joe ends his life, while Lottie and Ethel become lifelong friends and companions.

WHEN THE SHOW HIT WATERTOWN (Dec. 16).—It's no fun playing "one-a-night." Anyway, that's what Sam Tompson and his "Galaxy of Beauty" bunch thought about it when they met their Waterloo at Watertown. Sam Tompson arrived in Watertown with his bunch of girls and proceeded to the Opera House to get all ready for the evening's performance. Not many shows came to Watertown and the house was soon sold out.

So far, so good. But Watertown audiences are critical. They didn't like the show and showed their dislike hy offerings of onions and eggs. Sam Tompson and his company went through their stunts under rather trying circumstances.

The show was too much for the sheriff and he finally decided to use his authority, so took Sam Tompson and his Galaxy of Beauty from the Opera House to the town lockup, where they were forced to spend the night. The next day they were put to hard labor but they finally rebelled, fooled the sheriff and the rest of Watertown rubes, making a successful get-away in a hand car.

MIXED AND FIXED (Dec. 24).—Pokes and Jabbs are still living in the same apartments and are on friendly terms as usual. On her birthday, Jabbs presents the Mrs. with a pearl necklace. Pearls are an ill omen and bring tears and this case was no exception. Mrs. Jabbs, about to go upon an errand for her husband, meets Mr. Pokes in the hallway and while examining the new necklace is seen through the keyhole by Mr. Jabbs. Trouble is at once started. Mrs. Pokes, also peeping through the keyhole, sees what she thinks is her husband with Mrs. Jabbs held in tender embrace. More trouble. Mrs. Pokes and Mr. Jabbs seize the things handiest and start for the hallway, but Mr. Pokes and Mrs. Jabbs have gone and they pounce upon a poor, unsuspecting lodger from the upper floor. Pokes telephones to Jabbs to meet him. Jabbs seizes the opportunity of his wife's absence and does so.

Over a friendly drink in the saloon, they are presented with a ticket for a mask ball. Meanwhile, Mrs. Pokes, who is a member of the society giving the ball, has invited Mrs. Jabbs to attend as her escort. Mrs. Pokes, in Jabb's clothes, starts out with Mrs. Jahbs. Pokes and Jabbs return home and Jabbs, disguising himself as a woman, joins Pokes and they leave for the ball. Numerous events take place when the two couples come face to face in the saloon. Mr. Pokes is anxious to get Jabbs away so that he will not see his wife with another man and Mrs. Jabbs is anxious to get Mrs. Pokes away so that she will not see her husband with another woman. After a trying ordeal they do so, and return home. Mistaking each other for intruders, a lively chase ensues, which is ended in the hallway by Jabbs losing his skirt and Mrs. Pokes almost losing her trousers. Things are explained and all is forgotten.

SLIGHTLY MISTAKEN (Dec. 11).—The cast; Pa (William Franey); Ma (Mrs. Whistler); Susan, their daughter (Lillian Peacock); Susan, the cook (Gale Henry); "Blubber" Bill (Max Asher).

Pa is unfortunate in having two Susans in the house, one the cook and the other his daughter. The cook asks for an evening off to meet her beau, and Pa tells her that she may have her beau call on her at his house. Susan, the daughter, sees a young sailor and his company on the beach, and is attracted by the glitter of his brass buttons.

Susan, the cook, and her beau, Blubber Bill, wander along the beach and, finding a nice quiet rock, sit and spoon. The daughter, desiring to see more of the sailor, wanders to the water front and, while admiring him, falls into the water. The sailor orders his company to "stand by" and he rescues unaided the daughter. After being made much of as a hero, the sailor receives an invitation to call at the daughter's home and promises to do so.

Meanwhile, Susan, the cook, and her beau, have been isolated on the rock by the returning tide, and Blubber Bill gallantly carries his fair charmer ashore and is persuaded to call the next day. In anticipation of her hero's call, Susan, the daughter, has everything spick and span. Pa, to show him a good time, brings in lots of beer, but the daughter says that beer is too common for her hero and leaves for the cellar to get champagne. The door to the cellar is beneath the ice box and the daughter moves the box to go down. The cook sees the box out of place and pushes it back over the cellar door. When the daughter comes up with the wine she finds herself locked in.

"Blubber" Bill calls at the front door and is admitted, the old folks thinking he is their daughter's rescuer. Bill, thinking they are referring to his rescue of the cook, acknowledges the deed. He is made much of and tells of his remarkable experiences and capture by cannibals, but as he was so cold with fear, when they started to cook him, icicles formed over the fire and the frightened natives turned him loose. The daughter's beau arrives and gets to the kitchen by mistake. He and the cook are having a mild flirtation when the daughter, by a superhuman effort, opens the cellar door, thus throwing the ice box upon the two. The family, hearing the crash, rush in and explanations are made. Each Susan seeks out her hero and Pa and Ma, seeing that it is no place for them beat a hasty retreat.

THE WIDOW'S SECRET (Two Parts—Dec. 15).—The cast: John Forrest and Jack Rance (J. Warren Kerrigan); Rose Day (Ethel Phillips); Richard Harding (Nobert A. Myles); Mrs. Rance (Mary Talbot); the Shepherd (August Wolf).

One afternoon in summer the Widow Rance, alone in her garden, saw what she thought was a ghost coming down the path to her home. It proved to be John Forrest, a millionaire, and with him was Rose Day, a summer girl, and so closely did Mr. Forrest resemble Jack, the widow's late husband, that it was with difficulty she answered his question concerning the location of a hotel.

That night memory carried the widow back twenty-five years. She saw herself as a bride of Jack Rance, trapper and woodsman; she saw the little home where their baby was born: she remembered the day when Jack was brought home to her mortally wounded. Dick Harding, his friend, had promised to protect the widow and child, but he had failed in his trust. And, then, one day little Jack, the baby, was lost and Mrs. Rance lived on—alone.

To John Forrest, smoking alone in the garden, came other memories. He saw himself as a little child, lost in the woods and found by a kindly old shepherd; he saw himself raised to manhood by the shepherd, who, on his deathbed, gave the lad his savings and sent him out into the world. The shepherd's waif had been successful and John Forrest, as he called himself, was now a millionaire.

Rose Day knew of his wealth and, prompted by her mother, deliberately angled for his heart, and they became engaged. Visiting at the same hotel was Richard Harding, who loved Rose, and hated Forrest because of his resemblance to Jack Rance, whom Harding had betrayed. Upon a hunting trip Harding caused Forrest to be wounded. Friends carried him to the nearest house, the widow's cottage, and there the birthmark on his shoulder confirmed her suspicions that John Forrest was her lost son.

Mrs. Rance, seeing Jack's love for Rose Day and realizing that it would spoil his chances for happiness, kept her secret, but Harding, overcome by remorse, told the story and Jack found his mother. Rose, though she scorned the widow, was forced to accept her as Jack's mother, and then one day Jack lost his fortune. Rose broke the engagement and Jack was left, but not alone, for with him was his mother who had always been true.

BLACKMAIL IN A HOSPITAL (Dec. 15).—The cast: Cookie (Ray Griffith); Nurse (Peggy Pierce).

The hospital patients love the beautiful nurse. Nurse has a sturdy admirer who sends them flying in all directions. Finally Cookie, who uses crutches, thrashes the muscular man until he is almost done for. This is seen by a trusty, who tells Cookie he must have $10 or he will tell on him. Cookie has no money and is worried. The injured man's only chance for recovery is to have blood transfused into his veins. The hospital authorities offer $10 for a volunteer. All refuse, but as the guilty Cookie is threatened with exposure by the trusty unless he gives him $10, he volunteers for the operation. The operation proceeds. As Cookie grows weaker he pinches the tube and stops the flow of blood from his veins and grows stronger. The doctors remedy this and conclude the operation. Cookie gives the trusty the $10.

The invalid regains his strength and asks to see the noble stranger that gave his blood so he could live for vengeance. Neither suspect the identity of the other. They meet and the muscular one assaults Cookie, who fires pistol shots at him. Confusion reigns as the patients flee in all directions. Finally, after a protracted battle, the rivals sink exhausted to the floor and the fumes of chloroform waft them into slumberland.

THE DOOMED GROOM (Dec. 19).—The cast: The Groom (Charlie Winninger); the Bride (Fatty Voss).

The groom was already late and to make matters worse he encountered a very beautiful lady while hurrying to the wedding. This lady had a very ill tempered husband who objected to strange men weeping on his wife's shoulder and so informed the groom. In fact Hubby made it plain to the groom that it would be healthier in another town for him and specified an hour at which it would be best to leave town.

When the groom arrived at the bride's house he encountered an irate father who, after being told by the groom that he had to leave town, made it very plain that he had better remain in town. Father, to make sure that the groom did not run away, relieved him of all his money. This placed the groom in a bad plight.

The groom feared the ill-tempered husband the most, so he decided to steal his money back and beat it, but in so doing ran afoul of both father and husband and finally decided that a slow death was preferable, and had the ceremony rushed to a quick conclusion.

POWERS.

LIFE OF THE SALAMANDER (Dec. 2).—The Ditmars Educational film opens on a salamander mother coiled about her eggs to keep them moist. A glimpse of the eggs discloses them to be jelly-like, and although the salamander is about as large as a frog, the eggs are a trifle larger than frog's eggs.

The eggs do not get their first bath until it rains, when the storm washes the eggs into the water, after which the cloudiness passes and they soon clear. This seems to have a good effect, for next we see that the tadpoles are hatching and are soon to come to life. When they are two days old they are thriving in a watch crystal.

At three months old they are busy little creatures who have to shift for themselves, catching insects in order to live. The salamander is as fond of the air as it is the water, and, though born in the water, they go to the top for air. Little by little its legs grow, and soon it has two pairs of sturdy legs. Its feathery gills also help it to get along in its younger days. When it grows to be a year old it has also increased considerably in size, as it is now seven inches long and has an enormous appetite.

At this age the gills grow shorter and the insect finds difficulty in eating under water. With this condition prevailing it will never do to stay in the water, and little by little it learns to breathe air, until finally it crawls out of the water a perfect salamander.

The European salamander shows a close relationship to a frog in the scaleless, damp skin and the head. There is quite a discrepancy, however, in the size. The last scene shows a happy family of salamanders living in the Catskill Mountains.

THE THREE JEANETTES (On Same Reel as Foregoing).—"The Three Jeanettes," shows three muscular and agile gymnasts gowned in Dutch costume. Their act consists of tumbling, weight-lifting, pyramid building, and various other acrobatic tricks, the comedy of which is supplied by a little fox terrier who is present all of the time on the stage in a sort of Marceline character and manages to impede where he attempts to assist.

He is always running between someone's legs in imminent danger of tripping up one or the other of the Jeanettes, but succeeds in escaping with sound limbs and unruffled temper.

HER SPEEDY AFFAIR (Dec. 13).—The cast: Billie (Billie Rhodes); Her Father (George French); Williams (Neal Burns); the Secretary (Ray Gallagher).

Billie has the "speed hug" and in spite of her father's protests, she indulges in 60-mile-an-hour sprints. Father warns her every time she goes out that she must be careful not to speed, but Billie pays no attention to his fatherly admonitions. While she and father are waiting for their car, she gets father aside and then, jumping into the car, gets the chauffeur to hurry away, leaving father behind. Billie then uses her wiles upon the unfortunate chauffeur and persuades him to let her drive. Now father's secretary is in love with Billie and has purchased a diamond ring in the event of her accepting him and is only waiting the occasion to broach the proposition.

When Billie gets home and thinks over the day's events she decides that she must have a racer so that no speed cop can catch her. She tries to persuade her father to get her a racer. But father can't see her for dust and puts his foot down on the request. While in the office she gets a tip that her father will make some money on a certain stock and decides that she will get in on the deal, too. She asks the secretary for a loan, but as he only has a small amount he cannot accommodate her. However, he proposes and offers the diamond ring, which she accepts thankfully. She quickly converts the ring into cash and buys the stock. When it has risen to a higher mark she sells and with the proceeds gets a car and redeems the ring. She tries out the new racer and it runs circles around everything on the pike. Quite satisfied, Billies leaves for home. On the way she races another car, which happens to have father in it. Father is forced to allow her to retain her new car but stipulates that she marry his secretary to hold her down.

WHERE THE HEATHER BLOOMS (Two Parts—Dec. 17).—The cast: Gordon McKay (Eddie Lyons); Lady Mary (Betty Compson); First Lord Chamberlain (Lee Moran); Royal Butler (Harry Rattenbury); Captain of the Guard (Gus Alexander); Mary's Mother (Stella Adams).

Gordon McKay has been living so extravagantly that his expenses are about twice the amount of his allowance and creditors have become to be daily callers at his home. While meditating what should be done he receives a letter from Scotland notifying him that it is the wish of a rich relative that he should come to Scotland, marry the Lady Mary and become the owner of a vast estate. In the castle the first lord chamberlain reads to Lady Mary and her mother a cablegram stating that Gordon will arrive very shortly. Mary is averse to being married to a man she has never seen; and finally her mother in response to her pleadings to be left alone, consents to present herself as Lady Mary.

Gordon arrives and as he passes up the street the villagers all bow and call him "My Lord." He determines to be as polite as they and bows back at them. There is a royal reception awaiting him at the castle. Mary's mother is introduced as the Lady Mary and Gordon finds out that there is some drawback to this inheritance he is to get, especially with the prospect of an old woman like the mother being his wife. He makes a kick, but they persuade him to withhold his decision for a few days. Gordon is treated like a king.

On one of his trips about Scotland he meets a handsome Highland lassie and becomes very much struck with her and admires the Highland costume that she wears. He asks her name and she pertly tells him she lives in the village and hurries away. The lord chamberlain takes Gordon on an inspection trip through the castle. He is shown the dungeon amid shudders, then the gun room and last the picture gallery. Among the pictures displayed is one of the Lady Mary and Gordon falls in love with the face at once. He inquires who the original of the picture was and is told that it is one of his ancestors, the Lady Grace, who has been dead a thousand years. Before retiring Gordon is told that the castle is haunted and late that night he hears many varied and strange noises. He determines to get out of the barred room he is in where he can have a running chance if cornered, and is making his way through the picture gallery when he determines to take another look at the beautiful picture.

He almost faints when the lady steps out of the frame, takes him by the arm and begins conversation with him. She tells him every night at 12 she comes out of the frame and is free to go where she pleases until the time the first rooster crows. If she does not return at that time Richard, the Black Knight, will proceed to punish her. Gordon enjoys his visit with the girl and the next morning offers to split the estate 50-50 if the marriage is called off with the woman he supposes is Lady Mary, but they are obdurate and he is forced to agree. He again meets the handsome maiden and notices the resemblance with the girl in the picture, but she quickly hurries away from him. She begs her mother to call off the farce, but the old lady is interested now and declares they must go on with it until they find out Gordon's real feelings.

That night Gordon again goes to the picture room and meets the girl. When the rooster crows she starts back, but he determines she shall not leave him and grabs her in his arms. Richard, whose portrait hangs near the one of Mary, comes out of his frame and chases them through the castle. Gordon is finally caught and taken to the dungeon and sentence of death is pronounced. The trusty axe is called into use and Gordon tries to think of his prayers, but determines to die brave. He bravely bends his neck for the fatal strike and is surprised when all come in and begin to laugh. The girl insists on telling her real title and there is a happy reunion. Gordon decides that that is the place for him and they settle where the heather blooms.

THE PRIMROSE PATH (Five Parts—Dec. 13).—The cast: Joan (Gladys Hanson); Ned Templeton (Hal Forde); Joan's father (H. Cooper-Willis); Helen (Nina Blake); Cartright (William J. Welsh).

Joan, a country girl, elopes with Ned Templeton, a young artist. They are married and go to Paris. For a time they are happy, then poverty overtakes them and Ned falls ill. Joan cannot make any money and he is dying because he has no food and no medicine to build up his strength. An art dealer has seen Joan and fallen in love with her. He offers her money to come to his rooms. She refuses, but finally, driven by Ned's great necessity, she goes.

Ned believes the money has come from her father. He recovers and to avoid the man, Joan persuades him to go to America. In this new land success comes to Ned through Cartwright, a millionaire, and his daughter, Helen, who has become attracted to the artist. Joan realizes that Ned is being led away from her. Cartwright buys a picture from Ned, called "The Primrose Path," for which Joan was the model. Ned is painting Helen's portrait. When it is finished Cartwright installs Ned in a fine studio.

Realizing that Joan would be out of place, he suggests that she remain in their cheap flat for a time. This almost breaks her heart, but she bows to his decision. As time goes on Helen and Ned are thrown more together and spend all their hours in each other's company. Ned's visits to Joan are fewer and fewer. Finally he sends her a check and a curt note telling her he can't see her that week. She understands and returns the check saying she is his wife, not his mistress. Then she disappears.

Refusing to accept Ned's support, she poses for a livelihood. In an art school which Ned has been made director she comes face to face with her husband. He upbraids her for being a model and she turns on him, saying it is the only thing she could do. Helen arrives on the scene to take Ned away to a dance. He slips out and the women face each other. "Why, you're the girl in 'The Primrose Path,'" says Helen. "Yes—and I am also Ned's wife," retorts Joan. Then, clutching the younger girl's shoulder, she forces her to listen to a story of the poverty of their Paris days when she sacrificed her body, her soul and her honor to keep Ned alive. "Oh, my father will recompense you," says Helen. Joan laughs, loud and shrill. "You're up for sale, Ned," she tells her husband, who returns at that moment. She looks from one to the other and tells Helen she gives Ned to her. But her heart is broken.

Ned begins to repent; things do not please him; he feels that he wants only his wife and the old days again. Helen tries to allure him in every way, but all is useless. Cartwright, seeing his spoiled daughter unhappy, decides to buy Joan over to give Ned his legal freedom. He sends for Joan, who comes. They tell Ned she has come to accept a large sum for him. He does not believe this, and so confident are they that this is what the woman will do that they hide Ned behind a portiere to watch the scene between his wife and Cartwright. When Joan comes the millionaire offers $100,000. She cannot understand. Then she looks at Helen and knows that they are trying to buy Ned from her. She turns on the girl, "You knew what I had done for him," she says, "and yet you thought I would accept money for him." Sadly she turns to go away alone, but Ned had heard enough. Rushing out, he takes her into his arms, pleading for forgiveness, and Joan sees that his heart is hers again.

BIG U.

COLONEL STEELE, MASTER GAMBLER (Dec. 16).—The cast: Colonel Steele (Murdock MacQuarrie); City Drummer (Arthur Moore); Mary Bell (Edna Payne).

In the village grocery store the usual rustic characters are assembled when the city drummer appears. The village "cut up" is present, too, and the city drummer wins all of the former's money in a game of craps. Colonel Steele enters and rebukes the drummer for teaching the boy the game of craps. The drummer scoffs at him and tells him that he knows nothing about the games of chance and, pulling out a deck of cards, offers them to him and asks him if he knows what they are. The Colonel tells them that, at one time, there was no man in the country who knew more about cards than he did. In response to tell his experiences, the old man begins to relate the story of his life.

Many years ago he was known as one of the coolest card players and the deadliest shot among the rough element that usually hangs around a mining camp. His old friend, Bill, had died and left his two children, Tom and Mary, his interest in a big mine. Thad Gray and Jim Blake, gamblers, plan to secure the mine. Thad accordingly plays up to the girl, while his partner works on her brother. Mary becomes infatuated with the dashing ways of Gray and before long they are engaged to be married. Jim succeeds in winning Tom to a life of drunkenness and gambling and in a game one night wins the boy's property by dishonest methods.

Colonel Steele tries in every day to save the children's inheritance for them, but they refuse to take his advice. At last the Colonel sees that he will have to beat the gamblers at their own game and challenges Blake to a game. He beats the gambler at his own game, wins back the boy's fortune and cleans the gambler out.

Thad and his partner, believing that their plans will be frustrated, decide to make a desperate move. Tom is bound and hid away, while Thad abducts the girl. In their intimate association, Steele has begun to love the girl dearly, but he keeps his secret.

Blake plants a dynamite cartridge under Steele's house and hides near by to see the successful end of his work. Steele, however, sees the fuse burning, casts the cartridge to one side, which is the place where Blake is hiding, and when the explosion takes place Blake is blown to atoms. Steele is told of the abduction and starts out in pursuit. He finally comes upon them just as Thad is forcing his attentions upon the girl. Steele arrives in the nick of time and although he gives him every opportunity to fight, Thad, being cowardly, will not take advantage of this, but slyly tries to kill Steele from ambush. Steele, however, is too quick for him; The girl persuades Steele not to kill him, as she realizes her love for him.

The two marry and go east to live a happy life.

As the story ends, the drummer tries in every way possible to show his admiration for such a brave man. His faith is rudely shaken, however, after Steele leaves and the storekeeper tells him that Steele is the biggest liar in the country and his never been outside of his own county. As the drummer leaves, Colonel Steele is seen at the rear of the store interested in a dime novel.

LAEMMLE.

THE BRIDE OF THE NANCY LEE (Two Parts—Dec. 16).—The cast: Myrtle Fairchild (Myrtle Gonzales); Alden Whitaker (Frank Newberg); Jacob Kittle (Val Paul); Grandfather (Frank Newberg); Grandmother (Myrtle Gonzales).

Outside a fierce storm is raging and grandmother is prevailed upon by her grandchildren to tell them a story. With grandfather's consent, the old lady tells the youngsters a story of her early life. In a dissolve we see Myrtle Fairchild, daughter of Abner Fairchild, a stern old sea captain, taking care of her father's home while he is away. She has a lover, Alden Whitaker, for whom she has an affection and who finally persuades her to marry him. The marriage is kept secret by Myrtle, who fears to tell her father. Jacob Kittle, another fisherman, but one of shady morals, is also in love with Myrtle. He is pressing his unwelcome attentions on the young girl one day when her husband unexpectedly enters and gives him a sound thrashing.

In retaliation Kittle tells the old sea captain when the latter puts into port of the close relations existing between Myrtle and Whitaker. The Captain is furious and, after wrecking the home, orders his daughter to get ready for a long voyage. For fear of her father's wrath, Myrtle does not tell of her marriage with Whitaker. The young husband, returning to the house and seeing the upset condition of everything, goes to the dock where he is attacked by the old sea captain, who, thinking he has killed the young man, casts him into the water. The cold plunge revives Whitaker, however. Kittle learns that Myrtle is to sail with her father and secures a berth as a sailor.

Months pass and the captain has become worse and worse in his severity towards the sailors. Finally a mutiny is the result and the captain and his mate are killed. Myrtle, now being totally unprotected, barricades herself and her child in a cabin. She keeps Kittle away from her by thrusting a pistol in his face.

On the homeward journey the vessel is wrecked in a storm near the home port, and the fishermen bring word to Whitaker, who has been living the life of a recluse and who has constantly thought of his wife, of the happening. When Whitaker reaches the schooner he finds no one but Myrtle and the child and succeeds in bringing them to shore.

The old grandmother finishes the tale and looks up to the tear-filled eyes of her husband. He comes over and puts his arms around her and tells the children of a superstition among the fisherfolk that on stormy nights the ghost of the Nancy Lee still appears on the bar and if they watch very closely they can see Jacob Kittle's signals for help.

THE WATER CLUE (Dec. 18).—The cast: The Husband (Harry D. Southard); The Wife (Elsie Jane Wilson); The Butler (J. R. Hope); The Friend (Hal Cooley); The Detective (Rupert Julian).

In the morning, the door of the library was found locked and the butler, upon investigating, finds his master's body inside. The investigation of the police develops the fact that the husband, wife and a friend were together in the library the previous night; an argument arose and hot words ensued. The friend was ordered out of the house by the husband and, despite the pleadings of the wife, the latter had left in an angry mood and vowed that the husband would regret his actions.

The butler is the chief witness and things look black for the wife. The friend is taken into custody and charged with the murder. A detective is called to work on the case, and after a very careful examination he discovers, hanging above the mantel, a shield and a heavy sword. The husband had been killed by a blow from this sword—but how? He has a theory and determines to prove it.

He has several witnesses present; he replaces the sword and shield and pours water upon the fastenings of the shield; the water swells the thongs, which bind the sword to the shield; they burst and fall to the floor, thus proving the fact that during the heavy rains of the night before, a leak had sprung in the wall, wetting the thongs and letting the sword fall, thus striking the husband and causing his death. In view of the fact that his death was not caused by human hands, the friend is released.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE

GRAFT (Episode No. 1, "Liquor and the Law"—Two Parts—Dec. 13).—The cast: Dudley Larnigan (William Sherer); Bruce Larnigan (Hobart Henley); Mrs. Larnigan (Nanine Wright); Roger Maxwell (L. M. Wells); Dorothy Maxwell (Jane Novak); Stanford Stone (Glen White); Murphy (Jack Curtis); Stone (Mark Fenton).

Dudley Larnigan, District Attorney of New York, has discovered the existence of a powerful graft trust. He had been unable to discover the identity of any member, but this he does know; the trust consists of fifteen members. His activities in running the trust to earth causes this powerful organization to send him a warning. When this is unheeded, his death is planned. Bruce Larnigan, the son, is a young attorney, who is ambitious to follow in his father's footsteps as a champion of reform. The elder Larnigan is killed. Bruce swears to avenge his father and determines to carry out his unfinished work. Therefore he becomes a candidate for District Attorney. The graft trust fears the young man, should he be elected, so Murphy, head of the liquor trust, is appointed to bring about his defeat.

Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust and a member of the graft trust, is much interested in Bruce and his ambitions. She is an ardent suffragist and addresses a large meeting. In the course of her remarks she says: "We are not allowed the vote, but we can make our presence felt at the polls just the same; on election day let every woman go to the polls with a man—father, brother, husband or sweetheart; and if none of these is available get a man some way, take him to the polls and see that he votes right."

The idea finds instant favor and its novelty appeals to women in all walks of life. The novel turnout on election day surpasses all expectations. The gangsters and poll workers are powerless in the face of the mob of women. They hastily report to Murphy, one of the grafters, who calls Stone, head of the graft trust, for advice. In a conference it is planned to lure Bruce to Murphy's den on the East Side and either make him commit himself to the service of the trust or put him out. Stone is, of course, not suspected by Bruce. They are friends in a way—also rivals for the hand of Dorothy, Maxwell's daughter. Stone pens a note which seems to have come from the trust, giving the address of their meeting place and the signal that will admit one.

In Bruce's headquarters Stone ejects a suspicious looking man who has been hovering around. In the scuffle the man drops the note. Dorothy picks it up and hands it to Bruce. He sees within his grasp a chance to learn the identity of the trust heads and at the same time strike the first blow to avenge his father. He goes to the address indicated in the note, Dorothy driving him there in her car. The promptness with which he is admitted to the dive and the sound of the door being locked behind him arouses Dorothy's suspicions, so she notifies the police.

Inside Bruce is confronted by Murphy and given the alternative of signing an incriminating paper or being killed by the thugs present. Bruce realizes the trap he has walked into, but more than all else he realizes the fact that before him is one of the graft trust and one of his father's murderers. He springs at Murphy and seizes him by the throat; the thugs draw knives and rush on Bruce. He releases Murphy and, picking up a chair, for a time fights off his assailants; but the odds are too great and Bruce is backed to the wall. Feeling the outside electrical wiring to the lights, he pulls them down and leaves the room in darkness. The dim figures of the thugs are seen closing in silently. Several blows are struck, a man screams, then comes a rush of daylight as the police break down the door. Murphy is on the floor, dead, killed by mistake in the darkness. Bruce is hanging on the chandelier, well out of danger.

The meeting of the trust shows one vacant chair. All seem to see in the vacant chair the vision of Bruce vowing vengeance over his father's dead body.

ALMOST A PAPA (Dec. 14).—The cast: Tom Conley (King Baggot); His Wife (Edna Hunter); Mother (Hattie Delaro).

Tom Conley is a traveling man, selling suspension bridges. Not having made a sale in five years, he is reprimanded by the firm and ordered to get busy. His wife, who has secretly cherished the idea of purchasing a dog, purchases one while her husband is on a six months' business trip. Not having the ready cash, and hearing the cry of an old clothes man, she sells a lot of Tom's old clothes to raise the necessary amount. Fearing to tell her husband that she is going to purchase a dog, she writes him a diplomatic letter, intimating that there will soon be an addition to the family, whereupon the astonished Tom, who has been away for five months, decides that the new addition is a baby. He goes wild with joy, throws up his job and celebrates hilariously by getting intoxicated and telling several mothers how they should handle their children.

Upon receiving a wire from his wife that the new addition has arrived, he hurries home, and in a local toy store he purchases a number of baby playthings. Upon his arrival home he is informed by the maid that his wife has gone to his mother's. Then a great idea strikes him. He will fit up a nursery for the infant. A room is set aside for the purpose. Swings and all sorts of things are hung from the ceiling. In the midst of all the preparations he steps on a gocart, slips and injures himself.

The doctor is summoned. The patient is put to bed and he thinks of his accident insurance policy. Wife returns home to find her husband seriously injured. She hurries to his side when he inquires about the new addition. She bids him be quiet, as there is plenty of time to see it. He inquires for his accident insurance policy, telling her that it is in his blue suit hanging in the closet, and then—she discovers that it was the very suit that she had sold to the old clothes man in order to buy the dog.

Unable to stay in bed with a vision of an infant before him, Tom hobbles out of his room and goes down stairs and begs his wife to let him see the newcomer. The wife steals from the room and returns on tiptoes with a large clothes basket lined with eiderdown and covered with a silk spread. Then Tom bends over the delicate basket and, to his utter amazement, blinks up at him a cute little puppy.

THE VACUUM TEST (Dec. 17).—The cast: John Foster (J. Livingston); Irene (Constance Johnson); Robert Arnold (Malcolm Blivens); Spike Gans (Ray Hanford).

John Foster, inventor, is married to Irene, a woman much younger than himself and full of the vitality of youth, and is very popular in society. Foster, although an inventive genius, is a dreamer and a student. He spends much of his time in his laboratory, and in consequence Irene depends on other men when attending social functions. Although Robert Arnold, an old sweetheart, is seen most commonly with her, she looks upon him merley as a friend, for she is much in love with her scholarly husband.

At seeing Irene so much in the company of Arnold, Foster's jealous suspicions are aroused, and he finally forbids Arnold the house. Foster suggests that there should be children to bind them closer together, and Irene tries to show him some small clothes upon which she has been sewing for some time. He, having become absorbed in his work, fails to get her meaning. At last he decides to put her to the test and fakes up a sudden call to the city, with the idea of returning and finding her in an embarrassing position.

The same night "Spike" Gans, release convict, is turned down by his sweetheart on account of being in low funds, and, to get money he starts out on his old vocation to "crack a crib." He has previously spied out the Foster premises and has located what he supposes to he their safe, hut which in reality is a vacuum cabinet, one of Foster's inventions. Arnold calls upon Irene, but is not permitted to stay, and in leaving sees Gans slinking in the shadows near the Foster home. He follows him and sees him enter through a window. Following him into the house he watches him open the cabinet and find out his mistake, sees Irene return and find Gans at work.

While this scene is going on Foster, according to his plan, returns unexpectedly, hears voices in his laboratory and helieves it is Arnold. Gans conceals himself in the cabinet, with the warning that he will shoot if the door is opened, before Foster enters. Foster accuses Irene of hiding some one while he was away, and starts to look. His search leads him to the door of the cabinet, but, at Irene's pleading, he does not open the door. Instead he starts the mechanism which forces out all the air inside the cabinet, making it impossible for one to live. At this Irene hecomes frightened and begs him to open the door, and he, thinking she is pleading for the life of her lover, is about to strike her when she screams that she is being delivered of her child.

The sudden knowledge of the forthcoming event brings Foster to himself and he hends every energy to restoring Irene, who has fainted. Upon regaining consciousness she reminds him of the man still in the cabinet. When he opens the door Gans staggers out, gasping for breath. Excited over the happy news, Foster pays little attention to him and he would have escaped but for the intervention of Arnold, who has heen a silent spectator of the previous scenes. Foster is so excited, proud and pleased over what he has learned from Irene that he allows Gans to escape and has apparently forgotten all his suspicions against Arnold. Arnold congratulates them hoth and leaves them happy in their prospective joy.

CENTAUR.

"THE WINNING OF JESS" (Two Parts—Dec. 23).—The cast: Sam Crosby (Chas. Gay); Mrs. Crosby (Jane Keckley); Jess Crosby (Margaret Gibson); Tom Gunn (Roy Watson); Charles Robbins (Capt. Jack Bonavita); William Robbins (Thos. P. Morrissey); John Robbins, William's son (John Oaker); "Baby" Jess (at 5 years) (Maxime Schneider).

Charles Robbins, a prosperous business man, returns home one evening to find himself and child deserted by his wife. Hearthroken, he decides to lead the life of a hermit, and goes to Arizona with his child. About the same time Mr. and Mrs. Crosby, ranchers in Arizona, lose their baby and grieve deeply over its loss. Robbins reaches the Crosby home, and places Jess, his child on the Crosby doorstep and then hides until he sees the Crosbys find the child and take it into their home. They soon forget their late sorrow and accept the little one as a gift from heaven. Robbins goes deeper into the woods and builds himself a hut. He wishes to watch over his daughter without revealing his identity.

A lapse of five years shows the baby, now known as Jess Crosby, a lovable member of the family and the pet of the cowboys. One day she ventures too far into the woods and is attacked by a bear, but the ever-watchful father comes to her aid in time and kills the animal. The hermit is overwhelmed with thanks by the Crosbys and is invited to make his home with them but refuses.

Ten years later Jess is wooed by Tom Gunn, a manly cowboy. One day while out walking with Tom she stumhles over a fallen tree at the brink of a ravine, falls and lodges unconscious in a tree on the ledge below and near the bottom. She is rescued by Gunn with the assistance of Robbins, who, out hunting, has just reached the spot; Robbins kills a puma which is making its way towards Jess while Tom draws up to safety the unconscious girl with the aid of a lariat.

William Robbins, a brother of Charles the hermit, with his son John, decides to visit the recluse. They are made guests at the Crosby home. John falls in love with Jess, displeasing Gunn who calls him to task. Jess is angered at the intrusion and in retaliation promises her hand to John. Shortly after this Gunn and the hermit are out on a hunt. Jess and John about the same time leave the ranch for a walk. In the woods they encounter a couple of pumas and run into the hermit's hut, chased by the pumas. The hermit and Gunn hear the girl's screams, hurry to the scene and rescue them. John has shown an evidence of cowardice which Jess notices and compares with the bravery of Gunn.

John, left alone, also feels his unworthiness and goes to Gunn, offering to release Jess. Jess who has also gone to the hut, listens outside and hears John's talk. She is torn by conflicting emotions. While in this predicament a near-tragedy is being enacted inside the hut. A puma, which had effected an entrance while all were absent, makes its presence known as it is about to spring on the hermit. John sees it in time to pull the hermit out of its way, and its leap lands it through the door into the open, and just by Jess, who screams in fright and terror. At this instance Crosby and William Robbins arrive while the hermit, Gunn and John come out of the hut. The hrothers, the hermit and William Rohhins, recognize each other, the hermit claims Jess as his daughter. Jess accepts John Rohbins for her cousin and Tom Gunn for her husband.

YOU HAVE READ IN THE NEWSPAPERS ABOUT
D'ANNUNZIO'S GREAT CHARACTER CREATION

MARVELOUS MACISTE

IN 6 PARTS

The Giant of Cabiria

POSSIBLY YOU SAW HIM IN THE GREATEST FILM EVER MADE

"CABIRIA"

YOU CAN SEE HIM NOW IN A MODERN MELODRAMATIC COMEDY

NOT ONLY PASSED BY THE NATIONAL BOARD OF CENSORSHIP

BUT ENDORSED IN A SPECIAL REPORT AS FOLLOWS - ARTISTIC VALUE - EXCELLENT - ENTERTAINMENT VALUE - EXCELLENT "FULL OF ORIGINAL SITUATIONS WHICH GIVE SUSTAINED AND INTENSE INTEREST. SPLENDIDLY STAGED AND FINELY ACTED. A RETURN ENGAGEMENT PRODUCTION"

HE IS NOT AN AFRICAN!

Did you see Cabiria? If you missed that masterpiece, you have certainly heard about it, and of course you know about the wonderful "giant" in that great film. His work was so unusual that he became the star of this greatest of all photoplays, even though the part was not originally considered a star part.

And now you can see this "wonder man" again. No, he is not a colored giant from Africa—he is a white gentleman.

"Maciste" was his name in "Cabiria," and now and forevermore he will probably be known as "Maciste." The new feature film in which this "super-man" has been starred, was written especially for him and it is a wonder work of amazing acts, tantalizing thrills and stirring struggles. Maciste fights with scores of men and seems to enjoy the battles.

The most remarkable thing about this very unusual film is the fact that it is both comedy and tense, exciting drama. There is an element of mystery which holds and the action moves with a speed that will bring you to the edge of your seat.

If you didn't see "Cabiria," surely you have heard of "The Giant in Cabiria." Here is an opportunity to see him in a modern melodramatic comedy, that gives him every opportunity to display his superhuman power. And he is not only a marvel of strength, he is a finished actor.

The Moving Picture World:
"Entirely new and highly ingenious. Will undoubtedly prove to be a big drawing card wherever shown. It grips the interest from the onset."

"Wid" Gunning, of Wid's Film and Film Folk:
"A series of thrills. A sure fire winner. Star a marvel."

Motion Picture News:
"Something new in every scene. The big thing of the season up to this moment. It is the sort of thing that anyone will enjoy immensely. There is a directness and incision unusual in melodrama. It will amuse, entertain and satisfy because of its novelty and ingenuity."

The Dramatic Mirror:
"It is thrilling, exciting, intensely interesting and laughably amusing. The most startling claim it has for popular approval is its novelty and ingeniousness. We are free to admit that this offering was one of the most entertaining that it has been our pleasure to witness."

The Billboard:
"A welcome novelty. The most entertaining of all the exploits type of production seen to this day. Radiates with what is called personality. Never before has there been such a figure as Maciste, who is always a comedian."

Variety:
"Maciste's strong work has never been equalled. He will surely appeal in this."

The Clipper:
"A pleasing entertainment. Countless thrilling situations."

The New York Morning Telegraph:
"Is entertaining and thrilling. Will amuse, entertain and satisfy because of its novelty and ingenuity."

Motography:
"It is a novelty in these days to meet with a story, written or filmed in which a hero establishes himself as he does in this new feature, MARVELOUS MACISTE. Maciste is the character that remains foremost in the mind of nearly everyone who reviewed CABIRIA, the world's greatest spectacle."

"THE SOLUTION OF THE MYSTERY" (Two Parts—Dec. 13).—The cast: Bessie Mitchell (Vivian Rich); Franklyn Davis (Alfred Vosburgh); Wilbur Mitchell (Charles Newton); James T. Willard (Roy Stewart).

Mitchell, a well known investigator, seeks the seclusion of the suburbs to prepare a report on city vice conditions. He is accompanied by his daughter, Bess, whose engagement to Franklyn Davis, a wealthy society man, has just been announced. The peace of the household is disturbed by a series of mysterious occurrences. Bess is writing to her fiance, when she senses another's presence in the room, and turning sees a man disappearing. Her father, being a man of practical common sense, laughs it off as a mere illusion, and tells her that the house was once the rendezvous of a gang of counterfeiters, and perhaps they have left their trace behind.

Bess fails to hear from Franklyn but a letter from a friend advises her that he has left to visit her and she wonders why he does not arrive. Meanwhile Jack Willard, an agent of the International Purity League comes to confer with Michell, and incidentally becomes deeply interested in Bess, paying her much attention. Mitchell himself has a peculiar experience. While he is absent from his study for a few minutes, a portion of his report disappears.

Meanwhile Franklyn has been waylaid by two crooks, imprisoned and forced to write to Bess breaking their engagement. Their motive is to get Mitchell out of the way and get possession of his money by marrying Bess to the fake Willard. This sinister purpose is mockingly unfolded to the helpless Franklyn who sees a way to escape. Jack's proposal to Bess is rejected and he is dismissed. Then Bess disappears.

Franklyn manages to get hold of a piece of mirror with which he signals for help, and by chance plays the reflection on Mitchell's desk. Mitchell sends for the police to stop the annoyance, and they locate the source of the sunspot and Franklyn, who tells his story and is released. A second attempt is made on Mitchell's life and seizing the mysterious hand, pulls the crook from his hiding place. Franklyn arrives with the police and they rescue Bess whom they find imprisoned by Willard who is trying to compel her to marry him.

"SPIDER BARLOW'S SOFT SPOT" (Dec. 17).—The cast: Spider Barlow (George Field); Spike (Sid Algier); Mr. Perry (George Webb); Mrs. Perry (Winifred Greenwood).

It is the day before Christmas and all through the house Spider and Spike find no indication that the holiday will be for them a merry one. Spider and Spike are burglars. Walking the streets late that day, they come upon a group of urchins looking longingly into a toy-shop window, at a brilliant assortment of toys and other things that go to make a merry Christmas for the little folks. The soft spot in Spider's heart is touched as he sees these children with their noses pressed against the glass. He proposes to Spike that they combine their talents and give the youngsters a Christmas which they long will remember.

The Christmas preparations for the wealthy Perry home are being made. The children have gone to bed and father and mother Perry are busily decorating the tree and setting out toys of every kind and description. When they retire, Spider and Spike enter. They play Santa Claus with reverse English, filling their bag with the presents banked high around the Perry tree. The Perry children are quarrelsome little mites, and greedy. There is little sympathy for them when Spider and Spike strip the presents from their tree.

Dressed in Santa Claus garb, they pass policemen unmolested. They make straight for the homes of the urchins where they deposit the many toys they have stolen. Wide-eyed urchins in the morning—and Spider and Spike feel amply repaid for their night of thievery, by the happy little faces that wish them merry Christmas. The two are further repaid when Mrs. Malone, to whom belong a number of the urchins, invites them both to dinner. Spider and Spike fall to with a vengeance and none in the barely furnished room are more happy than these reprobates.

BEAUTY.

MAKING OVER FATHER (Dec. 4).—The cast: Hubert Haines (Frank Borzage); Gloria Pembroke (Neva Gerbert); her father (William Carroll).

Hubert Haines returns from college, and asks Gloria to be his wife. Father won't hear of the affair, and summons his head clerk, Mr. Gayboy, whom, he announces, he has already picked out to marry his daughter. "It's only your father's bad liver which stands in our way," the young man confides to the broken-hearted Gloria.

Next day Hubert kidnaps father and imprisons him in a tent in the woods. Father feeds on pills and fresh air. His whereabouts are discovered by a detective, hired by Mr. Gayboy, and a party rushes to his rescue. To the astonishment of all, father fights the entire squad, single-handed, and appears to be perfectly delighted with his new surroundings. Hubert and Gloria arrive on the scene. "You have shown me the way to health!" cries the ex-dyspeptic, shaking the young man warmly by the hand. "I congratulate myself, sir, on having won such a useful son-in-law." Gloria invites the whole party to an al fresco engagement luncheon on the mountain top.

A GIRL, A GUARD, AND A CARPET (Dec. 14).—The cast: Martin Fowler (John Steppling); Jessie, his Daughter (Carol Holloway); Billie, a Cub Reporter (John Sheehan); The Minister (Rae Berger).

When Martin Fowler discovers that his daughter, Jessie, is in love with a cub reporter, Fowler promptly frowns on the match. Jessie declares to her father that she and the young scribe will elope, whereupon father engages the services of a strong man, offering the giant $500 on the condition that he keep his daughter constantly in sight and prevent her elopement with Billie. For some days the guard is vigilant and the attempted elopements are thwarted.

The lovers agree to meet in an out-of-the-way place. Jessie nimbly outruns the human watchdog and is whisked away by Billie in an auto. The guard gives chase, via motorcycle and arrives at the minister's in time to tear the bride-to-be from the waiting arms of her "almost" husband. Jessie is taken home and locked in the garret where she discovers a number of compromising photographs, dealing with father's days as a gay young blade. She has an inspiration.

The telltale photographs are turned over to Billie, who in his capacity as reporter, calls on Mr. Fowler and threatens to print the pictures. Father is wrathy and Billie calmly informs him that the pictures will be printed unless father consents to give Billie his daughter "to have and to hold." Father Fowler calls Billie's bluff and tells him to go ahead and print the pictures. Some hours later Billie returns to Jessie's father with the proof sheets of the article, highly embellished with the photographs. It is more than father can bear. Relentlessly the young reporter insists that father pay his price, whereupon the minister is called in and the knot is tied.

It is a bad day for father, for in addition to losing his daughter, he is forced to pay the strong man the $500, which had been promised for services performed.

"TWO HEARTS AND A THIEF" (Dec. 18).—The cast: Jack Nelson (Frank Borzage); Neva Winters (Neva Gerber); Mrs. Winters (Lucille Ward); Mr. Winters (Rae Berger).

Jack Nelson, a clerk in the office of Henry Winters, a business man, is in love with Neva, his employer's daughter and wishes to marry her. Neva's parents object but she is more than willing. Jack writes a letter to Neva and asks her to elope with him that night. Winters writes a letter to his brokers and asks them to buy all the K. T. O. stock for him they can get. He gives the letter to Jack to deliver. Jack starts on his errand and goes around by Neva's to deliver her letter via her young brother. He meets Neva instead and makes arrangements to elope with her that night. He goes to the brokers' office and delivers Neva's letter in mistake for the one Winters had written.

That night he goes to Neva's house to get her, and sees a burglar clambering into Mrs. Winters' room, from a ladder. He follows the burglar into the house and is captured by the intruder and locked in a closet. The burglar also robs him, taking the letter that Winters had written to his brokers. Neva looking out of her window, sees Jack enter her mother's room and rushes down to the foot of the ladder to warn him. The burglar comes out and is promptly embraced by Neva, who thinks he is Jack. The burglar runs and is pursued by a policeman. In his flight he throws away the letter and other things he had stolen. The letter goes through the open window of Winter's office and lands on his desk.

In the meantime, K. T. O. stock takes a sudden big drop and Winters remaining at his office late faces certain ruin. He opens the letter and finds that his brokers have never received his letter. He is saved from financial ruin. A messenger arrives from his brokers bringing Jack's letter to Neva. He rushes home in a rage to prevent the elopement and finds that Mrs. Winters has just discovered Jack in her closet. Explanations follow and the young people eventually are forgiven and permitted to be married.

leads and return to the plane she once knew. Mark Henley, the boss of the dance hall, is owner of her—body and soul—and he has bullied her into subjection. At length, however, she finds courage to steal away, leaving a note saying that she is to begin life anew.

A woman of a different sort has arrived, not long since, in the little mountain village. She is Helen, the school marm. Hal Newcomb, a prospector, meets her over in the woods, where the wayside preacher is telling the simple mountain folk how to serve their God, and until the schoolhouse can be finished, Helen does her teaching out of doors, and Hal finds it convenient to spend much of his time with the girl. Boss Henley forces his attentions on Helen, and though constantly rebuffed, he refuses to be discouraged.

Mark sets out to force Madge to return to him. The dance hall girl, worn out, takes refuge in Hal's cabin and he makes her comfortable for the night. Boss Henley discovers her in the morning. Hal fights to defend the girl and Mark, beaten, leaves in an ugly temper. Meeting Helen, he informs her that a woman is living at Hal's cabin. Helen questions Hal, who admits Madge's presence. The young teacher upbraids the prospector and leaves, unwilling to hear an explanation.

The circuit rider returns and commends Hal for his actions. He also informs Helen of Hal's kindness, and Helen, repentant, hastens to help Hal in his care for the girl. Madge, unwilling to make trouble, leaves. Mark returning to Hal's cabin, finds Helen and kidnaps her. She is tied to a tree and left to her fate. Madge, wandering in the woods, comes upon her. She frees the girl, and then compelled by the stupor of her illness, believes that she must sacrifice herself in place of Helen. Helen rushes to Hal and guides him to where the half conscious Madge is calmly awaiting death.

THERE'S GOOD IN THE WORST OF US (Two Parts—Dec. 10).—Tiring of the East and the conventionalities of the social circle in which she spent her time, Carol Danforth, handsome and extremely wealthy in her own right, starts for the West. Arriving at Holden she proceeded to the Eagle House, the only hotel the surroundings hoasted, and registered. That same evening, Carol wandered into the "Hole in the Wall," a notorious dive operated by the equally notorious "Black Pete," who, according to the best informed citizens of the town, boasted that the handle of his Colt bore more notches than any similar weapon "for miles around." "Black Pete," at sight of the beautiful young girl, decides to claim her for his own. But Paul Ainsley, her fiance, who made the trip West with her, decides to interfere, and protests against her apparent friendship for the notorious dive-keeper.

Later, Ainsley visits the resort operated by "Black Pete." He warns him to have nothing more to do with the girl. Informed hy the dive-keeper that he had promised to shoot and kill the first easterner he met, Ainsley, fearing for his life, flees the place. While taking a dangerous turn in the road, his mount stumbles, hurling him heavily to the ground. Later, when several riders bring their horses to a stop and examine the body lying in the roadway, they announce him as dead, and bring the body hack to town with them. Some days later, "Black Pete," togged out in the best store clothes he could procure, called on Carol at her hotel and told her how, years before, while attending college in the East, Ainsley, pretending to love his sister, won her confidence and then wronged her, and fled. Then Carol wakes to the realization that she loves this burly man of the plains.

NOVELTY.

A MUSICAL MIX-UP (Dec. 8).—The cast: Edward Pickett (Edward Boulder); Ella Lee (Dorothy Graham).

Ella Lee gives piano and singing lessons. Edward Pickett, smitten with Ella's charms, opens a banjo school across the hall. The mischievous Miss Lee persuades two old farmers and a hulking country fellow to palm themselves off as deaf-and-dumb and blind applicants for banjo lessons.

They arrive in rapid succession, and Pickett is in despair. However, he notices that when he picks the strings of his instrument, the two old duffers cannot keep their feet still. He begins to suspect that they are not so deaf as they appear. At last, over a box of good cigars, the entire joke comes out. Pickett plans a sweet revenge upon Miss Ella. The revenge takes the form of ardent wooing—and a few weeks later a big sign reads: "Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pickett, Piano and Banjo Instruction."

FALSTAFF.

THE CONDUCTOR'S CLASSY CHAMPION (Dec. 13).—The cast: Conductor (Riley Chamberlain); Cordelia (Louise Emerald Bates); Suitor (Frank McNish).

Conductor 786, affectionately known as "Con," has a peculiar faculty of being lucky at the right time. Through his own ability he outmaneuvered a rival for the affections of the woman he loved, but when that rival planned vengeance it was Con's luck that saved him. The railroad company had been greatly annoyed by rowdies creating trouble on the cars, and the employes had been warned that the next outbreak would result in the dismissal of the conductor who failed to suppress it. Con was not a fighting man—in fact, he was particularly meek—and the wicked rival hired two ugly chaps, instructing them to create trouble on Con's car and cause his dismissal.

Fortunately for Con, he heard the villains discussing the plot. More fortunately, the day before he had saved the life of a small dog, and won the gratitude of its owner, "The Great Cordelia." This lady was the champion female hammer thrower of the United States and remarkably muscular. In his time of stress Con remembered Cordelia, and calling upon her won the promise of her aid. Cordelia was on the car when the would-be disturbers arrived. They started to fight and argue, and the passengers fled in dismay—all except Cordelia. That brave woman seized the pair of disputants, carried them out of the car, and then proceeded to make a new long-distance hurling record. After which she went to the superintendent's office and gave Con all the credit.

The modest conductor was summoned before his chief and warmly praised. The superintendent said: "This lady declares you did her a great service, and saw two ruffians, who insulted her, punished." To which Con replied, privately aware that his ambiguous words were truthful: "The lady is right—I saw that they were punished." Con's rival never annoyed him again. The report that was brought back hy his lieutenants was so terrifying that he decided not to annoy Con, and the conductor's wooing of the lady was not again interrupted.

THANHOUSER.

HIS VOCATION (Two Parts—Dec. 7).—The cast: Beata (Grace De Carlton); Dan (Bert Delaney); Eulalie, Beata's little sister (Helen Badgley); A Nurse (Ethyle Cooke); Porter (Eugene Moore, Jr.).

Dan Dinsmore, natural-born fun-maker, fell in love with Beata McBride. The two young people saw a great deal of one another at the gay beach resort where Dan had saved Beata from drowning, and little sister Eulalie came in for no small share of her big sister's admirer's attentions. But no clown in a circus ever could think of proposing marriage to a girl like Beata—so Dan went away.

Some months later, Dan's circus came to Beata's home town. Eulalie won big sister's promise to take her to see the clowns. But the day of the show the little girl became very ill. Her fever rose, and anxious Beata watched beside the delirious child, who called incessantly for "the clown." The doctor had said, "Don't deny her anything she wants. For I fear to do so would be fatal." How could he know that Eulalie would beg for a circus clown? At last, Beata, desperate, phoned the manager of the show. "I will pay any price," she told him, "if you will send one of the clowns to my house to amuse my very sick little sister."

Dan seized the opportunity. He entertained Eulalie with all his funniest antics, taking care that neither she nor Beata should guess who he was. But the following day, Beata called on the manager. Eulalie was safe—and she insisted that the clown be rewarded. When Dan, innocent of what was wanted of him, entered the room, it would have been hard to say which was most surprised—the girl, the manager or the clown. Dan discovered that his vocation was by no means a stumbling block in the way of his love. And then he claimed his reward, while Eulalie, when a few weeks later she returned to her playmates, restored to health, vowed that Dan was the greatest man in the world.

It must be candidly admitted that "The Other Girl" is not the greatest picture ever produced. It lacks the spectacular ponderosity of "Cabiria," the seductiveness of "Carmen," the sensuous appeal of the nude. Its comedy is not broad farce or slap-stick. It lacks grim death and daring leaps. The photography is not flawless, nor is its direction absolutely masterful.

But, for consistency of story, direction, acting and photography it stands out a worthy first production. Its name and the name of its author, Augustus Thomas, its great success enjoyed on the oral stage and the wide popularity of its principal artists are assets that make "The Other Girl" a splendid commercial proposition. It is a wholesome sort of drama sprinkled with natural humor. Its scenes are splendidly staged and the large cast is made up of distinctive types. Perhaps the most prominent among the players is James J. Corbett, erstwhile champion of the world, and popular hero actor. His "Kid Garvey" of the Thomas play is refreshing in its originality. Mr. Corbett's acting is natural and convincing, and he fits the part assigned him like a glove.

Paul Gilmore's "Rev. Bradford" is a delight. Even when one considers the long line of important parts Mr. Gilmore has essayed in the past it is not difficult to say this is his greatet achievement.

William Muldoon, once world's champion wrestler and now a famous health builder, looms up prominently in the story's telling.

Edith Luckett and Becky Bruce, popular young leading women of the legitimate stage, do fine justice to difficult and exacting roles.

The supporting principals fully anticipate the author's ideals and render satisfactory service.

An automobile accident on crowded Broadway, numerous fistic encounters between "Kid Garvey" and others, and an imposing theatre interior are among the "big" situations displayed, including a clever visualization of Corbett's early struggles to attain prominence and wealth.

Realistic settings evidently prepared without regard for expense impress one with the thought that Raver-Thomas productions are not to be stinted.

"The Other Girl" is no doubt a splendid entertainment and should be a success. It has a valuable title, its author is renowned, its stars famous and its story consistently told by professionals. The public will appreciate this kind of picture.

BOASTING

about one's own picture might be construed as an indication of over-confidence.

A NEW VENTURE

should be signalized by definite, conservative statements—pessimistic perhaps—but so carefully prepared as not to mislead.

The satisfaction of giving more than one promises is much greater than that gained by promising more than one is able to deliver.

DECEIVING

the exhibitor is as fatal to the deceiver as misleading the public.

Therefore, with apologies to Harrison, Milne, Denig, Thew, Judson, Cooper, Blaisdell, Condon, "Sime," Holcomb, Smith, Buckley, Ennis and Grau, and other worthy critics, "The Other Girl" suffers its first review.

HER CONFESSION (Dec. 12).—The cast: Flower (Florence La Badie); Her Mother (Carey L. Hastings); Emerald Vinton (Thomas A. Curran); Margaret Van Allen (Kathryn Adams); Father Morey (Ernest C. Warde).

An unknown girl, dying on a hard cot in a prison cell, whispers to her father confessor the story of her crime. "It wasn't a year ago that I met him. We lived in the country—mother and I. Father was dead. Mother always had kept me so much to herself. We had few friends—and I never had a lover. Then he came. Mother never knew, from the time I first met him in the woods, where he was sketching. I was garlanded in flowers that day, and I was kneeling by the brook, looking at myself in the water. He told me I was beautiful and begged me to pose for him. At first I was afraid.

"But day after day I went to him little by little, and I forgot to fear him—and he told me he loved me, and I—oh, I never can tell you how he wound himself about my heart! He could have had my life, had he asked it. Then he went away. I waited for weeks—for months—but no word came. At last, to remain longer unwed, would have meant disgrace to me and a broken heart for my mother. I went to seek him. I found him in the arms of another woman, who laughed at me and ordered him to turn me out in the streets. Not a word or look of love had he for me—only anger, because I was imperilling his ambitious plans. But I felt that if I could see him alone, all would yet be right. So that night I went back to him. He was sleeping. Suddenly the memory of the other woman came between him and me, and I picked up a strange knife lying on the table, thinking to kill him as he slept and so have him for my very own. But the knife slipped to the floor. I loved him—I would renounce him forever. I turned to go—and there, in the doorway, she stood. She spoke angrily, and he woke. He flung me aside, and I fell. The knife was beside me. I can't remember the rest—only, as he turned to drive me from him—it happened." The girl's eyes closed. The priest stooped to catch the last, faint whisper: "His child—dies with me. Father—can there be—forgiveness—for such as I?"

CENTAUR STAR FEATURES.

THE MYSTERY OF CARTER BREENE (Three Parts—Dec. 22).—The cast: Alan Dare (Crane Wilbur); Darrell Shane (Gordon Mullen); Hon. Carter Breene (J. H. Lynch); Arthur Breene (Carl Von Schiller); Margery Breene (Celia Stanton); Peters (Edward Collins); Mrs. Williams (Mrs. Spencer); Hodge (Mr. Singh).

Margery, the adopted daughter of Hon. Carter Breene, becomes acquainted with Allen Dare, much to the displeasure of Darrell Shane, who has an affection for the girl. That evening Arthur, the profligate son of Breene, comes home under the influence of a drug, and in the presence of Shane, Dare, Peters, Breene's servant, the father has a new will drawn up which bequeaths everything to Margery. As Breene sits in the darkened room by himself, he is mysteriously murdered. Peters gives the alarm; the police are summoned, and upon the demands of Shane, Margery, who had previously visited her father and who had tried to awaken him from what she supposed to be a sleep by drawing her scarf over his face thereby getting blood stains on it, is arrested. Shane also orders Dare's arrest, but he manages to escape to his car, which is covered in black cloth.

At a fork in the roads, Dare, heavily masked, overtakes the police auto carrying Margery, and at the point of a pistol, gets the girl into his car, and speeds away to his home. As Dare's servant, Hodge, is removing the black covering from his master's beautiful white car, a stranger with a white mask jumps out, unobserved, from the auto, runs and disappears. The next day the coroner's jury finds Margery guilty of the crime.

That night, as Dare, masked, and his car again shrouded in black, goes to the home of Breene to secretly secure evidence, the mysterious stranger in a white masks effects an entry into Dare's home, where Margery has taken refuge, and confronts the girl who faints. The masked man then sets a trap which, in the event of the door being opened, will result in the girl's death. Meanwhile Dare, who has found an opium pipe with bloody finger marks on it in the room where Breene was murdered, returns to his home just as the stranger is leaving. Instead of following him, Dare gains egress into Margery's room through a window. He releases the girl from the trap, and finds another opium pipe with finger marks on it which compare with those on the pipe he found in Breene's home, and concludes that the owner is the murderer.

Shane puts into effect the suggestion—to raid Dare's house—that he received in an annonymous letter, and while this is taking place, Dare, oblivious to the raid, goes to Breene's home to secure more evidence. As he is searching the room in which the murder was committed, he is confronted by the stranger with the white mask, but before Dare can get hold of him, the stranger makes his escape through a window.

Margery has been taken from Dare's house by Shane's raiding party and sent off to town with a set of officers. Speeding away on his motorcycle, Shane reaches a point where the roads diverge. The road on the left is blocked with a sign "Cliff Road, Dangerous." This he removes and puts across the road to the right. The police car turns to the left. They see the cliff too late and in a moment are dashed over it and into the lake below. Dare, who has been following, steps from his car, removes his cloak, cap and mask and dives into the water. He comes up with Margery, and takes her in his car to her home.

The white masked man returns to the Breene library. Suddenly a vision of Breene rises before him. In a frenzy he beats on the chair over which the apparition appears. The noise attracts Peter who fires upon the intruder. Dare and Margery arrive just as the shot is fired. As they enter the library Peters removes the mask of the prostrate man. It is Arthur. At this juncture Shane and two officers also arrive. Arthur then confesses that it was he who killed his father. Shane, non-plussed, leaves with his men. Margery turns and thanks Dare. Silently he looks into her eyes, then turning about he hurries to his car and drives off, Margery watching him as he fades into the distance.

(Wayne Arey); Her Friend (Louise Emerald Bates); Pretty Mountain Girl (Ethel Jewett); Her Mother (Nellie Parker Spaulding).

Over in Denmark they still believe in Valkyrics. Legend has it that Valkyries are earth-banished goddesses of war who have excited the ire of the great god, Thor, so that he has shot them down to earth on zig-zag bolts of lightning. The daughter of any one is likely to be a Valkyrie, believe the superstitious Danes and it was this ingrained superstition that one little Danish girl, the descendant of a long line of Norse kings, found out to her sorrow to be a real cause of trouble and woe. For some reason, probably because she was so beautiful and light and gay herself, a report began to spread that she was a Valkyrie, and so to be avoided. The poor little girl could not understand why her mountain neighbors (she lived in the mountains herself with an aunt, since her family fortunes had long since fled) avoided her and made her generally unhappy. Things for her reached a climax when a pretty little mountain girl tried to emulate her dancing in the woods and slipped and fell into a marsh and was drowned. The death of the mountain girl was the signal for a general uprising of the superstitious neighbors.

However, such a circumstance hurt the girl herself; it vastly pleased her aunt, who saw in it a way to force the girl to marry a wealthy old nobleman who had long tried to force the young girl to marry him, only to be ridiculed for his pains. The girl refused to marry him, and the nobleman made sneering remarks about her. A young American, who heard the criticism, resented it and the quarrel resulted in a duel in which the nobleman was wounded. Upon the advice of his friends the American left for American shores.

Of course, the departure of the American again left a clear field for the old man, who, after all, was only slightly injured, but it did him no good, as the girl decided to go out in the world and make her own way. She became a famous dancer. Her beauty attracted the attention of those interested in the "Valkyrie Laurels," the king's prize, given every five years to the Norse maiden most closely typifying all the Norse ideals, with the result that she entered the contest—and won! She received an offer to go to America and there her successes in dancing were multiplied. One day she met the American whom she had seen a few times while she was a wood nymph. He did not recognize her! And she, poor, foolish girl, believed it was because he did not want to.

It really seemed there was nothing left for her to do but to accept the rich old nobleman, who had closely followed her wherever her fortunes led, until another day, when she was visiting some new found friends at their country place in Long Island she came to know the real nature of her aged wooer. She accidentally came across the nobleman plotting with the young American's jockey to ruin the young man by causing his horse to lose a race on which his fortune depended. The dancer went immediately to the young American's trainer, exposed the plot and offered to ride the horse herself. She won the race and the old nobleman threatened to make all kinds of trouble until he met the substituted jockey who told him to leave the country at once, or face exposure. The dancer and the young American were brought together at last, and everything ends happily.

"DOCTOR JERRY" (Dec. 10).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Doctor George (George George); Father (Jefferson Osborne); Butler (Gordon MacGregor); Daughter (Belle Bennett); Housekeeper (Janet Sully); Sergeant of Police (Louis FitzRoy); Mounted Policeman (Arthur Jackson).

Father does not approve of Jerry's solicitous interest in his daughter and tries his mightiest to end their growing affection for one another. In order that they may be near each other Jerry suggests that his sweetheart play sick and he play the doctor attending her. They put the scheme into effect. An epidemic of smallpox breaks out in the neighborhood and father believes that his daughter has contracted it. Jerry attempts to disquiet his fears but to no avail. Father leaves the room and then Jerry and daughter have a laugh over the trick they played.

The laughter is so boisterous that father becomes suspicious and decides to put Jerry to test. He gives his daughter a sleeping powder and then decorates her face with spots of red ink to imply she has smallpox. Jerry, who has left, is then recalled and finding the girl so marked and in a comatose state flees in fright. As he leaves the house he meets Dr. George, from whom he appropriated the garb of a doctor. Dr. George collars him and takes him back to the patient's home where he is imprisoned in a room. The master of the house tells Jerry that the place is quarantined. He protests violently against the enforced imprisonment but is subjected and forcibly chloroformed. His face is then decorated with smallpox spots and the conspirators leave the room, locking the door. Daughter's features are then washed of the ink spots.

Jerry revives and after no little effort escapes. He is nabbed by the gardner, but that individual, noting the tell-tale spots, quickly releases him and flees. Jerry has the same experience with half a doezen other people, including several policemen, and surmises that everybody is afraid of him—that he is a real hero.

The fright stricken police hurry to the station and inform the sergeant of their experience. He rouses a squad and orders them to capture Jerry by throwing a lariat over him. There is an exciting chase, the lariat finally lands around Jerry's neck and he is led back toward the station. To make a short cut to town a stream is crossed and horse and Jerry are compelled to swim. Again on dry land they pass the home of a country doctor who inquires about the dangerous looking prisoner. The police tell him that Jerry has the smallpox. Doctor looks at Jerry's now clean face—all the paint having been washed off by the swim—and tells the officers that they are much mistaken. Officer looks at Jerry, agrees with the doctor, confesses his mistake, and to square himself tenders Jerry a roll of bills to buy his silence as well as to salve his hurts.

CASINO.

CISSY'S INNOCENT WINK (Dec. 19).—The cast: Cissy Crabapple (Cissy Fitzgerald); Deacon Crabapple ("Bud" Ross); Parishioner (Charles Craig).

When Deacon Crabapple introduced his young wife at the candy pulling bee, there was much agitation in the little village, especially when Cissy's way of winking at all the men within range set the women agog with jealousy.

An anonymous note notified the deacon that his wife was carrying on something scandalous with one of the staunchest members of the flock. So, at the holiday exercises of the public school, the deacon asked the women to step outside. Then he told the men of the note and said that unless the guilty party made amends that night, dire results would follow. The announcement created great consternation, as each man present believed himself guilty. That night the delinquents came from near and far. Their number was so great that the irate deacon chased them out of the house with a shot gun.

The next day he imprisoned his wife in a cage and sent for the doctor. "All that ails your wife is a nervous affliction of the eye which makes her wink freely," was the doctor's diagnosis. So the deacon apologized for his misconstruction of Cissy's innocent wink.

NEW ADVENTURES OF J. RUFUS WALLINGFORD (Episode No. 10—"Apples and Eggbeaters"—Two Parts—Dec. 6).—The genial confidence men assume the roles of "business doctors, sick and dying enterprises cured while you wait." The eggheater concern of one Pushman is the patient, but the reason for their interest is a selfish one. Pushman is heavily indebted to G. W. Slookum, who threatens to close the place, and Slookum was a member of the criminal clique, who ruined the father of the Warden girls. The enterprise suddenly becomes Pushman, Inc., Kitchen Utensils, and old Slookum, who becomes intensely interested, receives his money.

Lots of loud talk of big money and the open books of the concern, left where Slookum gets a chance to see them, causes him to free himself from the tidy sum of $45,000, just the amount he extracted from old man Warden. Meanwhile, Toad Jessup has a little trouble with Slookum over some apples which the latter thought he has stolen, but when he proves his innocence before the town constable, Slookum's cup of woe is filled. The last he sees of Wallingford & Co. and his roll is when they take the first train out of town. Watch for the next Wallingford exploit.

SUGAR CANE GROWING (Mascarent Islands—Globe—On same reel as foregoing).—We never think of the Mascarene Islands in connection with sugar cane, yet much of it is grown there. The name is applied to the Bourbon, Mauritius and Rodriguez Islands just east of Madagascar. They were discovered by the Portuguese navigator Mascarenhas in 1545. One wonders at the primitive methods employed by the growers—yet the plentiful supply of native labor at ridiculously low wages, is reason enough. Some machinery is necessary, such as the vacuum pan, the centrifugal baskets and crushers but where it can be dispensed with, there is no danger of the machine replacing man.

A FOOZLE AT THE TEE PARTY (Phunphilm—Dec. 8).—Lonesome Luke, employed in an establishment of no particular note, loses a job of no particular note and thereafter does nothing of any particular note until he gets in the way of a golf-ball. Luke very much angered by the carelessness of the player, thereupon returns the colorless sphere—aimed straight at the head of the player, and Lord Smitem goes "back to the soil."

Unloading a weighty wallet from the corpse-like lord, Luke goes to the club; donning Smitem's extra togs, he goes out on the course and does his dirtiest—breaking Smitem's valuable brassies and putters like so much kindling. He makes the acquaintance of Letty Lotsofcoin and a very, very short acquaintance it is—the now very much alive Smitem incites the caddies against the poor Luke and they almost beat him to a nothingness.

MAX HITS THE HIGH SPOTS (Two Parts—Punch—Dec. 8).—Max, getting well into the bachelor's realm, is continually nagged by his uncle to marry the beautiful Elise Surecuf, which would very much please the timid Max; but alas; how can he muster the courage to do it. When at the house of the young lady, who it may be said is rather sweet on the immaculate Max, he becomes so nervous, that to the presence in the room he says—nothing—and departs. Angered, the girl's mother asks the now snarling uncle to take the saccharine Max out to see the life. All the life they see amounts to nothing; but all the life they put into the cafe loungers amounts to quite a riot—of fun. Much the worse for over indulgence in distilled courage, they are unceremoniously thrown from the now deserted cafe at 7 o'clock in the morning. Unable to hire a cab, which the now untamed Max wishes to drive—they purchase one. The way he drives, or rather manipulates it through the crowded thoroughfare, is as sensational as it is funny.

A ROSE AMONG THE BRIARS (Balboa—Three Parts—Dec. 9).—The story tells of the hardships of a factory girl whose father, a man of despicable character, uses the girl's small earnings to purchase liquor, thus depriving her of many of the necessities of life. Comes a time when his drunkenness is the cause of his death. The girl's chum, at one time employed in the same factory with her, but now a cabaret entertainer, obtains for the girl a position in the same place. The young doctor who attended her father at the time of his death, loves the girl, and learning of her whereabouts from Spike, one of the girl's admirers, a tough but good-hearted character, he becomes a nightly visitor at the cafe. Later, he asks her to become his wife, but she refuses, pleading illiteracy.

A vicious millionaire bachelor who frequents the cafe notices the girl, and learning that she is unsophisticated, asks her to come to his home, where he promises that his wife shall look after her future. She is saved from the fate which many girls had met at the hands of the millionaire, by the ever-vigilant Spike, who had been on the alert to guard her against such men as this.

The picture ends charmingly with the girl wistfully accepting the second time what she refused—and so wanted, the first.

THE GREATER WILL (Gold Rooster—Five Parts—Dec. 10).—Years ago Peggy Sloane, only daughter of old Cornelius Sloane, familiarly known as the Professor, an antique dealer, met a millionaire art dealer named Stuart Watson and was prevailed by his hypnotic power to go through a marriage ceremony with him. A week passed and she returned, broken in spirit and body. Later, when her baby was born, she died.

One night, while playing chess, old Sloane learns of the return to America of this man

Watson and resolves to be revenged. Accordingly, it is arranged to have Watson come to the house of the old man. Watson, realizing that his perfidy is known, tries to subject Sloane to his hypnotic will but the latter, by his superior will-power, subjects Watson, bringing before his mind the vision of the girl he wronged. Coming out of the trance, Watson is told that every night at 11 o'clock the same vision will appear to him. It so transpires, and later, driven to despair by the awful apparition, he takes an overdose of drugs and dies. Thus the Professor feels his revenge is complete.

DEEP DYED DUBS (Starlight—Dec. 11).—The honorable Heinie again shouts that the world owes him and his partner a living and that they must get it. Comfortably resting under some hay in a stranger's barn-loft, they are rudely disturbed by a pitchfork in the hands of the stranger. Forcibly ejected from the loft via the air route, they escape the necessity for arnica by landing in a cistern. With a fire nicely burning and their clothing set to dry, Heinie engages in a game of solitaire and Louie, reading the news of the day before notices that the wealthy Mrs. Moore has decided to purchase the "Black Statue" from one Prof. Weiss. Heinie, a man possessing great powers of control, is immediately given a coat of liquid black with trousers to match. Properly packed, Heinie is brought to the house of the wealthy Mrs. Moore, but the fond embraces of the women prove his powers of resistance to be nil—and he and his companion Louie must needs retreat. And then he awakens—from a dream.

Triangle Film Corporation

THE VILLAGE SCANDAL (Keystone—Dec. 12).—The cast: Raymond Hitchcock, Roscoe Arbuckle, Flora Zabelle, Al St. John, Harry McCoy.

Hitchcock comes to a small town, where the chickens and pigs run about the streets as numerous as the people. His purpose is to amuse and entertain the populace by wonderful feats of magic and sleight-of-hand. His plans are all set awry by his sudden infatuation for Flora Zabelel, who plays the hotel waitress and sweetheart of Fatty Arbuckle. Everything was going lovely for Fatty till then. Miss Zabelle was very affectionate and the corpulent one was so fond and foolish that he lavished two years' savings on her adornment, and also put himself in debt for another two years. His ladylove then turned him down cold for the more elegant appearing Hitchcock.

When the pair went upstairs to regale themselves with song and organ music, the grief of Fatty Arbuckle was "running over." Little streams of water would every now and then shoot from his eyes and his enormously fat features would work convulsively. The landlady couldn't stand the sight of such appalling grief. She came up armed with a handkerchief determined to soothe the woes of Arbuckle and wipe away his tears. She was nearly drowned by the torrents that came from the grief-stricken Fatty and though persistent had to retreat in as good order as her drenched condition would permit.

A vey fancy exhibition of "sword-swallowing" was given by Al St. John, as one of the boarders. He gracefully more or less was devouring beans with the aid of a knife. This was the opportunity of the genteel Hitchcock to show his elegant manners. He calls the attention of the boarder to himself and almost swallows the knife literally. This opens the eyes of the rest and they watch him closely and curiously as he then shows the proper way to do the thing. He takes up his fork loaded to the guards with beans and is so intent on watching the effect on those around him that he spills them all over his waistcoat. The hilarity of the boarder is especially mirth-provoking as he has a somewhat clownish outfit and makeup.

THE WINGED IDOL (KayBee—Dec. 19).—The cast: Katharine Kailied, House Peters, Clara Williams, Harry Keenan, Jacob Silbert.

Countess Iva Ivanoff, a Russian seeress and crystal-gazer, is taken up by fashionable people in New York, Jack Leonard, a millionaire, is rapidly "going the pace." In a half-maudlin condition he hears of the powers of the Countess and makes his way to her apartments. He attempts to push the servant, a burly Russian in uniform, out of his way so that he may gain the presence of the seeress. In the struggle he is easily knocked down. The Countess comes out and looks at him. In spite of his dissipated and battered appearance, she recognizes that he is just the type of man that is meant for her.

Jack Leonard is held a prisoner by the Countess and in spite of his pleadings is not allowed to have any liquor. Finally he seems to have recovered himself and to be a man again. Then she consents to his leaving so that he may test himself by contact with the world. He goes to the club, where he is at a loss what to do. Finally he makes up his mind that he will not allow himself to be dominated by the thought of the Countess. He gets intoxicated and instinctively staggers back to the presence of the Countess. She is shocked and angered and has her servants bind him with a rope. Then she whips him furiously until he faints. She is overwhelmed by remorse and tenderness, but the man seems to get a new hold on himself.

He soon buys a seat in the Stock Exchange and devotes himself to business. An awakening sense of duty, which the Countess cultivates solely for her own purposes, leads him to return to his wife and baby. Mildred Leonard can hardly realize the change and is backward about accepting his advances. At the urging of a friend, Mildred goes to the Countess to ask her advice. The seeress tells her to take her husband back and not reject his advances as he loves her.

Mildred goes away overjoyed. She leaves her bag and the Countess finds her card in it. She is furious on the return of Mildred and craftily changes her advice, but Mildred divines her metives and scorns it. There is a struggle between the two women, in which the Countess is superior but she is contemptuous toward the woman's weakness and lets her go. Leonard comes to the seeress once more and she attempts to win him back by her hypnotic wiles. When he is about to yield, she repulses him on account of his weakness. He goes back to his wife and baby, and there is a happy reconciliation.

CROOKED TO THE END (Keystone—Dec. 19).—The cast: Fred Mace, Anna Luther, Charles Arling, Hugh Fay, Earl Rodney.

A wealthy gentleman enters a Wells Fargo express office with a bag of money for shipment. Two crooks, played by Charles Arling and Hugh Fay, try to get the money away from its owner but are unsuccessful. Anna Luther goes out of the station and has a love scene with Earl Rodney, an engineer. Fred Mace, the station agent and father of Miss Luther, runs out and is doused by the waterspout, when the engineer starts off with the girl. Mace grabs the girl, berates the engineer and takes her back to the office.

Meanwhile the engineer tears his overalls and sends for another pair. The messenger pockets the money and returns with Mace's pair which Mace had hung up to dry. Mace has to get up in his night shirt to attend his duties when a passenger train arrives. He sees his daughter again with the engineer and goes over and discovers Rodney wearing the missing overalls, which he reclaims. Then the money sent by the wealthy man arrives. Mace sees the two crooks hanging around and puts it in his coat pocket for safety. He goes away on a fishing expedition with the village constable. The crooks try to break open the safe but are unsuccessful. They escape with the girl and the safe on a handcar, also taking Mace's coat with the money. The girl had telephoned the next station. A messenger arrives, rescues Mace and the constable from the quicksand and they call the police.

Rodney with his engine overtakes the crooks. They get the handcar off the track and escape with the safe and the girl on a street car. Rodney has escaped death by jumping from his engine when it was in collision with another train. Police with Mace, Rodney and the Constable start in pursuit of the crooks in automobiles. They come abreast of the cars and there is a lively exchange of bombs until the street car goes over a cliff and the crooks are captured by the police. The station master recovers the money and gives his consent to the wedding of Rodney and his daughter.

tion of a government battleship. The scene opens along the coast in a high-class hotel. Syd Chaplin is a jolly waiter, who likes to mingle flirtation with pretty guests with the juggling of plates and edibles. He falls down a flight of stairs and covers himself with a leopard skin to hide from the wrath of the landlord. His ruse leads to hysterics on the part of Phyllis Allen, as he is running on fours to avoid the kicks of the infuriated hotel man. When Miss Allen finds out her mistake, she is much peeved and pursues him with an umbrella. Her attempts to hit Syd results in more damage to the by-standers than the waiter-comedian.

Finally things become quieted down and Cavender and Ruggles sit down at one table and Miss Allen at another. Syd overhears the two men discussing their nefarious plans by means of a telephone receiver disguised as a floral ornament and placed on their table. Syd takes their bag containing their plans and slips into their rooms. Miss Allen misses her bag and accuses the inventors. They run for their room with her and all the guests in pursuit. They get into their apartment and one of them puts a bomb in the box containing their plans and models and in which Syd has hidden himself. There is a great explosion and Syd and the inventors escape injury. There is a pursuit in which Syd jumps from one building to another.

He makes his way to a second-hand store, where he buys an admiral's uniform, goes down to the dock, where he whistles three times, according to the orders he has overheard the inventors talking about. A boat appears and conveys Syd to the submarine. The commander turns over the craft to Syd after perusing his stolen papers. The interior of the submarine with all its levers, keys, cogs and wires is interestingly displayed to Syd. The officer initiates Syd into the mysteries of submerging and then walks off. Syd pulls a lever and starts the boat to dip beneath the service. Another pull at a second lever opens a hole overhead and the crew gets a good dousing until the officer shuts it again. Then there is an attack on a passenger ship, when the captain tricks Syd and the steamer is sunk by a torpedo.

Then a U. S. gunboat comes to the rescue and sinks the submarine as Syd has lost the key and cannot send it beneath the waves for protection. The last scene shows Syd's head in the jaws of a rapacious shark.

JORDAN IS A HARD ROAD (Fine Arts—Dec. 19).—The cast: Dorothy Gish, Frank Campeau, Sarah Traux, Ralph Lewis, Fred Burns, Owen Moore.

Campeau has committed a stage hold-up with the assistance of his pals. He is in danger of arrest and his wife is dying. He gives their infant daughter to the care of a religious woman named Findley, who has a worthless brother-in-law. Campeau's wife dies and he is sent to jail. Then follow numerous crimes and arrests. He meets a former companion who has married and settled down with wife and child. It reminds him of his little girl. He finds his daughter has grown up to be a beautiful young girl, played by Dorothy Gish.

He settles in Askatoon, the town where Mrs. Findley and his daughter live. He deposits a large sum of money in the bank and becomes a respected citizen. He hears his daughter singing and playing at a camp meeting and is converted. He transforms the village inn into a temperance hotel and puts Mrs. Findley and the daughter in charge and lives with them. The girl becomes attached to him, believing that he is the friend of his father.

Owen Moore, as Mark Sheldon, an Englishman seeking a fortune in mining, comes to Askatoon. Miss Gish likes him, but is disappointed to find that he is engaged to the Lady Alicia. Campeau thinks that the young fellow only needs wealth in order to marry his daughter and offers to put in $50,000 in Moore's mine. Some bandits break into the bank, where Campeau's money is deposited. He finds out from a station agent that a large sum of money is going through on a train at a nearby station. He helps to steal the box containing it, is mortally wounded but makes his escape with the treasure to Askatoon. He fires a shot and Moore and Miss Gish rush on the scene. He tells that he has accidentally shot himself while cleaning his gun. They believe him. He also turns the money over to Moore before he dies. He thus conceals from his daughter his sacrifice and also his identity. Moore is in love with Miss Gish, who had won his while nursing him through an illness due to being shot at by the mounted police as a suspected horse thief.

THE VICTORY OF VIRTUE (Five Parts—December).—The cast: The Woman (Gerda Holmes); the Man (Wilmuth Merkyl); the Secretary (Bert Howard); the Father (J. H. Gilmore); the Friend (Marie Yould); the Senator (Rapley Holmes); the Valet (Arthur Stengard); the Redeemer (Cecil Owen).

Penelope Brantford, the woman, is the only daughter of a wealthy father, and was left motherless at an early age. The idol of a devoted father's heart, she is at the time we make her acquaintance, a very unsophisticated young lady who has been shielded from contact with the world and is ill-prepared to cope, not with society in its entirety, but with individuals of certain inclinations always to be found there. Langdon Grier, the man, is not the worst man in the world—there are plenty of Griers, but, as this particular Grier is endowed with good looks and wealth, he possesses a sort of wicked fascination.

Chance or fate, call it what you will—it might be called Cupid—brings Penelope and Grier together. Penelope, impressionable as she is, falls in love. Grier, conscious of his conquest and eager for such a quarry, presses his attentions. Delightful drives through the capital city, beautiful flowers sent daily, an evening spent together at the Army and Navy Ball held at the White House, together with all the little attentions dear to any woman's heart, are among the effective means used by Grier to increase the first love fires ever kindled in Penelope's young heart. Then comes the Bohemian dinner held at Grier's apartments, which Penelope attends without the knowledge or sanction of her father. This dinner is marked by wit, beauty, good wine and subdued excitement—and is the climax of Grier's artful designs.

Such are the fundamentals on which the Victory of Virtue have been built, but nothing can prepare you for the panorama which now hurries on through a series of incomparably beautiful scenes which charm, fascinate, bewilder and amaze. The lesson that this play teaches is as old as the hills, as profound as nature itself. Right wins because that is the nature of right; pain and suffering must be gone through that we may properly appreciate victory. Victory is always sweet, but it is far sweeter when gained for such a cause as Virtue.

KLEINE-EDISON FEATURE SERVICE.

BONDWOMEN (Kleine—Dec. 15).—The cast: Norma Ellis, wife of Dr. Hugh Ellis (Maude Fealy); Belle Jordan, type of the underworld (Iva Shepard); Snowdrop (Mildred Gregory); Dr. Hugh Ellis (John Sainpolis); David Power, chemist (David Landau); Prof. Bowe, father of Norma (Harry Knowles); Ned Ellis, brother of Dr. Ellis (Harmon McGregor); Mary, maid at Ellis' home (Shirley De Me); Roy, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ellis (Maurice Steuart, Jr.); Jim (Frederic Sumner).

After five years of repressed protest, Norma, wife of Dr. Hugh Ellis, a moderately successful physician, suddenly voices denunciation regarding the average position of the American wife in the average American home today wherein she is compelled to be entirely answerable to her husband in expenditures for household and petty needs. Dr. Ellis had insisted upon sharing the responsibilities of conducting the house, scanning the bills from butchers, bakers and grocers, and made it his personal business to see that these bills were corrected as he thought they should be, and argued and quibbled with tradesmen generally. His wife, in desperation, finally declares that she and other women "are treated like bondwomen and not wives."

She asks for at least a joint bank account and presents the question to her husband from a sentimental standpoint as well as from a practical view point, citing as an instance her own life with her father who, as an author, was unsuccessful because of domestic responsibilities he insisted upon sharing, and not until he was relieved of these household worries by Norma did he achieve anything like success. Her argument, however, was in vain. Dr. Ellis insisted that he was the best judge of how his money was to be spent, and scoffed at the idea of permitting his wife to share in a joint bank account.

After being humiliated by her husband and embarrassed before her friends because of her lack of independence in money matters, she finally compels him to take charge of the house, and, in attempting to attend to his practice and manage the household affairs, he is very often interrupted and annoyed by grocery bills and other domestic affairs which he could be relieved of if the bank account were a joint one. Just about the time the physician is convinced that his wife's theory is correct, his younger brother, Ned, who, unknown to him, has become addicted to the drug habit, meets with a savage attack by a drug-crazed girl in a notorious dance hall, who attempts to blind him with acid. His life is in the balance and at the very hour when the physician is performing an operation to save his brother, Norma realizes that her husband has neglected to make a final payment on some mining stock which had become valuable since he had obtained an option on it and now promised to make him independently rich. This option expired within a few hours on that very day, and she phoned, asking for an extension of a few hours in time, explaining that her husband was engaged in a surgical operation upon which his brother's life depended, but her plea is curtly refused by the bank officials holding the stock in escrow. Realizing that to interrupt the operation would endanger the young brother's life and perhaps mean death, and that if the money was not paid it meant certain tremendous financial loss to them, Norma asks a mutual friend for financial aid, which is given, and Norma saves the day.

Through this act her husband grows suspicious and is led to believe by his young brother (made irresponsible by drugs) that Norma is unfaithful, and he orders his wife from his home. Then Ned, in a fit of remorse, realizing that he is responsible for the separation of his brother and sister-in-law, is persuaded to confess all by a friend of the family, David Power, who has secretly cured the boy of the drug habit. A reconciliation is brought about through the confession, and Dr. Ellis is convinced that the average wife should be the average husband's partner in all things. The bank account is changed to Dr. Hugh Ellis and Norma Ellis. Other concessions are made by the doctor, and a problem that is vital in every home in this country is solved satisfactorily.

I'M GLAD MY BOY GREW UP TO BE A SOLDIER (Selig—Four Parts—Dec. 13).—The cast: Jerry Warrington (Harry Mestayer); Mrs. Warrington (Eugenie Besserer); James Warrington (Harry De Vere); Frank Archer (Guy Oliver); Mercy Archer (Anna Luther).

James Warrington, a successful architect, is fortunate in the possession of a happy home presided over by a loving wife and gladdened by the presence of a fine young son, Jerry Warrington. When the morning newspaper is thrown into the home carrying in staring headlines the news that war has been declared, the husband hides the newspaper and goes to his office. Frank Archer is a partner of James Warrington, and when Warrington reaches the office, Archer informs him that he, Archer, has determined to enlist as a volunteer. Archer tells Warrington that he, too, should enlist. Warrington resi-tates, thinking of his wife and little son. Then his duty confronts him and he agrees to join a volunteer regiment with Archer. Then comes the first note of sadness, for Warrington tells his wife that he has enlisted.

Archer lives with his little daughter, Mercy, in a house adjoining that occupied by the Warringtons. He and his daughter call at the Warrington home. There Mrs. Warrington pleads with Archer to remember his little daughter and to remain at home, but he answers firmly that it is his duty as well as Warrington's duty to go to the firing line. The bugler sounds the "assembly" and the regiment which includes Warrington and Archer, marches away and Mrs. Warrington watches with tear-dimmed eyes.

Time passes. Battles have been won and lost, and father's all too brief notes to little Jerry and his mother cease. Then one day Archer arrives home. He has lost an arm. His little daughter Mercy is overjoyed that Papa has returned home again. Archer calls on Mrs. Warrington. As little Jerry and Mercy play together in the yard, Archer tells Mrs. Warrington of the heroic death of her husband. Later the newspaper headlines declare that peace has been restored.

Seventeen years pass, and Jerry has grown to young manhood and Mercy has blossomed into a beautiful young woman. Their childish affection has grown apace and they are sweethearts. Again comes the morning paper into the Warrington home. Mrs. Warrington reads the fateful headlines stating that after seventeen years of peace, war has again been declared and that invaders have landed upon our coast. The dawn of despair comes to the loving mother. She resolves to hide the newspaper from Jerry. But bulletin boards everywhere confront Jerry, and they state that volunteer regiments will be equipped immediately to go at once to the front. At the office, Jerry tells Archer: "It is my duty to enlist." He repairs to his home to tell his mother. She reels when she hears the news. She goes to her husband's portrait: "I lost him in war. I cannot lose you, too, my boy. Promise not to enlist." But Jerry's determination is unshaken.

As war takes its toll, Mercy goes to the front as a Red Cross Nurse, while at home Jerry's mother creeps to the attic and fondles the toys belonging to Jerry when he was a child. One day Mercy Archer returns. With her father she goes to Mrs. Warrington's home. Mercy, too, tells a story just as her father told one seventeen years before. And as Jerry's mother sits gazing grief stricken into the fireplace in her cottage, oblivious of the comforting arms of Mercy, there comes a vision of a great battleship firing a broadside of guns which later dissolves into a great threshing harvesting machine at work, implying peace and industry.

PARAMOUNT PICTURE CORP.

MR. GREX OF MONTE CARLO (Lasky—Five Parts—Dec. 2).—The cast: "Mr. Grex" (Theodore Roberts); Richard Lane, American Millionaire (Carlyle Blackwell); "Miss Grex," Fedora (Dorothy Davenport); Lord Huntersley (Frank Elliott); Seligman (James Neill); Ernest (Jack McDermott); David (Bob Gray); Pitou (H. B. Carpenter); Lady Wibourn (Gertrude Kellar), The Rag Picker (Lucien Littlefield).

"Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo" is an interesting play of intrigue between the Grand Duke Augustus Peter of Russia, whose incognito is Mr. Grex, an English Secret Service agent, Lord Huntersley and a young American millionaire on pleasure bent, Richard Lane. Mr. Grex and two other diplomats who unofficially represent France and Germany, plan to meet as if by chance in Monte Carlo for the purpose of arranging a secret pact.

The American millionaire sees and falls violently in love with Miss Grex, that is, the Grand Duchess Fedora. After several fruitless efforts to gain an introduction to this mysteriously inaccessible young lady, he secures the services of a bandit who is to pretend to hold up Fedora's car so that Lane may effect a rescue. Lane arrives on the scene as per schedule and is informed by the bandit that he has changed his mind and intends to make a real hold-up instead of a fake one. Lane, therefore, makes a real rescue and meets Miss Grex. He is informed by Lord Huntersley that his efforts are useless as she is a Grand Duchess of Russia.

The third member of the conference arrives and coming across Lane in the middle of a love scene with Fedora, thrusts the papers into his hand saying "Give these to Huntersley," and disappears. Complications arise between Fedora and Lane. Lane finally manages to get rid of Fedora's father for a few hours and hiring a yacht they pick up a parson who for $5,000 and his trip home consents to go with them to America. Once outside the three-mile limit they are married under the laws of the United States.

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION.

ROSEMARY (Quality Pictures Corp.—Five Parts—Dec. 20).—The cast: Dorothy Cruickshank (Marguerite Snow); Mrs. Cruickshank (Virginia Kraft); Sir Jasper Thorndyke (William Clifford); Capt. William Westwood (Paul Gilmore); Capt. Cruickshank (George F. Hernandez); Professor Jogram (Frank Bacon); George Minifie (Maurice Cytron).

Dorothy Cruickshank is secretly in love with Captain Westwood, whom her parents have never seen, and they plan to elope. Her father, an old sea captain, has quarreled with a Professor Jogram, following a public denunciation of a book Jogram has written on navigation. Professor Jogram lives with Sir Jasper Thorndyke, who sympathizes with him about the criticism but secretly considers the matter lightly. Dorothy and Captain Westwood elope during a storm, but their chaise is overturned near the home of Sir Jasper, where they apply for shelter and are taken in. Dorothy's parents pursue her, but they, too, meet with an accident and bring up at Sir Jasper's home. Dorothy and Captain Westwood are in their rooms when the girl's parents arrive. Sir Jasper and Cruickshank sit up late, Cruickshank drinking heavily, and his host, learning who he is, as a joke, puts him to bed with Professor Jogram.

The next morning Dorothy arises early, and while gathering flowers in the garden, encounters Sir Jasper. Sir Jasper falls in love with her, and gives her a bunch of rosemary which she pins to her gown. At breakfast all are present, save Dorothy, and Sir Jasper takes this opportunity to gain her parents' consent to her marriage with Captain Westwood. A journey to London with a happy wedding is planned. At an inn in London Dorothy goes to the stable to give some sugar to Sir Jasper's favorite mare. The stable catches fire and Dorothy is trapped in the loft. Sir Jasper, who has been showing her much attention, rushes through the flames and rescues her. He is badly burned, and during the days that follow Dorothy insists on attending him.

One day Westwood demands to see a page Dorothy has just written in her diary. She refuses, tears out the page and gives it to Sir Jasper. It is an artless confession of her high regard for Sir Jasper and he is elated. He is on the point of confessing his love for her when Professor Jogram stops him. Jogram tells him he is about to ruin the lives of two people he had never seen until a few days before. Realizing the truth of this Sir Jasper places the diary page in a broken panel in the wall, buys the inn and goes away to leave the lovers in happiness. Many years later, while Dorothy and Westwood are happy with their family, Sir Jasper makes a pilgrimage to the inn. He finds the page, together with the rosemary, and muses over them as he remembers Dorothy's little speech when she gave it to him. "Rosemary, that's for remembrance."

The Quality Carbons of the World

Reflex D. C. Carbons have a Specially Constructed Negative with Copper Coated Core

We have received so many requests for samples that we have decided for the next week to send samples of Reflex carbons to everyone enclosing twenty-five cents in stamps or coins.

Be sure to let us know your amperage and whether you use D. C. or A. C.

To give Reflex carbons a thorough test, Mr. Manager, you should use at least fifty, to become thoroughly acquainted with their construction and burning. Carbons bear an important part in making your profits. It will pay you to try Reflex carbons. Send us your order now.

¾ x 12 plain cored	$10.00 per 100 carbons
⅝ x 12 plain cored	7.50 per 100 carbons
⅝ x 6 copper coated cored	3.75 per 100 carbons
½ x 6 copper coated cored	2.75 per 100 carbons

If your dealer cannot supply you with Reflex Carbons, send cash with your order or instruct us to ship C. O. D. and we will fill sample orders in lots of fifty each in all the above sizes.

Watch our weekly advertisements. We want to help you get a better light.

Velvet Gold Fibre Screens

with the Soft Velvet Finish

PRODUCE PERFECTLY PROJECTED PICTURES

I named this curtain the "Velvet Gold Fibre" as it brings out the soft, warm, velvet tones of the photography instead of the harsh glare caused by the contrast of the high lights against the dead black of the deep shadows which have given pictures heretofore a flat, chalky, and sooty appearance, losing the depth of perspective. With this velvet finish we have eliminated all eye strain and make your front seats as desirable as any in the house. Added to this we have increased your illumination fully 100%. Write for full particulars.

Meniscus Bi-Convex Imported Condensers

For Particular Managers and Operators—

Meniscus Bi-Convex Condensers will improve projection 50%, besides being a great light saver. The Meniscus Bi-Convex Condenser combination has been strongly endorsed and recommended by Mr. Richardson in his talks to operators, and the world's best authorities have gone on record in recommending this wonderful light producer.

We are America's leading importer for the famous Geni France Pure White Glass Imported Condensers.

Theatre Record Ledger System, 1916

Commence next year's business with a thorough and systematic auditing record. Mr. John Freuler (Pres. Mutual Film Co.) in a recent issue of Reel Life, urges every theatre manager to install accurate recording record systems, just the same as the Theatre Record Ledger contains. You cannot help but keep a systematic record in using the Theatre Record Ledger System. Each Theatre Record Ledger contains 52 pages. One page comprises a complete week's records. Each day's receipts are carefully separated (matinee from night). Also every item of expense carefully disbursed under separate heads, besides recording space for weather and program used. Price $2.50 (20c. additional for postage.) Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory. Order today.

TEN SUNSETS TO BUILD A "MINUSA"

NEXT in importance to the chemist's skill in building a Minusa Gold Fibre screen is T-I-M-E. It takes ten days to build a "Minusa," from start to finish, to solve each different projection problem.

There is a simple reason. They are built to order—there are no two just alike. A "Minusa" built for a seventy-five foot throw would be unsatisfactory at one hundred and fifty feet. This is only ONE of the MANY features which distinguish our screen from all others, and that's why it takes "Ten Sunsets" to finish the job.

We cannot carry screens IN STOCK, for the same reason an oculist could not prescribe a universal lens for all his patients.

Besides giving you a "Natural" picture a Minusa is an investment that pays big dividends. Because of its greater REFLECTIVE POWER it cuts your light bill IN HALF—the electric light company pays for your screen.

Even if you do not care about the comfort of your patrons' eyes your business sense impels you to install this MONEY SAVER.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating, so get a Minusa Gold Fibre screen, "Built by Brains" and we will stand back of it.

Make! Quality! Utility! Durability! Efficiency! Then, Price!

YOUR DETERMINING FACTORS IN THE PURCHASE OF YOUR SCREEN.
THESE ARE OUR FIRST AND ONLY CONSIDERATIONS IN THE MAKING OF

MIRROROID

AS THE ORIGINATORS! THE INVENTORS! THE PIONEERS!
We laid the foundation of screen leadership, attested, too, by over 9000 Mirroroid installations the world over, obtained through the fact that our product is governed only by the limits of human ability gained by over seven years of screen making experience.

FROM THE VERY BEGINNING
I recognized the fact that imitators would come and imitators would go, but a product that could be sold under a bona-fide Five Year Guarantee, backed up by a Thoroughly Reliable Company as to Quality, Utility, Durability and Efficiency, at a price that would give your pocketbook a chance to get its money's worth, would create an enormous and steady demand.

THESE ARE MY REASONS for not issuing a single share of stock to any person but my family, wife and son. That is why we are able to maintain a standard of quality universally known—The World's Best.

CONVINCING EVIDENCE
is had in the fact that we own and control the Largest Screen Factory in the World, a factory equipped with an automatic machine of my own invention that will metalize and finish over one hundred yards or 2700 square feet of cloth daily. Six coatings applied.

NOW AS TO THE PRICE AND SHIPMENTS
Mirroroid is sold by our agencies in all principal cities at 36 1/9 cents a square foot—from one-half to one-third less than the imitations. At the same time consider the cloth is 3000 drill canvas—guaranteed not window shading; metalizing perfectly uniform; machine applied—guaranteed not by a paint or air brush—as this is not a scenery studio. That is why we can ship same day order is received. Realize the manufacturing cost governs the price—the price made to the goods.

A SHIPPING RECORD THAT WE ALONE CAN BEAT
On Dec. 1st and Dec. 2nd, 1915, 160 Mirroroid Screens, average size 7 ft. x 8 ft., shipped to the Pathescope Co. of America and Canada. In addition, 20 screens, sizes 10 x 13 ft. to 18 x 24 ft., to exhibitors. Total shipments for week of 29th of Nov. to Dec. 4th, 180 Mirroroid Screens.

Now, why not let us send you our large Free Samples of our latest—our best—the 1916 Mirroroid—the screen with the black back. Seeing is believing. Test any way you desire, against any screen on earth. Try tearing, folding, crease; in fact, abuse same to your heart's content. See if it will crack or peel. This is the proof that you are not buying window shading. The proof of quality.

ABOVE ALL
Mirroroid is the only rough or matte metalized surface screen in the world, consequently the only perfect projection surface. Perfect because it eliminates fadeaway, hazy, out-of-focus effect and eye-strain at a close up or angle view, insuring true color tone and true perspective.

Now, remember our Five-Year Guarantee.—Mirroroid won't crack, peel, tarnish or oxidize. It's washable with soap and water.

WE MAKE SCREENS, NOT FRAMES
So therefore, charge you for screen and not from $20.00 to $35.00 in addition to extra express. Our illustration and directions how to make frame and stretch screen are so simple a child can do it. Isn't $10.00 to $20.00 worth saving?

MIRROROID SCREENS ARE BOUGHT FOR ONE REASON ONLY—BECAUSE THEY ARE THE BEST, MOST EFFICIENT—THEY STOOD THE TEST OF TIME
